

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

INTRODUCTION.

When the liberal patronage of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company enabled Dr. Max Müller to undertake his invaluable edition of the Rig-Veda, a wish was expressed, that its appearance should be accompanied, or followed, with all convenient despatch, by an English translation. As I had long contemplated such a work, and had made some progress, in its execution, even before leaving India, I readily undertook to complete my labours and publish the translation.

It might, else, have been thought scarcely necessary to repeat a translation of the first Ashtaka, Ogdoad, or Eighth book, of the Rig-Veda; as that had been, already, more than once accomplished; partly, in English, by the Rev. Mr. Stevenson and Dr. Roer, and fully, in Latin, by the late Dr. Rosen. A translation in French, also, by M. Langlois, extending through four Ashtakas, or half the Veda, has been recently published at Paris; but I was not aware, when I engaged to publish an English translation, that such a work had been commenced. At the same time, these translations do not seem to preclude, entirely, the usefulness of an English version. The earliest publication, the work of the Rev. Mr. Stevenson, extends only to the three first hymns of the third lecture, or section, out of the eight which the first book, or Ashtaka, consists of: Dr. Roer's translation is equally limited, stopping with two sections, or thirty-two hymns. Both translations were printed in India, and are procurable, with some difficulty, in this country. Dr. Rosen's translation of the first book is complete, as to the text; but his premature death interrupted his annotations. Although executed with profound scholarship and scrupulous exactitude, and every way deserving of reliance, as an authentic representative of the original, the Sanskrit is converted into Latin with such literal fidelity, that the work scarcely admits of consecutive perusal, and is most of value as a reference. The translation is, in fact, subordinate to an edition of the text which it accompanies on the same page; and the work is designed less for general readers than for Sanskrit scholars and students of the Veda. The principle followed by M. Langlois is the converse of that adopted by Dr. Rosen; and he has avowedly sought to give to the vague and mysterious passages of the original a clear, simple, and intelligible interpretation. In this it may be admitted that he has admirably succeeded; but it may be, sometimes, thought that he has not been sufficiently cautious in his rendering of the text, and that he has diverged from its phraseology, especially as interpreted by the native Scholiast, more widely than is advisable. real value of the original lies not so much in its merits as a literary composition, as in the illustration which it supplies of the most ancient Hindu system of religious worship and social organization; and, unless its language be preserved as far as may be consistent with intelligibility, erroneous impressions of the facts and opinions of primitive Hinduism may be produced. It is, also, to be observed, that M. Langlois has made his translation from manuscript copies of the Veda and its commentary, which, whilst it has greatly enhanced the difficulty and labour of the task, and, so far, adds to the credit of the translator, suggests less confidence in the genuineness of the original-as the manuscripts are, all, more or less defective,—than if the version had been made from a carefully collated The present translation possesses, at least, edition. the advantage, over its predecessors, of an accurate text; and it will be the fault of the translator, if he does not benefit by it. In converting the original into English, it has been his aim to adhere as strictly to the original Sanskrit as the necessity of being intelligible would allow.

It may be almost superfluous to apprise the reader, that the oldest, and, nominally, the most weighty, authorities of the Brahmans, for their religion and institutions, are the Vedas, of which works four are usually enumerated: the Rich, or Rig-Veda; the Yajush, or Yajur-Veda; the Sáman, or Sáma-Veda; and the Atharvaña, or Atharva-Veda. Many passages are to be found in Sanskrit writings, some in the Vedas themselves, which limit the number to three; and there is no doubt that the fourth, or Atharva-Veda, although it borrows freely from the Rich, has little in common with the others, in its general character, or in its style: the language clearly indicates a different and later era. It may, therefore, be allowably regarded rather as a supplement to three, than as one of the four, Vedas.

Of the other three Vedas, each has its peculiar characteristics, although they have much in common; and they are, apparently, of different dates, although not separated, perhaps, by any very protracted interval. The Rig-Veda consists of metrical prayers, or hymns, termed Súktas, --addressed to different divinities, --each of which is ascribed to a Rishi, a holy or inspired These hymns are put together with little attempt at methodical arrangement, although such as are dedicated to the same deity sometimes follow in a consecutive series. There is not much connexion in the stanzas of which they are composed; and the same hymn is, sometimes, addressed to different divinities. There are, in the Veda itself, no directions for the use and application of the Súktas, no notices of the occasions on which they are to be employed, or of the ceremonies at which they are to be recited. These are pointed out, by subsequent writers, in Sútras, or precepts relating to the ritual; and, even for the reputed authors of the hymns, and for the deities in whose honour they are composed, we are, for the most part, indebted to independent authorities, especially to an Anukramańiká, or index, accompanying each Veda. The Yajur-Veda differs from the Rich in being, more particularly, a ritual, or a collection of liturgical formulæ. The prayers, or invocations, when not borrowed from the Rich, are, mostly, brief, and in prose, and are applicable to the consecration of the utensils and materials of ceremonial worship, as well as to the praise and worship of the gods. The Sáma-Veda is little else than a recast of the Rich, being made up, with very few exceptions, of the very same hymns, broken into parts, and arranged anew, for the purpose of being chanted on different ceremonial occasions. As far, also, as the Atharva-Veda is to be considered as a Veda, it will be found to comprise many of the hymns of the Rich. From the extensive manner, then, in which the hymns of the Rig-Veda enter into the composition of the other three, we must, naturally, infer its priority to them, and its greater importance to the history of the Hindu religion. truth, it is to the Rig-Veda that we must have recourse, principally, if not exclusively, for correct notions of the oldest and most genuine forms of the institutions, religious or civil, of the Hindus.

These remarks apply to what are termed the Sanhitás of the Vedas,—the aggregate assemblage, in a single collection, of the prayers, hymns, and liturgic formulæ of which they are composed. Besides the Sanhitás, the designation Veda includes an extensive class of compositions, entitled, collectively, Bráhmaña, [&]quot;By the followers of the Atharvaña, the Richas, or stanzas of the Rig-Veda, are numerously included in their own Sanhitá (or collection)."—Sáyaña Achárya, Introduction, Müller's edition, p. 2.

which all Brahmanical writers term an integral portion of the Veda. According to them, the Veda consists of two component parts, termed, severally, Mantra and Bráhmaña; the first being the hymns and formulæ aggregated in the Sanhitá; the second, a collection of rules for the application of the Mantras, directions for the performance of particular rites, citations of the hymns, or detached stanzas, to be repeated on such occasions, and illustrative remarks, or narratives, explanatory of the origin and object of the rite. Of the Bráhmaña portions of the Rig-Veda, the most interesting and important is the Aitareya Bráhmaña, in which a number of remarkable legends are detailed, highly illustrative of the condition of Brahmanism at the time at which it was composed. The Aitareya Aranyaka, another Bráhmaña of this Veda, is more mystical and speculative than practical or legendary; of a third, the Kaushitaki, little is known. The Bráhmaña of the Yajur-Veda, the S'atapatha, partakes more of the character of the Aitareya Bráhmaña: it is of considerable extent, consisting of fourteen books, and contains much curious matter. The Bráhmañas of the Sáma and Atharva Vedas are few, and little known; and the supplementary portions of these two Vedas are, more especially, the metaphysical and mystical treatises

As in the Yajna Paribháshá of Apastamba, quoted by Sáyaña, "The name Veda is that of both the Mantra and the Bráhmaña;" and, again, in the Mimánsá, "The Bráhmaña and the Mantra are the two parts of the Veda: that part which is not Mantra is Bráhmaña:" this constitutes the definition of the latter.—Introduction, p. 4 and p. 22.

termed Upanishads, belonging to an entirely different state of the Hindu mind from that which the text of the Vedas sprang from and encouraged. Connected with, and dependent upon, the Vedas generally, also are the treatises on grammar, astronomy, intonation, prosody, ritual, and the meaning of obsolete words, called the Vedángas. But these are not portions of the Veda itself, but supplementary to it, and, in the form in which we have them, are not, perhaps, altogether genuine, and, with a few exceptions, are not of much importance. Besides these works, there are the Prátisákhyas, or treatises on the grammar of the Veda, and the Sútras, or aphorisms, inculcating and describing its practices; the whole constituting a body of Vaidik literature the study of which would farnish occupation for a long and laborious life. A small part only is yet in print. None of the Bráhmañas are published; neither are the Sútras or Prátiśákhyas. The Upanishads have been more fortunate in finding editors. The texts of the Sanhitás of the Veda are in progress; as, besides the present edition of the Rich, an edition of the Vájasaneyi portion of b Some of the shorter Upanishads were printed, with translations, by Rammohun Roy; and five of those of the Yajush have been published by M. Poley: Berlin, 1844. The Brihadárahyaka has been printed by the Asiatic Society of Calcutta, under the editorship of Dr. Roer, in their Bibliotheca Indica; and the Chhándogya Upanishad has been begun in the same series.

the Yajur-Veda has been commenced,—by Dr. Weber, at Berlin,—the publication of which has been, also, liberally aided by the Court of Directors.

The text of the Sanhitá of the Sáma-Veda, and a translation by the Rev. Mr. Stevenson, were published, some years since, by the Oriental Translation Fund; and a more carefully elaborated edition of the same, with a translation in German, and a copious glossary and index, has been recently published by Professor Benfey, of Göttingen. In time, therefore, we shall be well supplied with the Mantra portion of the Veda: but there is yet but a partial and distant prospect of our having the Bráhmaña printed, and being, thus, enabled, from adequate materials, to determine how far the whole may be legitimately considered as a constituent part of the Veda.

From a careful examination of the Aitareya Bráhmaña, with an excellent commentary by Sáyaña Achárya, it is sufficiently evident, that this work, at least, is of a totally distinct description from the collection of the Mantras, or the Sanhitá, of the Rig-Veda. Although, no doubt, of considerable antiquity, it is, manifestly, of a date long subsequent to the original Súktas, or hymns, from the manner in which they are quoted,—not systematically, or continuously, or completely, but separately, unconnectedly, and partially; a few phrases only being given, forming the beginning, not even of an entire hymn, but of an isolated stanza, occurring in any part of the hymn, or in any part of the Sanhitá; consequently proving, that the Sanhitá must have been compiled, and widely circulated, and generally studied, before such mutilated citations could be recognized, or verified, by those to whom the Bráhmaña was presented. It is evident, also, that the great body of the Brahmanical ritual must have been sanctioned by established practice, before the Bráhmaña could have been compiled; as its main object is the application of the detached texts of the Sanhitá to the performance of the principal ceremonies and sacrifices of the Brahmans, enforcing their necessity and efficacy by texts and arguments, and illustrating their origin and consequences by traditional narratives and popular legends, the invention and currency of which must have been the work of time,-of a very long interval between the Sanhitá, in which little or nothing of the kind appears, and the Bráhmaña, in which such particulars abound. Again, we find, in the Bráhmaña, the whole system of social organization developed, the distinction of caste fully established, and the Bráhmaña, Kshattriya, Vaisya, and S'údra repeatedly named by their proper appellations, and discriminated by their peculiar offices and relative stations, as in the code of MANU. A cursory inspection of the S'atapatha Bráhmaña, as far as published, and of some of its sections in manuscript, shows it to be of a character similar to the Aitareya; or it may be even, perhaps, of a later era: and we may venture to affirm, in opposition to the consentient assertions of Brahmanical scholars and critics, that neither of these works has the slightest claim to be regarded as the counterpart and contemporary of the Sanhitá, or as an integral part of the Veda; understanding, by that expression, the primitive record of the religious belief and observances, and of the archaic institutions, of Hindu society.

Whilst acknowledging, with occasional exceptions, the early date of the Bráhmañas, and accepting them as valuable illustrations of the application of the primitive hymns and texts of the Sanhitá, we must look to the latter alone, as a safe guide, in our inquiries into the most ancient condition of the Hindus; and we must endeavour to convey a more precise notion of what is meant by the designation, as it is exemplified in the Veda which has been taken as the text of the following translation, and which, as has been shown, may be regarded as the source and model of the other works similarly named.

According to the credible traditions of the Hindus, the Súktas, the prayers and hymns-now collected as a Sanhitá,-had existed, in a separate and individual form, long before they were assembled and arranged in the order and connexion in which they are now In the Rig-Veda the number of Súktas is met with. something above a thousand, containing rather more than ten thousand stanzas. They are arranged in two methods. One divides them amongst eight Khandas (portions), or Ashtakas (eighths), each of which is, again, subdivided into eight Adhyáyas, or lectures. The other plan classes the Súktas under ten Mandalas, or circles, subdivided into rather more than a hundred Anuvákas, or sub-sections. A further subdivision of the Súktas into Vargas, or paragraphs, of about five stanzas each, is common to both classifications.

hymns are of various extent: in one or two instances, a Súkta consists of a single stanza; in some, of a number of stanzas; but the average number, as follows from the above totals of one thousand hymns and ten thousand stanzas, is, of course, about ten. The hymns are composed in a great variety of metres, several of which are peculiar to the Vedas, and the variety and richness of which evince an extraordinary cultivation of rhythmical contrivance. In general, a hymn is addressed to a single deity, but, sometimes, to two; and, occasionally, the verses are distributed among a greater number. The divinities are various; but the far larger number of the hymns in this first book of the Rich, and, as far as has been yet ascertained, in the other books, also, are dedicated to AGNI and INDRA, the deities, or personifications, of Fire and the Firmament. Of the one hundred and twenty-one hymns contained in the first Ashtaka, for instance, thirty-seven are addressed to AGNI alone, or associated with others; and forty-five, to INDRA: of the rest, twelve are addressed to the MARUTS, or Winds, the friends and followers of INDRA; and eleven, to the Aswins, the sons of the Sun; four, to the personified dawn; four, to the Viśwa-DEVAS, or collective deities; and the rest, to inferior divinities; -- an appropriation which unequivocally shows the elemental character of the religion. subsequent portions of the Veda, a few hymns occur which seem to be of a poetical, or fanciful, rather than of a religious, tendency; as one, in which there is a description of the revival of the frogs, on the setting in of the rainy season; and another, in which a gamester complains of his ill success: but we shall better appreciate the character of such seeming exceptions, when we come to them. Each Súkta has, for its reputed author, a Rishi, or inspired teacher, by whom, in Brahmanical phraseology, it has been originally seen, that is, to whom it was revealed; the Vedas being, according to later mythological fictions, the uncreated dictation of Brahma. For the names of the Rishis, except when incidentally mentioned in the hymn, we are indebted, as above remarked, to an index of the contents of the Veda, which also specifies the metre and the number of stanzas of each hymn, and the deity worshipped. It is an old book, and of high authority; but, inasmuch as it is of later composition than the text, it may not, always, be regarded as of unquestionable correctness. Most of the Rishis are familiar to the legends of the Puráñas, as Gotama, Kanwa, Bharadwaja, Vasishtha, Viswamitra, and To some of these a number of hymns are atothers. tributed; to others, of less note, and, perhaps, only of imaginary existence, one or two only are ascribed. The arrangement of the Súktas by Ashtakas does not seem to depend upon any fixed principle. Of that by Mandalas, six out of the ten "circles" comprise hymns by the same individual, or by members of the same family: thus, the hymns of the second Mandala are ascribed to GRITSAMADA, the son of S'UNAHOTRA, of the family of Angiras; those of the third, to Viśwamitra and his sons, or kinsmen; of the fourth, to VÁMADEVA; of the fifth, to ATRI and his sons, who are of rather equivocal nomenclature; of the sixth, to BharaDWAJA; and, of the seventh, to VASISHTHA and his descendants. The Rishis of the first and the three last Mandalas are more miscellaneous; the hymns of the ninth Circle are, all, addressed to Soma, the Moonplant, or its deified impersonation. This arrangement has been considered as the older and more original of the two; the distribution into Ashtakas being intended for the convenience of instruction; forming, through their subdivisions, -Adhyáyas and Vargas, so many lectures, or lessons, to be learned by the The inference is not improbable; but we are scarcely yet qualified to come to any positive conclusion. The more usual division of the manuscripts is that into Ashtakas; and in neither case is the principle of classification so unequivocally manifested as to suggest reasonable grounds for a departure from the established practice.

The absence of any obvious dependency of the Súktas upon one another is sufficiently indicative of their separate and unsystematic origin. That they are the compositions of the patriarchal sages to whom they are ascribed is, sometimes, apparent from allusions which they make to the name of the author or of his family: but these indications are of unfrequent recurrence; and we must trust, in general, to tradition, as preserved by the Anukramańiká, for the accuracy of the appropriation. Their being addressed to the same divinity is a less equivocal test of community; and they, probably, were composed, in many instances, by the heads of families, or of schools following a similar form of worship, and adoring, in preference, particular deifi-

Besides the internal evidence afforded by cations. difference of style, the hymns, not unfrequently, avow a difference of date; and we find some ascribed to ancient Rishis, while others admit their being of new or newest composition. The great variety of metres employed shows, also, a progressive development of the powers of the language, which could have been the effect only of long and diligent cultivation. There can be little doubt, therefore, that they range through a considerable interval; although, as far as respects their general purport, they belong to the same condition of belief, and to a period during which no change of any importance took place in the national creed. The same divinities are worshipped in a similar strain, and, with one or two doubtful exceptions, -- which are, possibly, interpolations, or which may admit of explanation,offer nothing that is contradictory or incongruous. This is the more remarkable, as there can be little doubt that the hymns were taught, originally, orally, and that the knowledge of them was perpetuated by the same mode of tuition. This is sufficiently apparent from their construction: they abound with elliptical phrases; with general epithets, of which the application is far from obvious, until explained; with brief comparisons, which cannot be appreciated without such additional details as a living teacher might be expected to supply; and with all those blanks and deficiencies which render the written text of the Vedas still unintelligible, in many passages, without the assistance of the Scholiast, and which he is alone enabled to fill up by the greater or less fidelity with which the traditional explanations of the first viva voce interpreters, or, perhaps, of the authors of the hymns themselves, have come down to his time. explanation of a living teacher, or of a commentator, must have been indispensable to a right understanding of the meaning of the Súktas, in many passages, from the moment of their first communication: and the probability is in favour of an oral instructor, as most in harmony with the unconnected and unsystematic currency of the hymns; with the restricted use of writing,—even if the art were known in those early times (a subject of considerable doubt),—and with the character of Sanskrit teaching, even in the present day, in which the study of books is subordinate to the personal and traditional expositions of the teacher, handed down to him through an indefinite series of preceding instructors.

At last, however, there arrived a period when the antiquity of the hymns, the obscurity of their style, the peculiarities of the language, and the number to which they had multiplied, with the corresponding difficulties of recollecting and teaching them, and, possibly, also, the perception, that some venerable authority on which their growing claims to superior sanctity might be based was wanting, suggested, to the progresssive advancement of the literature of the Brahmans, the expediency of rescuing the dispersed and obsolete Súktas from the risk of oblivion, and moulding them into some consistent and permanent shape. The accomplishment of this object is traditionally ascribed to the son of Paráśara Rishi, Krishña

DWAIPÁYANA, thence surnamed VYÁSA, the Arranger; a person of rather questionable chronology and existence, who is supposed to have flourished at the time of the great war between the rival families of Kuru and Pánóu, to the latter of which he was attached. The account that is usually given of his proceedings shows that his especial province was that of superintendence,—possibly under the patronage of the Rájá Yudhishfhira, after his triumph over the Kurus,—and that various other learned persons, already familiar with the hymns of the respective Vedas, were employed to prepare each several Sanhitá, or collection: thus, PAILA was appointed to collect the Súktas of the Rich; VAISAMPÁYANA, the text of the Yajush; Jaimini, the hymns of the Sáman; and SUMANTU, those of the Atharvaña. Each of these became the teacher of his own collection, and had a succession of disciples by whom the original collection was repeatedly subdivided and rearranged, until the Sanhitás of the Rig-Veda amounted to sixteen or twenty; those of the Yajur-Veda-distinguished as twofold, termed the Black and the White Yajushamounted to forty-two; and those of the Sáma-Veda; to twenty-four. There were, also, various Sanhitás of the Atharva-Veda; and, besides these, there were numerous S'ákhás, or branches, of each Sanhitá, studied in as many separate schools.* The precise nature of these distinctions is not very satisfactorily known at present, as they have almost wholly disappeared; but they consisted, apparently, of varieties of form, (not of substance), containing the same hymns and formulæ arranged in a different order, according to the conceptions of the teacher respecting their historical succession or liturgical value, or according to differences in the mode of their recitation,—some being recited audibly, some repeated inaudibly, and some being chanted or sung. Various readings, also, seem to have been followed by different schools, although not to such an extent as materially to affect the identity between the original and its descendant. Of the Sanhitás of the Rig-Veda the only one now in use is that ascribed to a teacher named VEDAMITRA or SÁKALYA. Whether the authorities which profess to detail the multiplicity of these compilations be entitled to entire confidence may be matter of question; but the traditions are concurrent and consistent; and there can be little doubt that there was a time at which the collection, and classification, and study, of the religious poems, which, even then, bore the stamp of antiquity, did form an important and popular branch of the literature of the Brahmans, and must have been pursued, with extraordinary diligence, zeal, and ability, through a protracted interval, anterior to the rise of philosophical speculation, mythological fable, poetical legends, and traditional history.*

^a The foundation of the Vedánta philosophy, and the compilation of the Itihásas and Puráñas, are, also, ascribed to Vyása. It would be out of place to enter into any examination of the question here,

The interest evinced in the collection and preservation of their ancient hymns and formulæ is the more remarkable from their having, as far as we can yet. judge, afforded little countenance to the religious and social institutions which, no doubt, were fully matured It is yet, perhaps, at the date of their compilation. scarcely safe to hazard any positive assertion respecting the system of religious belief and practice taught in the Rig-Veda, or the state of society which prevailed when its hymns were composed; and it were still more indiscreet to risk a negative, and deny its sanctioning the leading features of the Brahmanical institutes, until we shall have examined it throughout, and ascertained, beyond dispute, that no such sanction is to be found in it. In offering any opinion on these points, therefore, it must be understood that they are derived solely from what is actually before us,-the First Book of the Rig-Veda, now translated,—and that they are subject to confirmation, or to contradiction, according to the further evidence that may be produced. It is true that we have a somewhat wider field for speculation, in the other three books, translated by M. Langlois, and in detached portions from other books, which have been translated and published by other Sanskrit scholars, especially by Mr. Colebrooke, Professor Burnouf, and Dr. Roth. The latter, however, beyond the remark, that there seems to be little satisfactory evidence for the tradition; several of the Puráñas being, in fact, ascribed to other persons. The tradition may have originated in the impulse given to the general cultivation of Sanskrit literature by the school, or schools, of Vaidik criticism.

from their partial and isolated state, are, necessarily, imperfect authorities; and, of the former, it may be observed, that they do not seem to offer anything materially at variance with the tenour of the first Ashtaka. It will be sufficient, therefore, for the present, to confine ourselves to the evidence at hand, and deduce, from it, a few of the most important conclusions to which it appears to lead, regarding the religious and mythological belief of the people of India,—whose sentiments and notions the Súktas enunciate,—and the circumstances of their social condition, to which it occasionally, though briefly, adverts.

The worship which the Súktas describe comprehends offerings, prayer, and praise. The former are, chiefly, oblations and libations: clarified butter poured on fire, and the expressed and fermented juice of the Soma plant, presented, in ladles, to the deities invoked,—in what manner does not exactly appear, although it seems to have been, sometimes, sprinkled on the fire, sometimes, on the ground, or, rather, on the Kuśa, or sacred grass, strewed on the floor; and, in all cases, the residue was drunk by the assistants. The ceremony takes place in the dwelling of the worshipper, in a chamber appropriated to the purpose, and, probably, to the maintenance of a perpetual fire; although the frequent allusions to the occasional kindling of the sacred flame are rather at variance with this practice. There is no mention of any temple, nor any reference to a public place of worship; and it is clear that the worship was entirely domestic. The worshipper, or Yajamána, does not appear to have taken, of necessity, any part, personally, in the ceremony; and there is a goodly array of officiating priests, -in some instances, seven; in some, sixteen,—by whom the different ceremonial rites are performed, and by whom the Mantras, or prayers, or hymns, are recited. That animal victims were offered on particular occasions may be inferred from brief and obscure allusions in the hymns of the first book; and it is inferrible, from some passages, that human sacrifices were not unknown, although infrequent, and, sometimes, typical. But these are the exceptions; and the habitual offerings may be regarded as consisting of clarified butter and the juice of the Soma plant.

The Súkta almost invariably combines the attributes of prayer and praise. The power, the vastness, the generosity, the goodness, and even the personal beauty, of the deity addressed are described in highly laudatory strains, and his past bounties, or exploits, rehearsed and glorified; in requital of which commendations, and of the libations or oblations which he is solicited to accept, and in approval of the rite in his honour, at which his presence is invoked, he is implored to bestow blessings on the person who has instituted the ceremony, and, sometimes, but not so commonly, also on the author, or reciter, of the prayer. The blessings prayed for are, for the most part, of a temporal and personal description,—wealth, food, life, posterity, cattle, cows, and horses, protection against enemies, victory over them, and, sometimes, their destruction, particularly when they are represented as inimical to the celebration of religious rites, or, in other words, people not professing the same religious faith. There are a few indications of a hope of immortality and of future happiness: but they are neither frequent nor, in general, distinctly announced; although the immortality of the gods is recognized, and the possibility of its attainment by human beings, exemplified in the case of the demigods termed RIBHUS, -elevated, for their piety, to the rank of divinities. Protection against evil spirits (Rákshasas) is, also, requested; and, in one or two passages, YAMA and his office as ruler of the dead are obscurely alluded to. There is little demand for moral benefactions, although, in some few instances, hatred of untruth and abhorrence of sin are expressed, a hope is uttered that the latter may be repented of, or expiated; and the gods are, in one hymn, solicited to extricate the worshipper from sin of every kind. The main objects of the prayers, however, are benefits of a more worldly and physical character. tone in which these are requested indicates a quiet confidence in their being granted, as a return for the benefits which the gods are supposed to derive, from the offerings made to them, in gratifying their bodily wants, and from the praises which impart to them enhanced energy and augmented power. There is nothing, however, which denotes any particular potency in the prayer, or hymn, so as to compel the gods to comply with the desires of the worshipper;—nothing of that enforced necessity which makes so conspicuous and characteristic a figure in the Hindu mythology of a later date, by which the performance of austerities for a continued period constrains the gods to grant the desired boon, although fraught with peril, and even destruction, to themselves.

In the second Ashtaka, we have two hymns on the occasion of the Aśwamedha, a sacrifice of a horse. (See Translation of M. Langlois, Lecture III., Hymns v., vi.)

The next question is: Who are the gods to whom the praises and prayers are addressed? And here we find, also, a striking difference between the mythology of the Rig-Veda and that of the heroic poems and Puráñas. The divinities worshipped are not unknown to later systems: but they there perform very subordinate parts; whilst those deities who are the great gods—the Dii majores—of the subsequent period are either wholly unnamed in the Veda, or are noticed in an inferior and different capacity. The names of S'IVA, of MAHADEVA, of DURGA, of KALI, of RAMA, of Kṛishŵa, never occur, as far as we are yet aware. We have a Rudra, who, in after times, is identified with S'IVA, but who, even in the Puráñas, is of very doubtful origin and identification, whilst, in the Veda, he is described as the father of the winds, and is, evidently, a form of either AGNI or INDRA. The epithet KAPAR-DIN, which is applied to him, appears, indeed, to have some relation to a characteristic attribute of Siva,- the wearing of his hair in a peculiar braid: but the term has, probably, in the Veda, a different signification, -one now forgotten,-although it may have suggested. in after time, the appearance of S'IVA, in such a headdress, as identified with AGNI. For instance, KAPAR-DIN may intimate his head being surrounded by radiating flame; or the word may be an interpolation. At any rate, no other epithet applicable to S'IVA, occurs; and there is not the slightest allusion to the form in which, for the last ten centuries, at least, he seems to have been almost exclusively worshipped in India, -that of the Linga or Phallus. Neither is there the · slightest hint of another important feature of later Hinduism, the Trimúrti, or triune combination of Brahmá, Vishôu, and S'iva, as typified by the mystical syllable Om; although, according to high authority on the religions of antiquity, the Trimúrti was the first element in the faith of the Hindus, and the second was the Lingam.

The chief deities of the Veda are, as has been noticed above, Agni and Indra. The former comprises the element of Fire under three aspects: 1st, as it exists on earth, not only as culinary, or religious, fire, but as the heat of digestion and of life, and the vivifying principle of vegetation; 2nd, as it exists in the atmosphere, or mid-heaven, in the form of lightning; and, 3rd, as it is manifested in the heavens, as light, the sun, the dawn, and the planetary bodies. The Sun, it is true, is acknowledged and hymned as a divinity, the soul of all moveable and immoveable beings; and his manifestations are already known as Ádityas, including several of the names preserved in the Puráñas, as Vishñu, Mitra, Varuña, Aryaman, Púshan, Bhaga, and Twashfri, who are nothing more than the Sun diversified as presiding over each month of the solar year. Still, however, the sun does not hold that prominent place, in the Vaidik liturgy, which he seems to have done in that of the ancient Persians; and he is chiefly venerated as the celestial representative of Fire.

If we advert more particularly to the attributes of AGNI, we find that confusion, in them, which might be expected from the various characters he fills. As the fire of sacrifice, he is the servant of both men and gods, conveying the invocations and the offerings of the former to the latter; he is the Hotri, or priest, who summons the gods to the ceremony; the Purohita, or family priest, who performs the rite on behalf of the master of the house. Personified as a divinity, he is immortal, enjoying perpetual youth, endowed with infinite power and splendour, the granter of victory, of wealth, of cattle, of food, of health, of life; he travels in a car drawn by red horses; he is the source and diffuser of light, the destroyer and reviver of all things. He is known under many and various appellations; and many inferior deities are considered to be merely his manifestations. The acts and attributes of other deities are, not unfrequently, ascribed to him (p. 179): he may assume the form or nature of any other divinity

(p. 184) who is invoked to a ceremonial rite. identified with YAMA, VARUÑA, MITRA, with the Sun, and with the eternal VEDHAS (p. 190). A curious series of allusions, evidently of a remote antiquity, identifies him with Angiras, who, in the Veda, as well as in the Purânas, is a patriarch and Rishi, and the founder of a celebrated holy family, to members of which many of the hymns of the Veda are attri-Angiras is, in one place (p. 3), used instead of the repetition of the name Agni; and, in another, Agni is expressly called the first and chiefest ANGIRAS (p. 79). The meaning of this myth is, apparently, explained in another passage, in which it is said that the Angirasas first made sure of Agni, whence subsequent votaries preserved his fires and practised his rites (p. 187); which clearly intimates that this priestly family, or school, either introduced worship with fire, or extended and organized it in the various forms in which it came, ultimately, to be observed. The tenour of the legend, as it was afterwards expanded in the Bráhmañas and heroic poems, equally intimates the latter, and refers the multiplication, or universality, of the occasions on which fire constituted an essential element of the worship of the Hindus, to Angiras and his descendants. Of the attributes of Agni, in general, the meaning is sufficiently obvious: those of a physical character speak for themselves; and the allegory conveyed by others is, either, palpable enough, as when

Agni is said to be the son of the Wind, or springs, naturally, from Hindu notions, as when he is said to be both the father and the son of the gods,—nourishing them, like a father, by the oblations he bears to them, while the act of offering those oblations is the duty of a son. The legend of his hiding in the waters, through fear of the enemies of the gods, although alluded to in more than one place (pp. 58, 177), is not very explicitly narrated; and its more circumstantial detail is, probably, the work of the Bráh-The allusions of the Súktas may be a figurative intimation of the latent heat existing in water, or a misapprehension of a natural phenomenon which seems to have made a great impression, in later times, -the emission of flame from the surface of water, either in the shape of inflammable air, or as the result of submarine volcanic action.*

The deification of Indra is more consistent, as he has no incongruous functions to discharge. He is a personification of the phenomena of the firmament, particularly in the capacity of sending down rain. This property is metaphorically described as a conflict with the clouds, which are reluctant to part with their watery stores, until assailed and penetrated by the thunderbolt of Indra. As in all allegories, the language of fact and fiction is apt to be blended and confounded in the description of this encounter; and the cloud, personified as a demon named Ahi or Vritra, is represented as combating Indra with all the attributes of a personal enemy, and as suffering, in the battle, mutilation, wounds, and death. In the versions of the conflict found in later works, and in the heroic poems and Puráñas, the original allegory is lost sight of altogether; and VRITRA becomes a real personage, an Asura, or king of Asuras, who wages a doubtful war with the king of the gods. This contest with the clouds seems to have suggested, to the authors of the Súktas, the martial character of INDRA on other occasions; and he is especially described as the god of battles, the giver of victory to his worshippers, the destroyer of the enemies of religious rites, and the subverter of the cities of the Asuras. A popular myth represents him, also, as the discoverer and rescuer of the cows, either of the priests or of the gods, which had been stolen by an Asura named Pañi or Bala. Like Agni, he is the possessor and bestower of riches, and the granter of all temporal blessings, when devoutly worshipped, and when propitiated by the Soma juice, which seems to be more especially appropriated to him, and which has the effect of inspiring him with animation and courage. Some of his attributes are, obviously, allegorical references to the locality of the firmament; as when he is said to have elevated the sun, and fixed the constellations in the sky; to be more vast than heaven and earth; and to have sundered them, when originally united (p. 169). Of another, which refers to him in the guise of a ram, no very satisfactory explanation is given; although, as remarked by M. Nève, the metamorphosis suggests some analogy between him and Jupiter Ammon.

taking part in the wars of tribes and princes, and ensuring the triumph of those he befriends, belongs to the poetical part of the personification, and arises, no doubt, from that character for personal valour derived from his metaphorical defeat of VRITRA, and the real instrumentality of the electricity of the atmosphere, in the descent of fertilizing showers.

The Sun, Súrya or Savitri, occupies a much less conspicuous place, in Hindu worship, than we should have anticipated from the visible magnificence of that luminary, and his adoration by neighbouring nations. We have, in the first book, only three Súktas addressed to him, individually; and they convey no very strikingly expressive acknowledgment of his supremacy. Like Agni and Indra, he is the giver of temporal blessings to his worshippers; he is the source of light, moving, with exceeding swiftness, between heaven and earth, in a chariot drawn by two white-footed horses, or, as it is sometimes said, by seven,-meaning the He is said to be the healer of seven days of the week. leprosy, which may have given rise to the more modern legend of his having cured SAMBA, the son of KRISHÑA, of that disease; if it be not an unauthorized graft upon the original stem. He is represented as golden-eyed and golden-handed; mere figures of speech, although a legend is devised to account for the latter.

The text of the Veda, in one remarkable passage in the first book, recognizes a difference of degree in the relative dignity of the gods, and even in their age; enunciating veneration to the great gods, to the lesser, to the young, and to the old (p. 71). Among the lesser gods, an important share of adoration is enjoyed by a group avowedly subordinate to INDRA, -involving an obvious allegory,—the MARUTS, or Winds, who are naturally associated with the firmament. We have, indeed, a god of the wind, in VAYU; but little is said of him, and that, chiefly in association with Indra, -with whom he is identified by scholiasts on the Veda. The MARUTS, on the contrary, are frequently addressed as the attendants and allies of INDRA, confederated with him in the battle with VRITRA, and aiding and encouraging his exertions. They are called the sons of Priśni, or the earth, and, also, Rudras, or sons of Rudra; the meaning of which affiliations is not very clear, although, no doubt, it is allegorical. They are, also, associated, on some occasions, with AGNI; an obvious metaphor, expressing the action of wind upon fire. It is, also, intimated that they were, originally, mortal, and became immortal in consequence of worshipping Agni, which is, also, easy of explanation. Their share in the production of rain, and their fierce and impetuous nature, are figurative representations of physical phenomena. The Scholiast endeavours to connect the history of their origin with that narrated in the Puráñas, but without success; and the latter, absurd as it is, seems to have no better foundation than one proposed etymology of the name,—"Do not (má) weep (rodíh)," -which is merely fanciful, although it is not much worse than other explanations of the name which commentators have suggested (p. 225, note a).

The Adityas, or lesser Suns, are especially the sons of Aditi, who has, in general, the character of mother of the gods, identified, in this part of the Veda, with Earth, or even with the Universe; in which case she is, evidently, allegorical. Little is said of the Adityas collectively; but some of them are individually addressed. There is no separate hymn to Vishûu; but he is mentioned as TRIVIKRAMA, or he who took three steps or paces, which Mr. Colebrooke thought might have formed the groundwork of the Pauráńik legend of the dwarf Avatára. It may have been suggestive of the fiction: but no allusion to the notion of Avatáras occurs in the Veda: and there can be little doubt that the three steps, here referred to, are the three periods of the sun's course—his rise, culmination, and setting. MITRA is never addressed alone: he appears amongst the Viśwadevas (or gods collectively), or associated with VARUÑA and ARYAMAN. He is said, by the Scholiast, to be a divinity presiding over the day, and, in combination with VARUNA, a dispenser of water. VARUÑA occupies a rather more conspicuous place in the hymns: he is said to be the divinity presiding over the night; and, in that capacity, probably, the constellations are called his holy acts, and the moon, it is said, moves by his command. The title of king or monarch, Rájá or Samrát, is very commonly attached to his name. With MITRA, he is called the lord of light; and he supports the light on high, and makes wide the path of the sun: he grants wealth, averts evil, and protects cattle; in all which we have no trace of the station assigned to him, in later mythology, of sovereign of the waters. In one rather obscure passage, however, it is said of him, that, abiding in the ocean, he knows the course of ships; but he is, also, said, in the same stanza, to know the flight of birds and the periodical succession of the months. notions entertained of Varuña, beyond that of his connexion with the sun, do not appear to be very precise. ARYAMAN is never named alone; most usually, with MITRA and VARUÑA: we have a text identifying him with the sun; and he is said, by the Scholiast, to preside over twilight. Púshan, besides being occasionally named, has, in the first book, a hymn to himself, the main purport of which is to solicit his protection on a journey, particularly against robbers: he is said to be the divinity, or, rather, perhaps, the Aditya, or sun, presiding over the earth. The connexion of the personified dawn, or Ushas, or, rather, many dawns, or Ushasas, with the sun forms a natural portion of solar adoration: several hymns are addressed to her, the language of which involves no mystery, but is dictated by the obvious properties of the morning, not unfrequently picturesquely and poetically described.

Demigods who are, much more frequently than any of the preceding (except the Maruts), the objects of laudation, are the two Aświns,—the sons of the Sun, according to later mythology, but of whose origin we have no such legend in the Veda, as far as we have yet gone. They are said, indeed, in one place, to have the sea (Sindhu) for their mother: but this is explained to intimate their identity, as affirmed by some authorities, with the sun and moon, which rise, apparently, out of the ocean. They are called DASRAS, -destroyers, either of foes or of diseases; for they are the physicians of the gods. They are, also, called NÁSATYAS,—in whom there is no untruth. They are represented as ever young, handsome, travelling in a three-wheeled and triangular car, drawn by asses, and as mixing themselves up with a variety of human transactions, bestowing benefits upon their worshippers, enabling them to foil or overcome their enemies, assisting them in their need, and extricating them from difficulty and danger. Their business seems to lie more on earth than in heaven; and they belong, by their exploits, more to heroic, than celestial, or solar, mythology. They are, however, connected, in various passages, with the radiance of the sun, and are said to be precursors of the dawn, at which season they ought to be worshipped with libations of Soma juice.

The Sabeism of the Hindus—if it may be so termed—differs entirely from that of the Chaldeans, in omitting the worship of the planets. The constellations are never named as objects of veneration or worship; and, although the moon appears to be occasionally intended under the name Soma,—particularly, when spoken of as scattering darkness,—yet the name and the adoration are, in a much less equivocal manner, applied to the Soma plant, the acid asclepias, actual or personified. The great importance attached to the juice of this plant is a singular part of the ancient Hindu ritual: it is sufficiently prominent even in this portion of the Rig-Veda: but almost the whole of the Sáma-Veda is devoted to its eulogy; and this is, no doubt, little more than a repetition of the Soma Mańdala of the Rich. The only explanation of which it is susceptible is, the delight, as well as astonishment, which the discovery of the exhilarating, if not inebriating, properties of the fermented juice of the plant must have excited in simple minds, on first becoming acquainted with its effects. This, however, is, of course, wholly different from any adoration of the moon or planets, as celestial luminaries, in which they do not appear to have participated with the sun.

INDRA and SAVITRI thus have their respective satellites, dependent upon, and identifiable with, their principals. Agni does not seem to have any subordinate multiples, except in the rather anomalous deifications called Apris, which, although including certain female divinities and insensible objects, such as the doors of the sacrificial hall, are considered to be impersonations of Agni. Brahmañaspati, also, as far as we can make out his character from the occasional stanzas addressed to him, seems to be identifiable with Agni, with the additional attribute of presiding over prayer. The characteristic properties of this divinity, however, are not very distinctly developed in this portion of the Veda.

Of RUDRA, also, the character is equivocal; but it may be doubted if it partakes, in any remarkable degree, of that fierceness and wrath which belong to the RUDRA of a later date. He is termed, it is true, the slayer of heroes; but so is INDRA. The effects of his anger upon men and animals are deprecated: but he is, also, appealed to as wise and bountiful, the author of fertility, and giver of happiness; and his peculiar characteristics are, evidently, his presiding over medicinal plants and removal of disease, -attributes of a beneficent, not of a malignant and irascible, deity. As above remarked, the MARUTS, or winds, are termed his sons; and this relationship would assimilate him to INDRA. There is, also, a class of inferior deities, termed RUDRAS, who, in one passage, are worshippers of AGNI, and, in another, are the followers of INDRA; being the same as the MARUTS. So far, therefore, RUDRA might be identified with INDRA: but we have the name applied, unequivocally, to Agni, in a hymn exclusively dedicated to that divinity (p. 70). The term denotes, according to the Scholiast, the 'terrible Agni:' but there is no warrant for this, in the text; and we may be content, therefore, with the latter, to regard RUDRA as a form or denomination of fire.

Of the other divine personifications which occur in this first book, the particulars are too few to authorize any unexceptionable generalization. Some of them are such as every imaginative religion creates; personifications of earth, ocean, night, and of inanimate things. Female divinities make their appearance: but they are merely named, without anything being related of them; and we have, as yet, no sufficient materials on which to construct any theory of their attributes and character. The only exception is that of ILÁ, who is called the daughter of Manus, and his instructress in the performance of sacrifice; but what is meant by this requires further elucidation. The Viśwadevas, or universal gods, do not appear, in this part of the Veda, as the particular class which is referred to by Manu, and in the Puráñas, but merely as the aggregation of the divinities elsewhere separately named, or Indra, Agni, Mitra, Varuña, and the rest.

We thus find, that most, if not all, the deities named in the hymns of the Rich—as far as those of the first Ashtaka extend,—are resolvable into three: Agni, or fire; INDRA, or the firmament; and the Sun. Or, indeed,—as the sun is only a manifestation of fire,—we might resolve all the forms into two, Agni and Indra. We may, however, consent to take the assertion of YASKA, that there are, in the Veda, "three gods: AGNI, on the earth; VAYU or INDRA, in the sky; and Súrya, in heaven; of each of whom there are many appellations, expressive of his greatness, and of the variety of his functions." There is nothing, however,—confining our negation to the present portion of the Rich,—to warrant the other assertion of Yáska, that "all the gods are but parts of one átmá, or soul, subservient to the diversification of his praises through the immensity and variety of his attributes."* The Anukramańiká goes further, and affirms that there is but one deity, the Great Soul (Mahán Atmá); quoting, however, in support of this doctrine, a passage which, in its proper place, applies only to the Sun, who is there called (p. 304) "the soul of all that moves or is immoveable;"

Nirukta, Daivata Káńda, i., 4, 5.

an expression which is, probably, to be figuratively, not literally, apprehended.

The notion of a soul of the world belongs, no doubt, to a period long subsequent to the composition of the Súktas. Whether their authors entertained any belief in a creator and ruler of the universe certainly does not appear from any passage hitherto met with; but, at the same time, the objects of the early worship of the Hindus - fire, the sky, the Soma plant, even the sun,—are addressed in language so evidently dictated by palpable physical attributes, or by the most obvious allegorical personifications, that we can scarcely think they were inspired by any deep feeling of veneration or of faith, or that the adoration of such mere and manifest elements contemplated them in any other light than as types of the power of a creator. However extravagant the expressions, we can scarcely imagine them to have been uttered in earnest, particularly as proceeding from men of evident talent and observation, endowed with more than common intellectual activity and acuteness of perception.

Leaving the question of the primary religion of the Hindus for further investigation, we may now consider what degree of light this portion of the Veda reflects upon their social and political condition. It has been a favourite notion, with some eminent scholars, that the Hindus, at the period of the composition of the hymns, were a nomadic and pastoral people. This opinion seems to rest solely upon the frequent solicitations for food, and for horses and cattle, which are found in the hymns, and is unsupported by any more positive statements. That the Hindus were not nomads is evident from the repeated allusions to fixed dwellings, and villages, and towns; and we can scarcely suppose them to have been, in this respect, behind their barbarian enemies, the overthrow of whose numerous cities is so often spoken of. A pastoral people they might have been, to some extent; but they were, also, and, perhaps, in a still greater degree, an agricultural people, as is evidenced by their supplications for abundant rain and for the fertility of the earth, and by the mention of agricultural products, particularly, barley (p. 57). They were a manufacturing people; for the art of weaving, the labours of the carpenter, and the fabrication of golden and of iron mail, are alluded to: and, what is more remarkable, they were a maritime and mercantile people.

Not only are the Súktas familiar with the ocean and its phenomena, but we have merchants described as pressing earnestly on board ship, for the sake of gain (p. 152); and we have a naval expedition against a foreign island, or continent (dwipa), frustrated by a shipwreck (p. 307). They must, also, have made some advance in astronomical computation; as the adoption of an intercalary month, for the purpose of adjusting the solar and lunar years to each other, is made mention of (p. 65). Civilization must have, therefore, made considerable progress; and the Hindus must have spread to the sea-coast, possibly along the Sindhu or Indus, into Cutch and Gujerat, before they could have engaged in navigation and commerce. That they had extended themselves from a more northern site, or that they were a northern race, is rendered probable from the peculiar expression used, on more than one occasion, in soliciting long life,when the worshipper asks for a hundred winters (himas); a boon not likely to have been desired by the natives of a warm climate (p. 176). They appear, also, to have been a fair-complexioned people, at least, comparatively, and foreign invaders of India; as it is said (p. 259) that INDRA divided the fields among his whitecomplexioned friends, after destroying the indigenous barbarian races: for such, there can be little doubt, we are to understand by the expression Dasyu, which so often recurs, and which is often defined to signify one who not only does not perform religious rites, but attempts to disturb them, and harass their performers: the latter are the Aryas, the Arya, or respectable, or Hindu, or Arian race. Dasyu, in later language, signifies a thief, a robber; and Arya, a wealthy or respectable man: but the two terms are constantly used, in the text of the Veda, as contrasted with each other, and as expressions of religious and political antagonists; requiring, therefore, no violence of conjecture to identify the Dasyus with the indigenous tribes of India, refusing to adopt the ceremonial of the Aryas, a more civilized, but intrusive, race, and availing themselves of every opportunity to assail them, to carry off their cattle, disturb their rites, and impede their progress,—to little purpose, it should seem, as the Aryas commanded the aid of INDRA, before whose thunderbolt the numerous cities, or hamlets, of the Dasyus were swept away.

We have no particular intimation of the political condition of the Hindus, except the specification of a number of names of princes, many of which are peculiar to the Veda, and differ from those of the heroic poems and Puráñas. A few are identical; but the nomenclature evidently belongs to a period anterior to the construction of the dynasties of the Sun and Moon, no allusion to which, thus far, occurs. The princes named are, sometimes, described as in hostility with each other; and the condition of the provinces of India occupied by the Hindus was, no doubt, the same which it continued to be until the Mohammedan conquest,—parcelled out amongst insignificant principalities, under petty and contending princes.

Upon a subject of primary importance in the history of Hindu society, the distinctions of caste, the language of the Súktas—of the first Ashtaka, at least,—is by no means explicit. Whenever collectively alluded to, mankind are said to be distinguished into five sorts, or classes, or, literally, five men, or beings (pancha kshitayah). The commentator explains this term to denote the four castes, Bráhmaña, Kshattriya, Vaiśya, and S'údra, and the barbarian, or Nisháda: but Sáyaña, of course, expresses the received impressions of his own age. We do not meet with the denominations Kshattriya or Súdra in any text of the first book, nor with that of Vaiśya; for Viś, which does occur, is, there, a synonym of man in general. Bráhmaña is met with, but in what sense is questionable. In the neuter form, Brahma, it usually implies prayer, or praise, or sacrificial food, or, in one place, preservation (p. 274); in its masculine form, Brahmá, it occurs as the praiser, or reciter, of the hymn (p. 204), or as the particular priest, so denominated, who presides over the ceremonial of a sacrifice (p. 24): and in neither case does it necessarily imply a Bráhmaña by caste; for, that the officiating priests might not be Brahmans appears from the part taken by Viśwá-MITRA at the sacrifice of S'unahsepa, who, although, according to tradition, by birth a Kshattriya, exercises the functions of the priesthood. There is one phrase which is in favour of considering the Bráhmaña as the member of a caste, as distinguished from that of the military caste (p. 279): "If you, INDRA; and AGNI, have ever delighted in a Bráhmaña, or a Rájá, then come hither:" but even this can scarcely be regarded as decisive. A hymn that occurs in a subsequent part of the Veda has, however, been translated by Mr. Colebrooke, in which the four castes are specified by name, and the usual fable of their origin from Brahmá. alluded to. Further research is necessary, therefore, before a final sentence can be pronounced.

From this survey of the contents of the first book of the Rig-Veda, although some very important questions remain to be answered, it is indisputably evident that the hymns it comprises represent a form of religious worship, and a state of society, very dissimilar to those we meet with in all the other scriptural authorities of the Hindus, whether Bráhmañas, Upanishads, Itihásas (or heroic poems), or Purañas. Various notions, and personifications, and persons have, no doubt, been adopted from the Veda, and transmitted to subsequent periods, although, not unfrequently, with important modifications; but the great mass of the ritual, all the most popular deities, possibly the principal laws and distinctions of society, and the whole body of the heroic and Pauráńik dramatis personæ, have no place, no part, in the Súktas of the Rig-Veda. the latter preceded the former by a vast interval is, therefore, a necessary inference: for the immense and complicated machinery of the whole literature and mythology of the Hindus must have been of gradual and slow development; and, as many of the genealogical and historical traditions preserved by the Rámáyaña, Mahábhárata, the poems, plays, and Puráñas, are not likely to be mere inventions, but may have had their foundations in fact, then the course of events, the extension of the Hindus through India, the origin and succession of regal dynasties, and the formation of powerful principalities, all unknown to the Sanhitá, are equally indicative of the lapse of centuries between the composition of the Súktas and the date of the earliest works that are subsequent to the great religious, social, and political changes which, in the interval, had taken place. If the hymns of the Sanhitá are genuine,—and there is no reason why they should not be so; if there is any shadow of truth in the historical portions of the Rámáyaña and Mahábhárata, - and there must be some; a thousand years would not be too long an interval for the altered conditions which are depictured in the older and in the more recent compositions. Considerations deduced from the probable progress of Hindu literature are calculated to confirm this view of the distance that separates the age of the Veda from that of the later writings, and, in this manner, to lead to an approximation to the era of the former. The Súktas themselves are, confessedly, the compositions of various periods,—as we might conclude from internal evidence, -and were, probably, falling into forgetfulness, before they were collected into the Sanhitás. We then have a succession of schools engaged in collecting, arranging, and remodelling them, after which come the Bráhmañas, citing their contents in a manner which proves that their collective compilation had become extensively current and was readily recognizable.

^{*} In the Purusha Súkta, in the eighth Ashtaka, we have this verse: "His mouth became a priest [Bráhmaña]; his arm was made a soldier [Kshattriya]; his thigh was transformed into a husbandman [Vaiśya]; from his feet sprung the servile man [Súdra]."—Colebrooke on the Religious Ceremonies of the Hindus, Asiatic Researches, Vol. vii., p. 251.

After the Bráhmañas come the Sútras, rules for the application of the passages cited in the Bráhmañas to religious ceremonies; the works of authors to all of whôm a high antiquity is assigned, —ÁPASTAMBA, KÁTYÁYANA, and others, who quote the Bráhmañas as their authorities. Of the philosophical Sútras, the Sánkhya, which seems to be the oldest system, is, perhaps, independent of the Veda; but the Púrva and Uttara Mímánsás are, declaredly, intended to expound and elucidate the philosophy and the practices of the Veda, and are, therefore, necessarily subsequent to the Sanhitá and Bráhmaña, although attributed to names of ancient celebrity,-JAIMINI and VYÁSA. These works were, possibly, contemporary with the liturgical aphorisms; the Vedánta Sútras being, also, posterior to the Upanishads. Now. all these writings are older than Manu, whose cosmogony is, evidently, a system of eclecticism compiled from the Upanishads, the Sánkhya, and the Vedánta, and many of whose laws, I learn from Dr. Müller, are found in the liturgical Sútras. Yet MANU notices no Avatáras, no Ráma, no Krishna, and is, consequently, admitted to be long anterior to the growth of their worship as set forth in the Rámáyaña and Mahábhárata.

There is, in Manu, a faint intimation that Buddhistical opinions were beginning to exert an influence over the minds of men,—in the admission that the greatest of virtues is abstinence from injury to living beings,—which would make his laws posterior to the sixth century B.C. But, conjecturing the probable dates of the heroic poems to be about the third century B.C., we cannot place Manu lower than the fifth, or sixth, at least; beyond which we have the whole body of philosophical and Vaidik literature. This would carry us, for the age of the Bráhmaña, to the seventh, or eighth, at the least; and we cannot allow less than four or five centuries for the composition and currency of the hymns, and the occurrence of those important changes, both civil and religious, which the Bráhmaña exhibits. This will bring us to the same era as that which has previously been computed, or about twelve or thirteen centuries B.C. Mr. Colebrooke, from astronomical data, would give the Súktas a higher antiquity; as he places their aggregation, or Sanhitá, fourteen centuries B.C., a date not far from that which is here suggested. All this is, no doubt, to be received with very great reservation; for, in dealing with Hindu chronology, we have no trustworthy landmarks, no fixed eras, no comparative history, to guide us. In proposing the above dates, therefore, nothing more than conjecture is intended; and it may be wide of the truth. We can scarcely be far wrong, however, in assigning a very remote date to most, if not to all, the Súktas of the Rig-Veda, and in considering them to be amongst the oldest extant records of the ancient world.

The text which has served for the following translation comprises the Súktas of the Rig-Veda and the commentary of Sáyaña Achárya, printed, by Dr. Müller, from a collation of manuscripts, of which he has given an account in his Introduction. Sáyaña Achárya was the brother of Mádhava Achárya, the prime minister of Víra Bukka Ráya, Rájá of Vijayanagara in the fourteenth century, a munificent patron of Hindu literature. Both the brothers are celebrated as scholars; and many important works are attributed to them,—not only scholia on the Sanhitás and Bráh-mañas of the Vedas, but original works on grammar and law; the fact, no doubt, being, that they availed themselves of those means which their situation and influence secured them, and employed the most learned Brahmans they could attract to Vijayanagara upon the works which bear their name, and to which they, also, contributed their own labour and learning. Their works were, therefore, compiled under peculiar advantages, and are deservedly held in the highest estimation.

The scholia of Sáyaña on the text of the Rig-Veda comprise three district portions. The first interprets the original text, or, rather, translates it into more modern Sanskrit, fills up any ellipse, and, if any legend is briefly alluded to, narrates it in detail; the next portion of the commentary is a grammatical analysis of the text, agreeably to the system of Páñini, whose aphorisms, or Sútras, are quoted; and the third portion is an explanation of the accentuation of the several words. These two last portions are purely technical, and are untranslate-The first portion constitutes the basis of the English translation: for, although the interpretation of SAYAÑA may be, occasionally, questioned, he undoubtedly had a knowledge of his text far beyond the pretensions of any European scholar, and must have been in possession, either through his own learning, or that of his assistants, of all the interpretations which had been perpetuated, by traditional teaching, from the earliest times.

In addition to these divisions of his commentary, Sánaña prefaces each Súkta by a specification of its author, or Rishi; of the deity, or deities, to whom it is addressed; of the rhythmical structure of the several Richas, or stanzas; and of the Viniyoga, the application of the hymn, or of portions of it, to the religious rites at which they are to be repeated. I have been unable to make use of this latter part of the description; as the ceremonies are, chiefly, indicated by their titles alone, and their peculiar details are not to be determined without a more laborious investigation than the importance or interest of the subject appeared to me to demand.

I have, perhaps, to offer, if not an excuse, a plea, for retaining the original denominations of the divisions of the Veda, as Sanhitá, Mandala, Ashtaka, Adhyáya, Anuváka, Súkta, and Varga, instead of attempting to express them by English equivalents. It appeared to me, however, that, although the terms Collection, Circle, Book, Lecture, Chapter, Hymn, and Section might have been taken as substitutes, and, in a general sense, were allowable, yet they in no instance exactly expressed the meaning of the originals, and their use might have conveyed erroneous impressions. I have considered it advisable, therefore, to treat the original terms as if they were proper names, and have merely rendered them in Roman characters. I do not apprehend that any great inconvenience will be experienced from the use of these original designations, their conventional purport being readily remembered. I have, also, specified the metre that is employed in each Súkta, in order to show the variety that prevails. The description of the different kinds will be found in Mr. Colebrooke's Essay on Sanskrit and Prakrit Prosody, in the tenth volume of the Asiatic Researches.

FIRST ADHYÁYA.

ANUVÁKA I.

SÚKTA I.

Μαθόατα Ι.

The first Súkta or Hymn is addressed to Agni. The Rishi or author is Madhuchchhandas, the son of Viśwamitra. The metre is Gáyatri.

1. I glorify Agni, the high priest of the sacri-

Varga I.

A great variety of etymologies are devised to explain the meaning of the term Agni, the most of which are, obviously, fanciful, but the import of which expresses the notions entertained of his character and functions. On earth, he is invoked (niyate) the first (agra) of the gods; in heaven, he is the leader (agrani) of the hosts of the gods; he is the first of the gods (prathamo devatánám); he was the first-born of the gods (sa vá esho'gre devatánám ajáyata). In these derivations, Agni is compounded, irregularly, out of agra, first, and ni, to lead. It is also derived from anga, body; because he offers his own substance, in the lighting of the sacrificial fire. The author of a Nirukta, or glossary, called Sthúláshíhivin, derives it from the root knu, with the negative prefixed (aknopayati), he who does not spare the fuel. Another compiler of a glossary, Sákapúni, derives the word from three roots, i, to go, anj, to anoint, and dah, to burn, collectively; the fice, the divine, the ministrant, who presents the oblation (to the gods), and is the possessor of great wealth.

- 2. May that Agni, who is to be celebrated by both ancient and modern sages, conduct the gods hither.
 - 3. Through Agni the worshipper obtains that letters being arbitrarily changed to ag, and ni, from the root ni, being added. See, also, Yáska's Nirukta, 7, 14.

- * Agni is termed the Purohita, the priest who superintends family rites, or because he is one of the sacred fires in which oblations are first (puras) offered (hita).
- b Deva, which, in common use, means a god, is ordinarily explained, in the passages in which it occurs in the Veda, as 'the bright, shining, radiant;' being derived from div, to shine: or it is also explained, one who abides in the sky or heaven (dyusthána). It is, here, also optionally rendered, liberal, donor; the sense of giving being ascribed to the same radical.
- ^o Ritwij, a ministering priest, or, according to some, the Ritwij who is also the Hotri,—the term that follows in the text,—the priest who actually presents the oblation, or who invokes or summons the deities to the ceremony, accordingly as the word is derived from hu, to sacrifice, or hve, to call.
- ^d The word is ratnadhátama, lit., holder of jewels: but ratna is explained, generally, wealth, and, figuratively, signifies the reward of religious rites.
- ^o The terms purva and nutana, former and recent, applied to Rishis, or sages, are worthy of remark, as intimating the existence of earlier teachers and older hymns. The old Rishis are said to be Bhrigu, Angiras, and others; perhaps, those who are elsewhere termed Prajapatis.—Vishau Purana, p. 49.

affluence which increases day by day, which is the source of fame, and the multiplier of mankind.

- 4. Agni, the unobstructed sacrifice of which thou art, on every side, the protector, assuredly reaches the gods.
- 5. May AGNI, the presenter of oblations, the attainer of knowledge, he who is true, renowned, and divine, come hither, with the gods.
- 6. Whatever good thou mayest, Agni, bestow upon the giver (of the oblation), that, verily, Angiras, shall revert to thee.

Varga ! I.

Kavikratu is here explained to signify one by whom either knowledge or religious acts (kratu) have been acquired or performed (kránta). The compound is commonly used as a synonym of Agni.

That is, the wealth bestowed upon the Yajamana—the person by whom, or on whose behalf, the sacrifice is performed,—will enable him to multiply his oblations, by which Agni, again, will benefit. Instead of Agni repeated, we have, in the second place, Angiras, as a synonym, which, in Manu and all the Puránas, is the name of a Rishi or Prajápati, one of the primitive mind-born sons of Brahmá: and the appellation is used, frequently, in the text of the Veda, in that sense, as the designation of a Rishi, the founder of a family, or of a school. The commentator quotes

b "On every side" alludes to the fires which, at a sacrifice, should be lighted at the four cardinal points, east, west, south, and north,—termed, severally, the Ahavaniya, Márjáliya, Gárhapatya, and Agnidhriya.

7. We approach thee, Agni, with reverential homage in our thoughts, daily, both morning and evening;

Yáska, for the identity of Angiras with Angára, a live coal; and a passage from the Aitareya Brahmana is cited, in which it is said, "the coals became the Angirasas" (ye'ngárá ásanste'ngiraso The identification of Angiras with Agni, in function, though not in person, is the subject of a legend, told, rather confusedly and obscurely, in the Mahábhárata, Vana-parva (printed edition, Vol. i., p. 712), by Markandeya to Yudhishthira, in reply to his question, how it happened, formerly, that Agni, having gone to the forest, and his functions having ceased, Angiras became Agni, and conveyed the oblations to the gods. Connected with this question, he also inquires, how it is that Agni, who is one, should become many. Markandeya therefore relates, that Agni, having engaged in penance, and relinquishing his duties, the Muni Angiras took upon him his office, and, when he prevailed upon Agni to resume it, became his son: his descendants, the Angirasas, are, therefore, also the descendants of Agni, or so many Agnis, or fires. Their enumeration, which follows at some length, shows them to be, for the most part, personifications of light, of luminous bodies, of divisions of time, of celestial phenomena, and fires adapted to peculiar occasions, as the full and change of the moon, or to particular rites, as the Aśwamedha, Rájasúya, the Pákavainas (or sacrifices with food), obsequial and funeral fires, expiatory fires, and the like. The legend is, possibly, intended to represent the organization of worship with fire, - which, in the first instance, was of a primitive and simple character, -and its appropriation to various occasions, by Angiras and his disciples. The Mahábhárata is not contented with the first account, but gives a second, in which the first Agni is called Saha; and he is said to have hidden himself in the ocean, to avoid the approach of Niyata, the son of Bharata, the fire of the funeral-pile. The text says,

- 8. Thee, the radiant, the protector of sacrifices, the constant illuminator of truth, increasing in thine own dwelling.
- 9. Agni, be unto us easy of access; as is a father to his son: be ever present with us, for our good.

SÚKTA II.

The Rishi is Madhuchchhandas; the metre, Gáyatri. Of the nine stanzas of which the Hymn consists, three are addressed to Váyu, Wind; three, to Indra and Váyu, conjointly; and three, to Mitra and Varuña.

1. VÁYU, pleasant to behold, approach. These Varga III.

- "through fear:" the commentary says, either through fear of being rendered impure by his contact, or being ashamed of his relationship; Niyata being his own grandson. The gods coming to look for Agni, he designated, as his substitute, Atharvan, also called Angiras, who, for a time, acted as Agni, until the latter was induced to resume his office. The legend is constructed, as the commentary shows, out of Vaidik texts: but the details are clumsily and contradictorily put together; indicating, perhaps, their almost obsolete antiquity at the time of the compilation of the Mahábhárata.
- * Swe dame, sud domo, the chamber in which fire-worship is performed, and in which the fire increases by the oblations poured upon it. Dama, for a home, or house, is peculiar to the Vedas.
- b Váyu is invoked in a visible form, as the deity presiding over the wind. It is doubtful if the expressions which, in this and similar instances, intimate personality are to be understood as indicating actual figures or idols: the personification is, probably, only poetical.

libations are prepared for thee. Drink of them; hear our innovation.

- 2. VÁYU, thy praisers praise thee with holy praises, having poured out the Soma juice, and knowing the (fit) season.
- 3. VAYU, thy approving speech comes to the giver (of the libation), and to many (others who invite thee) to drink of the Soma juice.
- 4. Indra and Váyu, these libations are poured out (for you). Come hither, with food (for us). Verily, the drops (of the Soma juice) await you both.
- 5. Indra and Váyu, abiding in the sacrificial rite, you are aware of these libations. Come, both, (then,) quickly, hither.

Varga IV.

6. VAYU and INDRA, come to the rite of the

These Somas are libations of the juice of the Soma plant, the acid Asclepias or Sarcostema viminalis, which yields to expressure a copious milky juice, of a mild nature and subacid taste.—
Roxburgh, ii., 32. According to Mr. Stevenson, it is not used, in sacrifices, until it has gone through the process of fermentation, and has become a strong spirituous beverage.—Introduction to Translation of the Sáma-Veda. This is warranted by numerous expressions in the following hymns. It is, evidently, the Hom of the Parsees; although they affirm, that the plant is not to be found in India, and procure it from the mountains of Gilan and Mazenderan, and the neighbourhood of Yezd.

b With ukthas, also designated śastras, hymns of praise, recited, not chanted, or sung.

Váyu is supposed to say, I will drink the libation.

sacrificer; for thus, men, will completion be speedily (attained) by the ceremony.

- 7. I invoke MITRA, of pure vigour, and VARUÑA, the devourer of foes,—the joint accomplishers of the act bestowing water (on the earth).
- 8. MITRA and VARUÑA, augmenters of water, dispensers of water, you connect this perfect rite with its true (reward).
- 9. Sapient MITRA and VARUÑA, prosper our sacrifice, and increase our strength. You are born for the benefit of many; you are the refuge of multitudes.

^a Nará, dual of nara, a man. This term is frequently applied to divine beings: it is usually explained, by the Scholiast, netri, leader or guide; but it may be doubted if it does not convey the sense of male or mortal, alluding to the limited existence of the divinities. In this place, it is said to be applicable to Váyu and Indra; because they are possessed of manly vigour (paurusheha sámarthyenopetau).

b Mitra, in its ordinary sense, is a name of the sun; Varuña, of the regent of the waters: but they are, both, included among the twelve Adityas; and, in another place, Mitra is said to be the deity presiding over day; Varuña, over night: see p. 227, note b.

o Dhiyam ghritáchim sádhantá. The two first words, in the senses here explained, dhi, an act, and ghritáchi, water-shedding, are peculiar to the Veda. As identified with the sun, or as Adityas, Mitra and Varuña are said to cause rain, indirectly, by producing evaporation. The vapours thus raised, becoming condensed in the atmosphere, descend again, in showers.

^a Ritávridhau. Rita usually means true or truth; but, in the Voda, it imports, also, water and sacrifice.

SÚKTA III.

The Rishi and metre are the same as in the two preceding Hymns. Of twelve stanzas, three are addressed to the Aświns; three, to Indra; three, to the Viśwadevas; and three, to Saraswarf.

- Varga V. 1. Aświns, cherishers of pious acts, long-armed, accept, with outstretched hands, the sacrificial viands.
 - 2. Aswins, abounding in mighty acts, guides (of devotion), endowed with fortitude, listen, with unaverted minds, to our praises.
 - 3. Aswins, destroyers of foes, exempt from untruth, leaders in the van of heroes, come to the

The Aświns are the two sons of the Sun,—begotten during his metamorphosis as a horse (aśwa),—endowed with perpetual youth and beauty, and physicians of the gods. They are the heroes of many legends in the Puráńas, but of still more in this Veda. The enumeration of their wonderful actions is the especial subject of Hymns cxvi. and cxvii.

b Purubhujá, which may be also rendered, great eaters.

Oasrá, destroyers, either of foes or of diseases. The medical character of the Aświns is a Vaidik tradition, as in a text quoted by Sáyaña (aświnau vai devánám bhishajáviti śruteh), the two Aświns, verily, are the physicians of the gods.—Veda.

A This is the Scholiast's interpretation of a rather curious compound, Rudravartant. Rudra, from the root rud, implies weeping; as say the Taittiriyas,—Inasmuch as he wept, thence came the property or function of rudra (yad arodit tad rudrasya rudratwam). This is, also, the Pauráńik etymology.—Vishňu Pur., p. 58. The Vájasaneyis make the verb causal, "they cause to weep;" therefore they are rudras (yad rodayanti tasmád rudráh). From these texts Sáyańa renders rudra, heroes, they who make their mixed libations sprinkled on the lopped sacred grass.*

- 4. Indra, of wonderful splendour, come hither. These libations, ever pure, expressed by the fingers (of the priests), are desirous of thee.
- 5. Indra, apprehended by the understanding, and appreciated by the wise, approach, and accept the prayers of the priest, as he offers the libation.
- 6. Fleet Indra, with the tawny coursers, come hither to the prayers (of the priest), and in this libation accept our (proffered) food.
- 7. Universal Gods, protectors and supporters of men, bestowers (of rewards), come to the libation of the worshipper.

Varga VI.

enemies weep. Vartani means a road or way,—or here, it is said, the front of the way, the van; and the compound means, they who are in the van of warriors.

- * Vriktabarhishah. The sacred kuśa grass (Poa cynosuroides), after having had the roots cut off, is spread on the vedi or altar; and upon it the libation of Soma juice, or oblation of clarified butter, is poured out. In other places, a tuft of it, in a similar position, is supposed to form a fitting seat for the deity or deities invoked to the sacrifice. According to Mr. Stevenson, it is also strewn over the floor of the chamber in which the worship is performed.
- b The Viśwadevas are, sometimes, vaguely applied to divinities in general; but they also form a class, whose station and character are imperfectly noticed, but, who are entitled, at most religious rites, to share in the solemnity. In this and the two next stanzas, forming a Tricha, or triad, to be recited at the worship of the Viśwadevas, some of their attributes are particularized, connecting them with the elements.

- 8. May the swift-moving universal Gods, the shedders of rain, come to the libation; as the solar rays come, diligently, to the days.
- 9. May the universal Gods, who are exempt from decay, omniscient, devoid of malice, and bearers (of riches), accept the sacrifice.
- 10. May Saraswarf, the purifier, the bestower of food, the recompenser of worship with wealth, be attracted, by our offered viands, to our rite.
- 11. Saraswarf, the inspirer of those who delight in truth, the instructress of the right-minded, has accepted our sacrifice.
- 12. Saraswarf^c makes manifest, by her acts, a mighty river, and (in her own form,) enlightens all understandings.

a The original word is uncommon, ehimáyásah. The Scholiast explains it by those who have obtained knowledge universally (sarvato vyáptaprajnáh). Or it may refer, Sáyaña states, to a legend, in which the Viśwadevas addressed the Agni Sauchíka,—who had gone into the water,—saying, ehi, come, má yásih, do not go away; from whence they derived the appellation ehimáyásah. It is more than probable that the origin and import of the term were forgotten when Sáyaña wrote.

c Saraswati is here identified with the river so named.

ANUVÁKA II.

Súkta I. (IV.)

The Rishi and metre continue unchanged: the Hymn is addressed to Indra.

- 1. Day by day we invoke the doer of good works, Varga VII. for our protection; as a good milch-cow, for the milking, (is called by the milker).
- 2. Drinker of the Soma juice, come to our (daily) rites, and drink of the libation. The satisfaction of (thee who art) the bestower of riches is, verily, (the cause of) the gift of cattle.
- 3. We recognize thee in the midst of the right-minded, who are nearest to thee. Come to us; pass us not by, to reveal (thyself to others).
- 4. Go, worshipper, to the wise and uninjured Indra,—who bestows the best (of blessings) on thy friends,—and ask him of the (fitness of the) learned (priest who recites his praise).
 - 5. Let our ministers, earnestly performing his

That is, if Indra be satisfied, he will augment the worshipper's herds. The notion is very elliptically expressed.

b Here, again, we have elliptical phraseology. The original is má no ati khyah, lit., do not speak beyond us: the complete sense is supplied by the Scholiast.

^c The injunction is addressed to the Yajamána, who is desired to ask if the Hotri, or invoker whom he employs, is fit for his duty. The Hotri himself is supposed to enjoin this.

worship, exclaim: Depart, ye revilers, from hence and every other place (where he is adored).

Varga VIII.

- 6. Destroyer of foes, let our enemies say we are prosperous; let men (congratulate us). May we ever abide in the felicity (derived from the favour) of INDRA.
- 7. Offer to Indra, the pervader (of every rite of libation), the juice that is present (at the three ceremonies), the grace of the sacrifice, the exhilarator of mankind, the perfecter of the act, the favourite of (that Indra) who gives happiness (to the offerer).
- 8. Having drunk, S'ATAKRATU, of this (Soma juice), thou becamest the slayer of the VRITRAS: thou defendest the warrior in battle.

[•] The Scholiast would explain bruvantu, "let them say," by let them praise Indra; but this does not seem to be necessary. The sense is connected with what follows: let them say procul este, profani.

b These epithets of the Soma juice would be somewhat unintelligible, without the aid of the Scholiast. The perfecter of the acts, karmáni prápnuvantam, is his rendering of patayat, causing to fall; and the last phrase, mandayatsakham, the friend of the delighter, he explains as in the text.

^c Satakratu, a name of Indra, is explained, by Sáyaña, he who is connected with a hundred (many) acts, religious rites, bahukarmayukta, either as their performer, or their object: or it may be rendered, endowed with great wisdom; kratu implying either karma, act, or prajná, knowledge. In the first sense, the word may be the source of the Pauráńik fiction, that the dignity of Indra is attainable by a hundred Aśwamedhas.

d Vritraham, of the enemies, of whom the Asura Vritra was the

- 9. We offer to thee, S'ATAKRATU, the mighty in battle, (sacrificial) food, for the acquirement, Indra, of riches.
- 10. Sing unto that INDRA, who is the protector of wealth, the mighty, the accomplisher of good deeds, the friend of the offerer of the libation.

SÚKTA II. (V.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, unchanged.

- 1. Hasten hither, friends, offering praises: sit varga IX. down, and sing, repeatedly, the praises of INDRA.
- 2. When the libation is poured forth, respectively praise Indra, the discomfiter of many enemies, the lord of many blessings.
- 3. May he be, to us, for the attainment of our objects; may he be, to us, for the acquirement of riches; may he be, to us, for the acquisition of knowledge; may he come to us with food.
- 4. Sing to that INDRA, whose enemies, in combats, await not his coursers harnessed in his car.
 - 5. These pure Soma juices, mixed with curds, are head, according to the Scholiast. We shall hear more of Vritra hereafter.

poured out for the satisfaction of the drinker of the libations.

- Varga X.
- 6. Thou, INDRA, performer of good works, hast suddenly become of augmented vigour, for the sake of drinking the libation, and (maintaining) seniority among the gods).
- 7. Indra, who art the object of praises, may these pervading Soma juices enter into thee: may they be propitious for thy (attainment of) superior intelligence.
- 8. The chants (of the Sáma)^b have magnified thee, S'ATAKRATU; the hymns (of the Rich) have magnified thee: may our praises magnify thee.
- 9. May Indra, the unobstructed protector, enjoy these manifold (sacrificial) viands, in which all manly properties abide.
- 10. Indra, who art the object of praises, let not men do injury to our persons. Thou art mighty: keep off violence.

Jyaishthyam, abstract of jyaishtha, elder, oldest; but it may, also, mean best or chiefest.

text being simply stomáh and ukthá: the former, he says, are the praises of the singers of the Sáma (Sámagánám stotráńi); the latter, the hymns of the reciters of the Bahvrich (Bahvrichánám śastráńi). But, of this and other passages where Sáyańa inserts the designation of other Vedas,—the Sáma and the Yajush,—it is to be observed, that the accuracy of his additions involves the prior existence of those Vedas, at least to the hymns of the Rich in which they are supposed to be alluded to; a conclusion which there is reason to hesitate admitting.

SÚRTA III. (VI.)

The Rishi and metre continued. The three first stanzas and the last are addressed to INDRA; the rest, to the MARUTS, or Winds, with, or without, INDRA.

1. The circumstationed (inhabitants of the three Varga XI. worlds) associate with (Indra), the mighty (Sun), the indestructive (fire), the moving (wind), and the lights that shine in the sky.b

2. They (the charioteers,) harness to his car his

^{*} The text has only pari tasthushah, those who are standing around. The lokatrayavartinah práninah, the living beings of the three worlds, is the explanation of the Scholiast.

b Of the three first objects the text gives only the epithets bradhna, the mighty, to which Sayana adds Aditya, the Sun; arusha, the non-injuring, to which Fire is supplied; and charat the moving, an epithet of Wind. The last phrase is complete,rochante rochaná divi. Sáyana's additions are supported by a Brahmana, which explains the epithets as equivalent, severally, to Aditya, Agni, and Váyu (Asau vá, Adityo bradhnah;  Agnir vá arushah;  Váyur vai charan): we may, therefore, admit it. The identification of Indra with the three implies, the Scholiast says, his supremacy;—he is paramaiśwaryayukta: but the text says they join (yunjanti); and it does not appear, exactly, whom; for Indra is not named. As the following stanzas show, however, that the hymn is addressed to Indra, he may be allowed to keep his place as essentially one with the sun, fire, wind, and the constellations.

two desirable coursers, placed on either hand, baycoloured, high-spirited, chief-bearing.

- 3. Mortals, you owe your (daily) birth (to such an Indra), who, with the rays of the morning, gives sense to the senseless, and, to the formless, form.^d
- 4. Thereafter, verily, those who bear names invoked in holy rites, (the Maruts), having seen the rain about to be engendered), instigated him to resume his embryo condition (in the clouds).
- 5. Associated with the conveying Maruts, the traversers of places difficult of access, thou, Indra, hast discovered the cows hidden in the cave.

^{*} The horses of Indra are named hari, usually considered as denoting their colour, green or yellow, or, as Rosen has it, flavi. In this same verse, we have them, presently, described as śońa, crimson, bright bay, or chestnut.

b Vipakshasá, harnessed on different sides,—Sáyańa says, of the chariot; we should say, of the pole. But the Hindu ratha may not have had a pole.

d Indra is here, again, identified with the sun, whose morning rays may be said to reanimate those who have been dead, in sleep, through the night. There is some difficulty in the construction: for maryáh, mortals, is plural, while ajáyatháh is the second person singular of the first preterite. Sáyaha is of opinion that the want of concord is a Vaidik license, and that the plural substantive maryáh has been put for the singular maryah.

^e The Maruts are not named in the text; but the allusions justify the commentator's specification: the winds drive Indra, or the firmament, into an aggregation of clouds, in which the rain again collects, as in their womb.

f Allusion is here made to a legend, which is frequently ad-

6. The reciters of praises praise the mighty (troop of MARUTS), who are celebrated, and conscious of the power of bestowing wealth, in like manner as they (glorify) the counsellor, (INDRA).

Varga XII.

- 7. May you be seen, MARUTS, accompanied by the undaunted INDRA; (both,) rejoicing, and of equal splendour.
- 8. This rite is performed in adoration of the powerful INDRA, along with the irreproachable, heavenward-tending, and amiable bands (of the MARUTS).
- 9. Therefore, circumambient (troop of MARUTS), come hither, whether from the region of the sky, or from the solar sphere; b for, in this rite, (the priest) fully recites your praises.
 - 10. We invoke INDRA,—whether he come from verted to, of the Asuras named Pańis having stolen the cows of the gods, or, according to some versions, of the Angirasas, and hidden them in a cave, where they were discovered by Indra, with the help of the bitch Saramá. A dialogue between her and the robbers is given, in another place, in which she conciliates them. In other passages, the cows are represented as forcibly recovered by Indra, with the help of the Maruts.

Allusion, it is said, is here made to a battle between Indra and Vritra. The gods who had come to the aid of the former were driven away by Vritra's dogs; and Indra, to obtain the superiority, summoned the Maruts to his assistance.

b The region of the winds is, properly, the dyuloka, the heaven, or region above the antariksha, or sky. Or they may come from a sphere of light further above, or the solar region, adityamańdalát.

this earthly region, or from the heaven above, or from the vast firmament, —that he may give (us) wealth.

SÚRTA IV. (VII.)

The deity is INDRA; the Rishi and metre, as before.

Varga XIII.

1. The chanters (of the Sáma) extol Indra with songs; the reciters of the Rich, with prayers; (the priests of the Yajush), with texts.

[•] Either the prithiviloka or the dyuloka. The text adds maho rajasah, which the Scholiast explains the great antarikshaloka, the sphere of the firmament, which is, properly, the space between the earth and heaven, corresponding with vyoman or ákása, the sky or atmosphere.—Manu, I., 13.

b The Scholiast supplies the specification of the several Vedae. The first term, gáthinah, merely means singers, although he renders it giyamanasamayukta udgatarah, "the Udgatris, with Samas to be chanted;" an interpretation, he thinks, confirmed by the next term, (songs), brihat, for brihatá, "with the Brihat Sáma." The next phrase, arkebhir arkinah, is more akin to Rich, "Those of the Rig-veda, with stanzas:" but it is not necessarily confined to that sense; and, as arka is a synonym of mantra, a prayer, the sense may be, those who pray, or praise, Indra with prayers. Adhwaryus, or priests of the Yajush, we have nothing at all in the original; and the term vánih, for vánibhih, "with texts or words," which occurs, apparently without any grammatical connexion, may be referred either to the singers, or the reciters, of the prayers. It is applied, by the Scholiast, to the texts of the Yanush,—apparently, only because he had connected the preceding expressions with the other two Vedas. As already remarked, any reference to the Yajush, or Sama, in a verse of the Rich, implies the priority of the two former to the latter.

- 2. Indra, the blender of all things, comes, verily, with his steeds that are harnessed at his word,—Indra, the richly-decorated, the wielder of the thunderbolt.
- 3. Indra, to render all things visible, elevated the sun in the sky, b and charged the cloud with (abundant) waters.
- 4. Invincible INDRA, protect us, in battles abounding in spoil, with insuperable defences.
- 5. We invoke Indra for great affluence; Indra, for limited wealth,—(our) ally, and wielder of the thunderbolt against (our) enemies.
- 6. Shedder of rain, granter of all desires, set open this cloud. Thou art never uncompliant with our (requests).

Varga XIV.

- 7. Whatever excellent praises are given to other divinities, they are (also, the due) of INDRA, the thunderer. I do not know his fitting praise.
- 8. The shedder of rain, the mighty lord, the always compliant, invests men with his strength; as a bull (defends) a herd of kine.
 - 9. INDRA, who alone rules over men, over riches,

^{*} So the Scholiast explains the term of the text, hirahyaya; literally, golden, or made of gold.

b The world being enveloped in darkness by Vritra, Indra, in order to remove it, elevated (á rohayat, or as the comment says, sthápitaván, placed,) the sun in the dyuloka, or heaven. The latter part of the passage may also be rendered, he (the sun) animated the mountain (i. e., the world,) with his rays.

and over the five (classes) of the dwellers on earth.

10. We invoke, for you, INDRA, who is everywhere among men. May he be exclusively our own.

ANUVÁKA III.

Súkta I. (VIII.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

- Varga XV. 1. Indra, bring, for our protection, riches, most abundant, enjoyable, the source of victory, the humbler of our foes;
 - 2. By which we may repel our enemies, whether (encountering them) hand to hand, or on horse-back; ever protected by thee.
 - 3. Defended by thee, Indra, we possess a ponderous weapon, wherewith we may entirely conquer our opponents.
 - 4. With thee for our ally, INDRA, and (aided by)

^{*} The text has, over the five men, or classes of men, pancha kshitinam. The latter term is explained etymologically, those who are fit for habitations (nivasarhanam). The phrase is of not unfrequent recurrence, and is usually said to imply the four castes, Brahmanas, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas, and Sudras, and Nishadas,—barbarians, or those who have no caste; intending, possibly, the aboriginal races of India, all in a very low stage of civilization, like the Gonds, Koles, and Bhils of the present day.

b Literally, by striking with the fist, mushtihatyayá.

[&]quot;With a horse." The Scholiast explains this and the preceding to intend infantry and cavalry.

missile-hurling heroes, we are able to overcome (our foes) arrayed in hosts.

- 5. Mighty is INDRA, and supreme. May magnitude ever (belong) to the bearer of the thunderbolt; may his strong (armies) be, ever, vast as the heavens.
- 6. Whatever men have recourse to Indra,—in battle, or for the acquirement of offspring,—and the wise who are desirous of understanding, (obtain their desires).

7. The belly of INDRA, which quaffs the Soma juice abundantly, swells, like the ocean, (and is ever) moist, like the ample fluids of the palate.

- 8. Verily, the words of INDRA to his worshipper are true, manifold, cow-conferring, and to be held in honour: (they are) like a branch (loaded with) ripe (fruit).
- 9. Verily, Indra, thy glories are, at all times, the protectors of every such worshipper as I am.
- 10. Verily, his chanted and recited praises b are to be desired and repeated to INDRA, that he may drink the Soma juice.

Varga XVI.

[•] The Scholiast expounds the text, urvir apo na kakudah, as rendered above. But kakuda may refer to kakud, the pinnacle of a mountain; and the phrase might, then, be translated, like the abundant waters (or torrents) from the mountain-tops.

b The first is the translation of stoma, which the commentary defines sámasádhyam stotram, praise to be accomplished by the Sáma-Veda: the second is the rendering of uktha, which the same authority describes as the Riksádhyam śastram, the unsung praise to be accomplished by the Rich. Sastram is explained, by

SÚKTA II. (IX.)

Divinity, Rishi, and metre, the same.

Varga XVII.

- 1. Come, INDRA, and be regaled with all viands and libations, and, thence, mighty in strength, be victorious (over thy foes).
- 2. The libation being prepared, present the exhibitanting and efficacious (draught) to the rejoicing INDRA, the accomplisher of all things.
- 3. Indra with the handsome chin, be pleased with these animating praises: do thou, who art to be reverenced by all mankind, (come) to these rites, (with the gods).

Sridhara Swámi, in the scholia on the Bhágavata Puráña, to signify a sacred hymn not sung, śastram apragitamantrastotram, the repetition of which is the office of the Hotri, hotuh-karma; while stuti and stoma imply the sung or chanted hymn, sangitam stotram. M. Burnouf renders śastra, les prières [mentales] qui sont comme le glaive; and, in a note in the Visháu Puráña, I have translated the same expression of the Bhágavata, the unuttered incantation (p. 42, n.). But it may be doubted if this is quite correct. The difference between śastra and stoma seems to be, that one is recited, whether audibly or inaudibly; the other, sung.

- * Suśipra. But śipra means either the lower jaw, or the nose; and the compound may equally denote the handsome-nosed.
- b The epithet viśwacharshańe is, literally, "O thou who art all men," or, as Sáyańa explains it, sarvamanushyayukta, who art joined with all men, which he qualifies as sarvair yajamánaih pújyah, to be worshipped by all institutors of sacrifices. It may be doubted if this be all that is intended. Rosen renders it omnium hominum domine: M. Langlois has mattre souverain.

- 4. I have addressed to thee, Indra, the showerer (of blessings), the protector (of thy worshippers), praises which have reached thee, and of which thou hast approved.
- 5. Place before us, INDRA, precious and multiform riches; for enough, and more than enough, are, assuredly, thine.
- 6. Opulent INDRA, encourage us in this rite for varga XVIII. the acquirement of wealth; for we are diligent and renowned.
- 7. Grant us, INDRA, wealth beyond measure or calculation, inexhaustible, the source of cattle, of food, of all life.
- 8. Indra, grant us great renown, and wealth acquired in a thousand ways, and those (articles) of food (which are brought from the field,) in carts.^b
- 9. We invoke, for the preservation of our property, INDRA, the lord of wealth, the object of sacred verses, the repairer (to the place of sacrifice),° praising him with our praises.
 - 10. With libations repeatedly effused, the sacri-

The Scholiast makes this, "reached thee in heaven," or swarga. It may be questioned if the Veda recognizes swarga as the heaven of Indra.

The original of this hymn, as of many others, is so concise and elliptical as to be unintelligible, without the liberal amplification of the Scholiast. We have, in the text, simply "those carhaving viands," tā rathinir ishah, meaning, Sāyaha says, those articles of food which are conveyed in cars, carts, or waggons, from the site of their production; as rice, barley, and other kinds of grain.

[·] Here, again, we have only gantáram, he who goes, that is

Súkta III. (X.)

The divinity and Rishi are the same; the metre is the common Anushfubh.

Varga XIX.

1. The chanters (of the Sáma) hymn thee, S'A-TAKRATU; the reciters of the Richas praise thee, who art worthy of praise; the Bráhmańas b raise thee aloft, like a bamboo-pole.

according to the comment, he who is accustomed to go to the chamber which is appropriated to sacrifices, yágadeśe gamanaśilam.

- The epithet is nyokas, from ni, explained niyata, fixed, permanent, and okas, dwelling.
- b This stanza is nearly similar to the first stanza of the seventh hymn (see p. 18), and is similarly expounded by the commentator. The first term, gáyatrina, literally, those who employ the Gáyatri metre, is said, by Sáyaña, to denote the Udgátri, the chanter of the hymns of the Sama: arkinah is explained, as before, the reciters of the Rich, and the same as the Hotri of a sacrifice. The third term, brahmáňah, is explained the Brahmá of a sacrifice, or priest so denominated, and the other Brahmanas. The objection to the explanation of the first, as involving the prior recognition of the Sáma-veda, has been already noticed. The total disconnection of the term brahmáńah, the plural of brahman, from any reference to Bráhmañas, as bearing a share in religious rites, and as implying only betenden, utterers of prayer, as proposed by Dr. Roth (Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, Vol. I., p. 66), cannot be admitted without further investigation; although it may be possible that the Brahmá of a sacrifice does not necessarily involve the notion of a Bráhmańa by caste. Rosen renders the word, Brahmani; M. Langlois, prêtres. The concluding

- 2. Indra, the showerer (of blessings), knows the object (of his worshipper), who has performed many acts of worship (with the Soma plant, gathered) on the ridges of the mountain, and (therefore,) comes with the troop (of Maruts).
- 3. Indra, drinker of the Soma, having put to thy long-maned, vigorous, and well-conditioned steeds, come nigh, to hear our praises.
 - 4. Come, Vasu, (to this our rite): reply to our phrase, twå * ud vansam iva yemire, "they have raised thee, like a bamboo," is rather obscure. The Scholiast says, they have elevated Indra, as tumblers raise a bamboo-pole, on the summit of which they balance themselves; a not uncommon feat in India: or, as vansa means, also, a family, it may be rendered, as ambitious persons raise their family to consequence. Roth's proposed rendering, Die Betenden schütteln dich auf, * * wie man ein Rohr schüttelt, "the praying agitate thee up, as one shakes a reed," has no warrant, except from his theory of the purport of Brahma, "irresistible prayer;" as ud yam never means to shake, and a bamboo is not a reed, nor is it, when substantial, easily shaken. Rosen has, it is true, te, * arundinis instar erigunt: but he had no preferable equivalent for bamboo. M. Langlois has comme on élève la hampe d'un drapeau. Sáyaña, no doubt, knew much better than either of the European interpreters, what the expression intended.

- * The original has only, mounting from ridge to ridge, yat sánoh sánum áruhat, which the Scholiast completes by observing that this is said of the Yajamána, who goes to the mountain to gather either the Soma plant for bruising, or fuel for the fire, or other articles required for the ceremony.
 - b Kakshyaprá, lit., filling out their girths.

hymns, answer (to our praises), respond to (our prayers): be propitious, INDRA, to our sacrifice, and (bestow upon us abundant) food.

- 5. The hymn, the cause of increase, is to be repeated to Indra, the repeller of many foes; that S'AKRA may speak (with kindness,) to our sons and to our friends.
- 6. We have recourse to Indra, for his friendship, for wealth, for perfect might; for he, the powerful Indra, conferring wealth, is able (to protect us).

Varga XX.

- 7. Indra, by thee is food (rendered), everywhere, abundant, easy of attainment, and assuredly perfect. Wielder of the thunderbolt, set open the cow-pastures, b and provide (ample) wealth.
- 8. Heaven and earth are unable to sustain thee, when destroying thine enemies. Thou mayest command the waters of heaven. Send us, liberally, kine.
- 9. O thou whose ears hear all things, listen, quickly, to my invocation; hold, in thy heart, my praises; keep near to thee this my hymn, as it were (the words of) a friend.
- 10. We know thee, liberal rainer (of blessings), the hearer of our call in battles: we invoke the thousand-fold profitable protection of thee, the showever (of bounties).

^{*} Sakra is a common synonym of Indra, but is used, if not in this, clearly in the next, stanza, as an epithet, implying 'the powerful,' from śak, to be able.

b The text is literally rendered; the meaning being, that Indra, as the sender of rain, should fertilize the fields, and, by providing abundant pasturage, enable the cattle to yield store of milk.

- 11. Come quickly, INDRA, son of Kuśika: delighted, drink the libation: prolong the life that merits commendation: make me, who am a Rishi, abundantly endowed (with possessions).
- 12. May these our praises be, on all occasions, around thee, deserver of praise; may they augment the power of thee, who art long-lived; and, being agreeable to thee, may they yield delight (to us).

SÚRTA IV. (XI.)

The divinity is, still, INDRA; but the Rishi is now styled Jetri, the son of Madhuchchandas: the metre is Anushtubh.

1. All our praises magnify INDRA, expansive as the ocean, the most valiant of warriors who fight in chariots, the lord of food, the protector of the virtuous.

Varga XXI.

 - 3. The ancient liberalities of INDRA, his protec-

In all the Pauráńik genealogies, the son of Kuśika is the sage Viśwámitra; and, in order to explain its application to Indra, Sáyańa quotes the legend given in the Index (Anukramańiká), which states that Kuśika, the son of Ishiratha, being desirous of a son equal to Indra, adopted a life of continence, in requital of which, Indra was born as the son of Gáthi, the Gádhi of the Puráńas.

- 5. Thou, wielder of the thunderbolt, didst open the cave of Bala, b who had there concealed the cattle; and the gods whom he had oppressed no longer feared, when they had obtained thee (for their ally).
- 6. (Attracted) by thy bounties, I again come, hero, to thee, celebrating (thy liberality), while offering this libation. The performers of the rite approach thee, who art worthy of praise; for they have known thy (munificence).
 - 7. Thou slewest, Indra, by stratagems, the wily

b Bala, according to the Scholiast, was an Asura, who stole the cows of the gods, and hid them in a cave: Indra surrounded the cave, with his army, and recovered the cattle. In the legend, as cited from the Anukramańiká, the Pańis,—formerly noticed as the cow-stealers (p. 16, n. f.),—are said to be the soldiers of Bala, and the actual thieves and concealers of them in the cave. Rosen conceives some relation to exist between this legend and that of Cacus: Quas fabulas aliquo cognationis vinculo inter se contineri, et ex uno eodemque fonte, quantumvis remoto, derivatas esse, persuasum quidem est mihi.—Adnotationes, p. xxi. But the story is likely to have originated in incidents common to an early and, partly, pastoral stage of society. We have the Cacus of the Highlands, and the Bala of the Veda, in such worthies as Donald Ben Lean.

S'USHÑA: the wise have known of this thy (greatness). Bestow upon them (abundant) food.

8. The reciters of sacred hymns praise, with all their might, INDRA, the ruler of the world, whose bounties are (computed by) thousands, or even more.

ANUVÁKA IV.

SÚKTA I. (XII.)

The deity addressed is Agni; the Rishi is Medhatithi, the son of Kanwa; the metre, Gayatri.

- 1. We select AGNI, the messenger of the gods, b Varga XXII. their invoker, the possessor of all riches, the perfecter of this rite.
- 2. (The offerers of oblations) invoke, with their invocations, Agni, Agni, the lord of men, the bearer of offerings, the beloved of many.
 - 3. AGNI, generated (by attrition), bringshither

^{*} Sushia is described as an Asura slain by Indra: but this is, evidently, a metaphorical murder. Sushia means drier up, exsiccator: bhútánam śoshańahstu, the cause of the drying or withering of beings, heat or drought,—which Indra, as the rain, would put an end to.

b The commentator cites the Taittiriya Bráhmaña, in confirmation of this function; Uśanas, the son of Kavi, being the messenger of the Asuras. Agnir devánám dúta ásid; Uśanah kávyo suráńám.

[°] Viśpati; Viś being constantly used for prajá, progeny, people, men.

d The original has only jajnánah, 'being born,' that is, being the gods to the clipped sacred grass. Thou art their invoker for us, and art to be adored.

- 4. As thou dischargest the duty of messenger, arouse them, desirous of the oblation: sit down, with them, on the sacred grass.
- 5. Resplendent Agni, invoked by oblations of clarified butter, consume our adversaries, who are defended by evil spirits.
- 6. Agni, the ever-young and wise, the guardian of the dwelling^b (of the sacrificer), the bearer of offerings, whose mouth is (the vehicle) of oblations, is kindled by Agni.^c

Varga XXIII. 7. Pra

- 7. Praise, in the sacrifice, AGNI, the wise, the observer of truth, the radiant, the remover of disease.

 - d A name of fire, or a fire; literally, the purifier.

ing oblations for the gratification of the gods, approaches Agni.

- 10. AGNI, the bright, the purifier, bring hither the gods to our sacrifice, to our oblations.
- 11. Praised with our newest hymn, bestow upon us riches and food, the source of progeny.
- 12. Agni, shining with pure radiance, and charged with all the invocations of the gods, be pleased by this our praise.

SÚKTA II. (XIII).

The Rishi and the metre are the same; but the Hymn is addressed to a variety of divinities, or deified objects, to which the general name Apri is applied. The first five stanzas hymn various forms of Agni; the sixth, the doors of the hall of sacrifice; the seventh, morning and night; the eighth, two divine or deified priests; the ninth, the goddesses Ilá, Saraswarf, and Bháratí; the tenth, Twashíri; the eleventh, Vanaspati; and the twelfth, Swáhá. They are, all, considered as identifiable or connected with Agni.

1. Agni, who art Susamiddha,° invoker, purifier, Varga XXIV. bring hither the gods to the offerers of our oblation; and do thou sacrifice.

2. Wise (Agni), who art Tanúnapát, d present,

This verse is to be repeated, when the worshipper approaches the combined Ahavaniya and Garhapatya fires, to offer the oblation.

b The Apris are, usually, enumerated as twelve, but, sometimes, —omitting one of the names of fire, Naráśansa,—only eleven.

Su, well, sam, completely, and iddha, kindled; 'the thoroughly kindled.'

^{*} Tanunapat, the devourer of clarified butter (tanunapa); or, according to another etymology, the consumer of its own substance this day, our well-flavoured sacrifice to the gods, for their food.

- 3. I invoke the beloved Narasansa, the sweet-tongued, the offerer of oblations, to this sacrifice.
- 4. Agni, (who art) Ilita, bring hither the gods, in an easy-moving chariot; for thou art the invoker instituted by men.
- 5. Strew, learned priests, the sacred grass, well bound together (in bundles), and sprinkled with clarified butter, the semblance of ambrosia.
- 6. Let the bright doors, the augmenters of sacrifice, (hitherto) unentered, be set open; for, certainly, to-day is the sacrifice to be made.

Varga XXV.

7. I invoke the levely night and dawn to sit upon the sacred grass, at this our sacrifice.

- * Narásansa, him whom men (naráh) praise (sansanti).
- b Ilita, the worshipped; from il, to adore, to praise.
- Barhis is said, here, to be an appellative also of Agni. The double meaning pervades the concluding phrase, wherein (in which grass, or in which Agni,) is the appearance of ambrosia, amritadarśanam; amrita implying either the clarified butter sprinkled on the grass, or the immortal Agni. Amritasamánasya ghritasya, or marańarahitasaya * barhirnámakasyágneh.
- ^d The doors of the chamber in which the oblation is offered; said to be personifications of Agni: Agniviśeshamurtayah.
- According to the ordinary import of nakta and ushas. But they, according to the Scholiast, denote, in this place, two forms of fire, presiding over those seasons,—tatkdlábhimánivahnimúrtidwaye.

⁽tanú) or fuel. Napát occurs, in the Nighańtu, as a synonym of tanaya, son or offspring; but, in this compound, the second member is considered to be either ad, who eats, or pá, who preserves,—the latter, with na prefixed, napát, who does not preserve, who destroys.

- 8. I call the two eloquent, divine, and sage invokers (of the gods), that they may celebrate this our sacrifice.
- 9. May the three undecaying goddesses, givers of delight, Ilá, Saraswarí, and Mahí, b sit down upon the sacred grass.
- 10. I invoke the chief and multiform Twashfri: may he be, solely, ours.
 - 11. Present, divine VANASPATI, d our oblation to
- The construction shows that we have two persons, or divinities, here; the Scholiast says, two Agnis. The Index has daivyau hotdrau prachetasau, two divine invokers (prachetasas): or the latter word may mean, merely, sages, like the kavi of the text.
- b Mahi is said to be a synonym of Bhárati, as appears from an analogous passage, where the names occur Ilá, Saraswati, Bhárati. These are, also, designated, by the Scholiast, as personifications of Agni, Vahnimurtayah: they are, also, called the three personified flames of fire. As goddesses, the first, Ilá, is the earth, the bride of Vishňu: Saraswati is, as usual, the goddess of eloquence, and wife of Brahmá: the third, synonymous with speech, is called the wife of Bharata, one of the Adityas: but these mythological personifications are of a post-Vaidik period.
- c Twashtri, in the popular system, is identified with Viśwakarma, the artificer of the gods; and he seems to possess some attributes of that nature in the Vedas, being called the fabricator of the original sacrificial vase or ladle. A text of the Veda is, also, quoted, which attributes to him the formation of the forms of animals in pairs: Twashtá vai paśunám mithunánám rupakrid iti śrutéh. He is, also, one of the twelve Adityas, and here is said to be an Agni: Twashtrinámakam agnim.
- a Vanaspati, lord of the woods; usually, a large tree; here, said to be an Agni,—as if the fuel and the burning of it were identified.

- the gods; and may true knowledge be (the reward) of the giver.
 - 12. Perform the sacrifice conveyed through Swáhá to Indra, in the house of the worshipper. Therefore I call the gods hither.

SÚKTA III. (XIV.)

The Rishi and metre are unchanged; but the Hymn is addressed to the Viśwadevas.

- varga XXVI. 1. Come, AGNI, to our adoration, and to our praises, with all these gods, to drink the Soma juice; and (do thou) offer sacrifice.
 - 2. The Kanwas^b invoke thee, sapient Agni, and extol thy deeds. Come, Agni, with the gods.
 - 3. Sacrifice, (AGNI), to INDRA, VÁYU, BRIHASPATI, MITRA, AGNI, PÚSHAN, and BHAGA, the ÁDITYAS, and the troop of MARUTS.°

^{*} Swáhá, as the exclamation used in pouring the oblation on the fire, may, also, be identified with Agni. In the section on the various Agnis, in the Mahábhárata, Swáhá is called the daughter of Brihaspati, the son of Angiras. The Puráñas give her a different origin, and make her the daughter of Daksha, and wife of Agni.

b The Kańwas properly denote the descendants, or the disciples, of the Rishi Kańwa; but the Scholiast would restrict the term, in this place, to the sense of sages (medhávinah), or of officiating priests (ritwijah).

[&]quot;Sacrifice, Agni, to," are supplied by the commentary; for the verse contains only the proper names in the objective case. Most of these have already occurred. Mitra, Pushan, and Bhaga are forms of the Sun, or Adityas, specified individually, as well as the class of Adityas, or Suns, in the twelve months of the year. Why Vrihaspati or Brihaspati should be inserted is not explained:

- 4. For all of you are poured out these juices, satisfying, exhilarating, sweet, falling in drops, or gathered in ladles.
- 5. The wise priests, desirous of the protection (of the gods), having spread the sacred grass, presenting oblations, and offering ornaments, praise thee.
- 6. Let the coursers who convey thee, glossy-backed, and harnessed at will, bring the gods to drink the Soma juice.
- 7. Agni, make those objects of veneration, aug-varga XXVII. menters of pious acts, (participant of the offering), together with their wives: b give them, bright-tongued, to drink of the Soma juice.
- 8. Let those objects of veneration and of praise drink, with thy tongue, of the Soma juice, at the moment of libation.
- 9. Let the wise invoker (of the gods) bring hither, from the shining (sphere) of the sun, all the divinities, awaking with the dawn.
 - 10. With all the gods, with INDRA, VÁYU, and the etymology of the name is given from Pákini (VI., I., 157); brihas, for brihat, great, divine, a deity; and pati, master, or protector, in his character of spiritual preceptor of the gods.

Ghritaprishtháh; their backs shining with, or from, ghee, or clarified butter: the commentary says, with which the horses are fed.

b Patnivatah, having their wives.

[•] Lit., from the shining of the Sun (Suryasya rochanát); equivalent, the Scholiast says, to Swargalokát: but Swarga and the Adityaloka are, usually, regarded as very different. Perhaps the reading should be Swarlokát, from the region of heaven.

the glories of MITRA, drink, AGNI, the sweet Soma juice.

- 11. Thou, AGNI, appointed, by man, as the invoker (of the gods), art present at sacrifices. Do thou present this our oblation.
- 12. Yoke, divine AGNI, 'thy fleet and powerful mares, ROHITS,' to thy chariot; and, by them, hither bring the gods.

SÚKTA IV. (XV.)

The Rishi and metre are unchanged; the deity is RITU, associated, in each stanza, with some divinity more familiarly known.

Varga XXVIII.

- 1. Indra, drink, with Ritu, the Soma juice. Let the satisfying drops enter into thee, and there abide.
- 2. MARUTS, drink, with RITU, from the sacrificial vase: consecrate the rite; for you are bountiful.
- 3. NESHÍRI, d with thy spouse, commend our sacrifice to the gods: drink, with RITU; for thou art possessed of riches.

^{*} Mitrasya dhámabhih, with the rays; or, according to the commentator, with various forms of Mitra.

b Tabhih, with them, in the feminine gender; and, hence, the Scholiast adds badavabhih, mares. They are termed Rohits, which may mean red. The Nighahtu defines the term as the name of the horses of Agni.

F c Ritu is, properly, a season, a sixth of the Hindu year, but is, here, personified as a divinity.

⁴ Neshtri is another name of Twashtri, from his having assumed, it is said, upon some occasion, the function of the Neshtri, or priest so denominated, at a sacrifice.

- 4. Agni, bring the gods hither; arrange them in three places; a decorate them: drink with RITU.
- 5. Drink the Soma juice, INDRA, from the precious vase of the Bráhmaña, after Ritu, for whom thy friendship is uninterrupted.
- 6. MITRA and VARUÑA, propitious to pious acts, be present, with RITU, at our sacrifice, efficacious, and undisturbed (by foes).
- 7. (The priests,) desirous of wealth, holding stones Varga XXIX. in their hands, praise the divine (Agni,) Dravino-DAS, d both in the primary and subsidiary sacrifices.

- Grávahastásah, having stones in their hands, with which to bruise the Soma plant. The Gravastut is, also, one of the sixteen priests; but it is, here, used generally.
- Dravinodas is either an epithet or an appellative of Agni, as the donor (das) of wealth, or of strength, draviña.
 - In the adhwara and in the yajnas, the first is said to be the

b The text is obscure. Bráhmańád rádhasah is, literally, from Brahmanical wealth: but the latter is explained, a costly or wealthy vessel,—dhanabhútát pátrát; and the former, relating to the Bráhmaháchchhansi, — Bráhmaháchchhansisambaddhát. Bráhmańáchchhansi is one of the sixteen priests employed in sacrifices; corresponding, in the second division of four, to the Brahmá in the first: and, perhaps, his function may be to hold some ladle, or vase, in which the offering is presented, or in which the portion not expended is removed; as it is said of him, "the relation is the ladle that has the leavings," -tasya sambandhyuchchhistas chamasah. Rosen renders it, sacro præcepto congrua ex patera; M. Langlois, au vase qui contient l'offrande sainte.

- 8. May Dravinodas give us riches that may be heard of. We ask them for the gods.
- 9. Dravinodas desires to drink, with the Ritus, from the cup of Neshtri. Hasten, (priests, to the hall of offering); present the oblation, and depart.
- 10. Since, Draviñodas, we adore thee, for the fourth time, b along with the RITUS, therefore be a benefactor unto us.
- 11. Aswins, performers of pious acts, bright with sacrificial fires, accepters, with the Ritus, of the sacrifice, drink the sweet draught.
- 12. Giver of rewards, (AGNI), being identified with the household fire, and partaker, with RITU, of the sacrifice, worship the gods, on behalf of their adorer.

SUKTA V. (XVI.)

The Rishi and metre continued: the deity is INDRA.

Varga XXX. 1. INDRA, let thy coursers hither bring thee, bestower of desires, to drink the Soma juice: may (the priests), radiant as the sun, (make thee manifest).

primary or essential ceremony, prakritirupa, such as the Agnishtoma; the second, the modified ceremonies, vikritirupa; such as the Ukthya, which is, elsewhere, termed an offering with Soms juice,—Somasansthayága.

- Or from the cup of the Neshtri, one of the sixteen officiating priests.
 - b That is, Dravinodas has been now celebrated in four stanzas.
- ^o The name, in the text, is Santya, which is so explained, by the Scholiast, from san, to give.

- 2. Let his coursers convey INDRA, in an easy-moving chariot, hither, where these grains (of parched barley), steeped in clarified butter, are strewn (upon the altar).
- 3. We invoke Indra, at the morning rite; we invoke him, at the succeeding sacrifice; we invoke Indra to drink the Soma juice.²
- 4. Come, INDRA, to our libation, with thy long-maned steeds. The libation being poured out, we invoke thee.
- 5. Do thou accept this our praise, and come to this our sacrifice, for which the libation is prepared: drink, like a thirsty stag.^b
- 6. These dripping Soma juices are effused upon Varga XXXI. the sacred grass. Drink them, INDRA, (to recruit thy) vigour.
- 7. May this our excellent hymn, touching thy heart, be grateful to thee; and, thence, drink the effused libation.
- 8. Indra, the destroyer of enemies, repairs, assuredly, to every ceremony where the libation is poured out, to drink the Soma juice, for (his) exhilaration.
- 9. Do thou, S'ATAKRATU, accomplish our desire, with (the gift of) cattle and horses. Profoundly meditating, we praise thee.

^{*} Although not more particularly named, the specification implies the morning, midday, and evening worship.

b Like the gaura, said to be a sort of deer.

SÚRTA VI. (XVII.)

Metre and Rishi, as before; divinities, INDRA and VARUÑA, conjointly.

- Varga XXXII. 1. I seek the protection of the sovereign rulers, INDRA and VARUNA. May they, both, favour us accordingly;
 - 2. For you are ever ready, guardians of mankind, to grant protection, on the appeal of a minister such as I am.
 - 3. Satisfy us with wealth, Indra and Varuña, according to our desires. We desire you ever near us.
 - 4. The mingled (libations) of our pious rites, the mingled (laudations) of our right-minded (priests, are prepared). May we be (included) among the givers of food.^b a Samrajoh, of the two emperors; but rajad is, in general, equivocally used,—meaning, shining, bright, as well as royal; so that Sayaha explains the term, "possessed of extensive dominion," or "shining very brilliantly." Indra may claim the title of raja, as chief of the gods; but it seems to be, in a more especial manner, appropriated to Varuha.

b The stanza is rather elliptically and obscurely worded; and the sense of the leading term, yuváku, is not very clear: it usually denotes a mixture of curds and ghee. We have, in the text, yuváku * śachinám; yuváku sumatinám. The former (śachinám) is explained, a mixture of buttermilk, water, and meal, suited for acts of religious worship; the latter, the combination of choice expressions and praises which are the suitable phraseology of the right-minded or pious (sumatinám). The final clause is, simply, may we be of (amongst) the givers of food.

- 5. Indra is a giver among the givers of thousands: Varuña is to be praised among those who are deserving of laudation.
- 6. Through their protection we enjoy (riches), and heap them up; and, still, there is abundance.

Varga XXXIII.

- 7. I invoke you both, Indra and Varuña, for manifold opulence. Make us victorious (over our enemies).
- 8. Indra and Varuna, quickly bestow happiness upon us; for our minds are devoted to you both.
- 9. May the earnest praise which I offer to Indra and Varuna reach you both,—that conjoint praise which you (accepting,) dignify.

ANUVÁKA V.

SÚRTA I. (XVIII.)

The metre and Rishi as in the preceding. The first five stanzas are addressed to Brahmañaspati, associated, in the fourth, with Indra and Soma, and, in the fifth, with them and Dakshina: the three next are addressed to Sadasaspati; and the ninth, to the same, or to Narásansa.

1. Brahmanaspati, make the offerer of the liba-

Varga XXXIV.

The Scholiast furnishes us with no account of the station or functions of this divinity. The etymology will justify Dr. Roth's definition of him, as the deity of sacred prayer, or, rather, perhaps, of the text of the Veda; but whether he is to be considered as a distinct personification, or as a modified form of one of those already recognized, and, especially, of Agni, is doubtful. His giving wealth, healing disease, and promoting nourishment, are properties not peculiar to him; and his being associated with Indra and Soma, whilst it makes him distinct from them, leaves him tion illustrious among the gods, like Kakshívar, the son of Uśij.

- 2. May he, who is opulent, the healer of disease, the acquirer of riches, the augmenter of nourishment, the prompt (bestower of rewards), be favourable to us.
- 3. Protect us, Brahmanaspati, so that no calumnious censure of a malevolent man may reach us.
- 4. The liberal man whom INDRA, BRAHMAÑASPATI, and Soma protect never perishes.

Agni as his prototype. His being, in an especial manner, connected with prayer appears more fully in a subsequent passage, Hymn xl. Agni is, in an especial degree, the deity of the Brahman; and, according to some statements, the Rig-Veda is supposed to proceed from him; a notion, however, which, according to Medhátithi, the commentator on Manu, was suggested by its opening with the hymn to Agni, Agnim ile.

* This story is to be found in several of the Puráñas, especially the Matsya and Váyu, as well as in the Mahábhárata, Vol. I., p. 154. Kakshivat was the son of Dirghatamas, by Uśij, a female servant of the queen of the Kalinga Rájá, whom her husband had desired to submit to the embraces of the sage, in order that he might beget a son. The queen substituted her bondmaid Uśij: the sage, cognizant of the deception, sanctified Uśij, and begot, by her, a son, named Kakshivat, who, through his affiliation by Kalinga, was a Kshattriya, but, as the son of Dirghatamas, was a Brahman. He was, also, a Rishi; as, in another passage, he says of himself, aham kakshíván Rishir asmi,—I am the Rishi Kakshivat. The Taittiriyas also include him among the holy persons who are qualified to conduct sacrifices and compose hymns. In the Mahábhárata, Dirghatamas disallows the right of the king, there named Bali, to the sons of a Sudra female, and claims them as his own.

- 5. Do thou, Brahmanaspati, and do you, Soma, Indra, and Dakshina, protect that man from sin.
- 6. I solicit understanding from SADASASPATI, the Varga XXXV. wonderful, the friend of INDRA, the desirable, the bountiful;
- 7. Without whose aid the sacrifice even of the wise is not perfected: he pervades the association of our thoughts.°
- 8. He rewards the presenter of the oblation: he brings the sacrifice to its conclusion: (through him) our invocation reaches the gods.
- 9. I have beheld NARÁŚANSA, the most resolute, the most renowned, and radiant as the heavens.
- Dakshińá is, properly, the present made to the Brahmans, at the conclusion of any religious rite,—here personified as a female divinity.
- b Properly, the master or protector (pati) of the assembly (sadas): it is, here, a name of Agni. He is the friend or associate of Indra, as, on this occasion, partaking of the same oblations.
- o Dhindm yogam inwati, which may mean, "he pervades the association of our minds," or, "the objects of our pious acts;" as the means either, as usual, buddhi, understanding, or has the Naidik sense of karma, act.
- d This has already occurred, [p. 32] as an appellative of Agni, and confirms the application of Sadasaspati and Brahmahaspati to the same divinity. According to Kátthakya, it means the personified yajna, or sacrifice, at which men (naráh) praise (śansanti) the gods; according to Sákapúńi, it is, as before (Hymn xiii., v. 3), Agni, he who is to be praised of men. The same explanation is quoted from the Bráhmańa: "I beheld (with the eye of the Vedas,) that divinity, Sadasaspati, who is to be praised by men, who is also called Naráśansa."

SÚRTA II. (XIX.)

The metre and Rishi are unchanged; Agni and the Maruts are the deities.

Varga XXXVI.

- 1. Earnestly art thou invoked to this perfect rite, to drink the Soma juice. Come, Agni, with the Maruts.
- 2. Nor god nor man has power over a rite (dedicated) to thee, who art mighty. Come, AGNI, with the MARUTS.
- 3. Who all are divine, and devoid of malignity, and who know (how to cause the descent) of great waters: come, Agni, with the Maruts.
- 4. Who are fierce, and send down rain, and are unsurpassed in strength: come, Agni, with the Maruts.

[•] Devásah, explained dyotamánáh, shining. By the term 'all' is to be understood the seven troops of the Maruts, as by the text saptaganá vai Marutah.

b Many texts ascribe to the Maruts, or winds, a main agency in the fall of rain; as, "Maruts, you have risen from the ocean; taking the lead, you have sent down rain,—Udirayathá, Marutak samudrato; yuyam vrishtim varshayathá, purishinah." [V., LV., 5: see Vol. III., p. 335.] Rajas, the word used in the text, means water, or light, or the world.—Nighantu.

^o Here the word is arka: as, according to the Vajasaneyis, Apo vá arkah. The term is derived from arch, to worship, and is explained in two other texts: So 'rehann acharat, tasydrchata apo' jáyanta,—He(Hirahyagarbha) proceeded, worshipping, (after creating the solid earth), and, from him, worshipping, the waters were produced; and, again, Archato vai me kam abhut,—From me, worshipping, water was. Hence the name arka was given to water, or rain.

- 5. Who are brilliant, of terrific forms, who are possessors of great wealth, and are devourers of the malevolent: come, Agni, with the Maruts.
- 6. Who are divinities abiding in the radiant heaven above the sun: come, Agni, with the Maruts.

Varga XXXVII.

- 7. Who scatter the clouds, and agitate the sea (with waves): come, Agni, with the Maruts.
- 8. Who spread (through the firmament), along with the rays (of the sun), and, with their strength, agitate the ocean: b come, AGNI, with the MARUTS.
- 9. I pour out the sweet Soma juice, for thy drinking, (as) of old. Come, AGNI, with the MARUTS.

SECOND ADHYÁYA.

SÚRTA III. (XX.)

Metre and Rishi, as before; addressed to the deified mortals named RIBHUS.

1. This hymn, the bestower of riches, has been

Varga I.

In the heaven (divi, i.e., dyuloke); above the sun nákasyádhi, i.e., súryasyopuri). Náka, here explained sun, is, more usually, explained, sky, or heaven.

b The influence of the winds upon the sea, alluded to in this and the preceding verse, indicates more familiarity with the ocean than we should have expected from the traditional inland position of the early Hindus.

addressed, by the sages, with their own mouths, to the (class of) divinities having birth.

2. They who created, mentally, for INDRA, the horses that are harnessed at his words, have partaken of the sacrifice performed with holy acts.^b b Samibhir yajnam ásata. M. Nève renders it: [ils] ont eltenu le sacrifice par leurs œuvres méritoires; M. Langlois, ils ent entouré le sacrifice de cérémonies (saintes); Mr. Stevenson, they pervade our sacrifice by purificatory rites; Rosen, literally, ceremoniis sacrificium acceperunt. That three simple words should admit of this variety of rendering shows the vagueness of some of the Vaidik expressions. The sense seems to be, they have pervaded, appro-[•] Deváva janmane, literally, to the divine or brilliant birth: but the Scholiast explains the latter, jayamanaya, being born, or having birth; and the former, devasanghaya, a class of divinities. that is, the Ribhus, of whom it is only said, that they were pious men, who, through penance, obtained deification, - manushyáh santas tapasá devatwam práptáh. Thanks to the learning and industry of M. Nève, of the University of Louvain, we are fully acquainted with the history and character of the Ribhus, as they appear in different portions of the Rig-veda.—Essai sur le Myths Their origin and actions are, also, narrated in the des Ribhavas. Niti-manjari, as well as in the notes of Sayana on this and other similar passages. The Ribhus were the three sons of Sudhanwan, a descendant (the Niti-manjari says, a son) of Angiras, severally named Ribhu, Vibhu, and Vdja, and styled, collectively, Ribhus, from the name of the elder. Through their assiduous performance of good works, -swapas (su-apas), -they obtained divinity, exercised superhuman powers, and became entitled to receive praise and They are supposed to dwell in the solar sphere; and there is an indistinct identification of them with the rays of the sun: but, whether typical, or not, they prove the admission, at an early date, of the doctrine that men might become divinities.

- 3. They constructed, for the Násatyas, a universally-moving and easy car, and a cow yielding milk.
- 4. The RIBHUS, uttering unfailing prayers, b endowed with rectitude, and succeeding (in all pious acts), made their (aged) parents young.
 - 5. RIBHUS, the exhilarating juices are offered to priated, or accepted, the sacrifice offered (which last word is understood), with the usual implements and observances (samibhih, coremonsis); as Sayana, grahachamasadinishpadanarupaih karmabhir, yajnam, asmadiyam ásata (vyáptavantah), they have pervaded (or accepted) our sacrifice, performed with those acts which are executed by the means of tongs, ladles, and other (utensils employed in making oblations). The expression may, perhaps, obscurely intimate the invention of the implements so used, by the Ribhus; their modification of one of which, at least, is subsequently referred to (v. 6), while other expressions imply mechanical skill.

- Takshan, for atakshan; literally, they chipped, or fabricated. So, in the preceding verse, they carved (tatakshuh) Indra's horses. There, it is said, they did so mentally (manaśa); but, in this verse, there is no such qualification; and the meaning of the verb implies mechanical formation. The Ribhus may have been the first to attempt the bodily representation of these appendages of Indra and the Assoins.
- b Satyamantráh, having, or repeating, true prayers, i.e., which were certain of obtaining the objects prayed for. There is some variety in the renderings, here, also; but it was scarcely necessary, as the meaning is clear enough.
- ° Vishti, for vishtayah: according to the Scholiast, vyáptiyuktáh, in which vyápti means, encountering no opposition in all acts, through the efficacy of their true or infallible mantras.
- d Akrata, from kri, to make, generally; not, as before, atakshan, to make mechanically.

you, along with Indra, attended by the Maruts, and along with the brilliant Adityas.

Varga II.

- 6. The RIBHUS have divided into four the new ladle, the work of the divine Twashiri.
- 7. May they, moved by our praises, give, to the offerer of the libation, many precious things, and perfect the thrice seven sacrifices.°
- According to Aśwaldyana, as quoted by Sáyana, the libations offered at the third daily (or evening) sacrifice are presented to Indra, along with the Adityas, together with Ribhu, Vibhu, and Vája, with Brihaspati and the Viśwadovas.
- Twashtri, in the Pauranik mythology, is the carpenter or artisan of the gods: so Sayana says, of him, he is a divinity whose duty, with relation to the gods, is carpentry,—devasambandhi takshanavyaparah. Whether he has Vaidik authority of a more decisive description than the allusion of the text does not appear. The same may be said of his calling the Ribhus the disciples of Twashtri,—Twashtuh śishyáh Ribhavah. The act ascribed to them, in the text, of making one ladle four, has, probably, rather reference to some innovation in the objects of libation, than to the mere multiplication of the wooden spoons used to pour out the Soma juice. The Niti-manjari says, that Agni, coming to a sacrifice which the Ribhus celebrated, became as one of them, and, therefore, they made the ladle fourfold, that each might have his share.
- o Trir á sáptáni. The Scholiast considers that trih may be applied to precious things, as meaning best, middling, worst; or to sáptáni, seven sacrifices, as classed under three heads. Thus, one class consists of the Agnyádheya, seven ceremonies in which clarified butter is offered on fire; one class consists of the Páka-yajnas, in which dressed viands are offered to the Viśwadevas and others; and one comprehends the Agnishtoma class, in which libations of Soma juice are the characteristic offering.

Varga III.

8. Offerers (of sacrifices), they held a mortal existence): by their pious acts they obtained a share of sacrifices with the gods.

SÚKTA IV. (XXI.)

Rishi and metre the same: the Hymn is addressed to Indra and Agni.

- 1. I invoke hither INDRA and AGNI, to whom we desire to present our praise. Let them, who are, both, copious drinkers of the Soma juice, (accept the libation).
- 2. Praise, men, INDRA and AGNI, in sacrifices; decorate them (with ornaments); and hymn them with hymns.
- 3. We invoke Indra and Agni,—for the benefit of our friend (the institutor of the rite),—drinkers of the Soma juice, to drink the libation.
- 4. We invoke the two who are fierce (to their foes), to attend the rite where the libation is prepared. Indra and Agni, come hither.
 - 5. May those two, Indra and Agni, who are ^{*} Adhárayanta, they held, or enjoyed, is all the text gives: what they held is not specified. The Scholiast supplies práňán, vital airs, life: his addition is in harmony with other texts. Martásah santo amritatwam ánaśuh,—Being mortals, they obtained immortality. Their partaking of sacrifices is, also, repeatedly stated: Saudhanwaná yajniyam bhágam ánaśa,—By the son of Sudhanwan was a sacrificial portion acquired. [See Vol. III., p. 106, note 2.] Ribhavo vai deveshu tapasá somapitham abhyajayan,—The Ribhus won, by devotion, the drinking of Soma among the gods.

mighty, and guardians of the assembly, render the Rákshasas innocuous; and may the devourers (of men) be destitute of progeny.

6. By this unfailing sacrifice be you rendered vigilant, INDRA and AGNI, in the station which affords knowledge (of the consequences of acts); and bestow upon us happiness.

SÚKTA V. (XXII.)

The Rishi and metre continue: the Hymn consists of twenty-one stanzas, which are addressed to a variety of divinities, or, four, to the Aświns, and four, to Savitri; the next two, to Agni; the eleventh, to the goddesses, collectively; the twelfth, to the wives of Indra, Varuña, and Agni; the two next, to Heaven and Earth; the fifteenth, to Earth alone; and the last six, to Vishâu.

varga IV. 1. Awaken the Aświns, associated for the morning sacrifice. Let them, both, come hither, to drink of this Soma juice.

- 2. We invoke the two Aswins, who are, both, divine, the best of charioteers, riding in an excellent car, and attaining heaven.
 - 3. Aświns, stir up* the sacrifice with your whip

^{*} Mimikshatam, mix intimately the juice of the Soma. It is not clear how this is to be done with the whip; allusion to which only intimates, it is said, that the Aświns should come quickly. Tayá, by that, may, also, mean "with that,"—come with that your whip: or kaśa, commonly, a whip, may mean speech; in which case, madhumati and sunritávati, explained wet and loud, will signify sweet and veracious,—come with such speech, Aświns, and taste the libation.

that is wet with the foam (of your horses), and lashing loudly.

- 4. The abode of the offerer of the libation is not far from you, Aświns, going thither in your car.
- 5. I invoke SAVITRI, the golden-handed, to protect me: he will appoint the station of the worshippers.
- 6. Glorify Savitri, who is no friend to water,^b for our protection. We desire to celebrate his worship.

Varga V.

- 7. We invoke SAVITRI, the enlightener of men, the dispenser of various home-ensuring wealth.
- 8. Sit down, friends. SAVITRI, verily, is to be praised by us; for he is the giver of riches.
- 9. Agni, bring hither the loving wives of the gods, and Twashiri, to drink the Soma juice.

Savitri is, ordinarily, a synonym of the Sun. Golden-handed, hirańyapáńi, is explained, either he who gives gold to the worshipper, or by a Vaidik legend:—At a sacrifice performed by the gods, Súrya undertook the office of Ritwij, but placed himself in the station of the Brahmá. The Adhwaryu priests, seeing him in that position, gave him the oblation termed Prásitra, which, as soon as received by Súrya, cut off the hand that had improperly accepted it. The priests who had given the oblation bestowed upon Súrya a hand of gold. The legend is narrated in the Kaushítaki Bráhmaña, it is said; but, there, Súrya loses both his hands.

bApám napátam might be thought to mean son of the waters; as napát is often used, in the Veda, in that sense: but the Sun is rather the parent, than the progeny, of the waters; as, Adityáj jáyate vṛishtih,—Rain is born from the sun. Napát is here taken in its literal purport, who does not cherish (na pátayati), but dries them up by his heat, santápena śoshakah.

- 10. Youthful Agni, bring hither, for our protection, the wives (of the gods), Hotrá, Bháratí, Varútrí, and Dhishañá.^a
- varga vi. 11. May the goddesses, whose wings are unclipped, the protectresses of mankind, favour us with protection, and with entire felicity.
 - 12. I invoke hither Indraní, Varunání, and Agnáyí, for our welfare, and to drink the Soma juice.
 - 13. May the great heaven and the earth be pleased to blend this sacrifice (with their own dews), and fill us with nutriment.
 - 14. The wise taste, through their pious acts, the ghee-resembling waters of these two, (abiding) in the permanent region of the Gandharvas.
 - 15. Earth, be thou wide-spreading, free from

b Achchhinnapatráh. The only explanation given by the Scholiast is, that, the wives of the gods being in the form of birds, no one had cut their wings.

^c The sphere of the Gandharvas, Yakshas, and Apsarasas is the antariksha, the atmosphere, or firmament between heaven and earth, and, so far, considered as the common or connecting station of them both,—Akáśe vartamánayoh * dyávaprithivyoh.

^d Syona has, sometimes, the sense of expanded; sometimes, of pleasant, agreeable. The stanza is repeated, it is said, at the ceremony termed Mahánámni, at the same time touching the earth.

thorns, and our abiding place: give us great happiness.

- 16. May the gods preserve us (from that portion) Varga VII. of the earth whence Vishnu, (aided) by the seven metres, stepped.
- 17. Vishnu traversed this (world): three times he planted his foot; and the whole (world) was collected in the dust of his (footstep).
- Vishňu is explained, by Sáyaňa, by Parameśwara, the supreme ruler, or, in his annotation on the next verse, to mean, he who enters into, or who pervades, the world, - Vishhur viśater vá vyaś-Vi chakrame, 'stepped,' he explains by vividhapádakramańam kritaván,—he made the going of various steps. translates it transgressus. According to the Taittiriyas, as cited by the Scholiast, the gods, with Vishhu at their head, subdued the invincible earth, using the seven metres of the Veda as their instruments. Sayana conceives the text to allude to the Trivikrama Avatára, in which Vishňu traversed the three worlds in three steps. The phrase "preserve us from the earth" implies, according to the commentary, the hinderance of the sin of those inhabiting the earth, -bhúloke vartamánánám pápaniváraňam: but the passage is obscure.
- b This looks still more like an allusion to the fourth Avatara, although no mention is made of king Bali, or the dwarf; and these may have been subsequent grafts upon the original tradition of Vishnu's three paces. Commentators are not agreed upon the meaning of the sentence "thrice he planted his step,"—tredhá ni dadhe padam. According to Sákapúńi, it was on earth, in the firmament, in heaven; according to Aurhavábha, on Samárchaha, or the eastern mountain, on Vishhupada, the meridian sky, and Gayaśiras, the western mountain; thus identifying Vishhu with the Sun, and his three paces, with the rise, culmination, and setting, of that luminary. Allusion is made to the three paces of Vishhu, in

- 18. VISHŶU, the preserver, the uninjurable, stepped three steps, upholding, thereby, righteous acts.
- 19. Behold the deeds of VISHÂU, through which (the worshipper) has accomplished (pious) vows. He is the worthy friend of Indra.
- 20. The wise ever contemplate that supreme station of Vishŵu; b as the eye ranges over the sky.
- 21. The wise,—ever vigilant, and diligent in praise,—amply glorify that which is the supreme station of Vishŵu.

SÚKTA VI. (XXIII.)

The Rishi is, still, Medhatithi, the son of Kanwa: the metre of the first eighteen stanzas is Gáyatri; in stanza nineteen, Pura Ushnih; in twenty-one, Pratishthá; and, in the rest, Anushtubh. The Hymn consists of twenty-four stanzas, of which the first is addressed to Váyu; the two next, to Indra and Váyu; then three, to Mitra and Varuña; three, to Indra and the Maruts; three, to the Viśwadevas; three, to Púshan; seven and a half, to the Waters; and the last verse and a half, to Agni.

Varga VIII.

1. These sharp and blessing-bearing Soma juices the Vájasaneyi Sanhitá of the Yajur-Veda; and the Scholiast there explains them to imply the presence of Vishhu in the three regions of earth, air, and heaven, in the forms, respectively, of Agni, Váyu, and Súrya,—fire, wind, and the sun. There can be no doubt that the expression was, originally, allegorical, and that it served as the groundwork of the Pauránik fiction of the Vámana or dwarf Avatára.

- * Gopáh sarvasya jagato rakshakah, the preserver of all the world, is the explanation of Sáyańa; thus recognizing Vishńu's principal and distinguishing attribute.
- b Paramam padam, supreme degree or station. The Scholiast says Swarga; but that is very questionable.

are poured out. Come, VAVU, and drink of them, as presented.

- 2. We invoke both the divinities abiding in heaven, Indra and Váyu, to drink of this Soma iuice.
- 3. The wise invoke, for their preservation, INDRA and Váyu, who are swift as thought, have a thousand eyes, and are protectors of pious acts.
- 4. We invoke MITRA and VARUNA, becoming present at the sacrifice, and of pure strength, to drink the Soma juice.
- 5. I invoke MITRA and VARUÑA, who, with true speech, are the encouragers of pious acts, and are lords of true light.b
- 6. May Varuña be our especial protector; may Varga IX. MITRA defend us with all defences: may they make us most opulent.

7. We invoke Indra, attended by the Maruts, b Ritasya jyotishaspati. Mitra and Varuna are included among the Adityas, or monthly suns, in the Vaidik enumeration of the eight sons of Aditi. Srutyantare cháshťau putráso aditer ityupakramya mitraś cha varuńaś chetyádikam ámnátam.

The attribution of a thousand eyes to Indra, literally understood, is a Pauráńik legend: it is nowhere said of Váyu, and, here, is applied to him, it is said, only by the grammatical construction, -sahasrákshá being in the dual, - to agree with the two substantives Indra and Váyu; and it is, probably, stated of Indra, or the personified heaven, either to signify its expansiveness, or its being studded with constellations, whence it suggested the legend. In like manner, manojuvá, swift as thought, although equally in the dual number, is, properly, applicable to Váyu only.

to drink the Soma juice. May he, with his associates, be satisfied.

- 8. Divine Maruts,—of whom Indrais the chief, and Púshan, the benefactor,—all hear my invocations!
- 9. Liberal donors, along with the mighty and associated Indra, destroy Vritra: let not the evil one prevail against us.
- 10. We invoke all the divine MARUTS, who are fierce, and have the (many-coloured) earth for their mother, b to drink the Soma juice.
- Varga X.
- 11. Whenever, leaders (of men), you accept an auspicious (offering), then the shout of the MARUTS spreads with exultation, like (that) of conquerors.
- 12. May the MARUTS, born from the brilliant lightning, everywhere preserve us, and make us happy.
- 13. Resplendent and (swift) moving Púshan, bring from heaven the (Soma) juice, in combination with the variegated sacred grass; as (a man brings back) an animal that was lost.

^{*} The Maruts are styled Púsharátayah, of whom Púshan is the donor, or benefactor; in what way is not specified.

b Pṛiśnimatarah,—who have Pṛiśni for their mother. According to Sayana, Pṛiśni is the many-coloured earth,—nanavarnayukta bhuh. In the Nighantu, Pṛiśni is a synonym of sky, or heaven in general. In some texts, as Rosen shows, it occurs as a name of the Sun.

^c Haskarad vidyutah. The Scholiast explains the latter, variously shining, that is, the antariksha, or firmament: but it does not seem necessary to depart from the usual sense of vidyut, lightning.

- 14. The resplendent Púshan has found the royal (Soma juice), although concealed, hidden in a secret place, strewed amongst the sacred grass.
- 15. Verily, he has brought to me, successively, the six b (seasons), connected with the drops (of the Soma juice); as (a husbandman) repeatedly ploughs (the earth) for barley.
- 16. Mothers to us who are desirous of sacrificing, the kindred (waters) flow by the paths (of sacrifice), qualifying the milk (of kine) with sweetness.

Varga XI.

- 17. May those waters which are contiguous to the Sun,^d and those with which the Sun is associated, be propitious to our rite.
- 18. I invoke the divine waters in which our cattle drink. Offer oblations to the flowing (streams).
- 19. Ambrosia is in the waters; in the waters are medicinal herbs. Therefore, divine (priests), be prompt in their praise.

^a The phrase is guhá hitam, placed in a cave, or in a place difficult of access; or, according to the Scholiast, heaven,—guhá-sadriśe durgame dyuloke sthitam.

b The text has only shat, six: the Scholiast supplies vasan-tádin ritún, the seasons,—spring, and the rest.

[°] Ambayah, which may mean either mothers, or waters, as in the Kaushitaki Bráhmaña,—Apo vá ambayah.

^a So in another text, Apah surye samáhitáh, the waters are collected in the Sun.

e The term is deváh, gods: but this were incompatible with the direction to praise the waters. It is, therefore, explained, the Ritwij and other Bráhmañas; and the interpretation is defended

20. Some has declared to me: "All medicaments, as well as Agni, the benefactor of the universe, are in the waters." The waters contain all healing herbs.

Varga XII.

- 21. Waters, bring to perfection all disease-dispelling medicaments, for (the good of) my body, that I may long behold the sun.
- 22. Waters, take away whatever sin has been (found) in me, whether I have (knowingly) done wrong, or have pronounced imprecations (against holy men), or (have spoken) untruth.
- 23. I have this day entered into the waters: we have mingled with their essence. AGNI, abiding in the waters, approach, and fill me, thus (bathed), with vigour.
- 24. Agni, confer upon me vigour, progeny, and life, so that the gods may know the (sacrifice) of this my (employer), and Indra, with the Rishis, may know it.

by a text which calls the Brahmans present divinities, Ete vai deváh pratyaksham yad Bráhmańáh,—These deities, who are perceptibly (present), are the Brahmans.

^{*} To Medhátithi, the author of the hymn. The presidency of Soma over medicinal plants is, generally, attributed to him. The entrance of Agni into the water is noticed in many places; as, So'pah právisat, in the Taittirtya Bráhmaña. This, however, refers to a legend of Agni's hiding himself, through fear. It may allude to the subservience of water, or liquids, to digestion, promoting the internal or digestive heat, or agni.

b Rasena samagasmahi; that is, the Scholiast says, we have become associated with the essence of water, jalasárena sangatáh smah.

ANUVÁKA VI.

SÚRTA I. (XXIV.)

This is the first of a series of seven Hymns constituting this section, attributed to Sunahsepa, the son of Ajigarta. The metre is Trishfubh, except in stanzas three, four, and five, in which it is Gáyatri. The first verse is addressed to Prajápati; the second, to Agni; the three next, to Savitri, or the last of the three, to BHAGA; the rest, to VARUÑA.

1. Of whom, or of which divinity of the immor- varga XIII.

* The story of Sunahśepa, or, as usually written, Sunahśepha, has been, for some time, known to Sanskrit students, through the version of it presented in the Rámáyana, b. i., ch. 61, Schlegel; 63. Gorresio. He is, there, called the son of the Rishi Richika. and is sold for a hundred cows, by his father, to Ambarisha, king of Ayodhyá, as a victim for a human sacrifice. On the road, he comes to the lake Pushkara, where he sees Viśwamitra, and implores his succour, and learns, from him, a prayer, by the repetition of which, at the stake, Indra is induced to come and set him free. It is obvious, that this story has been derived from the Veda; for Viśwamitra teaches him, according to Schlegel's text, two gáthás, -according to Gorresio's, a mantra: but the latter also states, that he propitiated Indra by Richas; mantras of the Rig-Veda (Rigbhis tushtava devendram), Vol. I., p. 249. Manu also alludes to the story (X., 105), where it is said that Ajigarta incurred no guilt by giving up his son to be sacrificed; as it was to preserve himself and family from perishing with hunger. Kulluka Bhatta names the son Sunahsepha, and refers, for his authority, to the Bahwricha Bráhmaña. The story is told, in full detail, in the Aitareya Bráhmana; but the Rájá is named Harischandra. He has no sons, and worships Varuna, in order to obtain a son, promising to sacrifice to him his first-born. He has a son, in consequence. named Robita; but, when Varuha claims his victim, the king delays the sacrifice, under various pretexts, from time to time, until Robita tals, shall we invoke the auspicious name? Who attains adolescence, when his father communicates to him the fate for which he was destined. Rohita refuses submission, and spends several years in the forests, away from home. He, at last, meets, there, with Ajigarta, a Rishi, in great distress, and persuades him to part with his second son, Sunahsepha, to be substituted for Robita, as an offering to Varuna. The bargain is concluded; and Sunahsepha is about to be sacrificed, when, by the advice of Viśwámitra, one of the officiating priests, he appeals to the gods, and is, ultimately, liberated. The Aitareya Bráhmana has supplied the commentator with the circumstances which he narrates, as illustrative of the series of hymns in this section. doubts if the hymns bear any reference to the intention of sacrificing Sunahéepha: but the language of the Bráhmaña is not to be mistaken; as Ajigarta not only ties his son to the stake, but goes to provide himself with a knife, with which to slay him. At the same time, it must be admitted, that the language of the Súktas is somewhat equivocal, and leaves the intention of an actual sacrifice open to question. The Bhágavata follows the Aitareya and Manu, in terming Sunahsepha the son of Ajigarta, and names the Rájá, also, Harischandra. In the Vishnu Purána, he is called the son of Viśwamitra, and is termed, also, Devarata, or God-given. But this relates to subsequent occurrences, noticed, in like manner, by the other authorities, in which he becomes the adopted son of Viśwamitra, and the eldest of all his sons; such of whom as refused to acknowledge his seniority being cursed to become the founders of various barbarian and outcaste races. Viśwamitra's share in the legend may, possibly, intimate his opposition, and that of some of his disciples, to human sacrifices.

* Supposed to be uttered by Sunahśepa, when bound to the yūpa, or stake, as the purushapaśu, the man-animal (or victim), as the Bhágavata terms him. "Of whom" (kasya) may also be rendered, of Brahmá, or Prajápati, one of whose names, in the Veda, is Ka; as, Ko ha vai náma Prajápatih.

will give us to the great ADITI, that I may again behold my father and my mother?

- 2. Let us invoke the auspicious name of Agni,^b the first divinity of the immortals, that he may give us to the great Aditi, and that I may behold again my father and my mother.
- 3. Ever-protecting Savitri, we solicit (our) portion of thee,—who art the lord of affluence,—
- 4. That wealth which has been retained in thy hands, and is entitled to commendation, as exempt from envy or reproach.
- 5. We are assiduous in attaining the summit of affluence, through the protection of thee, who art the possessor of wealth.
- 6. These birds, that are flying (through the air), have not obtained, VARUÑA, thy bodily strength, or thy prowess, nor (are able to endure thy) wrath;

Varga XIV.

[·] Aditi, according to Sáyana, here means 'earth.'

b A passage from the Aitareya Bráhmaña is cited, by the Scholiast, stating that Prajápati said to him (Sunahśepa), "Have recourse to Agni, who is the nearest of the gods;" upon which he resorted to Agni: Tam Prajápatir uváchágnir vai devánám nedishthas tam evopadháveti; so'gnim upasasára.

o In this and the two following stanzas, application is made to Savitri, by the advice, it is said, of Agni; not, however, it may be remarked, for liberation, but for riches,—a request rather irreconcileable with the supposed predicament in which Sunahśepa stands.

^a Savitri refers Sunahsepa, it is said, to Varuha. It is not very obvious why any comparison should be instituted between the strength and prowess of Varuha and of birds.

neither do these waters, that flow unceasingly, nor (do the gales) of wind, surpass thy speed.

- 7. The regal Varuña, of pure vigour, (abiding) in the baseless (firmament), sustains, on high, a heap of light, the rays (of which) are pointed downwards, while their base is above. May they become concentrated in us, as the sources of existence.
- 8. The regal Varuña, verily, made wide the path of the sun, b—(by which) to travel on his daily course, —a path to traverse in pathless (space). May he be the repeller of every afflicter of the heart.
- 9. Thine, O king, are a hundred and a thousand medicaments. May thy favour, comprehensive and profound, be (with us). Keep afar from us NIRRITI, with unfriendly looks; and liberate us from whatever sin we may have committed.

^{*} The epithet of Rájá is here, as usual, applied to Varuña; and it may be either radiant or regal: but the latter is, in general, the more suitable. The attributes here assigned to Varuña, his abiding in the antariksha, and his holding a bundle of rays, would rather identify him with the sun, or, at least, refer to him in his character of an Aditya. The terms of the original are, however, unusual; and we depend, for their translation, upon the Scholiast: abudhne, in the baseless; mularahite he explains antarikshe, in the sky; and, for vanasya stupam, he supplies tejasah, of radiance, and sangham, a heap.

b According to the Commentator, the sun's course north and south of the equator is here alluded to. He does not explain what Varuña has to do with it.

[°] According to Sáyaña, Nirriti is the deity of sin, Pápadevatá. In the Nighańtu, it occurs among the synonyms of earth.

- 10. These constellations, placed on high, which are visible by night, and go elsewhere by day, are the undisturbed holy acts of VARUÑA; (and, by his command,) the moon moves, resplendent, by night.
- 11. Praising thee with (devout) prayer, I implore Varga XV. thee for that' (life) which the institutor of the sacrifice solicits with oblations. VARUNA, undisdainful, bestow a thought upon us: much-lauded, take not away our existence.
- 12. This (thy praise) they repeat to me by night and by day: this knowledge speaks to my heart. May he whom the fettered S'unahsepa has invoked, may the regal VARUÑA, set us free.
- 13. S'unahéepa, seized and bound to the threefooted tree, has invoked the son of Adiri. May the ^{*} Here, again, we have unusual functions ascribed to Varuna. The constellations, riksháh, may be either, it is said, the seven Rishis, -Ursa Major, -or the constellations generally. They and the moon are said to be the pious acts of Varuña (Varuñasya * vratáni); because they shine by his command. Rosen detaches adabdháni * vratáni by inserting a verb, -illæsa sunt Varunæ opera; but Sáyana expressly terms the constellations the acts of Varuna, in the form (or effect) of the appearance, &c., of the asterisms. Varuhasya * * karmáni nakshatradarsanádirúpáni.

b The text has only "I ask that:" the Scholiast supplies life. The addition might be disputed; but its propriety is confirmed by the concluding expression, má na áyuh pra moshih, do not take away our life.

[°] Trishu drupadeshu. Dru, δρûs, a tree, is, here, said to mean the sacrificial post, a sort of tripod. Its specification is consistent with the popular legend.

regal VARUÑA, wise and irresistible, liberate him; may he let loose his bonds.

- 14. Varuña, we deprecate thy wrath with prostrations, with sacrifices, with oblations. Averter of misfortune, wise and illustrious, be present amongst us, and mitigate the evils we have committed.
- 15. VARUÑA, loosen, for me, the upper, the middle, the lower, band. So, son of ADITI, shall we, through faultlessness in thy worship, become freed from sin.

SÚKTA II. (XXV.)

This Hymn is addressed by Sunansepa to Varuña: the metre is Gáyatri.

- Varga XVI. 1. Inasmuch as all people commit errors, so do we, divine VARUNA, daily disfigure thy worship by imperfections.
 - 2. Make us not the objects of death, through thy fatal indignation, through the wrath of thee so displeasured.

The text has asura, which is interpreted anishtakshepahaśtla, accustomed to cast off what is undesired,—from the root as, to throw. It is an unusual sense of the word: but it would scarcely be decorous to call Varuha an Asura.

b The text has ud uttamam * páśam * * adhamam * madhyamam śratháya, loosen the upper, lower, and middle, bond; meaning, according to Sáyaña, the ligature fastening the head, the feet, and the waist. The result, however, is not loosening from actual bonds, but from those of sin: anágasah * * syáma, may we be sinless.

- 3. We soothe thy mind, VARUÑA, by our praises, for our good; as a charioteer, his weary steed.
- 4. My tranquil (meditations) revert to the desire of life; as birds hover around their nests.
- 5. When, for our happiness, shall we bring hither VARUÑA, eminent in strength, the guide (of men), the regarder of many?
- 6. Partake (MITRA and VARUÑA,) of the common varga XVII. (oblation), being propitious to the giver and celebrator of this pious rite.
- 7. He, who knows the path of the birds flying through the air,—he, abiding in the ocean, knows (also,) the course of ships.^c
- 8. He, who, accepting the rites (dedicated to him), knows the twelve months and their productions, and that which is supplementarily engendered;^d b Uruchakshasam is explained bahúnám drashtáram, the beholder of many.

^{*} Vasya-ishtaye. Vasyah, according to the Scholiast, is equivalent to vasumatah, precious; that is, jivanasya, life, understood.

c Here we have the usual functions of Varuña recognized.

d Vedá ya upajáyate, who knows what is upa, additionally, or subordinately, produced. The expression is obscure; but, in connexion with the preceding, veda máso * dwádaśa, who knows the twelve months, we cannot doubt the correctness of the Scholiast's conclusion, that the thirteenth, the supplementary, or intercalary, month of the Hindu luni-solar year is alluded to; "that thirteenth or additional month which is produced of itself, in connexion with the year,"—yas trayodaśo'dhikamása upajáyate samvatsarasamipe

- 9. He, who knows the path of the vast, the graceful, and the excellent, wind, and who knows those who reside above;
- 10. He, VARUÑA, the accepter of holy rites, the doer of good deeds, has sat down, amongst the (divine) progeny, to exercise supreme dominion (over them).

Varga XVIII.

- 11. Through him the sage beholds all the marvels that have been, or will be, wrought.
- 12. May that very wise son of ADITI keep us, all our days, in the right path, and prolong our lives.
- 13. Varuña clothes his well-nourished (person), wearing golden armour, whence the (reflected) rays are spread around;—
- 14. A divine (being), whom enemies dare not to offend, nor the oppressors of mankind, nor the iniquitous, (venture to displease);
- 15. Who has distributed unlimited food to mankind, and, especially, to us.

swayam evodpadyate. The passage is important, as indicating the concurrent use of the lunar and solar years at this period, and the method of adjusting the one to the other.

b Bibhrad drápim hirahyayam, that is, suvarhamayam kavacham, armour or mail made of gold. This looks as if the person of Varuna were represented by an image. The same may be said of the phraseology of v. 18.

- 16. My thoughts ever turn back to him, who is varga XIX. beheld of many; as the kine return to the pastures.
- 17. Let us, together, proclaim that my offering has been prepared, and that you, as if the offerer, accept the valued (oblation).
- 18. I have seen him whose appearance is grateful to all: I have beheld his chariot upon earth: he has accepted these my praises.
- 19. Hear, VARUÑA, this my invocation: make us, this day, happy. I have appealed to thee, hoping for protection.
- 20. Thou, who art possessed of wisdom, shinest over heaven and earth, and all the world. Do thou hear and reply (to my prayers), with (promise of) prosperity.
- 21. Loose us from the upper bonds, until the centre and the lower, that we may live.^a SÚRTA III. (XXVI).

The supposed author or reciter is Sunansepa, as before; the hymn is addressed to Agni; the metre is Gáyatri.

1. Lord of sustenance, assume thy vestments (of light), b and offer this our sacrifice.

Varga XX.

2. (Propitiated) by brilliant strains, do thou,

^{*} The expressions are, for the most part, the same as in the concluding verse of the preceding hymn; but it ends differently: jivase, to live,—that we may live.

b The text has only vastráni, clothes; meaning, the Scholiast says, áchchhádakáni tejánsi, investing radiance.

ever-youthful Agni, selected by us, become our ministrant priest, (invested) with radiance.

- 3. Thou, Agni, art, verily, as a loving father to a son, as a kinsman to a kinsman, as a friend to a friend.
- 4. Let Varuna, Mitra, and Aryaman' sit down upon our sacred grass, as they did at the sacrifice of Manus.
- 5. Preceding sacrificer, be pleased with this our sacrifice, and with our friendship, and listen to these thy praises.

Varga XXI.

- 6. Whatever we offer, in repeated and plentiful oblation, to any other deity is, assuredly, offered to thee.
- 7. May the lord of men, the sacrificing priest, the gracious, the chosen, be kind to us: may we, possessed of holy fires, be loved of thee.
- 8. As the brilliant (priests), possessed of holy fires, have taken charge of our oblation, so we, with holy fires, pray to thee.
- 9. Immortal Agni, may the praises of mankind be, henceforth, mutually (the sources of happiness) to both, (to ourselves and to thee).
 - 10. Agni, son of strength, (accept) this sacrifice,

^a Aryaman is an Aditya, a form of the monthly sun. He is said, also, to preside over twilight.

b Manushah, of Manus, who, the Scholiast says, is the same as Manu, the Prajápati.

[°] Purvyahotri; the Hotri born before us, according to Sáyaha.

d Sahaso yaho; balasya putrah, son of strength. The epithet is not unfrequently repeated, and is sometimes applied to Indra, and this our praise, with all thy fires, and grant us (abundant) food.

SÚKTA IV. (XXVII.)

The Rishi, divinity, and metre, as before, except in the last stanza, in which the metre is Trishfubh, and the Viśwadevas are addressed.

- 1. (I proceed) to address thee, the sovereign lord varga XXII. of sacrifices, with praises; (for thou scatterest our foes), like a horse, (who brushes off flies with) his tail.^a
- 2. May he, the son of strength, who moves everywhere fleetly, be propitious to us, and shower down (blessings).
- 3. Do thou, AGNI, who goest everywhere, ever protect us, whether near or afar, from men seeking to do us injury.
- 4. AGNI, announce, to the gods, this our offering, and these our newest hymns.^b
- 5. Procure, for us, the food that is in heaven and mid-air, and grant us the wealth that is on earth.

also. As applicable to Agni, it is said to allude to the strength required for rubbing the sticks together, so as to generate fire.

The comparison is merely, we praise thee like a horse with a tail. The particulars are supplied by the Scholiast.

c In the supreme, in the middle, and of the end, are the vague expressions of the text: their local appropriation is derived from the commentary.

- Varga XXIII. 6. Thou, CHITRABHÁNU, art the distributor of riches; as the waves of a river are parted by interjacent (islets). Thou ever pourest (rewards) upon the giver (of oblations).
 - 7. The mortal whom thou, AGNI, protectest in battle, whom thou incitest to combat, will always command (food).
 - 8. No one will ever be the vanquisher of this thy worshipper, subduer of enemies; for notorious is his prowess.
 - 9. May he, who is worshipped by all men, convey us, with horses, through the battle: may he, (propitiated) by the priests, be the bestower (of bounties).

 - 12. May Agni, the lord of men, the invoker and messenger of the gods, the brilliant-rayed, hear

A common denominative of Agni, he who has wonderful or various lustre. The following simile is very elliptically and obscurely expressed; but such seems to be its purport, according to the explanation of the Scholiast.

b He who is awakened (bodha) by praise (jará).

c The text has "to Rudra" (Rudráya), which the Scholiast explains "to the fierce or cruel Agni;" krúráyágnaye.

13. Veneration to the great gods; veneration to the lesser; veneration to the young; veneration to the old! We worship (all) the gods, as well as we are able. May I not omit the praise of the elder divinities.

Súkta V. (XXVIII.)

Sunahsepa is the Rishi: the metre of the six first stanzas is Anushtubh; of the three last, Gáyatri. The first four stanzas are addressed to Indra; the two next, to the domestic mortar; the next two, to the mortar and pestle; and the ninth is of a miscellaneous appropriation, either to Harischandra, (a Prajápati), to the Adhishavaña (or the effused libation), to the Soma juice, or to the skin (charma) on which it is poured.

1. Indra, as the broad-based stone is raised to express the Soma juice, recognize and partake of the effusions of the mortar.

Varga XXV

2. Indra, (in the rite) in which the two platters,^d a "As a rich man" (reván iva) is the whole of the text. The Commentator suggests all the rest of the comparison.

b These distinctions, of older and younger, greater and lesser, gods, are nowhere further explained. Sunahśepa, it is said, worships the Viśwadevas, by the advice of Agni.

^c The stone, or, rather, here, perhaps, the stone pestle, is that which is used to bruise the Soma plants, and so express the juice. The pestle employed in bruising or threshing grain is, usually, of heavy wood.

d Adhishavanya, two shallow plates or pateræ, for receiving and pouring out the Soma juice.

for containing the juice,—as (broad as a woman's) hips,—are employed, recognize and partake of the effusions of the mortar.

- 3. Indra, (in the rite) in which the housewife repeats egress from and ingress into (the sacrificial chamber), recognize and partake of the effusions of the mortar.
- 4. When they bind the churning-staff (with a cord), b like reins to restrain (a horse), INDRA, recognize and partake of the effusions of the mortar.
- 5. If, indeed, O Mortar, thou art present in every house, give forth (in this rite,) a lusty sound, like the drum of a victorious host.

Varga XXVI.

6. Lord of the forest, as the wind gently blows before thee, so do thou, O Mortar, prepare the Soma juice, for the beverage of INDRA.

The Scholiast explains the terms of the text, apachyava and upachyava, going in and out of the hall (śálá); but it should, perhaps, rather be, moving up and down, with reference to the action of the pestle.

b In churning, in India, the stick is moved by a rope passed round the handle of it, and round a post, planted in the ground, as a pivot. The ends of the rope being drawn backwards and forwards, by the hands of the churner, gives the stick a rotatory motion amidst the milk, and thus produces the separation of its component parts.

^o The mortar is, usually, a heavy wooden vessel, found in every farmer's cottage. According to Sáyaña, it is the divinities presiding over the mortar and pestle, not the implements themselves, that are addressed.

⁴ Vanaspati, a large tree, but, in this verse, put, by metonymy, for the mortar, and, in verse 8, for the mortar and pestle. [See p. 33.]

- 7. Implements of sacrifice, bestowers of food, loud-sounding, sport, like the horses of INDRA champing the grain.
- 8. Do you two forest lords, of pleasing form, prepare, with agreeable libations, our sweet (Soma) juices, for Indra.
- 9. Bring the remains of the Soma juice upon the platters; sprinkle it upon the blades of Kuśa grass; and place the remainder upon the cow-hide.

SÚRTA VI. (XXIX.)

Sunahsepab continues to be the reciter: the deity is Indra; the metre, Pankti.

1. Veracious drinker of the Soma juice, although Varga XXVII.

^a This verse is addressed, the Scholiast says, to Harischandra, either the ministering priest, or a certain divinity so named: no name occurs in the text. It is not very clear what he is to do. Apparently, he is to place what remains, after the libation has been offered, contained in patera or platters, upon some vessel,—the Scholiast says, upon a cart (śakatasyopari)—and, having brought it away, cast it upon the Pavitra, which is explained, in the comment on the Yajur-Veda Sanhitá, to mean two or three blades of Kuśa grass, serving as a kind of filter, -typically, if not effectively, -through which the juice falls upon a sheet, or into a bag of leather, made of the skin of the cow (gos twachi). According to Mr. Stevenson, the Soma juice, after expression, is filtered through a strainer made of goat's hair, and is received in a sort of ewer, the dronakalasa. Here, however, the directions apply to the uchchhishta, the remainder, or leavings; such being the term used in the text.

b Sunahsepa has been directed by the Viśwadevas, it is said in the Bráhmaña, to apply to Indra.

we be unworthy, do thou, INDRA, of boundless wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

- 2. Thy benevolence, handsome and mighty lord of food, endures for ever. Therefore, INDRA, of boundless wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.
- 3. Cast asleep (the two female messengers of Yama). Looking at each other, let them sleep, never waking.^b Indra, of boundless wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.
- 4. May those who are our enemies slumber, and those, O hero, who are our friends, be awake. INDRA, of boundless wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.
- 5. Indra, destroy this ass, (our adversary), praising thee with such discordant speech; and do thou, Indra, of boundless wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

[&]quot; Siprin, literally, having either a nose or a lower jaw or chin; that is, having a handsome prominent nose or chin.

b The text is very elliptical and obscure. It is, literally: "Put to sleep the two reciprocally looking: let them sleep, not being awakened." That two females are intended is inferrible from the epithets being in the dual number and feminine gender; and the Scholiast calls them—upon what authority is not stated—two female messengers of Yama: Yamadutyau. Mithudriśa he explains mithunataya yugalarupena pasyata, "looking, after the manner of twins, at each other."

c Nuvantam papayámuyá, praising with this speech, that is of the nature of abuse. Nindárúpayá váchá is the addition of the

- 6. Let the (adverse) breeze, with crooked course, alight afar off on the forest. Indra, of boundless wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.
- 7. Destroy every one that reviles us; slay every one that does us injury. INDRA, of boundless wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

SÚRTA VII. (XXX.)

The Hymn is ascribed to Sunansepa: of the twenty-two stanzas of which it consists, sixteen are addressed to Indra; three, to the Aswins; and three, to Ushas, or the personified dawn. The metre is Gáyatri, except in verse sixteen, where it is Trishtubh.

Varga XXVIII.

- 1. Let us, who are desirous of food, satisfy this your INDRA, who is mighty and of a hundred sacrifices, with drops (of Soma juice); as a well (is filled with water).
- 2. May he who is (the recipient) of a hundred pure, and of a thousand distilled, (libations) come (to the rite); as water, to low (places).
- 3. All which (libations), being accumulated for the gratification of the powerful INDRA, are contained in his belly; as water, in the ocean.
- 4. This libation is (prepared) for thee. Thou approachest it; as a pigeon his pregnant (mate): for, on that account, dost thou accept our prayer.
 - 5. Hero, Indra, lord of affluence, accepter of praise, may genuine prosperity be (the reward of him) who offers thee laudation.

- Varga XXIX.
- 6. Rise up, S'ATAKRATU, for our defence in this conflict. We will talk together in other matters.
- 7. On every occasion, in every engagement, we invoke, as friends, the most powerful INDRA, for our defence.
- 8. If he hear our invocation, let him, indeed, come to us, with numerous bounties, and with (abundant) food.
- 9. I invoke the man (Indra,) who visits many worshippers, from his ancient dwelling-place,—thee, Indra, whom my father formerly invoked.
- 10. We implore thee, as our friend, who art preferred and invoked by all, (to be favourable) to thy worshippers, protector of dwellings.
- Varga XXX.
- 11. Drinker of the Soma juice, wielder of the thunderbolt, O friend, (bestow upon) us, thy friends, and drinkers of the Soma juice, (abundance of cows) with projecting jaws.^a
- 12. So be it, drinker of the Soma juice, wielder of the thunderbolt, our friend, that thou wilt do, through thy favour, whatever we desire.
- 13. So, Indra, rejoicing along with us, we may have (abundant food); and cows may be ours, robust, and rich in milk, with which we may be happy.

^{*} The expression in the text is siprifinám, gen. plur. of the feminine siprifi, having a nose or a jaw. It cannot, therefore, refer to the previous nouns in the gen. plur., somapávnám and sakhinám, which are masc.; and the Scholiast, therefore, supplies gavám, of cows, and adds samúhah, a multitude, or herd.

- 14. O Dhrishnu, a let some such divinity as thou art, self-presented, promptly bestow, when solicited, (bounties) upon thy praisers; as (they whirl) the axle of the wheels (of a car).
- 15. Such wealth, S'ATAKRATU, as thy praisers desire, thou bestowest upon them; as the axle (revolves) with the movements (of the waggon).
- 16. Indra has ever won riches (from his foes), Varga XXXI. with his champing, neighing, and snorting (steeds): he, the abounding in acts, the bountiful, has given us, as a gift, a golden chariot.⁴

The resolute, or firm, or high-spirited,—an appellative of Indra.

b The verse is, throughout, very elliptical and obscure, and is intelligible only through the liberal additions of the Scholiast. The simile is, literally, like the axle of two cars,—aksham na chakryoh, which the commentator renders, rathasya chakrayoh, of the two wheels of a car, and adds prakshipanti, they cast, or turn over. The phrase seems to have puzzled the translators; Rosen [Adnotationes] has currum velut duabus rotis; Stevenson, that blessings may come round to them, with the same certainty that the wheel revolves round the axle; Dr. Roer, as a wheel is brought to a chariot; M. Langlois, que les autres dieux,  non moins que toi sensibles à nos louanges, soient pour nous comme l'axe qui soutient et fait tourner les roues du char. The meaning intended, is, probably, the hope that blessings should follow praise, as the pivot on which they revolve; as the revolutions of the wheels of a car turn upon the axle.

^o This repetition of the comparison is more obscure than in the preceding stanza. It is like the axle, by the acts,—aksham na śachibhih. The Scholiast defines 'the acts' the movements of the car or waggon.

^d So the Bráhmaña. By Indra, pleased, a golden chariot was

- 17. Aswins, come hither, with viands borne on many steeds. Dasras, (let our dwelling) be filled with cattle and with gold.
- 18. Dasras, your chariot, harnessed for both alike, is imperishable: it travels, Aświns, through the air.
- 19. You have one wheel on the top of the solid (mountain), while the other revolves in the sky."
- 20. Ushas,^b who art pleased by praise, what mortal enjoyeth thee, immortal? Whom, mighty one, dost thou affect?
- 21. Diffusive, many-tinted, brilliant (USHAS), we know not (thy limits), whether they be nigh, or remote.
- 22. Daughter of heaven, b approach, with these viands, and perpetuate our wealth.

given to him, that is, to Sunahsepa. He, nevertheless, hands him over to the Aswins.

- * There is no explanation of this myth, in the commentary. It may be connected with the Pauráńik notion of the single wheel of the chariot of the sun.—Vishńu Puráńa, p. 217.
- b The dawn; daughter of the personified heaven, or its deity, Dyudevatdyá duhitá. Rosen translates the name Aurora; but it seems preferable to keep the original denomination; as, except in regard to time, there is nothing in common between the two. In the Visháu Puráha, [but see new edition, Vol. II., p. 249, note *] indeed, Ushá, a word of similar derivation as Ushas, is called night; and the dawn is Vyushía. Several passages seem to indicate that Ushá or Ushas is the time immediately preceding daybreak.
- ^c We here take leave of Sunahśepa; and, it must be confessed, that, for the greater part, there is, in the hymns ascribed to him, little connexion with the legend narrated in the Rámáyaňa and other authorities.

ANUVÁKA VII.

SÚRTA I. (XXXI.)

This Hymn is addressed to Agni; the Rishi is Hiranyastúpa, the son of Angiras. The eighth, sixteenth, and eighteenth stanzas are in the Trishfubh metre; the rest, in Jagati.

- 1. Thou, AGNI, wast the first ANGIRAS Rishi: a Varga XXXII. divinity, thou wast the auspicious friend of the deities. In thy rite, the wise, the all-discerning, the bright-weaponed Marurs were engendered.
- 2. Thou, Agni, the first and chiefest Angiras, gracest the worship of the gods;—sapient, manifold, for the benefit of all the world, intelligent, the offspring of two mothers, and reposing in various ways, for the use of man.
- 3. Agni, preeminent over the wind, become manifest to the worshipper, in approbation of his worship. Heaven and earth tremble (at thy power).

According to Sáyaña, he was the first, as being the progenitor of all the Angirasas; they being, according to the Bráhmaña, as before quoted, nothing more than the coals or cinders of the sacrificial fire. There is no explanation of the origin assigned, in this verse, to the Maruts.

b Vibhu, according to the Scholiast, means "of many kinds;" alluding to the different fires of a sacrifice.

^o Dwimátá, either of two mothers, i.e., the two sticks, or, the maker of two, i.e., heaven and earth.

d Literally, first in, or on, or over, the wind,—prathamo mátariśwane; alluding, according to the Scholiast, to the text, agnir váyur ádityah, fire, air, sun,—in which Agni precedes Váyu.

Thou hast sustained the burthen, in the rite for which the priest was appointed. Thou, VASU, hast worshipped the venerable (gods).

- 4. Thou, Agni, hast announced heaven to Manu; a thou hast more than requited. Purúravas, b doing homage to thee. When thou art set free by the attrition of thy parents, they bear thee, first, to the east, then, to the west, (of the altar).
- 5. Thou, Agni, art the showerer (of desires), the augmenter of the prosperity (of thy worshipper): thou art to be called upon, as the ladle is lifted up. Upon him who fully understands the invocation and makes the oblation, thou, the provider of sustenance, first bestowest light, and, then, upon all men.

Varga XXXIII. 6. Agni, excellently wise, thou directest the man who follows improper paths, to acts that are fitted to reclaim him;—thou who, in the strife of heroes, (grateful to them) as widely-scattered wealth, destroyest, in the combat, the mighty, by the feeble.

^a It is said that Agni explained to Manu, that heaven was to be gained by pious works.

b The agency of Pururavas, the son of Budha, the son of Soma, in the generation of fire by attrition, and its employment in the form of three sacrificial fires, as told in the Puranas (Vishnu Purana, p. 397), may be here alluded to: but the phrase is only sukrite sukrittarah, doing more good to him who did good.

^c The fire is first applied to kindle the Ahavaniya fire, and, then, to the Gárhapatya, according to the Scholiast.

d He who knows the áhuti, with the vashat kriti, or utterance of the word vashat at the moment of pouring the butter on the fire.

- 7. Thou sustainest, Agni, that mortal (who worships thee), in the best immortality, by daily food: thou bestowest on the sage, who is desirous (of creatures) of both kinds of birth, happiness and sustenance.
- 8. Agni, who art praised, by us, for the sake of wealth, render illustrious the performer of the rite. May we improve the act by a new offspring, (given by thee). Preserve us, heaven and earth, along with the gods.
- 9. Irreproachable Agni, a vigilant god amongst the gods, (abiding) in the proximity of (thy) parents,^b and bestowing upon us embodied (progeny), awake us. Be well-disposed to the offerer of the oblation; for thou, auspicious Agni, grantest all riches.
- 10. Thou, Aeni, art well-disposed to us; thou art our protector; thou art the giver of life to us: we are thy kinsmen. Uninjurable Agni, hundreds and thousands of treasures belong to thee, who art the defender of pious acts, and attended by good men.
- 11. The gods formerly made thee, Acni, the living general of the mortal Nahusha: they made

Varga XXXIV.

^{*} It is not very clear what is meant: the expression is, who is very desirous, or longing, for both births. The Scholiast says, for the acquirement of bipeds and quadrupeds,—dwipadám chatush-padám lábháya.

b The parents are here said to be heaven and earth.

[°] Nahusha was the son of Ayus, son of Pururavas, who was elevated to heaven, as an Indra, until precipitated, thence, for his arrogance. The circumstance alluded to in the text does not appear in the Pauráńik narrative.—Vishňu Puráňa, p. 413.

ILA the instructress of Manus, when the son of my father was born.

- 12. Agni, who art worthy to be praised, preserve us, who are opulent, with thy bounties, and, also, the persons (of our sons). Thou art the defender of cattle, for the son of my son, b who is ever assiduous in thy worship.
- 13. Thou, four-eyed Agni, blazest,—as the protector of the worshipper,—who art at hand, for the (security of the) uninterrupted (rite): thou cherish-

^{*} This circumstance is not related, in the Puránas, of Ilá, the daughter of Vaivaswata Manu. - Vishhu Puráha, p. 349. Frequent passages in the Vedas ascribe to Ilá the first institution of the rules of performing sacrifices. Thus, in the text, she is termed sásani, which the Scholiast explains dharmopadeśakartri, the giver of instruction in duty. The Taittiriyas are quoted for the text, "Ida, the daughter of Manu, was the illustrator of sacrifice" (yajnánukášini); and the Vájasaneyis, for the passage: "She [Ilá,] said to Manu, 'Appoint me, to officiate in sacrifices, principal and supplementary; for by me shalt thou obtain all thy desires" -- Prayájánuyájánám madhye mám avakalpaya mayá sarván avápsyasi kámán. M. Burnouf questions if Ilá ever occurs in the sense of daughter of Manu, in the Vedas, and restricts its meaning to 'earth' or to 'speech.' The passage of the text, Ilám akrihwan manushasya śásanim, he translates, les Dieux ont fait d'Ila la préceptrice de l'homme, and considers it equivalent to les Dieux ont fait de la parole l'institutrice de l'homme. Introduction to the Bhágavata Puráña, III., pp. LXXXIV.-XCI. We are scarcely yet in possession of materials to come to a safe conclusion on this subject.

b We must conclude that this hymn was composed by the author in his old age, as he speaks of his grandson.

Illuminating the four cardinal points.

est, in thy mind, the prayer of thine adorer, who offers the oblation to thee, the harmless, the benevolent.

14. Thou, Agni, desirest (that the worshipper may acquire) that excellent wealth which is requisite for the many-commended priest: thou art called the well-intentioned protector of the worshipper, who ever needs protection. Thou, who art all-wise, instructest the disciple, and (definest) the points of the horizon.

15. Agni, thou defendest the man who gives presents (to the priests), on every side, like well-stitched armour. The man who keeps choice viands in his dwelling, and, with them, entertains (his guests), performs the sacrifice of life, and is the likeness of heaven.

^a This is said to allude to a legend in which the gods, intending to offer a sacrifice, were at a loss to determine the cardinal points, until the perplexity was removed by Agni's ascertaining the south.

b Varma * syitam, sewn armour. The kavacha was, perhaps, a quilted jacket, such as is still sometimes worn: the Scholiast says, formed with needles, without leaving a fissure.

The expression is rather ambiguous,—jivaydjam yajate, sacrifices a life-sacrifice. Rosen renders it vivam hostiam mactat; but, in this place, it seems, rather, to denote an offering (food and hospitality) to a living being, the nrivajna, worship of man, of Manu. The expression, however, is not incompatible with the practice of killing a cow for the food of a guest, thence denominated, as M. Langlois remarks, goghna, a cow-slayer. The Scholiast sanctions either sense, explaining the phrase either jivayajanasahitam yajnam, a sacrifice with sacrifice of life, or jivanishpádyam,

- varga XXXV. 16. Agni, forgive us this our negligence, this path in which we have gone astray. Thou art to be sought, as the protector and encourager of those who offer suitable libations: thou art the fulfiller (of the end of rites): thou makest thyself visible to mortals.
 - 17. Pure Agni, who goest about (to receive oblations), go, in thy presence, to the hall of sacrifice, as did Manus, and Angiras, and Yayáti, and others of old. Bring hither the divine personages; seat them on the sacred grass; and offer them grateful (sacrifice).
 - 18. Agni, do thou thrive through this our prayer, which we make according to our ability, according to our knowledge. Do thou, therefore, lead us to opulence; and endow us with right understanding, securing (abundant) food.

SÚRTA II. (XXXII.)

The Rishi and metre are the same: the Hymn is addressed to INDRA.

Varga XXXVI.

1. I declare the former valorous deeds of INDRA, that by which life is to be supported: he also explains jivayájam by jiváh, living, priests, who ijyante dakshińábhih, are worshipped by gifts.

- * Rishikrit, becoming present through desire for the offered oblation: the epithet is an unusual one.
- b In like manner as ancient patriarchs,—such as Manu, or Angiras,—or former kings, repaired to different places where sacrifices were celebrated. Yayáti was one of the sons of Nahusha.—Vishhu Puráha, p. 413.

which the thunderer has achieved: he clove the cloud; he cast the waters down (to earth); he broke (a way) for the torrents of the mountain.

- 2. He clove the cloud, seeking refuge on the mountain: Twashfri sharpened his far-whirling bolt: the flowing waters quickly hastened to the ocean; like cows (hastening) to their calves.
- 3. Impetuous as a bull, he quaffed the Soma juice: he drank of the libation at the triple sacrifice. Maghavan took his shaft, the thunderbolt, and, with it, struck the first-born of the clouds.
 - 4. Inasmuch, INDRA, as thou hast divided the

[•] In this and subsequent Súktas, we have an ample elucidation of the original purport of the legend of Indra's slaying Vritra, converted, by the Pauranik writers, into a literal contest between Indra and an Asura, or chief of the Asuras, from what, in the Vedas, is, merely, an allegorical narrative of the production of rain. Vritra, sometimes also named Ahi, is nothing more than the accumulation of vapour condensed, or, figuratively, shut up in, or obstructed by, a cloud. Indra, with his thunderbolt, or atmospheric or electrical influence, divides the aggregated mass, and vent is given to the rain, which then descends upon the earth, and moistens the fields, or passes off in rivers. The language of the Richas is not always sufficiently distinct, and confounds metaphorical and literal representation; but it never approximates to that unqualified strain of personification, which, beginning, apparently, with the Mahábhárata (Vana-parva, ch. 100; also in other Parvas), became the subject of extravagant amplification by the compilers of the Puránas.

b At the Trikadrukas, the three sacrifices termed Jyotish, Gauh, and Ayu. No further description of them occurs in the commentary.

first-born of the clouds, thou hast destroyed the delusions of the deluders; and, then, engendering the sun, the dawn, the firmament, thou hast not left an enemy (to oppose thee).

5. With his vast destroying thunderbolt, INDRA struck the darkling mutilated VRITRA. As the trunks of trees are felled by the axe, so lies Ahi, prostrate on the earth.

Varga XXXVII.

- 6. The arrogant VRITRA, as if unequalled, defied INDRA, the mighty hero, the destroyer of many, the scatterer of foes;—he has not escaped the contact of the fate of (INDRA's) enemies. The foe of INDRA has crushed the (banks of the) rivers.^d
 - 7. Having neither hand nor foot, he defied

^{*} The first-formed cloud.

^b By scattering the clouds, and dispersing the darkness, Indra may be said to be the parent of the sun and daylight; leaving no enemy, that is, nothing to obscure the atmosphere.

O We have, here, and in other verses, both names, Ahi and Vritra. They are, both, given as synonyms of megha, a cloud, in the Nighantu. The former is derived from han, to strike, with a prefixed, arbitrarily shortened to a: the latter, lit., the encompasser, or concealer, is from vri, to enclose, or vrit, to be, or to exist, or from vridh, to increase; a choice of etymologies intimating a vague use of the term. He is said to be vyansa, having a part, or, metaphorically, a limb, detached; thus confounding things with persons, as is still more violently done in a following verse, where he is said to have neither hands nor feet.

^d The text has only rujánáh pipishe, he has ground the rivers: the Commentator supplies "the banks," which, he says, were broken down by the fall of Vritra, that is, by the inundation occasioned by the descent of the rain.

INDRA, who struck him, with the thunderbolt, upon his mountain-like shoulder, like one emasculated who pretends to virility: then VRITRA, mutilated of many members, slept.

- 8. The waters, that delight the minds (of men), flow over him, recumbent on this earth; as a river (bursts through) its broken (banks). Ahn has been prostrated beneath the feet of the waters, which VRITRA, by his might, had obstructed.
- 9. The mother of VRITRA was bending over her son, when Indra struck her nether part with his shaft. So the mother was above, and the son underneath; and Dánu^a slept (with her son), like a cow with its calf.
- 10. The waters carry off the nameless body of VRITRA, tossed into the midst of the never-stopping, never-resting currents. The foe of INDRA has slept through a long darkness.
- 11. The waters, the wives of the destroyer, beguarded by Ahi, stood obstructed, like the cows by Pañi: but, by slaying Vritra, Indra set open the cave that had confined them.
- 12. When the single resplendent VRITRA returned the blow (which had been inflicted), INDRA, by thy thunderbolt, thou becamest (furious), like a horse's tail. Thou hast rescued the kine; thou hast won, hero, the Soma juice; thou hast let loose the seven rivers to flow.

Varga XXXVIII.

^{*} Dánu is derived from do, to cut or destroy, or from Danu, the wife of Kaśyapa, and mother of the Dánavas or Titans.

- 13. Neither the lightning nor the thunder (discharged by VRITRA), nor the rain which he showered, nor the thunderbolt, harmed INDRA, when he and Ahi contended, and Machavan triumphed, also, over other (attacks).
- 14. When fear entered, INDRA, into thy heart, when about to slay AHI, what other destroyer of him

- b Alluding, it is said, to a legend of Indra's having drunk a libation prepared by Twashtri, after the death of his son,—who, according to a Pauráńik legend, was Triśiras, also killed by Indra,—and to avenge which, Vritra was created by Twashtri.
- c According to one Pauranik legend, the Ganges divided, on its descent, into seven streams, termed the Nalini, Pávani, and Hládini, going to the east; the Chakshu, Sítá, and Sindhu, to the west; and the Bhágirathi, or Ganges proper, to the south. one place in the Mahábhárata, the seven rivers are termed Vaswokasárá, Nalini, Pávani, Gangá, Sitá, Sindhu, and Jambunadi; in another, Gangá, Yamuná, Plakshagá, Rathasthá, Sarayú, Gomati, See the Vishhu Puráha, new edition, Vol. II., In a text quoted and commented on pp. 120, 121, and notes. by Yáska, we have ten rivers, named Gangá, Yamuná, Saraswati, Sutudri, Parushni, Asikni, Marudvridha, Vitasta, Arjikiya, and Of these, the Parushni is identified with the Iravati; the Arjikiyá with the Vipás; and the Sushomá, with the Sindhu. -Nir., III., 26. The original enumeration of seven appears to be that which has given rise to the specifications of the Puranas.
- ^d The Scholiast intimates, that this fear was, the uncertainty whether he should destroy Vritra, or not; but, in the Purdáas, didst thou look for, that, alarmed, thou didst traverse ninety and nine streams, like a (swift) hawk?

^{*} We have had this simile before; as a horse lashes his tail, to get rid of the flies.

15. Then Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt, became the sovereign of all that is moveable or immoveable, of hornless and horned cattle; and, as he abides the monarch of men, he comprehended all things (within him); as the circumference comprehends the spokes of a wheel.

THIRD ADHYÁYA.

SURTA III. (XXXIII.)

The Rishi is, as before, HIRANYASTUPA. INDRA, also, is the divinity: the metre is Trishfubh.

1. Come, let us repair to Indra, (to recover our stolen cattle); for he, devoid of malice, exhilarates our minds: thereupon he will bestow upon us perfect knowledge of this wealth, (which consists) of kine.

Varga I.

Indra is represented as fearing his enemy's prowess, and hiding himself in a lake. Something like this is, also, intimated in other passages of the text; whence the Pauráńik fiction. The Brákmáña and the Taittiriya are quoted, as stating that Indra, after killing Vritra, thinking he had committed a sin, fled to a great distance.

This is all the text says. The Scholiast adds: "The gods are supposed to say this to one another, when their cows have been carried off."

- 2. I fly, like a hawk to its cherished nest, to that INDRA who is to be invoked, by his worshippers, in battle; glorifying, with excellent hymns, him who is invincible, and the giver of wealth.
- 3. The commander of the whole host has bound his quiver (on his back): the lord drives the cattle (to the dwelling) of whom he pleases. Mighty INDRA, bestowing upon us abundant wealth, take not advantage of us, like a dealer.
- 4. Verily, Indra, thou hast slain the wealthy barbarian° with thine adamantine (bolt);—thou, singly assailing (him), although with auxiliaries (the Maruts,) at hand. Perceiving the impending manifold destructiveness of thy bow, they, the Sanakas, the neglecters of sacrifice, perished.

b Lit., do not be to us a pańi, a trafficker; such being one sense of the term; from pańa, price, hire. Indra is solicited not to make a hard bargain, not to demand too much from his worshippers.

[°] Vritra, the Dasyu, literally, a robber, but, apparently, used in contrast to Arya, as if intending the uncivilized tribes of India. He is called wealthy, because, according to the Vajasanoyis, he comprehends, within him, all gods, all knowledge, all oblations,—Vritrasyántah sarve deváh sarváś cha vidyáh sarváńi havinshi chásan.

^a So the Bráhmaña. The Maruts who accompanied Indra did not attack Vritra; but they stood nigh, and encouraged the former, saying, "Strike, O Lord; show thyself a hero."

[•] The followers of Vritra are called by this name, the meaning of which is not very satisfactorily explained by sanán káyanti, they who eulogize benefactors. They are also called, in this and

- 5. The neglecters of sacrifice, contending with the sacrificers, INDRA, fled, with averted faces. INDRA, fierce, unyielding, lord of steeds, (they disappeared,) when thou didst blow the disregarders of religion from off the heaven, and earth, and sky.
- 6. (The adherents of VRITRA) encountered the varga II. army of the irreproachable (INDRA): men of holy lives encouraged him. Scattered before him, conscious (of their inferiority), like the emasculated contending with men, they fled by precipitous paths.
- 7. Thou hast destroyed them, INDRA, whether weeping, or laughing, on the furthest verge of the sky; thou hast consumed the robber, (having dragged him) from heaven, and hast received the praises of the worshipper, praising thee and offering libations.
- 8. Decorated with gold and jewels, they were spreading over the circuit of the earth; but, mighty as they were, they triumphed not over INDRA: he dispersed them with the (rising) sun.b

the next verse, ayajwanah, non-sacrificers, in contrast to the yajwanah or sacrificers; here, apparently, also identifying the followers of Vritra with races who had not adopted, or were hostile to, the ritual of the Vedas.

- * Kshitayo navagwah, men whose practices were commendable. Or the 'men,' it is said, may be the Angirasas, engaged in offering libations to Indra for nine months, in order to give him courage.
- b We revert, here, to the allegory. The followers of Vritra are, here, said to be the shades of night, which are dispersed by the rising of the sun: according to the Brahmana, "Verily, the sun, when he rises in the east, drives away the Rákshasas."

- 9. Indra, as thou enjoyest both heaven and earth, investing the universe with thy magnitude, thou hast blown away the robber with the prayers which are repeated on behalf of those who do not comprehend them.*
- 10. When the waters descended not upon the ends of the earth, and overspread not that giver of affluence with its productions, then Indra, the showerer, grasped his bolt, and, with its brightness, milked out the waters from the darkness.

Varga III.

- 11. The waters flowed, to provide the food of INDRA; but (VRITRA) increased, in the midst of the navigable (rivers): then INDRA, with his fatal and powerful shaft, slew VRITRA, whose thoughts were ever turned towards him.
- 12. Indra set free (the waters) obstructed by (VRITRA), when sleeping in the caverns of the earth, and slew the horned dryer up (of the world).^b Thou,

[•] This passage is rather obscure, owing to the vague purport of the preposition abhi; amanyamánán abhi manyamánair brahmabhih, "with prayers to be understood over those not understanding;" that is, according to the Scholiast, those yajamánas, or institutors of sacrifices, who merely repeat the mantras without understanding their meaning, are, nevertheless, to be protected by, or are to reap the benefit of, those mantras; and with mantras, or prayers of this description, Indra is to be animated, or empowered to blow away or scatter the followers of Vritra, clouds and darkness. Rosen renders the expression, carminibus respicientibus eos, qui hymnorum tuorum sensum vel non perspiciunt; M. Langlois has (excité) contre ces mécréants par nos chants respectueux.

b Spinginam * sushnam. The first, literally, having horns, the Scholiast explains "furnished with weapons like the horns of bulls Maghavan, with equal swiftness and strength, didst kill, with thy thunderbolt, the enemy defying thee to battle.

- 13. The weapon of Indra fell upon his adversaries: with his sharp and excellent (shaft) he destroyed their cities: he then reached VRITRA with his thunderbolt, and, (by) slaying him, exhilarated his mind.
- 14. Thou, Indra, hast protected Kutsa, grateful for his praises: thou hast defended the excellent Daśadyu, engaged in battle: the dust of thy courser's hoofs ascended to heaven: the son of S'witha (through thy favour,) rose up, to be again upborne by men.
- 15. Thou hast protected, Maghavan, the excellent son of S'WITRÁ, when combating for his lands, and encouraged, (by thee,) when immersed in water. Do thou inflict sharp pains on those of and buffaloes." Sushham, literally, drying, drying up, is applied to Vritra, or the cloud, as withholding the moisture necessary for fertility.

^{*} Kutsa is said to be a Rishi, founder of a gotra, a religious family, or school, and is elsewhere spoken of as the particular friend of Indra, or even as his son. He is the reputed author of several hymns. We have a Purukutsa in the Puraña; but he was a Raja, the son of Mandhatri.—Vishau Puraña, p. 363. [Also see below, especially, Vol. III., p. 205, note 1.] Dasadyu is also called a Rishi; but he appears to have been a warrior: [see VI., XXVI., 4?] no mention of him is found in the Purañas. The same may be said of Swaitreya, or Switrya, the son of a female termed Switra. Switrya is described, in the next stanza, as having hidden himself in a pool of water, through fear of his enemies.

hostile minds, who have long stood (in enmity) against us.

SÚRTA IV. (XXXIV.)

The Rishi is the same; the Hymn is addressed to the Aswins; the metre is Jagati, except in the ninth and twelfth stanzas, in which it is Trishtubh.

- Varga IV.
- 1. Wise Aświns, be present with us thrice today. Vast is your vehicle, as well as your munificence: your union is like that of the shining (day) and dewy (night). (Suffer yourselves) to be detained by the learned (priests).
- 2. Three are the solid (wheels) of your abundance-bearing chariot, as all (the gods) have known (it to be), when attendant on Vená, the beloved of Soma: three are the columns placed (above it) for support; and, in it, thrice do you journey by night, and thrice by day.

^{*} We have a variety of changes rung, in this hymn, upon the number 'three.' In this place, allusion, it is said, is made either to the three diurnal sacrifices,—at dawn, mid-day, and sunset,—or to the faculty of all divinities, of being tripathagáh, or going equally through the heavens, the firmament, and the earth.

b The Assoins are said to have filled their ratha, or car, with all sorts of good things, when they went to the marriage of Voná with Soma,—a legend not found in the Puránas.

[°] So the Scholiast explains skambhásah skabhitása árabhe, posts standing up from the body of the car, which the riders may lay hold of, if, by its rapid or uneven motion, they should be afraid of falling out.

- 3. Thrice in one entire day do you repair the faults (of your worshippers). Thrice to-day sprinkle the oblation with sweetness; and thrice, evening and morning, Aświns, grant us strength-bestowing food.
- 4. Thrice, Aświns, visit our dwelling, and the man who is well-disposed towards us: thrice repair to him who deserves your protection, and instruct us in threefold knowledge: thrice grant us gratifying (rewards): thrice shower upon us food, as (Indra pours down) rain.
- 5. Aswins, thrice bestow upon us riches: thrice approach the divine rite: thrice preserve our intellects: thrice grant us prosperity; thrice, food. The daughter of the sun has ascended your three-wheeled car.
- 6. Thrice grant us, Aświns, the medicaments of heaven, and those of earth, and those of the firmament. Give to my son the prosperity of S'ANYU.^a Cherishers of wholesome (herbs), preserve the wellbeing of the three humours (of the body).^b
- 7. Aświns, who are to be thrice worshipped, day by day, repose on the triple (couch of) sacred grass upon the earth, (that forms the altar). Car-borne

Varga V.

^{*} Sunyu is said to be the son of Brihaspati, brought up by the Aswins.

b The text has only tridhátu, the aggregate of three humours, said, by the Scholiast, agreeably to medical writers, to denote wind, bile, and phlegm.

Násatyas, repair, from afar, to the threefold (place of sacrifice); b as the vital air, to (living) bodies.

- 8. Come, Aświns, thrice, with the seven mother-streams. The three rivers are ready; the triple oblation is prepared. Rising above the three worlds, you defend the sun in the sky, who is established for both night and day.
- 9. Where, Násatyas, are the three wheels of your triangular car? Where, the three fastenings and props (of the awning)? When will be the harnessing of the powerful ass, that you may come to the sacrifice?
- 10. Come, Násatyas, to the sacrifice. The oblation is offered. Drink the juice, with mouths that b The text has only "to the three:" the Scholiast adds "altars, severally appropriated to oblations of ghee, to animal sacrifices, and to libations of Soma,"—aishtikapáśukasaumikarupá vedíh.

[°] Gangá and the other rivers are here considered as the parents of the water which rolls in their streams.

d Three sorts of jars, or pitchers, used to contain and pour out the Soma juice, at the three daily sacrifices.

[•] Inasmuch as the rising and setting of the sun indicate the arrival of both day and night. In what way the Aświns are of service to the luminary does not appear.

f The apex of the car is in front, the base is the back part, forming three angles. The text has only trivrito rathasya, which the Scholiast interprets trisankhyákair aśribhir upetasya * rathasya.

E The text has rásabha, a synonym of gardabha, an ass. According to the Nighantu, there is a pair of them: Rásabhávaświnoh, "Two asses are the steeds of the Aświns."

relish the sweet savour. Before the dawn, even, SAVITRI sends, (to bring you) to the rite, your wonderful car, a shining with clarified butter.

- 11. Come, Násatyas, with the thrice eleven divinities: b come, Aświns, to drink the oblation. Prolong our lives; efface our faults; restrain our enemies; and be ever with us.
- 12. Borne in your car that traverses the three worlds, bring to us, Aświns, present affluence, attended by (male) progeny. I call upon you both, listening to me, for protection. Be to us for vigour in battle.

SÚKTA V. (XXXV.)

The Rishi is the same: the first and ninth verses are in the Jagati metre; the rest, in the Trishtubh. The divinity of the whole Hymn is Savitri; but, in the first verse, Agni, Mitra, Varuna, and Night are included, as subordinate or associated deities.

1. I invoke Agni first, for protection: I invoke, for protection, MITRA and VARUÑA: I invoke Night, Varga VI who brings rest to the world: I invoke the divine SAVITRI, for my preservation.

2. Revolving through the darkened firmament, a Implying that the Aświns are to be worshipped, with this hymn, at dawn.

b This is authority for the usual Pauranik enumeration of thirty-three deities, avowedly resting on Vaidik texts. The list is, there, made up of the eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Adityas, Prajápati, and Vashatkára (Vishňu Puráňa, p. 123 and note 27): but the Scholiast intimates a different classification, or the threefold repetition of eleven divinities, agreeably to the text: "Ye eleven deities, who are in heaven, - Ye deváso divy ekádaśa stha. [I., CXXXIX., 11: see Vol. II, p. 62.] arousing mortal and immortal, the divine SAVITRI travels in his golden chariot, beholding the (several) worlds.

- 3. The divine SAVITRI travels by an upward and by a downward path: deserving adoration, he journeys with two white horses: he comes hither, from a distance, removing all sins.
- 4. The many-rayed adorable SAVITRI, having power (to disperse) darkness from the world, has mounted his nigh-standing chariot, decorated with many kinds of golden ornaments, and furnished with golden yokes.
- 5. His white-footed coursers, harnessed to his car with a golden yoke, have manifested light to mankind. Men and all the regions are ever in the presence of the divine SAVITRI.
- 6. Three are the spheres: two are in the proximity of SAVITRI, one leads men to the dwelling of Yama.° The immortal (luminaries)^d depend

^{*} That is, ascending from sunrise to the meridian, and then declining.

b The horses of Savitri are here termed śyáva, which, properly, signifies 'the brown;' but, in verse three, they have been called 'white:' the present must be, therefore, a proper name, unless the hymner contradicts himself.

^c The spheres or lokas which lie in the immediate path of the sun are said to be heaven and earth: the intermediate loka, antariksha, or firmament, is described as the road to the realm of Yama, the ruler of the dead, by which the pretáh, or ghosts, travel. Why this should not be considered equally the course of the sun is not very obvious.

d The text has only amrita, "the immortals:" the Scholiast upon Savitri; as a car, upon the pin of the axle. Let him who knows (the greatness of SAVITRI) declare it.

7. Suparña, (the solar ray), deep-quivering, life- varga VII. bestowing, well-directed, has illuminated the three regions. Where, now, is Súrya? Who knows to what sphere his rays have extended?

- 8. He has lighted up the eight points of the horizon, the three regions of living beings, the seven rivers. May the golden-eyed SAVITRI come hither, bestowing upon the offerer of the oblation desirable riches.
- 9. The golden-handed, all-beholding SAVITRI travels between the two regions of heaven and earth, dispels diseases, approaches the sun,° and overspreads the sky with gloom, alternating radiance.
- 10. May the golden-handed, life-bestowing, wellguiding, exhilarating, and affluent SAVITRI be present (at the sacrifice); for the deity, if worshipped supplies "the moon and constellations," or, in another acceptation, "the rains;" amrita having, for one meaning, water.

^{*} Suparna, the well-winged, is, in the Nighantu, a synonym of raśmi, a ray: one of its epithets, asura, is here explained lifegiving; from asu, vital breath, and ra, who gives.

b This is supposed to be said of the sun before dawn, while he is absent.

c Veti suryam abhi. The Scholiast endeavours to explain this, by observing, that, although Savitri and Súrya are the same, as regards their divinity, yet they are two different forms, and, therefore, one may go to the other; yadyapi savitrisuryayor ekadevatátwam tathápi műrtibhedena gantrigantavyabhávah.

in the evening, is at hand, driving away Rákshasas and Yátudhánas.

11. Thy paths, Savitri, are prepared of old, are free from dust, and well-placed in the firmament. (Coming) by those paths, easy to be traversed, preserve us to-day. Deity, speak to us.

ANUVÁKA VIII.

Súkta I. (XXXVI.)

The Rishi is Kanwa, son of Ghora: the deity is Agni, identified, in the thirteenth and fourteenth stanzas, with the Yupa, or sacrificial post. The metre of the odd verses is Brihati, having twelve syllables in the third páda, or quarter of the stanza: the metre of the even verses is termed Satobrihati, having the first and third pádas equal.

Varga VIII.

- 1. We implore, with sacred hymns, the mighty Agni,—whom other (Rishis) also praise,—for the benefit of you, who are many people, worshipping the gods.
- 2. Men have recourse to Agni, the augmenter of vigour. Offering oblations, we worship thee. Do thou, liberal giver of food, be well-disposed to us, here, this day, and be our protector.
- 3. We select thee, Agni, the messenger and invoker of the gods, who art endowed with all knowledge. The flames of thee, who art mighty and eternal, spread around thy rays, touch the heavens.
 - 4. The deities VARUÑA, MITRA, and ARYAMANA

^a Aryaman is here explained, he who measures or estimates properly the aryas, aryan mimite.

kindle thee, (their) ancient messenger. The man who has offered thee (oblations) obtains, through thee, Agni, universal wealth.

- 5. Thou, AGNI, art the giver of delight, the invoker and messenger of the gods, the domestic guardian of mankind. The good and durable actions which the gods perform are, all, aggregated in thee.
- 6. Youthful and auspicious AGNI, whatever oblation may be presented to thee, do thou, well-disposed towards us, either now or at any other time, convey it to the powerful gods.
- 7. In this manner the devout adore thee, who art such (as described), bright with thine own radiance. Men, with (seven)^b ministrant priests,

* Rosen has nuntius hominum, which agrees better with the order of the text, duto viśam asi: but Sayana connects viśam with what, in the original, precedes, grihapatih, lord of the dwelling, and explains duta by devaduta.

Varga IX.

b The Scholiast supplies "the seven." According to another text, sapta hotráh práchir vashátkurvanti, the seven principal priests pour out the oblation. According to Mr. Stevenson, the seven priests or assistants at the Soma-yága are:—1. The institutor, or Yajamána; 2. The Hotri, who repeats the hymns of the Rich; 3. The Udgátri, who chants the Sáma; 4. The Potri, who prepares the materials for the oblation; 5. The Neshíri, who pours it on the fire; 6. The Brahmá, who superintends the whole; and, 7. The Rakshas, who guards the door. This enumeration omits one of the principal performers, the Adhvaryu, who recites the formulæ of the Yajush, and who should, probably, take the place of the Yajamána. The others, except the last, are, also, included among the sixteen (see p. 37, note b).

kindle Agni (with oblations), victorious over their enemies.

- 8. The destroying (deities, along with thee,) have slain VRITRA: they have made earth, and heaven, and the firmament, the spacious dwelling-place (of living creatures). May AGNI, possessed of wealth, when invoked, be a benefactor to KANWA; like a horse that neighs in a conflict for cattle.
- 9. Take your seat, Agni, on the sacred grass; for thou art mighty. Shine forth; for thou art devoted to the gods. Adorable and excellent Agni, emit the moving and graceful smoke.
- 10. Bearer of oblations, (thou art he) whom the gods detained for the sake of Manu; whom, giver of wealth, Kanwa, the host of pious guests, has detained; whom Indra detained; and whom (now,) some other worshipper has detained.

Varga X.

- 11. The rays of that AGNI, whom KANWA made more brilliant than the sun, preeminently shine: him do these our hymns, him do we, extol.
- 12. Agni, giver of food, complete our treasures; for the friendship of the gods is obtainable through thee. Thou art lord over famous viands. Make us happy; for thou art great.

b Medhyátithi, attended by venerable (medhya) guests (atithi), is, here, an epithet of Kańwa, whose son has been before introduced, as Medhátithi, the Rishi of the twelfth and following Súktas.

- 13. Stand up erect, for our protection, like the divine SAVITRI. Erect, thou art the giver of food, for which we invoke thee with unguents, and priests (offering oblations).*
- 14. Erect, preserve us, by knowledge, from sin: consume every malignant spirit: raise us aloft, that we may pass (through the world); and, that we may live, convey our wealth (of oblations) to the gods.
- 15. Youthful and most resplendent Agni, protect us against evil spirits, and from the malevolent (man) who gives no gifts: protect us from noxious (animals), and from those who seek to kill us.
- 16. Agni, with the burning rays, destroy entirely our foes, who make no gifts, as (potters' ware,) with a club: b let not one who is inimical to us, nor the man who attacks us with sharp weapons, prevail against us.

17. Agni is solicited for power-conferring (affluence): he has granted prosperity to Kanwa; he has protected our friends, as well as the (sage who was) the host of the holy, and (every other) worshipper (who has had recourse to him) for riches.

18. We invoke, from afar, along with AGNI, TURa Agni, as erect, is here said to be identified with the yupa or post to which the victims, at a sacrifice of animals, are bound; and, according to Aśwaláyana, this and the next verse are to be, recited, on such occasions, at the time of setting up the post.

b The text has only ghaná, with a club: the Scholiast adds "the pottery," bhándádi.

VAŚA, YADU, and UGRÁDEVA. Let AGNI, the arrester of the robber, bring hither NAVAVÁSTWA, BRIHAD-RATHA, and TURVÍTL.

- 19. Manu detained thee, Agni, (to give) light to the various races of mankind. Born for the sake of sacrifice, and satiated with oblations, thou, whom men reverence, hast blazed for Kańwa.
- 20. The flames of AGNI are luminous, powerful, fearful, and not to be trusted. Ever, assuredly and entirely, consume the mighty spirits of evil, and all our other adversaries.

SÚRTA II. (XXXVII.)

The Rishi is Kanwa; the Hymn is addressed to the Marurs; the metre is Gáyatri.

Varga XII.

1. Celebrate, Kanwas, the aggregate strength of the Maruts, sportive, without horses, but shining in their car;

^{*} Nothing more is said, of the persons named in this verse, than that they were Rájarshis, royal sages. [See p. 149, and Vols. II., III., IV., passim.] Turvasa may be another reading of Turvasa, who, with Yadu, was a son of Yayáti, of the lunar race. We have several princes, in the Puráhas, of the name of Brihadratha; but the others are, exclusively, Vaidik.

b Kańwas may mean either the members of the gotra (the family, or school) of Kańwa, or, simply, sages or priests.

^o The phrase is anarváñam, which the Scholiast explains, bhrátrivyarahitam, literally, without a brother's son, which would be a very unintelligible epithet. Arvan is, in its usual acceptation, a horse; and being without horses would not be inapplicable to the Maruts, whose chariot is drawn by deer. Bhrátrivya has, for one sense, that of enemy; whence Rosen renders the expression

- 2. Who, borne by spotted deer, were born self-radiant, with weapons, war-cries, and decorations.
- 3. I hear the cracking of the whips in their hands, wonderfully inspiring (courage) in the fight.
- 4. Address the god-given prayer b to those who are your strength, the destroyers of foes, the powerful, possessed of brilliant reputation.
- 5. Praise the sportive and resistless might of the MARUTS, who were born amongst kine, and whose strength has been nourished by (the enjoyment of) the milk.
 - 6. Which is chief leader among you, agita- varga XIII.

- Náśibhih, with sounds, or speeches; i.e., according to the Scholiast, with cries terrifying the enemy's army. Váśi is a synonym of vách, speech, voice, in the Nighańtu.
- b Devattam brahma, the praise or prayer which recommends the oblation, obtained from the avour or instruction of the gods.
- The text has goshu Marutam, the tribe of Maruts among the cows. Another text is cited, which says the Maruts were born of milk, for Priśni,—Priśniyai vai payaso Maruto játáh.
- The passage is brief and obscure,—jambhe rasasya vávridhe, which is explained, their vigour, derived from or of the milk, was increased (either) in enjoyment or in the belly,—gokshirarú-pasya sambandhi tat tejo jambhe sukha udare vá * vriddham abhút. Rosen renders it, in utero lactis vires augentur; M. Langlois has qui règne au milieu des vaches (célestes), et ouvre avec force (leurs mamelles pour en faire couler) le lait. The cows he considers the clouds; and the milk, the rain: but it is the śardhas, the tejas, the vigour, or strength, of the Maruts, which has been augmented in or by, not exerted upon, the rasa, or milk.

of the text, hostium immunem, and M. Langlois, inattaquable: but it is doubtful if arvan can admit of such an interpretation.

tors of heaven and earth, who shake all around, like the top (of a tree)?

- 7. The householder, in dread of your fierce and violent approach, has planted a firm (buttress); for the many-ridged mountain is shattered (before you),
- 8. At whose impetuous approach earth trembles; like an enfeebled monarch, through dread (of his enemies).
- 9. Stable is their birth-place, (the sky); yet the birds (are able) to issue from (the sphere of) their parent: for your strength is everywhere (divided) between two (regions,—or, heaven and earth).
- 10. They are the generators of speech: they spread out the waters, in their courses: they urge the lowing (cattle) to enter (the water), up to their knees, (to drink).

Varga XIV.

- 11. They drive, before them, in their course, the long, vast, uninjurable, rain-retaining cloud.
- 12. Maruts, as you have vigour, invigorate mankind: give animation to the clouds.
- 13. Wherever the MARUTS pass, they fill the way with clamour: every one hears their (noise).
- 14. Come quickly, with your swift (vehicles). The offerings of the Kanwas are prepared. Be pleased with them.
 - 15. The offering is prepared for your gratifica-

The text has only manusho dadhre, the man has planted: the Scholiast explains the former, grihaswami, the master of the house, and adds, to the latter, grihadadhyartham dridham stambham, a strong post, to give stability to the dwelling.

tion: we are your (worshippers), that we may live all our life.

SÚRTA III. (XXXVIII.)

The Rishi, deities, and metre continue the same.

- 1. MARUTS, who are fond of praise, and for whom Varga XV. the sacred grass is trimmed, when will you take us by both hands, as a father does his son?
- 2. Where, indeed, are you (at present)? When will your arrival take place? Pass from the heaven, not from the earth. Where do they (who worship you) cry (to you,) like cattle?
- 3. Where, MARUTS, are your new treasures? Where, your valuable (riches)? Where, all your auspicious (gifts)?
- 4. That you, sons of Priśni, may become mortals, and your panegyrist, become immortal.
- 5. Never may your worshipper be indifferent to you,—as a deer (is never indifferent) to pasture,—so that he may not tread the path of Yama.
- 6. Let not the most powerful and indestructible NIRRITIC destroy us: let him perish, with our (evil) desires.

Varga XVI.

7. In truth, the brilliant and vigorous MARUTS,

^{*} The expressions of the text, sumná, suvitá, and saubhagá, are said to imply, severally, offspring and cattle, jewels and gold, and horses, elephants, and the like.

b Priśnimátarah, as we have had before (p. 56, note b): but Priśni is here explained, by the Scholiast, by dhena, a milch-cow.

^o He is, here, called a divinity of the Rakshasa race (see p. 62, note.) [Also see Vol. III., p. 123, note 2].

cherished by Rudra, send down rain, without wind, upon the desert.

- 8. The lightning roars,—like a parent cow that bellows for its calf,—and, hence, the rain is set free by the Maruts.
- 9. They spread darkness over the day, by a waterbearing cloud, and, thence, inundate the earth.
- 10. At the roaring of the Maruts, every dwelling of earth (shakes), and men, also, tremble.
- varga XVII. 11. MARUTS, with strong hands, come along the beautifully-embanked rivers, with unobstructed progress.
 - 12. May the felloes of your wheels be firm; may your cars and their steeds be steady, and your fingers well-skilled (to hold the reins).
 - 13. Declare, in our presence, (priests,) with voice attuned to praise, Brahmañaspati, Agni, and the beautiful Mitra.
 - 14. Utter the verse that is in your mouths; spread it out, like a cloud spreading rain: chant the measured hymn.
 - 15. Glorify the host of MARUTS, brilliant, deserving of praise, entitled to adoration: may they be exalted by this our worship.

a Rudrayásah; i.e., Rudrasyeme, those who are of, or belonging to, Rudra; explained, Rudreña pálitáh, cherished or protected by Rudra; for the explanation of which, reference is made to the ákhyánas, tales or traditions. There is no connexión between Rudra and the Maruts, in the Puráñas.

b The lord of the mantra (or prayer), or of the sacrificial food.

SÚKTA IV. (XXXIX.)

The Rishi and deities are the same: the metre is Britati, in the odd verses; Satobrihatí, in the even.

- 1. When, MARUTS, who make (all things) tremble, Varga XVIII. you direct your awful (vigour) downwards, from afar, as light (descends from heaven), by whose worship, by whose praise, (are you attracted)? To what (place of sacrifice), to whom, indeed, do you repair?
- 2. Strong be your weapons for driving away (your) foes, firm in resisting them: yours be the strength that merits praise, not (the strength) of a treacherous mortal.
- 3. Directing MARUTS, when you demolish what is stable, when you scatter what is ponderous, then you make your way through the forest (trees) of earth, and the defiles of the mountains.
- 4. Destroyers of foes, no adversary of yours is known above the heavens, nor (is any) upon earth. May your collective strength be quickly exerted, sons of Rudra,* to humble (your enemies).
- 5. They make the mountains tremble; they drive apart the forest-trees. Go, divine MARUTS, whither you will, with all your progeny, like those intoxicated.
- 6. You have harnessed the spotted deer to your Varga XIX. chariot: the red deer, yoked between them, (aids to) drag the car: the firmament listens for your coming; and men are alarmed.

- 7. Rudras, we have recourse to your assistance, for the sake of our progeny. Come, quickly, to the timid Kańwa, as you formerly came, for our protection.
- 8. Should any adversary, instigated by you, or by man, assail us, withhold from him food, and strength, and your assistance.
- 9. Prachetasas, b who are to be unreservedly worshipped, uphold (the sacrificer) Kanwa: come to us, Maruts, with undivided protective assistances; as the lightnings (bring) the rain.
- 10. Bounteous givers, you enjoy unimpaired vigour: shakers (of the earth), you possess undiminished strength: MARUTS, let loose your anger, like an arrow, upon the wrathful enemy of the Rishis.

The spotted deer, prishatih, are always specified as the steeds of the Maruts. We then have, in the text, prashtir vahati rohitah. Prashti is said to be a sort of yoke, in the middle of three horses, or other animals, harnessed in a car: but the word stands alone, without any grammatical concord; and it does not appear what is to be done with the yoke. Rohita, the Scholiast says, is another kind of deer, the red deer, who, vahati, bears or drags the car, ratham nayati. The sense may be something like that which is given in the translation; but the construction of the original is obscure, and, apparently, rude and ungrammatical.

b Or the appellative may be an epithet only, implying those possessed of superior (pra) intellect (chetas).

Varga XX.

SÚKTA V. (XL.)

The deity is Brahmanaspati; the Rishi is, still, Kanwa; the metre, the same as in the preceding.

- 1. Rise up, Brahmañaspati. Devoted to the gods, we solicit thee. Bounteous Maruts, be nigh at hand: Indra, be a partaker of the libation.
- 2. Man celebrates thee, son of strength, b for the wealth abandoned (by the foe). MARUTS, may he who praises you obtain wealth, yielding excellent steeds and eminent vigour.
- 3. May Brahmañaspati approach us: may the goddess, speaker of truth, approach us: may the gods (drive away) every adversary, and, present, conduct us to the sacrifice which is beneficial to man, and (abounds) with respectably-presented offerings.
 - 4. He who presents to the ministrant (priest)

^a In a former passage, Brahmańaspati appeared as a form of Agni (p. 41, note); in this hymn, he is associated with the Maruts, although Indra is, also, separately named.

b Sahasasputra. Similar epithets, as sahaso yaho and sunuh śavasa, have been applied to Agni (Hymns xxvi., v. 10, and xxvii., v. 2). The Scholiast, however, interprets the compound, in this place, the great or abundant protector of strength,—balasya bahupalakah; such being one of the meanings of putra, given in the Nirukta (putrah puru trayate), where, however, that meaning is only the etymological explanation of putra, a son.—Nirukta, II., 11.

wealth fit to be accepted enjoys inexhaustible abundance: for him we worship ILÁ, attended by brave warriors, inflicting much injury, receiving none.

5. Verily, Brahmañaspati proclaims the sacred prayer in which the divinities Indra, Varuña, Mitra, and Aryaman have made their abode.

Varga XXI.

- 6. Let us recite, gods, that felicitous and faultless prayer at sacrifices. If you, leaders, desire (to hear) this prayer, then will all that is to be spoken reach unto you.
- 7. Who (except Brahmañaspati,) may approach the man who is devoted to the gods, by whom the ^{*} Manch putri, the daughter of Manu, and institutrix of sacrifices (see p. 82, note a). Looking upon Brahmańaspati as the presiding divinity of prayer or sacrifice, allusion to Itá were not wholly out of place. Why she should be suvirá, if that be rightly explained śobhanair virair bhatair yuktá, accompanied by excellent heroes, does not appear.

b This and the next verse are directed to be recited at the Agnishtoma ceremony, in connexion with prayers addressed to Indra and the Maruts. Professor Roth cites it in proof of his theory, that Brahmańaspati is, in an especial manner, the divinity of prayer, which is not incompatible with his being identical with either Agni or Indra, in the same capacity. He recites, it is said, aloud (pravadati) the prayer (mantram) which ought to be so recited (ukthyam) by the mouth, according to the Scholiast, of the Hotri; in which mantra, Indra and the rest abide, or are mystically present. Or, as explained in the commentary on the next stanza, it is the mantra, or prayer, that generates or brings them to the presence of the worshipper,—Indradisarvadevatapratipadakam mantram.

clipped sacred grass is spread? The giver of the oblation has proceeded, with the priests, (to the hall of sacrifice); for he has a dwelling (abounding), internally, with precious things.

8. Let Brahmañaspati concentrate his strength. Associated with the regal (divinities), he slays (the foe): in the time of danger, he maintains his station: armed with the thunderbolt, there is no encourager nor discourager of him in a great battle or a small.

SÚRTA VI. (XLI.)

The Rishi is Kanwa; the three first and the three last stanzas are addressed to Varuna, Mitra, and Aryaman; the middle three, to the Adityas: b the metre is Gáyatri.

- 1. The man whom the wise VARUÑA, MITRA, and Varga XXII. ARYAMAN protect quickly subdues (his foes).
- 2. He whom they heap (with riches), as if (collected) by his own arms; the man whom they defend from the malignant; every such man, safe from injury, prospers.
- 3. The kings (VARUÑA, &c.,) first destroy their strongholds, and then the foes of those (who worship them), and put aside their evil deeds.

^{*} This attribute would identify him with Indra, in which character he appears throughout this hymn.

b In fact, the hymn may be considered as wholly addressed to the Adityas; for the three deities, separately named, are, in one of their characters, Adityas, also; that is, they were the sons of Aditi, the wife of Kasyapa, and are representatives of the sun, in as many months of the year.

- 4. ÁDITYAS, to you, repairing to the sacrifice, the path is easy and free from thorns: no unworthy oblation is here prepared for you.
- 5. Additions, guides, may the sacrifice which you come to by a straight path be, to you, for your gratification.
- Varga XXIII. 6. That mortal (whom you favour), exempt from harm, obtains all valuable wealth, and offspring like himself.
 - 7. How, my friends, shall we recite praise (worthy) of the great glory of MITRA, VARUÑA, and ARYAMAN?
 - 8. I do not denounce to you him who assails or reviles the man devoted to the gods: I rather propitiate you with offered wealth.
 - 9. For he (the worshipper,) loves not, but fears to speak, evil (of any one); as a gamester fears (his adversary) holding the four (dice), until they are thrown.

^{*} The text has only chaturas chid dadamanad bibliyad a ni-dhatch, he may fear from one holding four, until the fall. The meaning is supplied by the Scholiast, with the assistance of Yaska, chaturo' kshan dharayatah * kitavat, from a gambler holding four dice; Sayana says, four coveri shells,—kapardakah. That is, where two men are playing together, the one who has not the throw of the dice or the shells is in anxious apprehension lest it should be against him.

SÚRTA VII. (XLII.)

Rishi and metre, as before: the deity is Púshan.

- 1. Púshan, convey us over the road; remove the Varga XXIV. wicked (obstructer of the way). Son of the cloud, deity, go before us.
- 2. If a wicked (adversary), Púshan, a robber, or one who delights in evil, points out to us (the way we ought not to go), do thou drive him from the road.
- 3. Drive him far away, apart from the road, the hinderer of our journey, a thief, a deceiver.

^{*} Pushan is, usually, a synonym of the sun; that is, he is one of the twelve Adityas. He is described, by the Scholiast, as the presiding deity of the earth, --prithivyabhimání devah: he is, also, the cherisher of the world; from push, to nourish. According to the tenour of the hymn, he is the deity presiding especially over roads or journeyings. His being called the son of the cloud is not incompatible with his character of earth personified as a male; as, according to other texts of the Veda, the earth was born of the water, -adbhyah prithivi; and, again, earth was the essence of the water; Tad yad apám sára ásít tat samahanyata sá prithivyabhavat, -That which was the essence of the waters, that was aggregated, and it became earth. Púshá occurs, also, as a feminine noun, in which case it appears to be synonymous with prithivi, the earth, as in the text: Pushadhwanah patu, which is explained, iyam • púshá, May this Púshá protect the roads; where the gender is denoted by the feminine pronoun iyam: and, in another text, Iyam vai pusheyam hidam sarvam pushyati,—This is, verily, Pusha; for she cherishes this whole world. Throughout the hymn, however, Púshan is masculine.

- 4. Trample, with your feet, upon the mischievous (body) of that evil-minded pilferer of both (what is present and what is absent), whoever he be.
- 5. Sagacious and handsome Púshan, we solicit of thee that protection wherewith thou hast encouraged the patriarchs.

Varga XXV.

- 6. Therefore, do thou, who art possessed of all prosperity, and well-equipped with golden weapons, bestow upon us riches that may be liberally distributed.
- 7. Lead us past our opponents: conduct us by an easy path: know, Púshan, how to protect us on this (journey).*
- 8. Lead us where there is abundant fodder: let there be no extreme heat by the way: Púshan, know how to protect us on this (journey).
- 9. Be favourable to us; fill us (with abundance); give us (all good things); sharpen us (with vigour); fill our bellies * Púshan, know how to protect us on this (journey).
- 10. We do not censure Púshan, but praise him with hymns: we solicit the good-looking (Púshan) for riches.

[•] In this and the two next verses, we have an example of what is not unfrequent, the repetition of a phrase, as a sort of burden or refrain. The expression is, Púshann iha kratum vidah,—Púshan, know, here, the act or business; that is, on this occasion, or journey, know how to fulfil your function of giving us protection. Rosen renders it, Púshan! hic sacrificium animadverte; kratu meaning an act of sacrifice, as well as act or action in general.

SÚKTA VIII. (XLIII.)

The Rishi is the same: the deity is Rudra; the third stanza is addressed to Mitra and Varura, also; and the last three verses, to Soma: the metre of the last verse is Anushtubh; of the rest, Gayatri.

- 1. When may we repeat a most grateful hymn Varga XXVI. to the wise, the most bountiful, and mighty RUDRA, who is (cherished) in our hearts?
- 2. By which earth may (be induced to) grant the gifts of Rudrab to our cattle, our people, our cows, and our progeny;
- 3. By which MITRA, and VARUÑA, and RUDRA, and all the gods, being gratified, may show us (favour).
 - 4. We ask the felicity of S'ANYU° from RUDRA,

According to the Scholiast, Rudra means, "he who makes to weep, who causes all to weep at the end of time;" thus identifying him with the destroying principle, or Swa. But there is nothing, in the hymn, to bear out such an identification: on the contrary, he appears as a beneficent deity, presiding especially over medicinal plants.

b Aditi is here said to mean the earth, who, it is wished, may so act (karat), that Rudriya may be obtained. The meaning of Rudriya, according to the Scholiast, is, Rudrasambandhi bheshajam,—medicament in relation to, or presided over by, Rudra, conformably to the text, Yá to Rudra śivá tanúh, śivá viśwá ha, bheshaji śivá, Rudrasya bheshaji,—Whatever are thy auspicious forms, O Rudra, they are all auspicious; auspicious are medicaments, the medicaments of Rudra.

[°] Sanyu is said to be the son of Brihaspati: nothing more is related of him.

the encourager of hymns, the protector of sacrifices, possessed of medicaments that confer delight;

- 5. Who is brilliant as Súrya, who gratifies like gold, the best of the gods, the provider of habitations;
- steeds, our rams, our ewes, our men, our women, and our cows.
 - 7. Soma, grant us prosperity more than (sufficient for) a hundred men, and much strength-engendering food.
 - 8. Let not the adversaries of Soma, let not our enemies, harm us: cherish us, INDRA, with (abundant) food.
 - 9. Soma, who art immortal, and abidest in an excellent dwelling, have regard for thy subjects, when, at their head, in the hall of sacrifice, thou observest them (engaged in) decorating thee.

ANUVÁKA IX.

SÚRTA I. (XLIV.)

Praskanwa, the son of Kanwa, is the Rishi: Aeni is the deity; b Apparently, there is some confusion of objects in this place; Soma, the moon, being confounded with Soma, libation.

^{*} Jaláshabheshajam, he who has medicaments conferring delight; from ja, one born, and lásha, happiness; an unusual word, except in a compound form, as abhilásha, which is of current use. Or it may mean, "sprung from water (jala);" all vegetables depending upon water, for their growth.

but the two first verses are addressed, also, to the Aswins and to Ushas (the dawn): the metre is Brihati, in the odd verses; Satobrihati, in the even.

1. Agni, who art immortal, and cognizant of all begotten things, bring, from the dawn, to the donor (of the oblation), wealth of many sorts, with an excellent habitation: bring hither, to-day, the gods, awaking with the morning.

Varga XXVIII.

- 2. For thou, Agni, art the accepted messenger of the gods, the bearer of oblations, the vehicle of sacrifices. Associated with Ushas and the Aświns, bestow upon us abundant and invigorating food.
- 3. We select, to-day, AGNI, the messenger, the giver of dwellings, the beloved of many, the smoke-bannered, the light-shedding, the protector of the worship of the worshipper at the break of day.
- 4. I praise Agni at the break of day, the best and youngest (of the gods), the guest (of man), the universally-invoked, who is friendly to the man that offers (oblations), who knows all that are born, that he may go (to bring) the other divinities.
- 5. Agni, immortal sustainer of the universe, bearer of oblations, deserving of adoration, I will praise thee, who art exempt from death, the preserver, the sacrificer.

^{*} Rathir adhwaráhám. Rosen renders rathih, auriga; but Sáyaha explains it, rathasthániya, in the place of a chariot; confirmed by other texts; as, Esha hi dovarathah, He (Agni) is, verily, the chariot of the gods, and Ratho ha vá esha bhútebhyo dovebhyo havyam vahati, Truly, he is the chariot that bears the oblation to the spirits and the gods.

Varga XXIX.

- 6. Juvenile Agni, whose flames delight, who art universally invoked, and art praised, (by us,) on behalf of the worshipper, understand (our wishes), and, granting Praskanwa to live a lengthened life, do honour to the divine man.
- 7. All people kindle thee, Agni, the sacrificer, the omniscient. Do thou, Agni, who art invoked by many, quickly bring hither the sapient deities.
- 8. Object of holy rites,^b (bring hither,) on the dawn following the night, Savitri, Ushas, the Aświns, Bhaga,^c and Agni. The Kanwas, pouring out libations, kindle the wafter of the burnt-offering.
- 9. Thou, AGNI, art the protector of the sacrifices of the people, and the messenger (of the gods). Bring hither, to-day, the gods, awaking at dawn, and contemplating the sun, to drink the Soma juice.
- 10. Resplendent AGNI, visible to all, thou hast blazed after many preceding dawns; thou art the protector (of people) in villages; thou art the associate of man placed on the east (of the altar).^d

Varga XXX.

11. We place thee, AGNI, as MANUS placed thee, who art the implement of sacrifice, the invoker, the ministering priest, very wise, the destroyer (of foes), immortal, the messenger (of the gods).

^{*} Namasyá daivyam janam; that is, the Rishi of the hymn, Praskahwa.

b Swadhwara; from su, good, and adhwara, sacrifice; equivalent, according to the Scholiast, to the Ahavaniya fire.

d Purohita, which may also mean the domestic priest.

- 12. When, cherisher of friends, thou art present, as the Purohita, at a sacrifice, and dischargest the mission to the gods, then thy flames roar, like the resounding billows of the ocean.
 - 13. Agni, with sharp ears, hear me. Let MITRA and ARYAMAN, and (other) early-stirring deities, with all the accompanying oblation-bearing gods, sit down at the sacrifice, upon the sacred grass.
 - 14. Let the munificent MARUTS, who have tongues of fire, and are encouragers of sacrifice, hear our praise: let the rite-fulfilling VARUÑA, with the AśWINS, and with USHAS, drink the Soma juice.

SÚKTA II. (XLV.)

The deity and Rishi are the same, except in the last stanza and the half of the preceding, which include any deified being: the metre is Anushtubh.

- 1. Agni, do thou, in this our rite, worship the Varga XXXI. VASUS, the RUDRAS, the ÁDITYAS, or any other (living) being sprung from Manu, sacrificing well, and sprinkling water.
- 2. Verily, the discriminating gods are givers of rewards to the offerer (of oblations). Lord of red coursers, propitiated by our praises, bring hither the three and thirty divinities.

b We have had these alluded to on a former occasion (p. 97,

- 3. Agni, accomplisher of solemn acts, cognizant of all who are born, hear the invocation of Pras-Kanwa, as thou hast heard those of Priyamedha, of Atri, of Virúpa, of Angiras.^a
- 4. The performers of great ceremonies, the offerers of acceptable sacrifices, have invoked, for (their protection), Agni, shining, amidst the solemnities, with pure resplendence.
- 5. Invoked by oblations, giver of rewards, listen to these praises with which the sons of Kanwa invoke thee for protection.
- Varga XXXII. 6. AGNI, granter of abundant sustenance, who art beloved of many, the sons of men invoke thee, radiant-haired, to bear the oblation (to the gods).
 - 7. The wise have placed thee, AGNI, in (their) sacrifices, as the invoker, the ministrant priest, the note b); but, according to the Aitareya Bráhmaña, 2, 18, there are two classes, of thirty-three divinities each, the one consisting of those formerly specified, who are termed, also, Somapás, or drinkers of the Soma juice, and the other, of eleven Prayájas (the same with the Apris, p. 31), eleven Anuyájas, and eleven Upayájas, who are to be propitiated by oblations of clarified butter, not by libations of Soma. They are, evidently, little else than personifications of sacrifices.

The commentator, on the authority of the Nirukta, III., 17, calls these, all, Rishis. Atri and Angiras are always enumerated among the Prajapatis; Priyamedha may be the same as Priyavrata, the son of Swayambhuva Manu; and we have a Virupa among the early descendants of Vaivaswata Manu, who, as the father of Ilá, is the Manu of the Veda.—Vishhu Puraha, pp. 53 and 359.

donor of vast wealth, the quick-hearing, the farrenowned.

- 8. The wise (priests), with effused libations of Soma juice, have summoned thee, vast and brilliant Agni, to partake of the (sacrificial food), as they hold the oblation on the part of the individual who presents it.
- 9. Strength-generated, giver of rewards, provider of dwellings, place here, to-day, upon the sacred grass, the morning-moving deities, or (other) deified being, to drink the Soma juice.
- 10. Worship, with conjoint invocations, Agni, the present deified being. Bounteous divinities, this is the Soma juice: drink it; for it was yesterday expressed.°

SÚKTA III. (XLVI.)

The Rishi, as before; the deities are the Aswins; the metre is Gáyatri.

1. The beloved Ushas, until now unseen, scatters

Varga XXXIII

^a Produced by friction, which requires strength to perform effectually.

b In this and the next stanza, we have, again, an allusion to some divine or deified person, dairyam janam, or to some other divinity, without particularizing him. It may be intended for Ka or Prajápati, who, with Agni, here actually addressed, would make up the thirty-three divinities, with the Vasus, Rudras, and Adityas.

o Tiro-ahnyam is said to be the appellation of the Soma juice so prepared,—from tiras, oblique or indirect, and ahnyam, diurnal; that juice which is expressed on the preceding day, and offered on the succeeding.

darkness from the sky. Aswins, I greatly praise you,

- 2. Who are divine, of pleasing appearance, children of the sea, willing dispensers of wealth, and granters of dwellings, (in recompense of) pious acts.
- 3. Since your chariot proceeds, (drawn) by your steeds, above the glorious heavens, your praises are proclaimed (by us).
- 4. (Aświns); guides; the sun, (the evaporator) of the waters, the nourisher, the protector and beholder of the (solemn) rite, nourishes (the gods) with our oblation.
- 5. Násatvas, accepting our praises, partake of the exhilarating Soma juice, the animator of your minds.

Varga XXXIV.

- 6. Aswins, grant us that invigorating food which may satisfy us, having dispelled the gloom (of want).
- 7. Come, as a ship, to bear us over an ocean of praises: harness, Aświns, your car.
- 8. Your vessel, vaster than the sky, stops on the sea-shore: your chariot (waits on the land): the b The original has only "disperse the darkness,"—tamas tirah. The Scholiast explains the darkness to signify that of poverty,—daridryarupam andhakaram.

drops (of the Soma juice) are expressed for your worship.

- 9. Kanwas, (ask this of the Aswins): (How) do the rays (of the sun proceed) from the sky? (How) does the dawn (rise) in the region of the waters? Where do you desire to manifest your own persons?
- 10. There was light to irradiate the dawn: the sun (rose) like gold: the fire shone with darkened flames.
- 11. A fit path was made for the sun to go varga XXXV. beyond the boundary (of night): the radiance of the luminary became visible.
- 12. The worshipper acknowledges whatever boon he receives from the Aświns, satiate with the enjoyment of the Soma juice.
- 13. Causers of felicity, co-dwellers with your worshipper, as with Manus, come hither, to drink of the Soma juice, and (accept) our praise.
- 14. May Ushas follow the lustre of your approach, circumambient Aświns; and may you be pleased with the oblations offered by night.
 - 15. Aświns, may you both drink (the libation)

^{*} The whole of this stanza is very elliptical and obscure, and largely indebted to the Scholiast. Literally, it would run: "Rays from the sky, Kahwas, cause of dwelling in the place of the rivers, where do you wish to place own form?" Sáyaha fills this up, by supposing that the Kahwas are directed to inquire of the Aświns the particulars specified in the translation. Without some such addition, however conjectural it may be, it were impossible to extract any meaning out of such a passage.

and bestow upon us happiness, through your irreproachable protection.

FOURTH ADHYAYA.

SÚRTA IV. (XLVII.)

The Rishi is Praskanwa: the deities are the Aswins: the metre of the odd verses, Brihati; of the even, Satobrihati.

- Varga I. Aświns, encouragers of sacrifice, this most sweet Soma juice is prepared for you. Drink it of yesterday's expressing, and grant riches to the donor.
 - 2. Come, Aświns, with your three-columned, triangular car. The Kańwas repeat your praise at the sacrifice. Graciously hear their invocation.
 - 3. Aswins, encouragers of sacrifice, drink this most sweet Soma juice: approach, to-day, the giver of the offering, you who are of pleasing aspects, and bearers of wealth.
 - 4. Omniscient Aświns, stationed on the thriceheaped sacred grass, sprinkle the sacrifice with the [•] Trivandhurena trivrita • rathena, with a car with three posts, and triangular, is the explanation we have had before. The Scholiast here proposes a somewhat different interpretation, and would render the terms; having three undulating fastenings of timber, and passing, unobstructedly, through the three worlds.

sweet juice. The illustrious Kanwas, with effused libations, invoke you.

- 5. With such desired aids as you protected Kanwa with, do you, cherishers of pious acts, preserve us: encouragers of sacrifice, drink the Soma juice.
- 6. Good-looking Aświns, as you brought, in your car, bearers of wealth, abundance to Sudás, so bring to us the riches that many covet, whether from the firmament or the sky beyond.
- 7. Násatyas, whether you abide far off, or close at hand, come to us, in your well-constructed car, with the rays of the sun.
- 8. Let your coursers, the grace of the sacrifice, bring you, to be present at our rite. Guides (of men), bestowing food upon the pious and liberal donor (of the offering), sit down on the sacred grass.
- 9. Come, Násatyas, with your sun-clad chariot, in which you have ever conveyed wealth to the donor (of the offering), to drink of the sweet Soma juice.
- 10. We invoke, with chanted and recited hymns, the very affluent Aświns, to be present, for our protection. Have you not ever drunk the Soma juice in the favoured dwelling of the Kańwas?

Varga II.

^{*} Sudás is called a Rájá, the son of Pijavana. We have two princes of the name of Sudása, in the Puráñas: one, in the solar line (Vishňu Puráňa, p. 380); the other, in the lunar, the son of Divodása (ibid., p. 454).

b Literally, sun-skinned,—suryatwachá; that is, either surrounded or invested by the sun, or like him in brightness.

SÚKTA V. (XLVIII.)

The Rishi is the same, but the Hymn is addressed to Ushas, the personified dawn, or Aurora: the metre is the same as in the preceding.

- Varga III.
- 1. Ushas, daughter of heaven, dawn upon us with riches: diffuser of light, dawn upon us with abundant food: bountiful goddess, dawn upon us with wealth (of cattle).
- 2. Abounding with horses, abounding with kine, bestowers of every sort of wealth, (the divinities of morning) are possessed of much that is necessary for the habitations (of men). Ushas, speak to me kind words: send us the affluence of the wealthy.
- 3. The divine Ushas has dwelt (in heaven, of old). May she dawn to-day, the excitress of chariots which are harnessed at her coming; as those who are desirous of wealth (send ships) to sea.^b
- 4. Ushas, at thy comings wise men turn their minds to benefactions. Of these men the most wise Kanwa proclaims the fame.

^{*} These three epithets are, all, in the feminine plural, without a substantive: aśwarth, gomath, viśwasuvidah: the Scholiast supplies, therefore, ushodevatáh, the divinities of dawn, as if there were many. Rosen supplies horæ matutinæ.

b The text is Samudre na śravasyavah, Like those desirous of wealth for sea: the commentary supplies "send ships." In the beginning of the stanza, we have only Uvásosháh, which the Scholiast explains, purá nivásam akarot, she has made a dwelling, formerly, i.e., prabhátam kritavatí, she produced the dawn.

- 5. Ushas, nourishing (all), comes, daily, like a matron, the directress (of household duties), conducting all transient (creatures) to decay. (At her coming) each biped stirs; and she wakes up the birds.
- 6. She animates the diligent, and sends clients (to their patrons), and, shedder of dews, knows not delay. Bestower of food, at thy rising the soaring birds no longer suspend (their flight).
- 7. This auspicious Ushas has harnessed (her vehicles) from afar, above the rising of the sun; and she comes gloriously upon man, with a hundred chariots.
- 8. All living beings adore her, that she may be visible: bringer of good, she lights up the world: the affluent daughter of heaven drives away the malevolent, and disperses the absorbers (of moisture).
- 9. Shine around, Ushas, with cheering lustre, bringing us, every day, much happiness, and scattering darkness.
 - 10. Inasmuch, bringer of good, as thou dawnest,

Varga IV.

^{*} Vi * srijati * * arthinah, she lets loose askers, solicitors; for they, says Sáyaña, having risen at early morning, go to the houses of those who are their respective benefactors,—to'pi (yáchakáh) * ushahkále samuttháya swakiyadátrigrihe gachchhanti.

b Perhaps, "with many rays of light" is what is intended by the many chariots of the dawn.

c Sridhah, i.e., soshayitrin, the driers up. Possibly, the clouds are intended, as taking up the dews of night: but no explanation of the application of the term is given.

the breath and life of all (creatures) rest in thee. Diffuser of light, come to us, with thy spacious car: possessor of wondrous wealth, hear our invocation.

Varga V.

- 11. Ushas, accept the (sacrificial) food which, of many kinds, exists among the human race, and thereby bring to the ceremony the pious, who, offering oblations, praise thee.
- 12. Ushas, bring, from the firmament, all the gods, to drink the Soma juice; and do thou thyself bestow upon us excellent and invigorating food, along with cattle and horses.
- 13. May that Ushas, whose bright auspicious rays are visible all around, grant us desirable, agreeable, and easily-attainable riches.
- 14. Adorable Ushas, whom the ancient sages invoked for protection and for food, do thou, (radiant) with pure light, (pleased) by our offerings, accept our praises.
- 15. Ushas, since thou hast, to-day, set open the two gates of heaven with light, grant us a spacious and secure habitation: bestow upon us, goddess, cattle and food.
- 16. Adorable Ushas, associate us with much and multiform wealth, and with abundant cattle, with all foe-confounding fame, and, giver of sustenance, with food.

^a The east and west points of the horizon.

SÚKTA VI. (XLIX.)

The Rishi and deity are the same; the metre is Anushtubh.

1. Ushas, come, by auspicious ways, from above the bright (region of the) firmament: let the purple (kine) bring thee to the dwelling of the offerer of the Soma juice.

- Varga VI.
- 2. Ushas, in the ample and beautiful chariot in which thou ridest, come, to-day, daughter of heaven, to the pious offerer of the oblation.
- 3. White-complexioned Ushas, upon thy coming bipeds and quadrupeds (are in motion), and the winged birds flock around, from the boundaries of the sky.
- 4. Thou, Ushas, dispersing the darkness, illuminest the shining universe with thy rays: such as thou art, the Kanwas, desirous of wealth, praise thee with their hymns.

Praskanwa is, still, the Rishi; the deity is Súrya, the sun. The first nine stanzas are in the Gayatri metre; the last four, in the Anushtubh.

1. His coursers bear on high the divine all- Varga VII. knowing Sun, that he may be seen by all (the worlds).

2. (At the approach) of the all-illuminating Sun,

So the Nighantu,—arunyo gáva ushasám, purple cows, the vehicles of the morning.

the constellations depart, with the night, like thieves.

- 3. His illuminating rays behold men in succession, like blazing fires.
- 4. Thou, Súrya, outstrippest all in speed; b thou art visible to all; thou art the source of light; c thou shinest throughout the entire firmament.

^{*} Nakshatrá, the stars in general, or the lunar asterisms, which, according to different texts, are considered to be the abodes of the gods, or the visible forms of pious persons after death; as, Devagrihá vai nakshatráńi, The constellations are, verily, the dwellings of the gods; and, again, Yo vá iha yajate 'mum lokam nakshate, either, He who performs worship here obtains the next world, or, Sukritám vá etáni jyotinshi yan nakshatráńi, Those constellations are the luminaries of those who practise religious acts, that is, according to Sáyańa, those who, by attending to religious duties in this world, attain Swarga, are beheld in the form of constellations,—iha loke karmánushtháya ye swargam prápnuvanti te nakshatrarúpeňa drisyante.

b Sáyańa says, that, according to the Smriti, the sun moves 2,202 yojanas in half a twinkle of the eye.

[•] Jyotishkrit, giving light to all things, even to the moon and the planets, by night: for they, it is said, are of a watery subtance, from which the rays of the sun are reflected; in like manner as the rays of the sun, falling upon a mirror placed in the doorway of a chamber, are reflected into the interior, and give it light. Sayaha also explains the whole passage metaphysically, identifying the sun with the supreme spirit, who enables all beings to pass over the ocean of existence, who is beheld by all desirous of final emancipation, who is the author of true or spiritual light, and who renders everything luminous through the light of the mind.

- 5. Thou risest in the presence of the Maruts, thou risest in the presence of mankind, and so as to be seen in the presence of the whole (region) of heaven.
- With that light with which thou, the purifier Varga VIII.
 and defender from evil, lookest upon this creaturebearing world,
 - 7. Thou traversest the vast ethereal space, measuring days and nights, and contemplating all that have birth.
 - 8. Divine and light-diffusing Súrva, thy seven coursers bear thee, bright-haired, in thy car.
 - 9. The Sun has yoked the seven mares that safely draw his chariot, and comes with them self-harnessed.
 - 10. Beholding the up-springing light above the darkness, we approach the divine Sun, among the gods, the excellent light.

The text has pratyan devánám višah, before the men or people of the gods, that is, the Maruts, who, in another Vaidik text, are so designated: Maruto vai devánám višah.

b Sapta • haritah, which may, also, mean the seven rays. The seven horses are the days of the week: the seven rays may express the same. They can scarcely be referred to the prismatic rays, although the numerical coincidence is curious.

[°] Sapta śundhywah, i.e., aśwastriyah, mares. They are, also, called naptyah, because with them the car does not fall: yábhir * ratho * na patati. They were more docile than those of Phaeton's father.

d Here, again, we may have an allusion to a spiritual sun. The darkness, it is said, implies sin, and the approach to the sun intimates reunion with supreme spirit; as in other texts, Aganma

- 11. Radiant with benevolent light, rising to-day, and mounting into the highest heaven, do thou, O Sun, remove the sickness of my heart, and the yellowness (of my body).^a
- 12. Let us transfer the yellowness (of my body) to the parrots, to the starlings, or to the Haritála^b (tree).
 - 13. This ADITYA has risen, with all (his) might, jyotir uttamam, we go to the best light; that is, we become identified with spiritual light,—sáyujyam gachchhámah; and, again, he (the worshipper) becomes identical with that which he worships,—tam yathá yathopásate tad eva bhavati.

a Hridroga may also mean heart-burn or indigestion; harimánam, greenness or yellowness, is external change of the colour of the skin, in jaundice or bilious affections. This verse and the two following constitute a tricha or triplet, the repetition of which, with due formalities, is considered to be curative of disease. Súrya, thus hymned by Praskahwa, cured him, it is said, of a cutaneous malady, or leprosy, under which he was labouring. Accordingly, Saunaka terms the couplets a mantra, dedicated to the sun, removing sin, healing disease, an antidote to poison, and the means of obtaining present happiness and final liberation. The especial worship of the sun, in India, at the time of the first incursions of the Mahommedans, attributed to that luminary's having cured Sámba, the son of Krishna, of leprosy, is fully related by M. Reinaud, in his interesting Mémoire sur l' Inde, and was then, no doubt, of ancient date, originating with the primitive notions of the attributes of Surya, here adverted to. The hymn is. throughout, of an archaic character.

b So the Scholiast interprets the haridrava of the text, haritaladruma; but there is no tree so called. Haritala most usually means yellow orpiment; haridrava, a yellow vegetable powder: destroying my adversary; for I am unable to resist my enemy.

ANUVÁKA X.

Súkta I. (LI).

The Rishi is Savya, the son of Angiras: the Hymn is addressed to Indra: the two last verses are in the Trishfubh metre; the rest, in the Jagati.

1. Animate, with praises, that ram, (INDRA), who is adored by many, who is gratified by hymns, and is an ocean of wealth; whose good deeds spread abroad, for the benefit of mankind, like the rays of light. Worship the powerful and wise INDRA, for the enjoyment of prosperity.

2. The protecting and fostering RIBHUS^d hastened to the presence of INDRA, of graceful motion, and irradiating the firmament, imbued with vigour, a The enemy here intended is sickness or disease.

^b Angiras, it is said, having performed worship, to obtain a son who should resemble Indra, the deity became his son, under the name of Savya.

o Tyam mesham; referring to a legend in which it is narrated, that Indra came, in the form of a ram, to a sacrifice solemnized by Medhátithi, and drank the Soma juice. Or mesha may be rendered "victor over foes."

Indra was aided and encouraged, when all the gods had deserted him; as in the texts, "All the gods who were thy friends have fled: may there be friendship between the Maruts and thee;" and, again, "The Maruts did not abandon him."

e Indra, as Sakra, is one of the twelve Adityas, or suns.

the humiliator of his enemies, the performer of a hundred pious acts; and by them encouraging words were uttered.^a

- 3. Thou hast opened the cloud^b for the Angi-RASAS; thou hast shown the way to ATRI, who vexes his adversaries by a hundred doors; thou hast granted wealth, with food, to VIMADA: thou art wielding thy thunderbolt in defence of a worshipper engaged in battle.
- 4. Thou hast opened the receptacle of the waters; thou hast detained, in the mountain, the treasure of the malignant; when thou hadst slain VRITRA, the destroyer, thou madest the sun visible in the sky.

^{*} They exclaimed, "Strike; Bhagavan, be valiant,"—Prahara, Bhagavo * viryaswa.

b The term is gotra, explained either a cloud, or a herd of cattle. Gotrabhid, as a name of Indra, implies, in ordinary language, mountain-breaker,—that is, with the thunderbolt: as applied to cattle, it alludes, it is said, to the recovery of the cows stolen by Pańi. In either case, the act was performed in consequence of the prayers, or for the benefit, of the descendants of Angiras.

^c By a number of means or contrivances,—yantras.

d Vimada is called, in the commentary, a Maharshi.

e Parvate dánumad vasu. "In the mountain" implies the dwelling of Indra. Dánumat is variously explained, as one doing an injury, hostile or malignant, an enemy; or, one descended from Danu, a Dánava, an Asura: or it may be an epithet of vasu, wealth, "fit for liberality;" from dánu, giving.

r Vritra, who is Ahi; explained, hantri, the slayer. From a text cited from the Yajur-Veda, Ahi appears to be the personification of all the benefits derivable from sacrifice, knowledge,

- 5. Thou, Indra, by thy devices, hast humbled the deceivers who presented oblations to their own mouths: propitious to men, thou hast destroyed the cities of Pipru, and hast well defended Rijiśwan, in robber-destroying (contests).
- 6. Thou hast defended Kutsa, in fatal fights with S'ushna; thou hast destroyed S'ambara, in defence of Atithigwa; thou hast trodden, with thy foot, upon the great Arbuda: from remote times wast thou born, for the destruction of oppressors.
- 7. In thee, INDRA, is all vigour fully concentrated; thy will delights to drink the Soma juice: it is known, by us, that the thunderbolt is deposited in thy hands. Cut off all prowess from the foe.
 - 8. Discriminate between the Aryas and those fame, food, and prosperity; Sa yat sarvam etat samabhavat tasmád Ahih,—Inasmuch as he was the same as all that, therefore he was called Ahi.

Varga X.

^{*} According to the Kaushitakis, the Asuras, contemning Agni, offered oblations to themselves; and the Vájasaneyis relate, that, when there was a rivalry between the gods and Asuras, the latter arrogantly said, "Let us not offer sacrifice to any one," and, thereupon, made the oblations to their own mouths.

b Pipru is called an Asura; Rijiśwan, a worshipper whom they oppressed; dasyuhatyeshu, in battles killing the Dasyus,—robbers or barbarians.

^o Sushia, Sambara, and Arbuda are designated as Asuras. Kutsa we have had before, as the name of a Rishi. Atithigwa is said to mean the hospitable, and to be also termed Divodása; but it does not appear whether he is the same as the Divodása of the Puránas. [See Vol. II., p. 34, note b.]

who are Dasyus: restraining those who perform no religious rites, compel them to submit to the performer of sacrifices: be thou, who art powerful, the encourager of the sacrificer. I am desirous of celebrating all thy deeds, in ceremonies that give thee satisfaction.

- 9. Indra abides, humbling the neglecters of holy acts, in favour of those who observe them, and punishing those who turn away from his worship, in favour of those who are present (with their praise). Vamra, while praising him, whether old or adolescent, and spreading through heaven, carried off the accumulated (materials of the sacrifice).
- 10. If Uśanas should sharpen thy vigour by his own, then would thy might terrify, by its intensity, both heaven and earth. Friend of man, let the will-harnessed steeds, with the velocity of the wind, convey thee, replete (with vigour), to (partake of the sacrificial) food.

The Aryas, as appears from this and the next verse, and as stated by the Scholiast, are those who practise religious rites; while the Dasyus are those who do not observe religious ceremonies, and are inimical to those who do; being, probably, the uncivilized tribes of India, yet unsubdued by the followers of the Vedas, the Aryas, the respectable or civilized race.

b The text is, here, obscure, — Vamro vi jaghána sandihah; Vamra destroyed the collections. The Scholiast says, that a Rishi named Vamra took advantage of Indra's absence from a sacrifice, to carry away the accumulated heap of offerings, the marrow or essence of the earth; Yad valmikavapásambháro bhavati úrjam eva prithivyáh.

Varga XI.

- 11. When Indra is delighted with acceptable hymns, he ascends (his car), drawn by more and more obliquely-curveting coursers: fierce, he extracts the waters, from the passing (cloud), in a torrent, and has overwhelmed the extensive cities of S'ushna.
- 12. Thou mountest thy chariot willingly, INDRA, for the sake of drinking the libations. Such as thou delightest in have been prepared (at the sacrifice of) S'ÁRYÁTA.^a Be pleased with them, as thou art gratified by the effused Soma juices, (at the sacrifices) of others. So dost thou obtain imperishable fame in heaven.
- 13. Thou hast given, Indra, the youthful Vrichayá's to the aged Kakshívat, praising thee, and offering libations. Thou, Sukratu, wast Mená, the daughter of Vrishanaśwa. All these thy deeds are to be recited at thy worship.

^{*} Sáryáta was a Rájarshi,—according to the Scholiast,—of the race of Bhrigu. The Aitareya Bráhmáña calls him a prince of the race of Manu. The term is a patronymic, implying son or descendant of Saryáti, who was the fourth son of the Manu Vaivaswata. [See p. 293, note c.] The Rishi Chyavana married his daughter; and a solemn sacrifice was held on the occasion, at which Indra and the Aświns were present. Chyavana appropriated to himself the share of the oblation intended for the Aświns, at which Indra was very angry; and, to appease him, a fresh offering was prepared. The Scholiast quotes this story from the Kaushitaki Bráhmaña. It is detailed in the Bhágavata and Padma Puráñas.

b Vrichayá, it is said, was given to Kakshivat, at the Rájasúya ceremony. No notice of her occurs elsewhere.

c The Bráhmana is cited for a strange story of Indra's having,

- 14. Indra has been had recourse to, that he may assist the pious, in their distress. Praise by the Pajras^a is (as stable) as the post of a doorway. Indra, the giver of riches, who is possessed of horses, cattle, chariots, and wealth, is present.
- 15. This adoration is offered to the shedder of rain, the self-resplendent, the possessor of true vigour, the mighty. May we be aided, Indra, in this conflict, by many heroes, and abide in a prosperous (habitation, bestowed) by thee.

SÚRTA II. (LII.)

The Rishi and divinity are the same: the metre of the thirteenth and fifteenth verses is Trishfubh; of the rest, Jagati.

Varga XII.

- 1. Worship well that ram, who makes heaven known, whom a hundred worshippers at once are assiduous in praising. I implore INDRA, with many prayers, to ascend the car,—which hastens, like a fleet courser, to the sacrifice,—for my protection.
- 2. When Indra, who delights in the sacrificial food, had slain the stream-obstructing VRITRA, and was pouring down the waters, he stood firm, amid the torrents, like a mountain, and, endowed with a himself, become Mená, the daughter of Vrishańaśwa, and having, afterwards, fallen in love with her. The Mená of the Puráňas is one of the daughters of the Pitris, by Swadhá, and the wife of Himavat, the king of the mountains.

The Pajras are said to be the same as the Angirasas.

[,] b Or it may be rendered "who is desirous of possessing,"—expecting such gifts from the institutor of the ceremony.

[°] See p. 135, note c.

thousand means of protecting (his votaries), increased in vigour.

- 3. He, who is victorious over his enemies, who is spread through the dewy (firmament), the root of happiness, who is exhilarated by the Soma juice,—him I invoke, the most bountiful Indra, along with learned priests, with a mind disposed to pious adoration; for he is the bestower of abundant food:
- 4. That Indra whom, in heaven, the libations sprinkled on the sacred grass replenish, as the kindred rivers, hastening to it, fill the ocean: that Indra whom the Maruts, the driers up of moisture, who are unobstructed, and of undistorted forms, attended, as auxiliaries, at the death of Vritra.
- 5. His allies, exhilarated (by libations), preceded him, warring against the withholder of the rain; as rivers rush down declivities. Indra, animated by the sacrificial food, broke through the defences of Bala, as did Trita, through the coverings (of the well).^a

^{*} The text has only paridhir iva tritah; and tritah may mean triple or threefold; making the phrase, "as through triple coverings," or defences; whence Rosen has custodes veluti a tribus partibus constitutes. M. Langlois is more correct, in considering Tritah as a proper name; but it may be doubted if he has authority for rendering it by Soma,—ou la libation qui prend le nom de Trita,—or for the additional circumstances he narrates. The legend told by the Scholiast, and confirmed by other passages of the text, as well as by the version of the story found in the Niti-manjari, is wholly different. Ekata, Dwita, and Trita were three men produced in water, by Agni, for the purpose of removing or rubbing off the reliques of an oblation of clarified butter, the proper funcvarga XIII. 6. When, INDRA, thou hadst smitten, with thy thunderbolt, the cheek of the wide-extended VRITRA.

tion of the sacred grass, to the three blades of which, placed on the altar, the legend may owe its origin: but this does not appear from the narrative. The Scholiast, following the Taittiriyas, says that Agni threw the cinders of the burnt-offerings into water. whence successively arose Ekata, Dwita, and Trita, who, it elsewhere appears, were, therefore, called Aptyas, or sons of water (Sukta CV., v. 9). Trita, having, on a subsequent occasion, gone to draw water from a well, fell into it; and the Asuras heaped coverings over the mouth of it, to prevent his getting out; but he broke through them with ease. It is to this exploit that Indra's breaking through the defences of the Asura Bala is compared. The story is somewhat differently related in the Niti-manjari. Three brothers, it is said, Ekata, Dwita, and Trita, were travelling in a desert, and, being distressed by thirst, came to a well, from which the youngest, Trita, drew water and gave it to his brothers. In requital, they threw him into the well, in order to appropriate his property, and, having covered the top with a cart-wheel, left him in the well. In this extremity, he prayed to all the gods to extricate him, and, by their favour, he made his escape. Paridhi, the term of the text, means a circumference, a circular covering, or lid. Mr. Colebrooke has briefly, but with his usual accuracy, cited this story, in his account of the Rig-Veda (As. Researches, Vol. VIII., p. 388). Dr. Roth conceives Trita to be the same as Traitana, a name that occurs in a text of the Rich; and, converting the latter into a deification, he imagines him to be the original of Thractona, the Zend form of Feridun, one of the heroes of the Shah-nama, and of ancient Persian tradition.—Zeitschrift der D. Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, Vol. II., p. 216. Professor Lassen seems disposed to adopt this identification.—Indische Alterthumskunde, Additions. The identity of Trita and Traitana, however, remains to be established; and the very stanza quoted, by Dr. Roth, as authority for the latter name, is explained, in the Niti-manjari, in a very different sense from that who, having obstructed the waters, reposed in the region above the firmament, thy fame spread afar, thy prowess was renowned.

- 7. The hymns, INDRA, that glorify thee attain unto thee, as rivulets (flow into) a lake. Twashtri has augmented thy appropriate vigour: he has sharpened thy bolt with overpowering might.
- 8. Indra, performer of holy acts, desirous of going to man, thou, with thy steeds, hast slain VRITRA, (hast set free) the waters, hast taken, in thy hands, thy thunderbolt of iron, and hast made the sun visible in the sky.

which he has given. It is said, that the slaves of Dirghatamas, when he was old and blind, became insubordinate, and attempted to destroy him, first, by throwing him into the fire, whence he was saved by the Aświns, then, into water, whence he was extricated by the same divinities; upon which, Traitana, one of the slaves, wounded him on the head, breast, and arms, and then inflicted like injuries on himself, of which he perished. After these events, the sage recited, in praise of the Aswins, the hymn in which the verse occurs: -Na má garan nadyo mátritamá, dásá yad im susamubdham avádhuh; śiro yad asya Traitano vitakshat, swayam dása uro ansávapi gdha,—" Let not the maternal waters swallow me, since the slaves assailed this decrepit (old man). In like manner as the slave. Traitana wounded his head, so has he struck it, of himself, and, likewise, his breast and shoulders." [I., CLVIII., 5: see Vol. II., p. 103. If this interpretation be correct, there can be little relation between Trita and Traitana, and between the latter and Feridun. The former term has, however, found admission as a numeral, and, apparently, also as a proper name, into the Zend books. See M. Burnouf's "Études sur les Textes Zends," Journal Asiatique, April, 1845: see, also, the word Trita, in the Glossary of Benfey's edition of the Sáma-Veda.

- 9. Through fear (of VRITRA, they, the worshippers,) recited the suitable hymn of the Brihat (Sáma), self-illuminating, strength-bestowing, and ascending to heaven; on which his allies, (the Maruts), combating for men, (guardians) of heaven, and vivifiers of mankind, animated Indra (to destroy him).
- 10. The strong heaven was rent asunder with fear, at the clamour of that Ahi, when thou, Indra, wast inspirited by (drinking) the effused (Soma juice), and thy thunderbolt, in its vigour, struck off the head of VRITRA, the obstructor of heaven and earth.

Varga XIV.

- 11. Although, Indra, the earth were of tenfold (its extent), and men multiplied every day, yet, Maghavan, thy prowess would be equally renowned; the exploits achieved by thy might would be spread abroad, with the heavens.
- 12. Firm-minded Indra, abiding, (secure,) in thy strength, beyond the limit of the wide-expanded firmament, thou hast framed the earth for our preservation; thou hast been the type of vigour; thou hast encompassed the firmament and the sky, as far as to the heavens.
 - 13. Thou art the type of the extended earth;

^{*} The text has only Brihat; the Scholiast adds Sáma. An allusion to the Sáma, in a verse of the Rich, would indicate the priority of the former, at least as respects this hymn.

b Bhuvah pratimánam, the counter-measure of the earth; that is, according to the Scholiast, of similar magnitude and like inconceivable power.

thou art the lord of the vast god-frequented (Swar-ga). Verily, with thy bulk thou fillest all the firmament: of a truth, there is none other such as thou.

- 14. Thou, INDRA, of whom heaven and earth have not attained the amplitude; of whom the waters of heaven have not reached the limit; of whom, when warring, with excited animation, against the withholder of the rains, (his adversaries have not equalled the prowess);—thou, alone, hast made everything else (than thyself) dependent (upon thee).
- 15. The MARUTS worshipped thee, in this (encounter). All the gods, in this engagement, imitated thee in exultation, when thou hadst struck the face of VRITRA with thy angular and fatal (bolt).

SÚRTA III. (LIII.)

The Rishi and divinity are the same: the metre of the tenth and eleventh stanzas is Trishfubh; of the rest, Jagati.

- 1. We ever offer fitting praise to the mighty Indra, in the dwelling of the worshipper, by which he (the deity) has quickly acquired riches; as (a thief) hastily carries (off the property) of the sleeping. Praise ill-expressed is not valued among the munificent.
 - 2. Thou, Indra, art the giver of horses, of cattle,

Varga XV.

^{*} Rishwavirasya brihatah patih, lord or protector of the great (region), in which are the pleasant (rishwa) gods (vira).

b The text has only bhrishtimatá vadhena,—with the killer (or weapon) that has angles. According to the Aitareya Bráhmaña, the vajra, or thunderbolt, of Indra has eight angles, or, perhaps, blades; ashtaśrir vai vajrah.

of barley, the master and protector of wealth, the foremost in liberality, (the being) of many days: thou disappointest not desires (addressed to thee): thou art a friend to our friends. Such an INDRA we praise.

- 3. Wise and resplendent INDRA, the achiever of great deeds, the riches that are spread around are known to be thine: having collected them, victor (over thy enemies), bring them to us: disappoint not the expectation of the worshipper who trusts in thee.
- 4. Propitiated by these offerings, by these libations, dispel poverty with cattle and horses. May we, subduing our adversary, and relieved from enemies by Indra, (pleased) by our libations, enjoy, together, abundant food.
- 5. Indra, may we become possessed of riches and of food; and, with energies agreeable to many, and shining around, may we prosper, through thy divine favour, the source of prowess, of cattle, and of horses.

Varga XVI.

6. Those who were thy allies (the Maruts,) brought thee joy. Protector of the pious, those libations and oblations (that were offered thee, on slaying Vritra), yielded thee delight, when thou, unimpeded by foes, didst destroy the ten thousand obstacles opposed to him who praised thee and offered thee oblations.

^{*} Daśa vritráńi * * * sahasráńi. Vritrańi is interpreted by dvarakáńi, covers, concealments, obstructions.

- 7. Humiliator (of adversaries), thou goest from battle to battle, and destroyest, by thy might, city after city. With thy foe-prostrating associate, (the thunderbolt), thou, INDRA, didst slay, afar off, the deceiver named NAMUCHI.^a
- 8. Thou hast slain KARANJA and PARÑAYA with thy bright gleaming spear, in the cause of Att-thicwa. Unaided, thou didst demolish the hundred cities of Vangrida, when besieged by Rijiśwan.^b
- 9. Thou, renowned Indra, overthrewest, by thy not-to-be-overtaken chariot-wheel, the twenty kings of men, who had come against Suśravas, unaided, and their sixty thousand and ninety and nine followers.
- 10. Thou, Indra, hast preserved Suśravas, by thy succour; Túrvayáña, by thy assistance. Thou hast made Kutsa, Atithigwa, and Áyu^a subject to the mighty, though youthful, Suśravas.
- 11. Protected by the gods, we remain, INDRA, at the close of the sacrifice, thy most fortunate friends.

^{*} Namuchi is termed an Asura. He appears, in the Puráñas, as a Dánava, or descendant of Danu.

b The first two are the names of Asuras. Atithigwa we have had before: Vangrida is called an Asura; and Rijiśwan, a Rájá. We have no further particulars; nor do they appear in the Puránas. [See Vol. III., pp. 148, 481.]

[°] Here, again, we derive no aid from the Bháshya. The legend is not Pauráńik; and, though we have a Suśravas among the Prajápatis in the Váyu Puráńa, he does not appear as a king.

d Ayus, the son of Pururavas, may be intended; but the name, here, is Ayu, without the final sibilant.

We praise thee, as enjoying, through thee, excellent offspring and a long and prosperous life.

SÚKTA IV. (LIV.)

The deity and Rishi are the same: the metre of the sixth, eighth, ninth, and eleventh stanzas is Trishtubh; of the other seven, Jagati.

Varga XVII.

- 1. Urge us not, Maghavan, to this iniquity, to these iniquitous conflicts; for the limit of thy strength is not to be surpassed. Thou hast shouted, and hast made the waters of the rivers roar. How (is it possible) that the earth should not be filled with terror?
- 2. Offer adoration to the wise and powerful S'ARRA. Glorifying the listening Indra, praise him who purifies both heaven and earth by his irresistible might, who is the sender of showers, and, by his bounty, gratifies our desires.
- 3. Offer exhilarating praises to the great and illustrious Indra, of whom, undaunted, the steady mind is concentrated in its own firmness; for he, who is of great renown, the giver of rain, the repeller of enemies, who is obeyed by his steeds, the showever (of bounties), is hastening hither.
- 4. Thou hast shaken the summit of the spacious heaven; thou hast slain S'AMBARA, by thy resolute self; thou hast hurled, with exulting and determined mind, the sharp and bright-rayed thunderbolt against assembled Asuras.
- 5. Since thou, loud-shouting, hast poured the rain upon the brow of the breathing (wind), and (on the head) of the maturing and absorbing (sun), who shall prevent thee from doing, to-day, (as thou wilt), endowed with an unaltered and resolute mind?

- 6. Thou hast protected NARYA, TURVAŚA, YADU, Varga XVIII. and Turvíti, of the race of VAYYA. Thou hast protected their chariots and horses, b in the unavoidable engagement: thou hast demolished the ninetynine cities (of S'AMBARA).º
- 7. That eminent person, the cherisher of the pious, (the institutor of the ceremony), promotes his own prosperity, who, while offering oblations to INDRA, pronounces his praise; or who, along with the offerings he presents, recites hymns (in honour For him the bounteous Indra causes the clouds to rain from heaven.
- 8. Unequalled is his might; unequalled is his wisdom. May these drinkers of the Soma juice become equal to him, by the pious act; for they, INDRA, who present to thee oblations augment thy vast strength and thy manly vigour.

- 11. Bestow upon us, Indra, increasing reputation; (bestow upon us) great, augmenting, and foesubduing strength; preserve us in affluence; cherish those who are wise; and supply us with wealth from which proceed excellent progeny and food.

SÚRTA V. (LV.)

Deity and Rishi, as before; the metre, Jagati.

Varga XIX.

- 1. The amplitude of Indra was vaster than the (space of) heaven: earth was not comparable to him, in bulk; formidable and most mighty, he has been, ever, the afflicter (of the enemies of) those men (who worship him); he whets his thunderbolt, for sharpness, as a bull, (his horns).
- 2. The firmament-abiding Indra grasps the widespread waters with his comprehensive faculties, as the ocean (receives the rivers): he rushes, (impetuous,) as a bull, to drink of the Soma juice; he, the warrior, ever covets praise for his prowess.

^{*} Gribhádti * varimabhih,—he grasps, with his powers of comprehending or collecting, samvarańaih; or, it may be, by his vastness, urutwaih.

- 3. Thou, Indra, hast not (struck) the cloud for (thine own) enjoyment; thou rulest over those who are possessed of great wealth. That divinity is known, by us, to surpass all others in strength: the haughty (INDRA) takes precedence of all gods, on account of his exploits.
- 4. He, verily, is glorified by adoring (sages) in the forest; he proclaims his beautiful vigour amongst men; he is the granter of their wishes (to those who solicit him); he is the encourager of those who desire to worship (him), when the wealthy offerer of oblations, enjoying his protection, recites his praise.
- 5. Indra, the warrior, engages in many great conflicts, for (the good of) man, with overwhelming When he hurls his fatal shaft, every prowess. one immediately has faith in the resplendent INDRA.
- 6. Ambitious of renown, destroying the wellbuilt dwellings of the Asuras, expanding like the earth, and setting the (heavenly) luminaries free from concealment, he, the performer of good deeds, enables the waters to flow, for the benefit of his worshippers.

7. Drinker of the Soma juice, may thy mind incline to grant our desires: hearer of praises, let thy coursers be present (at our sacrifice). Thy charioteers are skilful in restraining (thy steeds); nor, INDRA, Varga XX.

can crafty (enemies), bearing arms, prevail against thee.

8. Thou holdest, in thy hands, unexhausted wealth: thou, renowned (INDRA), hast irresistible strength in thy body: thy limbs are invested with (glorious) exploits; as wells (are surrounded by those who come for water): in thy members, INDRA, are many exploits.

Deity, Rishi, and metre, as in the preceding.

Varga XXI.

- 1. Voracious (Indra) has risen up,—(as ardently) as a horse (approaches) a mare,—to partake of the copious libations (contained) in the (sacrificial) ladles. Having stayed his well-horsed, golden, and splendid chariot, he plies himself, capable of heroic (actions, with the beverage).
- '2. His adorers, bearing oblations, are thronging round (him); as (merchants) covetous of gain crowd the ocean, (in vessels,) on a voyage. Ascend quickly, with a hymn to the powerful Indra, the protector of the solemn sacrifice; as women (climb) a mountain.
- 3. He is quick in action, and mighty; his faultless and destructive prowess shines in manly (conflict),—like the peak of a mountain (afar),—with which, clothed in iron (armour), he, the suppressor of the malignant, when exhilarated (by the Soma juice), east the wily S'ushna into prison and into bonds.

- 4. Divine strength waits—like the sun upon the dawn—upon that INDRA who is made more powerful, for protection, by thee, (his worshipper), who, with resolute vigour, resists the gloom, and inflicts severe castigation upon his enemies, making them cry aloud (with pain).
- 5. When thou, destroying Indra, didst distribute the (previously) hidden life-sustaining, undecaying waters through the different quarters of the heaven, then, animated (by the Soma juice), thou didst engage in battle, and, with exulting (prowess), slewest VRITRA, and didst send down an ocean of waters.
- 6. Thou, mighty Indra, sendest down, from heaven, by thy power, upon the realms of earth, the (world)-sustaining rain. Exhilarated (by the Soma juice), thou hast expelled the waters (from the clouds), and hast crushed VRITRA by a solid rock.

ANUVÁKA- XI.

Súrta I. (LVIII.)

The deity is AGNI: the Rishi, NODHAS, the son of GOTAMA: the metre of the first five verses is Jagati; of the last four, Trishfubh.

- 1. The strength-generated, immortal Agni quickly Varga XXIII. issues forth, when he is the invoker of the gods and the messenger (of the worshipper). (Then, proceeding) by suitable paths, he has made the firmament, and worships (the deities), in the sacrifice, with oblations.^a
- 2. Undecaying Agni, combining his food^b (with his flame), and devouring it quickly, ascends the dry wood. The blaze of the consuming (element) spreads like a (fleet) courser, and roars like a roaring (cloud) in the height of heaven.
- 3. The immortal and resplendent Agni, the bearer of oblations, honoured by the Rudras and the Vasus, the invoker of the gods, who presides

The firmament existed, but in darkness, until fire, identified with light, rendered it visible; so that Agni may be said to have made or created it—vi mane, or nirmané.

b The text has adma, food, or what may be eaten: but the Scholiast explains it, trinagulmádikam, straw and twigs; in contrast to atasa, which presently occurs, and which he explains by káshtha, wood or timber.

^e The term is purchitah, explained puraskritah, which may also imply, placed in front of, preceding.

- 4. Excited by the wind, and roaring loudly, Agni penetrates easily, with his flames and diffusive (intensity), among the timber. When, undecaying and flercely-blazing Agni, thou rushest rapidly, like a bull amongst the forest trees, thy path is blackened.
- 5. The flame-weaponed and breeze-excited AGNI, assailing the unexhaled moisture (of the trees) with all his strength, in a volume of fire, rushes triumphant (against all things), in the forest, like a bull; and all, whether stationary or moveable, are afraid of him, as he flies along.

Varga XXIV.

- 6. The Bhrigus, amongst men, for the sake of a divine birth, cherished thee, like a precious treasure, Agni, who sacrificest for men, who art the invoker (of the gods), the (welcome) guest at sacrifices, and who art to be valued like an affectionate friend.
- 7. I worship, with oblations, that Agni, whom the seven invoking priests invite, as the invoker of the gods; who is most worthy of worship at sacrifices, and who is the donor of all riches: I solicit of him wealth.
- 8. Son of strength, favourably-shining Agni, grant to thy worshippers, on this occasion, uninterrupted felicity. Offspring of food, preserve him who praises thee from sin, with guards of iron.

[·] Divyaya janmane, for the sake of being born as gods.

9. Variously-shining Agni, be a shelter to him who praises thee: be prosperity, Maghavan, to the wealthy (offerers of oblations): protect, Agni, thy worshipper from sin. May Agni, who is rich with righteous acts, come (to us) quickly in the morning.

SÚRTA II. (LIX.)

The Riski is Nodhas; the deity, Agni, in the form of Vaiswa-NARA; b the metre is Trishtubh.

- 1. Whatever other fires there may be, they are Varga XXV. but ramifications, AGNI, of thee: but they all rejoice, being immortal, in thee. Thou, VANWANARA, art the navel of men, and supportest them, like a deep-planted column.°
- 2. Agni, the head of heaven, the navel of earth, became the ruler over both earth and heaven. the gods engendered thee, Vaiśwanara, in the form of light, for the venerable sage.d

b Vaiśwanara; from viśwa, all, and nara, a man; a fire common to all mankind; or, as here indicated, the fire or natural heat of the stomach, which is a principal element of digestion.

c That is, as a pillar or post, fixed firmly in the ground, supports the main beam or roof of a house.

- 4. Heaven and earth expanded, as it were, for their son. The experienced sacrificer recites, like a bard, many ancient and copious praises addressed to the graceful-moving, truly vigorous, and all-guiding Vaiśwánara.

Manu, as the institutor of the first sacrifice, or to the yajamána, the institutor of the present rite.

The Scholiast supports this affiliation by citing another text; but that does not apply particularly to any form of Agni, but to himself: Ubha pitara mahayann ajayatagnir dyavaprithivi,—Both parents, heaven and earth, expanding, Agni was born.

b The text has manushya only, "like a man;" that is, according to the Scholiast, a bandi, a panegyrist, or bard, who recites the praises of a prince or great man, for largess.

This clause is from the Scholiast.

We have Vaiśwanara here evidently identified with Indra;

7. Vaiswánara, by his magnitude, is all men, and is to be worshipped, as the diffuser of manifold light, in offerings of nutritious viands. Agni, the an identification not inconsistent with Vaidik theogony, which resolves all the divinities into three,-Fire, Air, and the Sun, and those three, again, into one, or the Sun (Nirukta, VII., 4). But the Scholiast says, we are to understand Vaiśwanara, in this verse, as the Agni of the firmanent, the vaidyuta, the lightning or electric fire. The firmament, or middle region, is, properly, that of Váyu, the Wind, or of Indra; the inferior region, or earth, is the proper sphere of Agni; and that of the upper region, or heaven, of the Sun. The Scholiast cites a passage from the Nirukta, VII., 21, in which it is discussed who Vaiśwanara is, and two opinions are compared,—one, which places him in the middle region, and identifies him with Indra or Váyu, or both, in which character he sends rain, an office that the terrestrial Agni cannot discharge; and another, which identifies him with Surva, or the Sun, in the upper sphere. Both are, however, considered, by the Scholiast, to be untenable, chiefly from the etymologies of the name, which make Vaiśwanara an Agni, the fire—as above stated -of the middle region, or lightning; from which, when fallen to earth, the terrestrial fire is born, and from which, also, the rain is indirectly generated, the burnt-offering ascending to the sun; and it is, in consequence, from the sun that rain descends: Vaiśwanara is, therefore, an Agni. According to Pauránik astronomy, Vaiswanara is the central path of the sun; in mythology, he occurs as The cloud is termed, in the text, S'ambara, one of the Dánavas. who is, elsewhere, called an Asura.

- Viśwakrishti, literally rendered, all men: the Scholiast says, of whom all men are same nature,—swabhutáh.
- b Bharadwájeshu,—in sacrifices which present food in the shape of nutritious (pushtikara) oblations of clarified butter (havis). Or it may mean, who is to be worshipped by the Rishis termed Bharadwájas, or of the gotra, or race, of Bharadwája.

These are Vaidik names. S'atavani is so called, as the offerer of a hundred, i.e., numerous, sacrifices: his son has the patronymic S'átavaneya.

b The wind brought Agni to the sage Bhrigu, as a friend (ráti): some translate it 'a son,' as in the text, rátim Bhriguñám,—the son of the Bhrigus. The more modern Sanskrit confirms the first sense; as, although it has lost the original simple term, it preserves it in the compound aráti, an enemy, one not (a) a friend (ráti), an unfriend.

^o As before; either of heaven and earth, or of the two pieces of wood.

a The text has only ubhayásah, "both," which the Scholiast explains, either gods and men, or the ministering priests and their employer,—the yajamána. The same authority would repeat the phrase "gods and men," as the sense of the text Uśijo ye cha martáh; explaining the first by kámayamáná deváh,—those who are to be wished for,—the gods. He also proposes, as an alternative for uśijah, medhávinah, wise, or the priests, and, for mortals, the yajamánas.

SÚKTA IV. (LXI.)

The deity is INDRA; the Rishi and metre are the same as in the preceding.

Varga XXVII.

- 1. I offer adoration to that powerful, rapid, mighty, praise-meriting, and unobstructed Indra,—adoration that is acceptable, and oblations that are grateful, as food (to a hungry man).
- 2. I offer (oblations, acceptable as) food, (to the hungry,) to that Indra: I raise (to him) exclamations that may be of efficacy in discomfiting (my foes). Others (also,) worship Indra, the ancient lord, in heart, in mind, and in understanding.
- 3. I offer, with my mouth, a loud exclamation, with powerful and pure words of praise, to exalt him who is the type (of all,) the giver (of good things), the great, the wise.
- 4. I prepare praises for him, as a carpenter constructs a car, (that the driver) may, thence, (obtain) food, praises well-deserved, to him who is entitled to commendation, and excellent oblations to the wise INDRA.

- 5. To propitiate that INDRA, for the sake of food, I combine praise with utterance, as (a man harnesses) a horse (to a car), in order to celebrate the heroic, munificent, and food-conferring INDRA, the destroyer of the cities (of the Asuras).
- 6. For that Indra, verily, Twashfri sharpened the well-acting, sure-aimed thunderbolt, for the battle, with which fatal (weapon) the foe-subduing and mighty sovereign severed the limbs of Vritra.
- 7. Quickly quaffing the libations, and devouring the grateful viands (presented) at the three (daily) sacrifices which are dedicated to the creator (of the world), he, the pervader of the universe, stole the ripe (treasures of the Asuras): the vanquisher (of his foes), the hurler of the thunderbolt, encountering, pierced the cloud.

Varga XXVIII.

^{*} Arkam juhwá. The latter is defined, the instrument of invocation, the organ of speech: the former means, as usual, hymn, or praise in metre.

b He may be so termed, as everything in the world proceeds from rain.

o The term of the text is Vishńu, applied to Indra, as the pervader of all the world,—sarvasya jagato vyápakah.

d Vardha, one of the synonyms of megha, cloud, in the Nighahíu. Or it may mean sacrifice, from vara, a boon, and aha, a day. In reference to this purport, a different explanation of the text is given, which is somewhat obscure. Vishhu, it is said, means the personified sacrifice (yajna), in which character he stole, or attracted, the accumulated wealth of the Asuras; after which

- 8. To that Indra the women, the wives of the gods, addressed their hymns, on the destruction of Ahi. He encompasses the extensive heaven and earth. They two do not surpass thy vastness.
- 9. His magnitude, verily, exceeds that of the heaven, and earth, and sky. Indra, self-irradiating in his dwelling, equal to every exploit, engaged with no unworthy foe, and, skilled in conflict, calls to battle.^b
- 10. Indra, by his vigour, cut to pieces, with his thunderbolt, Vritra, the absorber (of moisture), and set free the preserving waters, like cows (recovered from thieves); and, consentient (to the wishes) of the giver of the oblation, (grants him) food.

he remained concealed behind seven difficult passes, or the days of initiatory preparation for the rite. Indra, having crossed the seven defiles, or gone through the seven days of initiation, pierced, or penetrated to, or accomplished, the sacrifice. This explanation is supported by a citation from the Taittiriya, which is still more obscure: This Vardha, the stealer of what is beautiful,(?) cherishes, beyond the seven hills, the wealth of the Asuras; he (Indra), having taken up the tufts of the sacred grass, and pierced the seven hills, slew him.—Vardho'yam vamamoshah saptanam girinam parastad vittam vedyam asuranam bibhartiti; sa darbhapinjulam uddhritya, sapta girin bhittwa, tam ahann iti cha.

- The wives of the gods are the personified Gáyatri, and other metres of the Vedas: according to the Scholiast, the term gnáh, preceding devapatnih, usually means females, or women, whose nature, the Scholiast says, is locomotive,—gamanaswabháváh.
- b The Scholiast says, he calls the clouds to battle; for by the mutual collision of the clouds rain is engendered.

- 11. Through his power, the rivers sport; since he Varga XXIX. has opened (a way for them,) by his thunderbolt. Establishing his supremacy, and granting a (recompense) to the giver (of the oblation), he, the swiftmoving, provided a resting-place for Turvíti.
- 12. Indra, who art the quick-moving and strength-endowed lord (of all), hurl thy thunderbolt against this VRITRA, and sever his joints,— as (butchers cut up) a cow, b—that the rains may issue from him, and the waters flow (over the earth).
- 13. Proclaim, with new hymns, the former exploits of that quick-moving Indra, when, wielding his weapons in battle, he encounters and destroys his enemies.
- 14. Through fear of him, the stable mountains (are still); and, through dread of his appearance, heaven and earth tremble. May Nodhas, praising, repeatedly, the preserving power of that beloved Indra, be speedily (blessed) with vigour.
- 15. To him has that praise been offered which he, sole (victor over his foes), and lord of manifold

^a The name of a Rishi, who, the Scholiast adds, had been immersed in water: Indra brought him to dry land.

b The text has, cut in pieces the limbs of Vritra, as of a cow, (gor na): the commentator supplies the rest,—as worldly men, the carvers of flesh, divide, here and there, the limbs of animals. The expression is remarkable, although it may not be quite clear what is meant by the term used by Sayana, vikartarah, cutters-up, or carvers. Perhaps the word should be vikretarah, venders of meat, butchers. At any rate, it proves that no horror was attached to the notion of a joint of beef, in ancient days, among the Hindus.

FIFTH ADHYÁYA.

SÚRTA V. (LXII.)

The Rishi is Nodhas, and deity, Indra, as in the last; the metre, Trishtubh.

Varga I.

1. We meditate, like Angiras, an acceptable address to that powerful and praise-deserving Indra, who is to be adored, by his worshippers, (with prayers) of efficacy, to bring him to the ceremony. Let us repeat a prayer to the celebrated leader of all.

^{*} The legend relates, that a king named Swaśwa, or the lord of good (su) horses (aśwa), being desirous of a son, worshipped Súrya, who, himself, was born as the son of the king. At a subsequent period, in some dispute between him and the Riski Etaśa, Indra took part with the latter.

- 2. Do you, priests, offer, to the vast and most powerful Indra, earnest veneration, a chant fit to be sung aloud; for, through him, our forefathers, the Angirasas, worshipping him, and knowing the footmarks, recovered (the stolen) cattle.
- 3. When the search was set on foot by Indra and the Angirasas, Saramá secured food for her young. Then Brihaspatic slew the devourer, and rescued the kine; and the gods, with the cattle, proclaimed their joy aloud.
- 4. Powerful INDRA, who art to be gratified with a laudatory and well-accented hymn by the seven priests, whether engaged for nine months, or for ten,^d b When Indra desired the bitch Saramá to go in search of the stolen cattle, she consented to do so, only on condition that the milk of the cows should be given to her young ones, which Indra promised.

^{*} The expression is ángúshyam * Sáma, a Sáma fit to be recited aloud,—ághoshyayogyam; such as the Rathantaras, and other prayers, which are usually considered portions of the Sáma Veda. But the commentator understands Sáma, in this place, to mean, singing or chanting of the Richas:—Rikshu yad gánam tasya sámetyákhyá.

[°] Brihaspati is here used as a synonym of Indra, the protector or master (pati) of the great ones (brihatám),—the gods.

d Sáyaña identifies the priests (vipras) with the Angirasas, who, he says, are of two orders,—those who conduct sacrifices for nine months, and those who conduct them for ten. He cites the Nirukta, for the confirmation of this (XI., 19): but the meaning of Yáska's interpretation of the word navagwá is doubtful, us navagati may mean, 'that one whose course or condition is new,' better than 'for nine.' Another explanation which he suggests,—navaand desirous of (safe) protection, thou hast terrified, by thy voice, the divisible fructifying cloud.

- 5. Destroyer of foes, praised by the Angirasas, thou hast scattered the darkness with the dawn and with the rays of the sun: thou hast made straight the elevations of the earth: thou hast strengthened the foundations of the ethereal region.
- Varga II.
- 6. The deeds of that graceful Indra are most admirable: his exploits are most glorious, in that he has replenished the four rivers of sweet water, spread over the surface of the earth.
- 7. He, who is not to be attained by violence, but (is easily propitiated) by those who praise him with nitagati,—is still less intelligible, for navanita usually means fresh butter. The seven priests are said to be Medhátithi and other Rishis of the race of Angiras.

^{*} Adrim * phaligam * valam. The last is here explained, cloud; the first, that which is to be divided by the thunderbolt; and the second, that which yields fruit, or causes grain to grow by its rain. Or the three words may be considered as substantives; adri implying, as usual, a mountain; phaliga, a cloud; and vala, an Asura; all of whom were terrified by Indra's voice or thunder.

^b No specification of these four is given, beyond their being the Ganges and others.

^c The term ayásya has perplexed the Scholiast. It may be derived from yása, effort,—that which is not attainable by effort; that is, according to one interpretation, not to be overcome in battle: whence Rosen has rendered it by invictus. It is contrasted, apparently, with what follows, and which requires the insertion of susádhya,—easily to be reached, or influenced, by praises, and the like. Other etymologies are suggested; but they are still less satisfactory.

sacred hymns, parted twofold the eternal and united (spheres of heaven and earth). The graceful INDRA cherished the heaven and earth, like the sun in the august and most excellent sky.

- 8. (Night and dawn), of various complexion, repeatedly born, but ever-youthful, have traversed, in their revolutions, alternately, from a remote period, earth and heaven,—night, with her dark, dawn, with her luminous, limbs.
- 9. The son of strength, assiduous in good works, diligent in pious acts, retains his ancient friendship (for his votary). Thou, (Indra,) providest, within the yet immature cows, whether black or red, the mature and glossy milk.
 - 10. From a remote time the contiguous, unshifting, and unwearied fingers practise, with (all) their energies, many thousand acts of devotion (towards Indra); and, like the wives (of the gods), the protecting sisters worship him who is without shame.

^a This seems to intimate, that the fingers were employed in the performance of what is, at present, termed mudrá, certain intertwinings and gesticulations accompanying prayer: the commentary understands it as merely their employment in acts of worship or homage. That the practice is not altogether modern appears from the paintings of the Ajunta caves, several of the persons of which are, evidently, performing the finger-gesticulations.

b Patnih * swasárah may mean only the protecting or propitiatory and moving epithets of avanih, fingers. Janayo na is the expression for 'like wives;' i.e., says Sáyaña, devánám,—of the gods.

Varga III.

- 11. Beautiful Indra, who art to be praised with holy hymns, the pious who are desirous of holy rites, those who are anxious for riches, and those who are wise, repair to thee, with veneration. Powerful Indra, their minds adhere to thee, as affectionate wives to a loving husband.
- 12. Beautiful INDRA, the riches that have long since been held in thy hands have suffered neither loss nor diminution. Thou, INDRA, art illustrious, addicted to good works, and resolute. Enrich us, thou who art diligent in action, by thy acts.
- 13. Mighty Indra, Nodhas, the son of Gotama, has composed, for us, this new hymn, (addressed) to thee, who hast been for ever, who harnessest thy coursers (to thy car), and art the sure guide (of all). May he who has acquired wealth by pious acts come hither, quickly, in the morning.

SÚRTA VI. (LXIII.)

Rishi, deity, and metre, as before.

Varga IV.

1. Indra, thou art the mighty one who, becoming manifest in (the hour of) alarm, didst sustain, by thy energies, heaven and earth.* Then, through fear of thee, all creatures, and the mountains, and all other vast and solid things, trembled, like the (tremulous) rays of the sun.

^{*} The term explained, by the Scholiast, balaih, by forces, or strength, is, in the text, sushmaih, the driers up, that is, it is said, of enemies. Of the circumstance alluded to we have no other explanation than that Indra became manifest, and sustained earth and heaven, when they were filled with fear of an Asura. Perhaps Vritra is intended: but the passage is obscure.

- 2. When, INDRA, thou harnessest thy variously-moving horses, thy praiser places thy thunderbolt in thy hands, wherewith, accomplisher of undesired acts, thou assailest thine enemies, and, glorified by many, destroyest their numerous cities.
- 3. Thou, INDRA, the best of all beings, the assailer and humiliator (of thy foes), the chief of the RIBHUS, the friend of man, the subduer of enemies, didst aid the young and illustrious Kutsa, and slewest S'ushna, in the deadly and close-fought fight.
- 4. Thou, verily, didst animate him to (acquire) such (renown) as that which, sender of rain and wielder of the thunderbolt, thou (didst acquire), when thou slewest VRITRA, and when, munificent hero, who easily conquerest (thy foes), thou didst put to flight the *Dasyus*⁴ in battle.

Aviharyatakratu. Rosen has desideratas res faciens; but the Scholiast has aprepsitakarman, that is, he does actions undesired by his foes.

b So the Scholiast explains Ribhukshá,—Ribhúńám adhipatih: or it may mean, he who abides in the Ribhus,—teshu kṛitanivásah: but he understands Ribhu, here, to mean a wise man, a sage (medhávin).

^o These names have occurred before, in the same relation (see p. 137).

The Dasyus are described as the enemies of Kutsa,—Kutsa-syopakshayatarah. Agreeably to the apparent sense of Dasyu,—barbarian, or one not Hindu,—Kutsa would be a prince who bore an active part in the subjugation of the original tribes of India.

5. Do thou, INDRA, who art unwilling to harm any resolute (mortal), set open all the quarters (of the horizon) to the horses of us who praise thee, (when we are exposed) to the aversion (of our enemies); and, wielder of the thunderbolt, demolish our foes, as with a club.

Varga V.

- 6. Men invoke thee, such as thou art, in the thick-thronged and wealth-bestowing conflict. May this thy succour, powerful Indra, ever be granted, in war, worthy to be enjoyed (by warriors) in battle.
- 7. Indra, wielder of the thunderbolt, warring on behalf of Purukutsa, thou didst overturn the seven cities; thou didst cut off, for Sudás, the wealth of Anhu, as if (it had been a tuft) of sacred grass, and didst give it to him, O king, ever satiating thee (with oblations).
- 8. Increase, divine Indra, for us, throughout the earth, abundant food,—(that it may be as plentiful) as water,—by which, hero, thou bestowest upon us (existence), as thou causest water to flow on every side.
 - 9. Praises have been offered to thee, INDRA, by ^a Even although hostile to him. That is, Indra is, in himself, indifferent to those who are opposed to him, and, if he undertakes their destruction, it is not on his own behalf, but in defence of his friends and worshippers, as in the case of Kutsa, alluded to in the preceding stanza.

b Purukutsa is called a Rishi; Sudás, a king (see p. 127); and Anhu, an Asura: but no further information is given in the comment.

the sons of Gotama: (they have been) uttered, with reverence, (to thee), borne (hither) by thy steeds. Grant us various sorts of food. May he who has acquired wealth by pious acts come hither, quickly, in the morning.

SUKTA VII. (LXIV.)

The Rishi is the same; the deities are the MARUTS, collectively; the metre is Jagati, except in the last verse, in which it is Trishtubh.

- 1. Offer, Nodhas, earnest praise to the company Varga VI. of the Maruts, the senders of rain and ripeners of fruit, deserving of adoration. Composed, and with folded hands, I utter the praises conceived in my mind, which are efficacious in sacred rites, (and flow readily) as the waters.
- 2. They were born, handsome and vigorous, from the sky, the sons of RUDRA, the conquerors of their foes, pure from sin, and purifying (all), radiant as suns, powerful as evil spirits, diffusers of rain-drops, and of fearful forms.

^{*} Rudrasya maryáh: literally, the mortals, or men, of Rudra. But the Scholiast observes, the Maruts are immortal; and the term must, therefore, imply sons, agreeably to another text, A te pitar Marutám sumnam etu,—May he obtain thy favour, father of the Maruts: [II., XXXIII., 1: see Vol. II., p. 289] or, as in stanza twelve, where the Maruts are called, collectively, Rudrasya súnuh,—the son of Rudra.

b Satwáno na. Satwánah is explained, Parameśwarasya bhútagańah,—the troop of demons attendant on Parameśwara or Siva.

- 3. Youthful Rudras, and undecaying, destructive of those who do not worship (the gods), of unobstructed progress, and immoveable as mountains, they are desirous of granting (the wishes of the worshipper), and, by their strength, agitate all substances, whether of heaven or of earth.
- 4. They decorate their persons with various ornaments; they have placed, for elegance, brilliant (garlands) on their breasts; lances are borne upon their shoulders, and, with them and their own strength, have they been born, leaders, from the sky.
- 5. Enriching their worshipper, agitating the clouds, devourers of foes, they create the winds and lightnings by their power. The circumambient and agitating Maruts milk heavenly udders, and sprinkle the earth with the water.

Varga VII.

- 6. The munificent MARUTS scatter the nutritious waters, as priests, at sacrifices, the clarified butter. As grooms lead forth a horse, they bring forth, for its rain, the fleet-moving cloud, and milk it, thundering and unexhausted.
- 7. Vast, possessed of knowledge, bright-shining, like mountains in stability, and quick in motion, you, like elephants, break down the forests, when you put vigour into your ruddy (mares).
- 8. The most wise MARUTS roar like lions: the all-knowing are graceful as the spotted deer, destroying (their foes), delighting (their worshippers): of deadly strength in their anger, they come, with their antelopes, and their arms, (to defend the sacrificer) against interruption.

- 9. MARUTS, who are distinguished in troops, who are benevolent to men, who are heroes, and whose strength is deadly in your anger, you make heaven and earth resound (at your coming); your (glory) sits in the seat-furnished chariots, conspicuous as (a beautiful) form, or as the lovely lightning.
- 10. The Maruts, who are all-knowing, co-dwellers with wealth, combined with strength, loud-sounding, repellers of foes, of infinite prowess, whose weapon (of offence) is Indra, and who are leaders (of men), hold, in their hands, the shaft.
- 11. Augmenters of rain, they drive, with golden Varga VIII. wheels, the clouds asunder; as elephants (in a herd, break down the trees in their way). They are honoured with sacrifices, visitants of the hall of offering, spontaneous assailers (of their foes), subverters of what are stable, immoveable themselves, and wearers of shining weapons.
- 12. We invoke, with praise, the foe-destroying, all-purifying, water-shedding, all-surveying band of Maruts, the offspring of Rudra. (Priests), to b Apathyo na; literally, "like that which is produced, or occurs, on the road," leaving a wide range for explanation. Sayana, therefore, proposes another meaning: "like a chariot which drives over and crushes sticks and straws on the way."

^a Prishatibhih, with the spotted deer, which are the vahanas, or steeds, of the Maruts.

obtain prosperity, have recourse to the dustraising and powerful band of MARUTS, receiving libations from sacred vessels, and showering down (benefits).

- 13. The man whom, Maruts, you defend, with your protection, quickly surpasses all men in strength: with his horses, he acquires food, and, with his men, riches: he performs the required worship; and he prospers.
- 14. Maruts, grant to your wealthy (worshippers, a son), be eminent for good works, invincible in battle, illustrious, the annihilator (of his adversaries), the seizer of wealth, the deserver of praise, and all-discerning. May we cherish such a son, and such a grandson, for a hundred winters.
- 15. Grant us, Maruts, durable riches, attended by posterity, and mortifying to our enemies,— (riches) reckoned by hundreds and thousands, and ever-increasing. May they who have acquired wealth by pious acts come hither, quickly, in the morning.

^{*} Rijishinam, which Rosen renders hostes vincentem, and M. Langlois, victorieuse: but the commentary offers no such signification. The Maruts, it is said, are worshipped at the third or evening ceremonial, according to the text. Rijisham abhishunwanti,—"They (the priests) pour the Soma juice into the vessel." Risjiham, in its ordinary sense, is a frying-pan; but here it may mean any sacrificial vessel.

^b Putra, son, is supplied by the comment: the concluding phrases authorize the addition.

ANUVÁKA XII.

SÚKTA I. (LXV.)

The deity is Agni; the Rishi, Parasara, son of Sakti, the son of Vasishtha; the metre is termed Dwipada Virat.

- 1. The firm and placid divinities followed thee, Agni, by thy foot-marks, when hiding in the hollow (of the waters), be like a thief (who has stolen) an animal,—thee, claiming oblations, and bearing them to the gods. All the deities who are entitled to worship sit down near to thee.
- 2. The gods followed the traces of the fugitive: the search spread everywhere, and earth became like heaven: the waters swelled, (to conceal him), who was much enlarged by praise, and was manifested, as it were, in the womb in the waters, the source of sacrificial food.°
- 3. Agni is grateful as nourishment, vast as the earth, productive (of vegetable food), as a mountain,

Varga IX.

^{*} Each stanza is divided into half; and each two padas are considered as forming a complete stanza: hence this hymn and the five following are said to be daśaroha, or to have ten stanzas each; whilst, in fact, they have only five.

b Guhá chatantam. The first term, usually, 'a cave,' is said to apply either to the depth of the waters, or to the hollow of the Aśwattha tree, in both of which Agni hid himself for a season.

c A fish revealed to the gods where Agni had hidden; as, according to the Taittiriyas, "He, concealing himself, entered into the waters: the gods wished for a messenger to him: a fish discovered him,"—Sa niláyata, so 'pah právisat: tam deváh praisham aichchhan: tam matsyah prábravít.

delightful as water: he is like a horse urged to a charge in battle, and like flowing waters. Who can arrest him?

- 4. He is the kind kinsman of the waters, like a brother to his sisters: he consumes the forest, as a $R\acute{a}j\acute{a}$ (destroys) his enemies: when excited by the wind, he traverses the woods, and shears the hairs of the earth.
- 5. He breathes amidst the waters, like a sitting swan: awakened at the dawn, he restores, by his operations, consciousness to men: he is a creator, like Soma: born from the waters, (where he lurked,) like an animal with coiled-up limbs, he became enlarged; and his light (spread) afar.

^{*} The epithets are, in the text, attached to the objects of comparison, although equally applicable to Agni: thus, he is pushtir na rańwa,—like grateful nourishment; kshitir na prithwi,—like the vast earth; &c. Several of the comparisons admit of various interpretations; as the first may signify the increase of desired fruits or rewards, as the consequence of sacrifices with fire: in no case does it import the frugum maturitas of Rosen.

b The fruit, flowers, grasses, shrubs, and the like, termed, in the text, romá prithivyáh.

o Somo na vedháh; in like manner as Soma creates or causes useful plants to grow, so Agni creates, or extracts from them, their nutritive faculty. The Agni here alluded to is the fire of digestion, the heat of the stomach: Agnir annádo 'nnapatih,—Agni is the eater and sovereign of food; and, in the Vájasaneyi Yajush, we have Etávad vá idam annam chaivánnádas cha Soma evánnam Agnir annádah,—Inasmuch as there is food and feeder, so Soma is the food, and the feeder is Agni.

Varga X.

SÚRTA II. (LXVI.)

Deity, Rishi, and metre, the same.

- 1. Agni, who is like wondrous wealth, like the all-surveying Sun, like vital breath, like a well-conducted son, like a rider-bearing steed, like a milk-yielding cow, who is pure and radiant, consumes the forests.
- 2. Like a secure mansion, he protects property: he (nourishes people), like barley: he is the conqueror of (hostile) men: he is like a Rishi, the praiser (of the gods), eminent amongst (devout) persons. As a spirited horse (goes to battle), he repairs, delighted, to the hall of sacrifice. May he bestow upon us food.
- 3. Agni, of unattainable brightness, is like a vigilant sacrificer: he is an ornament to all (in the sacrificial chamber), like a woman in a dwelling. When he shines, with wonderful lustre, he is like the white (sun), or like a golden chariot amongst men, resplendent in battle.
- 4. He terrifies (his adversaries), like an army sent (against an enemy), or like the bright-pointed shaft of an archer. Agni, as Yama, is all that is born; as Yama, all that will be born.

^{*} As the performer of a sacrifice takes care that nothing vitiates the rite, so Agni defends it from interruption by Rákshasas.

b Yamo ha jato, yamo janitwam, is the phraseology of the text, and is somewhat obscure. According to the Scholiast, yama, here, has its etymological purport only, "he who gives the desired object

He is the lover of maidens, the husband of wives.

5. Let us approach that blazing AGNI with animal and vegetable offerings,° as cows hasten to their stalls. He has tossed about his flames (in every direction), like running streams of water: the rays commingle (with the radiance) visible in the sky.

to the worshippers,"—yachchhati dadáti stotribhyahkámán, in which sense it is a synonym of Agni,—yamo'gnir uchyate. Or it may be applied to him as one of the twins (yama), from the simultaneous birth of Indra and Agni, according to Yáska. Játa is said to imply all existing beings; janitwa, those that will exist: both are identical with Agni, as Yama, from the dependence of all existence, past, present, or future, upon worship with fire.

- * Because they cease to be maidens, when the offering to fire, the essential part of the nuptial ceremony, is completed.
- b The wife bearing a chief part in oblations to fire. Or a legend is alluded to, of Soma, who, having obtained—it does not appear how—a maiden, gave her to the Gandharva Viśwávasu: he transferred her to Agni, who gave her to a mortal husband, and bestowed upon her wealth and offspring. The whole of this stanza is similarly commented upon in the Nirukta, X., 21.
- c So the Commentator explains the terms charáthá and vasatyá, invocations prompted by minds purified by offerings of moveable things, that is, animals; or of immoveable things, as rice, and the like: tatprabhavair hridayádibhih sádhyáhutih; or, pasuprabhavahridayádisádhanayáhutyá.

SÚRTA III. (LXVII.)

- 1. Born in the woods, the friend of man, AGNI Varga XI. protects his worshipper, as a Rájá favours an able man. Kind as a defender, prosperous as a performer of (good) works, may he, the invoker of the gods, the bearer of oblations, be propitious.
- 2. Holding, in his hand, all (sacrificial) wealth, and hiding in the hollows (of the waters), he filled the gods with alarm. The leaders, (the gods), the upholders of acts, then recognize Agni, when they have recited the prayers conceived in the heart.
- 3. Like the unborn (sun), he sustains the earth and the firmament, and props up the heaven with true prayers. Agni, in whom is all sustenance, cherish the places that are grateful to animals; repair (to the spots) where there is no pasturage.

^{*} Havyaváh, here used generally, is, properly, the bearer of oblations to the gods; the Veda recognizing, besides the usual fires, three Agnis: Havyaváh or Havyaváhana, that which conveys offerings to the gods; Kavyaváh, which conveys them to the Pitris, or Manes; and Saharakshas, that which receives those offered to the Rákshasas.

b According to the Taittiriyas, the gods, alarmed at the obliquity of the region of the sun, and fearing that it might fall, propped it up with the metres of the Veda,—an act here attributed to Agni.

[°] Guhá guham gah. Rosen has de specu in specum procedas; but guhá here means, apparently, any arid or rugged tract unfit

- 4. He who knows AGNI, hidden in the hollows; he who approaches him, as the maintainer of truth; those who, performing worship, repeat his praises; to them, assuredly, he promises affluence.
- 5. The wise, (first) honouring Agni, as they do a dwelling, worship him who implants their (peculiar) virtues in herbs, as progeny in their parents, and who, the source of knowledge and of all sustenance, (abides) in the domicile of the waters.

SÚKTA IV. (LXVIII.)

The Rishi, &c., unchanged.

Varga XII.

1. The bearer (of the oblations), (AGNI), mixing them (with other ingredients), ascends to heaven, and clothes all things, moveable and immoveable, and the nights themselves, (with light), radiant amongst the gods, and, in himself alone, comprehending the virtues of all these (substances).°

2. When, divine AGNI, thou art born, living, for pasture, or, as the commentary says, sancharáyogyasthánam,—a place unfit for grazing, and which Agni may, therefore, scorch up with impunity.

^a In building a house, worship is first offered to the edifice; and it is then put to use. So, Agni is to be first adored, and then employed in any sacrificial rites.

b That is, the world, made up of moveable and immoveable things.

[°] Or it may be rendered, he alone surpasses the glories (mahitwá) of all these gods; as Rosen has it, excellit deus deorum magnitudine.

from the dry wood, (by attrition), then all (thy worshippers) perform the sacred ceremony, and obtain, verily, true divinity, by praising thee, who art immortal, with hymns that reach thee.

- 3. Praises are addressed to him who has repaired (to the solemnity); oblations (are offered) to him who has gone (to the sacrifice); in him is all sustenance; (and to him) have all (devout persons) performed (the customary) rites. Do thou, Agni, knowing (the thoughts of the worshipper), grant riches to him who presents to thee oblations, or who wishes (to be able to present them).
- 4. Thou hast abided with the descendants of MANU, as the invoker (of the gods): thou art, indeed, the lord of their possessions. They have desired (of thee) procreative vigour in their bodies; and, associated with their own excellent offspring, they contemplate (all things), undisturbed.
- 5. Hastening to obey the commands of AGNI, like sons (obedient to the orders) of a father, they celebrate his worship. Abounding in food, Agni sets open, before them, treasures that are the doors of sacrifice; and he who delights in the sacrificial chamber has studded the sky with constellations.

Súkta V. (LXIX.)

The same as the preceding.

1. White-shining (AGNI), like the (sun), the extinguisher of the dawn, is the illuminator (of all), and fills united (heaven and earth with light), like the lustre of the radiant (sun). Thou, as soon as manifested, hast pervaded all the world with devout acts, being (both) the father and son of the gods.^a

^{*} With mankind.

- 2. The wise, the humble, and discriminating Agni is the giver of flavour to food; as the udder of cows (gives sweetness to the milk). Invited (to the ceremony), he sits in the sacrificial chamber, diffusing happiness, like a benevolent man, amongst mankind.
- 3. He diffuses happiness in a dwelling, like a son (newly) born; he overcomes (opposing) men, like an animated charger. Whatever (divine) beings I may, along with other men, invoke (to the ceremony), thou, Agni, assumest all (their) celestial natures.
- 4. Never may (malignant spirits) interrupt those rites in which thou hast given the (hope of) reward to the persons (who celebrate them); for, should (such spirits) disturb thy worship, then, assisted by ^{*} Devánám pitá putrah san. The passage is also explained, the protector, either of the gods, or of the priests (ritwijám), and their messenger, that is, at their command, like a son: but the expressions are, probably, to be used in their literal sense, with a metaphorical application. Agni, as the bearer of oblations, may be said to give paternal support to the gods; whilst he is their son, as the presenter, to them, of sacrificial offerings.

b I.e., tattaddevatárúpo bhavati,—he becomes of the form, or nature, of that deity; as in the text Twam Agne Varuño jáyase, yat twam Mitro bhavasi, &c.,—Thou art born as Varuña, thou becomest Mitra. [V. III., 1: see Vol. III., p. 237.]

followers like thyself,* thou puttest the intruders to flight.

5. May AGNI, who is possessed of manifold light, like the extinguisher of the dawn, the granter of dwellings, and of cognizable form, consider (the desires of) this (his worshipper). (His rays), spontaneously bearing the oblation, open the doors (of the sacrificial chamber), and, all, spread through the visible heaven.

SÚKTA VI. (LXX.)

Rishi, &c. as before.

- 1. We solicit abundant (food). AGNI, who is to Varga XIV. be approached by meditation, and shines with pure light, pervades all holy rites, knowing well the acts that are addressed to the deities, and (those which regulate) the birth of the human race.
- 2. (They offer oblations) on the mountain, or in the mansion, to that Agni, who is within the waters, within woods, and within all moveable and immoveable things, immortal, and performing pious acts, like a benevolent (prince) among his people.

^{*} Samanair nribhih, - with equal leaders, or men; that is, with the Maruts.

b This phrase is, here, as well as in the first verse, usho na járah; the latter being explained by jaráyitri, the causer of decay. The sun obliterates the dawn by his superior radiance.

^c He is the garbha, the embryo, the internal germ of heat and life, in the waters, &c., all which depend, for existence, upon natural or artificial warmth.

- 3. Agni, the lord of night, grants riches to (the worshipper) who adores him with sacred hymns. Agni, who art omniscient, and knowest the origin of gods and men, protect all these (beings dwelling) upon earth.
- 4. Agni, whom many variously-tinted (mornings) and nights increase, whom, invested with truth, all moveable and immoveable things augment, has been propitiated, and is kindly seated at the holy rite, as the invoker (of the gods), and rendering all (pious) acts (productive) of reward.
- 5. Agni, confer excellence upon our valued cattle; and may all men bring us acceptable tribute. Offering, in many places, sacrifices to thee, men receive riches from thee, as (sons) from an aged father.
- 6. (May Agni), who is like one who succeeds (in his undertakings), and acquires (what he wishes for), who is like a warrior casting a dart, and resembles a fearful adversary, who is brilliant in combats, (be, to us, a friend).

^{*} Kshapávat,—having, or possessing, the night, as then especially bright and illuminating; as the text, Agneyi vai rátrih,—Night is characterized by Agni. So, also, in one of the mantras of the Agnyádheya ceremony, we have, Agnir jyotir, jyotir Agnih swáhá (Vájasaneya Sanhitá, p. 64). Or the term may be rendered, also, "capable of destroying" (the Rákshasas).

SÚKTA VII. (ĹXXI.)

The deity and Rishi are the same; but the metre is Trishtubh.

- 1. The contiguous fingers, loving the affectionate Varga XV. Agni, as wives love their own husbands, please him (with offered oblations), and honour him, who is entitled to honour, (with gesticulations), as the rays of light (are assiduous in the service) of the dawn, which is (at first,) dark, (then,) glimmering, and (finally,) radiant.
- 2. Our forefathers, the Angirasas, by their praises (of Agni), terrified the strong and daring devourer, (Pañi), by the sound. They made, for us, a path to the vast heaven, and obtained accessible day, the ensign of day, (ÁDITYA), and the cows (that had been stolen).
- 3. They secured him, (AGNI, in the sacrificial chamber); they made his worship the source of wealth; b whence opulent votaries preserve his fires, and practise his rights. Free from all (other) desire, assiduous in his adoration, and sustaining gods and men by their offerings, they come into his presence.c

b Aryah, explained dhanasya swáminah. It does not appear why Rosen renders it matrons.

^c This and the preceding stanza are corroborative of the share borne, by the Angirasas, in the organization, if not in the origination, of the worship of Fire.

- 4. When the diffusive vital air excites Agni, he becomes bright and manifest in every mansion; and the institutor of the rite, imitating Bhrigu, prevails on him to perform the function of messenger; as a prince who has become a friend sends an ambassador to his more powerful (conqueror).
- 5. When (the worshipper) offers an oblation to his great and illustrious protector, the grasping (Rakshas), recognizing thee, Agni, retires: but Agni, the archer, sends after him a blazing arrow from his dreadful bow; and the god bestows light upon his own daughter, (the dawn).

Mátariswan is a common name of Váyu, or Wind; but it is here said to mean the principal vital air (mukhyapráña), divided (vihrita) into the five airs so denominated, as in a dialogue between them, cited by the Scholiast: "To them said the Arishta breath, 'Be not astonished; for I, having made myself five-fold, and having arrested the arrow, sustain (life)."

- b Jenya, from jana, to be born; or it may be derived from ji, to conquer, and be rendered 'victorious;' as, according to the Taittiriyas, "the gods and Asuras were once engaged in combat: the former, being alarmed, entered into fire: therefore, they call Agni all the gods, who, having made him their shield, overcame the Asuras." So, in the Aitareya Bráhmaña, "the gods, having awoke Agni, and placed him before them, at the morning sacrifice, repulsed, with him in their van, the Asuras and Rákshasas, at the morning rite."

- 9. The Sun, who traverses, alone, the path of heaven, with the speed of thought, is, at once, lord of all treasures: the two kings, MITRA and VARUÑA, with bounteous hands, are the guardians of the precious ambrosia of our cattle.

SÚRTA VIII. (LXXII.)

Rishi, &c., as before.

Varga XVII.

- 1. Agni, holding, in his hands, many good things for men, appropriates the prayers addressed to the eternal creator. Agni is the lord of riches, quickly bestowing (on those who praise him) all golden (gifts).
- 2. All the immortals, and the unbewildered (Maruts), wishing for him who was (dear) to us as a son, and was everywhere around, discovered him not. Oppressed with fatigue, wandering on foot, and cognizant of his acts, they stopped at the last beautiful (hiding)-place of Agni.
- 3. Inasmuch, Agni, as the pure (Maruts) worshipped thee, (equally) pure, with clarified butter, for three years, therefore they acquired names worthy (to be repeated) at sacrifices, and, being regenerated, obtained celestial bodies.^c b I.e, Swátmábhimukham karoti,—he makes them present, or applicable, to himself. The creator is named Vedhas,—usually a name of Brahmá,—and is, here, associated with śaśwata, the eternal. This looks as if a first cause were recognized, distinct from Agni and the elemental deities, although, in a figurative sense, they are identified with it.

^{*} Which is tantamount to asking Agni to grant immortality,—amritatwam prayachchheti yavat.

o The next has only śuchayah, the pure: the Scholiast sup-

- 4. Those who are to be worshipped, (the gods), inquiring, between the expansive heaven and earth, (for Agni), recited (hymns) dedicated to Rudra. The troop of mortal (Maruts), with (Indra), the sharer of half the oblation, knowing where Agni was hiding, found him in his excellent retreat.
- 5. The gods, discovering thee, sat down, and, with their wives, paid reverential adoration to thee, plies Maruts, for whom, it is said, seven platters are placed at the Agnichayana ceremony: and they are severally invoked by the appellations I'driś, Anyádriś, Tádriś, Pratidriś, Mitah, Sammitah, and others. In consequence of this participation, with Agni, of sacrificial offerings, they exchanged their perishable, for immortal, bodies, and obtained heaven. The Maruts are, therefore, like the Ribhus,—deified mortals.

- also in verse two,—has already been explained in p. 3, note d. But we have, here, some further curious identifications, from which it appears that Rudra is Agni. The hymns of the gods are addressed to Agni, and are, therefore, termed Rudriyá; for Rudra is Agni, Rudro'gnih. The legend which is cited, in explanation, from the Taittiriya branch of the Yajush, relates, that, during a battle between the gods and Asuras, Agni carried off the wealth which the former had concealed. Detecting the theft, the gods pursued the thief, and forcibly recovered their treasure. Agni wept (arodit) at the loss, and was, thence, called Rudra.
- b The text has only martah, 'the mortal:' the Scholiast supplies Marudgańah.
- c Here, also, we have only the epithet nomadhitá, 'the half-sharer,' from noma, a half; to which, according to the Taittiriya school, Indra is entitled, at all sacrifices: the other half goes to all the gods:—Sarve devá eko'rdhah. Indra eka eváparo'rdhah.

upon their knees.^a Secure, on beholding their friend, of being protected, thy friends, the gods, abandoned the rest of their bodies in sacrifice.^b

- varga XVIII. 6. (Devout men), competent to offer sacrifices, have known the thrice seven mystic rites comprised in thee, and, with them, worshipped thee. Do thou, therefore, with like affection, protect their cattle.
 - therefore, with like affection, protect their cattle. and all that (belongs to them), moveable or stationary.
 - 7. Agni, who art cognizant of all things to be known, ever provide, for the subsistence of men, grief-alleviating (food). So shalt thou be the diligent bearer of oblations, and messenger of the gods, knowing the paths between (earth and heaven), by which they travel.
 - 8. The seven pure rivers that flow from heaven (are directed, Agni, by thee: by thee the priests), ^{*} Abhijnu; or it may be applied to Agni kneeling before them.

b So the text Devá vai yajnam atanwata,—The gods, verily, constituted the sacrifice. But the expression is, still, obscure, and refers to some legend, probably, which has not been preserved.

^o Guhyáni • • padá,—secret or mysterious steps, by which heaven is to be obtained; meaning the ceremonies of the Vedas. These are arranged in three classes, each consisting of seven, or: the Pákayajnas, those in which food of some kind is offered, as in the Aupásana, Homa, Vaiśwadeva, &c.; the Haviryajnas, those in which clarified butter is presented, as at the Agnyádheya, Darśa, Púrňamása, and others; and the Somayajnas, the principal part of which is the libation of the Soma juice, as the Agnishtoma, Atyagnishtoma, &c. All these are comprised in Agni, because they cannot be celebrated without fire.

skilled in sacrifices, knew the doors of the (cave where) the treasure (their cattle,) was concealed: for thee Saramá discovered the abundant milk of the kine, with which man, the progeny of Manus, still is nourished.

9. Thou hast been fed, (AGNI, with oblations), ever since the ADITYAS, devising a road to immortality, instituted all (the sacred rites) that secured them from falling, b and mother earth, ADITI, strove,

These circumstances are stated, in the text, absolutely, without any reference to the instrument, or agent. The Scholiast supplies "Agni, by thee, &c.;" but the completion of the ellipse is consistent with prevailing notions. The sun, nourished by burnt-offerings, is enabled to send down the rain which supplies the rivers; the Angirasas recovered their cattle, when carried off by Bala, through the knowledge obtained by holy sacrifices; and Indra sent Sarama on the search, when propitiated by oblations with fire. Hence, Agni may be considered as the prime mover in the incidents.

b It may be doubted if either of the former translators has given a correct version of this passage. Rosen has Qui cunctas luce destitutas per noctes stant: M. Langlois has Qui s'élèvent, • • assurant la marche de (l'astre) voyageur. The text has ye visuá swapatyáni, interpreted, by Sáyaña, śobhanány apatanahetubhútáni—those which were the prosperous causes of not falling; that is to say, certain sacred acts, which secured, to the Adityas, their station in heaven; or, that immortality the way to which they had made or devised. This interpretation is based upon a Taittiriya text: "The Adityas, desirous of heaven (suvarga, or swarga), said, 'Let us go down to the earth:' they beheld, there, that (shattrinśadrátra) rite of thirty-six nights: they secured it, and sacrificed with it." It is to this, and a similar rite of fourteen nights, connected with the with her magnitude, to uphold (the world), along with her mighty sons.

10. (The offerers of oblations) have placed, in this (AGNI), the graceful honours (of the ceremony), and the two portions of clarified butter that are the two eyes (of the sacrifice). Then the immortals come from heaven; and thy bright flames, AGNI, spread in all directions, like rushing rivers; and the gods perceive it, (and rejoice).

SÚKTA IX. (LXXIII.)

The Rishi, deity, and metre, are the same.

varga XIX. 1. AGNI, like patrimonial wealth, is the giver of food: he is a director, like the instructions of one learned in scripture: he rests in the sacrificial chamber, like a welcome guest; and, like an officiating priest, he brings prosperity on the house of the worshipper.

ayanas, or 'comings,' of the Adityas, that allusion is made. Some reference to solar revolutions may be intended; although it is not obvious what can be meant, as no such movement is effected by thirty-six nights or days; and the Scholiast terms them karmáñi, 'acts or ceremonies.' A tasthuh is also explained, they made or instituted. A * * swapatyáni tasthuh means, according to him, chaturdaśarátrashattrinśadrátrádityánám ayanádini karmáñi * * kritavantah,—they made the rites, or acts, which were the ayanas and others, of the Adityas, (and which were for) thirty-six or fourteen nights.

An expression found, also, in another text: or there are, as it were, two eyes of a sacrifice, which are the two portions of the clarified butter.

- 2. He, who is like the divine Sun, who knows the truth (of things), preserves, by his actions, (his votaries), in all encounters. Like nature, he is unchangeable, and, like soul, b is the source of happiness. He is ever to be cherished.
- 3. He, who, like the divine (Sun), is the supporter of the universe, abides on earth, like a prince, (surrounded by) faithful friends. In his presence men sit down, like sons in the dwelling of a parent; and (in purity, he resembles) an irreproachable and beloved wife.
- 4. Such as thou art, Agni, men preserve thee, constantly kindled, in their dwellings, in secure places, and offer, upon thee, abundant (sacrificial) food. Do thou, in whom is all existence, be the bearer of riches, (for our advantage).
- 5. May thy opulent worshippers, Agni, obtain (abundant) food: may the learned, (who praise thee) and offer thee (oblations), acquire long life: may we gain, in battles, booty from our foes,-presenting their portion to the gods, for (the acquisition of) renown.
- 6. The cows, loving (AGNI, who has come to the Varga XX. hall of sacrifice), sharing his splendour, have brought.

Amati, the term of the text, is explained rupa or swarupa, peculiar form or nature. As this is, essentially, the same in all the modifications of earth, or any other element, so Agni is one and the same in all the sacrifices performed with fire.

b As soul is the seat and source of all happiness, so Agni, as the chief agent of sacrifice, is the main cause of felicity, both here and hereafter.

with full udders, (their milk,) to be drunk. The rivers, soliciting his good will, have flowed from a distance, in the vicinity of the mountain.

- 7. (The gods), who are entitled to worship, soliciting thy good will, have entrusted to thee, resplendent Agni, the (sacrificial) food; and, (for the due observance of sacred rites), they have made the night and morning of different colours,—or black and purple.
- 8. May we, mortals, whom thou hast directed (to the performance of sacrifices), for the sake of riches, become opulent. Filling heaven and earth, and the firmament, (with thy radiance), thou protectest the whole world, like a (sheltering) shade.*
- 9. Defended, Agni, by thee, may we destroy the horses (of our enemies), by (our) horses; their men, by (our) men; their sons, by (our) sons: and may our sons, learned, and inheritors of ancestral wealth, live for a hundred winters.
- 10. May these our praises, sapient Agni, be grateful to thee, both in mind and heart. May we be competent to detain thy well-supporting wealth,—offering, upon thee, their share of the (sacrificial) food to the gods.

As anything affording shade keeps off the heat of the sun, so Agni guards the world against affliction.

ANUVÁKA XIII.

SÚKTA I. (LXXIV.)

The deity is Agni; the Rishi, Gotama, son of Rahúgaña; the metre, Gáyatri.

- 1. Hastening to the sacrifice, let us repeat a Varga XXI. prayer to AGNI, who hears us from afar;
- 2. Who, existing of old, has preserved wealth, for the sacrificer, when malevolent men are assembled together.
- 3. Let men praise AGNI, as soon as generated, the slayer of VRITRA, and the winner of booty in many a battle.
- 4. (The sacrificer), in whose house thou art the messenger of the gods, whose offering thou conveyest for their food, and whose sacrifice thou renderest acceptable,
- 5. Him, Angiras, son of strength, men call fortunate in his sacrifice, his deity, his oblations.
- 6. Bring hither, radiant Agni, the gods, to (re- varga XXII. ceive) our praise, and our oblations for their food.
- 7. Whenever thou goest, AGNI, on a mission of the gods, the neighing of the horses of thy (swift-) moving chariot, however audible, is not heard.
- 8. He who was formerly subject to a superior, having been protected, Agni, by thee, now stands in thy presence, as an offerer (of oblations), without bashfulness, and supplied with food.

^{*} Vritra may be here understood, an enemy in general; or, Agni may be identified with Indra.

9. Verily, divine AGNI, thou art desirous of bestowing, upon the offerer of oblations) to the gods, ample (wealth), brilliant and giving vigour.

SÚRTA II. (LXXV.)

Rishi, deity, and metre, as before.

- varga XXIII. 1. Attend to our most earnest address, propitiatory of the gods, accepting our oblations in thy mouth.
 - 2. And then, most wise Agni, chief of the Angirasas, may we address (to thee) an acceptable and gratifying prayer.
 - 3. Who, AGNI, amongst men, is thy kinsman? Who is worthy to offer thee sacrifice? Who, indeed, art thou? And where dost thou abide?
 - 4. Worship, for us, MITRA and VARUÑA; worship, for us, all the gods; (celebrate) a great sacrifice; be present in thine own dwelling.

SÚKTA III. (LXXVI.)

Rishi and deity as before: the metre is Trishfubh.

varga XXIV. 1. What approximation of the mind, AGNI, to thee can be accomplished for our good? What can a hundred encomiums (effect)? Who, by sacrifices, has obtained thy might? With what intent may we offer thee (oblations)?

^a That is, it is not possible to offer sacrifice, praise, or prayer, that shall be worthy of Agni.

- 2. Come, Agni, hither: invoker (of the gods), sit down: be our preceder; for thou art irresistible. May the all-expansive heaven and earth defend thee, that thou mayest worship the gods to their great satisfaction.
- 3. Utterly consume all the Rákshasas, Agni; and be the protector of our sacrifices against interruption. Bring hither the guardian of the Soma juice, (INDRA), with his steeds, that we may show hospitality to the giver of good.
- 4. I invoke (thee), who art the conveyer (of oblations), with thy flames, with a hymn productive of progeny (to the worshipper). Sit down here, with the gods; and do thou, who art deserving of worship, discharge the office of Hotri, or of Potri, and awaken us, thou who art the depositary and generator of riches.
- 5. As, at the sacrifice of the holy Manus, thou, a sage amongst sages, didst worship the gods with oblations, so, also, Agni, veracious invoker of the gods, do thou to-day (present the oblations) with an exhilarating ladle.

SÚRTA IV. (LXXVII.)

Rishi, &c. as before.

1. What (oblations) may we offer to Agni? Varga XXV.

^{*} In the chamber where burnt-offerings are presented.

b Somapati, which is a rather unusual appellative of Indra. The latter name is not in the text; but the deity is indicated by haribhyám, his two steeds.

What praise is addressed to the luminous (AGNI), that is agreeable to the gods,—that AGNI who is immortal, and observant of truth, who is the invoker of the gods, the performer of sacrifices, and who, (present) amongst men, conveys oblations to the deities?

- 2. Bring hither, with praises, him who is most constant in sacrifices, observant of truth, and the invoker (of the gods); for Agni, when he repairs to the gods, on the part of man, knows those (who are to be worshipped), and worships them with reverence.
- 3. For he is the performer of rites; he is the destroyer and reviver (of all things); and, like a friend, he is the donor of unattained wealth. All men reverencing the gods, and approaching the well-looking Agni, repeat his name first, in holy rites.
- 4. May Agni, who is the chief director of sacrifices, and the destroyer of enemies, accept our praise and worship, with oblations; and may those who are affluent with great wealth, who are endowed with strength, and by whom the sacrificial food has been prepared, be desirous to offer adoration.

[•] The expression of the text is manasá, 'with the mind;' but the Scholiast reads namasá, 'with reverence,' asserting that the letters n and m are transposed.

b The words are marya and sádhw: the Commentator explains the first, the killer or extirpator of all; and the latter, the producer.

5. Thus has AGNI, the celebrator of sacrifices, and by whom all things are known, been hymned by the pious descendants of Gotama. To them has he given the bright Soma juice to drink, along with the sacrificial food; and, gratified by our devotion, he obtains nutriment (for himself).

Súkta V. (LXXVIII.)

The Rishi and deity are the same: the metre is Gáyatri.

- 1. Knower and beholder of all that exists, Varga XXVI. Gotama celebrates thee, Agni, with praise: we praise thee, repeatedly, with commendatory (hymns).
- 2. To thee, that (AGNI) whom GOTAMA, desirous of riches, worships with praise, we offer adoration, with commendatory (hymns).
- 3. We invoke thee, such as thou art, the giver of abundant food, in like manner as did Angiras: we praise thee, repeatedly, with commendatory (hymns).
- 4. We praise thee, repeatedly, with commendatory (hymns), who art the destroyer of VRITRA, and who puttest the Dasyus to flight.
- 5. The descendants of RAHÚGAÑA have recited sweet speeches to Agni: we praise him, repeatedly, with commendatory (hymns).

[•] The word is Gotamáh, in the plural; whence Rosen renders it Gotamidæ. The Scholiast limits it to the sense of the singular, asserting that the plural is used honorifically only.

Mantras is supplied by the commentator: the text has only dyumnaih, 'with bright,' or those manifesting Agni's worth.

Súkta VI. (LXXIX.)

The Rishi is the same, Gotama: the hymn consists of four Trichas, or triads: the deity of the first is the Agni of the middle region, the ethereal or electric fire, or lightning; the deity of the other triads is Agni, in his general character: the metre of the first of them is Trishtubh; of the second, Ushiih; and, of the last two, Gáyatri.

▼arga XXVII.

- 1. The golden-haired AGNI is the agitator of the clouds, when the rain is poured forth, and, moving with the swiftness of the wind, shines with a bright radiance. The mornings know not (of the showers), like honest (people), who, provided with food, are intent upon their own labours.
- 2. Thy falling (rays), accompanied by the moving (Maruts), strike against (the cloud): the black shedder of rain has roared: when this is done, (the shower) comes, with delightful and smiling (drops), the rain descends, the clouds thunder.
- 3. When this (the lightning, AGNI,) nourishes the world with the milk of the rain, and conducts it, by the most direct ways, to (the enjoyment of) ^{*} Agni, in his manifestation of lightning, takes part in the production of rain, by piercing the clouds. The dawn is not concerned in the operation; but this is said, not to depreciate the excellence of Ushas, but to enhance that of Agni.

b Satyáh, true, sincere: there is no substantive; but prajáh, people, or progeny, is supplied by the commentary. Rosen substitutes mulieres, satyáh being feminine: but so also is prajáh.

o Or uses,-as drinking, washing, bathing, and the like.

- 4. Agni, son of strength, lord of food and of cattle, give us abundant sustenance, thou who knowest all that exists.
- 5. He, the blazing AGNI, who is wise, and the granter of dwellings, is to be praised by our hymns. O thou whose mouth (glows) with many (flames), shine (propitiously, so) that food-providing wealth may be ours!
- 6. Shining Agni, drive off (all disturbers of the rite), either by thyself, or (thy servants), whether by day or by night: sharp-visaged AGNI, destroy the Rakshasas entirely.
- 7. Agni, who, in all rites, art to be praised, guard us with thy protection, (propitiated) by the recitation of the metrical hymn.b

Varga XXVIII.

- 8. Grant us, AGNI, riches that dispel poverty, that are desirable (to all), and cannot be taken (from us), in all encounters (with our foes).
 - 9. Grant us, AGNI, for our livelihood, wealth,

Purvańika; from puru, many, and anika, face or mouth: flames are understood, agreeably to a common name of Agni, Jwálájihwa, flame-tongued. Rosen has, evidently, read the mukha of the commentary, sukha, and explains purvanika, multis gaudiis fruens.

b Gáyatra; either a portion of the Sáma, so termed, or the Gdyatri metre, according to the Scholiast.

with sound understanding, conferring happiness, and sustaining (us) through life.

- 10. Gotama, desirous of wealth, offers, to the sharp-flaming Agni, pure prayers and praises.
- 11. May he, AGNI, who annoys us, whether nigh or afar, perish; and do thou be, to us, (propitious) for our advancement.
- 12. The thousand-eyed, all-beholding Agni drives away the Rakshasas; and, (praised, by us,) with holy hymns, he (the invoker of the gods,) celebrates their praise.

SÚRTA VII. (LXXX.)

The Rishi is Gotama, as before; but the deity is Indra: the metre is Pankti.

- Varga XXIX. 1. Mighty wielder of the thunderbolt, when the priest had thus exalted thee (by praise), and the exhilarating Soma juice (had been drunk), thou didst expel, by thy vigour, Ahi from the earth, manifesting thine own sovereignty.
 - 2. That exceedingly exhilarating Soma juice,

[•] The literal rendering of the epithet of the text, Sahasráksha, which identifies Agni with Indra; but Sáyana interprets it, having countless flames,—asankhyátajvála.

b The Brahmá, which the Scholiast interprets Bráhmaña.

^e The burden of this and of all the other stanzas of this hymn is archann anu swardjyam. The first term usually implies worshipping, honouring; but the Commentator gives, as its equivalent, prakatayan: swasya swamitwam prakatayan,—making manifest his own mastership or supremacy.

which was brought by the hawk, (from heaven), when poured forth, has exhilarated thee, so that, in thy vigour, thunderer, thou hast struck VRITRA from the sky, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

- 3. Hasten, assail, subdue. Thy thunderbolt cannot fail: thy vigour, Indra, destroys men. Slay Vritra, win the waters, manifesting thine own sovereignty.
- 4. Thou hast struck VRITRA from off the earth, and from heaven. (Now) let loose the wind-bound, life-sustaining rain, manifesting thine own sovereignty.
- 5. Indignant Indra, encountering him, has struck, with his bolt, the jaw of the trembling VRITRA, setting the waters free to flow, and manifesting his own sovereignty.
- 6. Indra has struck him, on the temple, with his Varga XXX. hundred-edged thunderbolt, and, exulting, wishes to provide means of sustenance for his friends, manifesting his own sovereignty.
- 7. Cloud-borne INDRA, wielder of the thunderbolt, verily, thy prowess is undisputed; since thou, with (superior) craft, hast slain that deceptive deer,^b manifesting thine own sovereignty.
 - 8. Thy thunderbolts were scattered widely over ninety and nine rivers: great is thy prowess. Strength is deposited in thy arms, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

- 9. A thousand mortals worshipped him, together; twenty have hymned (his praise); a hundred (sages) repeatedly glorify him. So, INDRA, is the oblation lifted up, manifesting thine own sovereignty.
- 10. Indra overcame, by his strength, the strength of VRITRA: great is his manhood, wherewith, having slain VRITRA, he let loose the waters, manifesting his own sovereignty.

Varga XXXI.

- 11. This heaven and earth trembled, thunderer, at thy wrath, when, attended by the MARUTS, thou slewest VRITRA by thy prowess, manifesting thine own sovereignty.
- 12. VRITRA deterred not INDRA by his trembling, or his clamour: the many-edged iron thunderbolt fell upon him, (INDRA) manifesting his own sovereignty.
- 13. When thou (Indra,) didst encounter, with thy bolt, VRITRA and the thunderbolt (which he hurled), then, Indra, the strength of thee, determined to slay Ahi, was displayed in the heavens, manifesting thine own sovereignty.
 - 14. At thy shout, wielder of the thunderbolt, all things, moveable or immoveable, trembled: even Twashīri shook with fear, Indra, at thy wrath, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

- 15. We know not, of a certainty, the all-pervading INDRA. Who (does know him, abiding) afar off, in his strength? For in him have the gods concentrated riches, and worship, and power, manifesting his own sovereignty.
- 16. In like manner as of old, so, in whatever act of worship Atharvan, or father Manus, or Dadh-vach^b engaged, their oblations and their hymns were, all, congregated in that Indra, manifesting his own sovereignty.

SIXTH ADHYAYA.

SÚKTA VIII. (LXXXI.)

The Rishi, deity, and metre, as before.

1. Indra, the slayer of VRITRA, has been augmented, in strength and satisfaction, by (the adora-

Varga I.

The expression is very elliptical, ko viryá parah; being, literally, who—with vigour—afar. The Scholiast completes the sentence as in the text.

tion of) men. We invoke him in great conflicts, as well as in little. May he defend us in battles.

- 2. For thou, hero, INDRA, art a host: thou art the giver of much booty: thou art the exalter of the humble: thou bestowest (riches) on the worshipper who offers thee oblations; for abundant is thy wealth.
- 3. When battles arise, wealth devolves on the victor. Yoke thy horses, humblers of the pride (of the foe), that thou mayest destroy one, and enrich another.^b Place us, INDRA, in affluence.
- 4. Mighty through sacrifice, formidable (to foes), partaking of the sacrificial food, INDRA has augmented his strength. Pleasing in appearance, having a handsome chin, and possessing (bright) coursers, he grasps the iron thunderbolt in his contiguous hands, for (our) prosperity.
 - 5. He has filled the space of earth and the fir-

The Scholiast explains this,—"a deity, acquiring vigour by praise, increases;" that is, becomes more powerful and mighty. The notion is clear enough; but, although 'increases' is the literal rendering of pravardhate, it expresses its purport but incompletely.

b We have a legend, in illustration of this passage: Gotama, the son of Rahúgaña, was the purchita of the Kuru and Srinjaya princes, and, in an engagement with other kings, propitiated Indra by this hymn, who, in consequence, gave the victory to the former. Rosen puts the phrase interrogatively: Quemnam occisurus es? quemnam opulentiæ dabis? But the Scholiast explains kam, whom, by kanchit, any one, some one: that is, Indra gives the victory to whomsoever he is pleased with.

mament, (with his glory); he has fixed the constellations in the sky. No one has been, ever, born, or will be born, INDRA, like to thee: thou hast sustained the universe.

Varga II.

- 6. May INDRA, the protector, who returns to the giver (of oblations) the food that is fit for mortals, bestow (such food) on us. Distribute thy wealth, which is abundant, so that I may obtain (a portion) of thy riches.
- 7. The upright performer of (pious) acts is the donor of herds of cattle to us, when receiving frequent enjoyment (from our libations). Take up, INDRA, with both hands, many hundred (sorts) of treasure: sharpen (our intellects): bring us wealth.
- 8. Enjoy, along with us, O hero, the suffused libation, for (the increase of our) strength and wealth. We know thee (to be) the possessor of vast riches, and address to thee our desires. Be, therefore, our protector.
- 9. These, thy creatures, INDRA, cherish (the oblation) that may be partaken of by all. Thou, lord of all, knowest what are the riches of those men who make no offerings. Bring their wealth to us.

SÚRTA IX. (LXXXII.)

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Pankti, except in the last stanza, where it is Jagati.

1. Approach, Maghavan, and listen to our Varga III. praises: be not different (from what thou hast hitherto been). Since thou hast inspired us with true speech, thou art solicited with it. Therefore, quickly yoke thy horses.

- 2. (Thy worshippers) have eaten the food which thou hadst given, and have rejoiced, and have trembled through their precious (bodies): self-illuminated sages have glorified thee with commendable thoughts. Therefore, INDRA, quickly yoke thy horses.
- 3. We praise thee, Maghavan, who lookest benignly (upon all). Thus praised by us, repair, (in thy car), filled with treasure, to those who desire thy presence. Indea, quickly yoke thy horses.
- 4. May he ascend that chariot which rains (blessings), and grants cattle, and which provides the vessel filled with the mixture of Soma juice and grain.^b Quickly, Indra, yoke thy horses.
- 5. Performer of many (holy) acts, let thy steeds be harnessed on the right and on the left; and, when exhilarated by the (sacrificial) food, repair, in thy

The text is merely mátathá iva,—(be) not, as it were, non-such; that is, according to Sáyaña, be not the contrary of that propitious divinity which thou hast always been to us. The rest of the stanza is equally obscure: "Since thou makest us possessed of true speech (súnritávatah), therefore thou art asked (ád arthayása it, i.e., arthayasa eva,")," that is, to accept our praises. In this hymn, also, we have a burden repeated at the close of each stanza.

chariot, to thy beloved wife. Quickly, Indra, yoke thy horses.

6. I harness thy long-maned steeds with (sacred) Depart; take the reins in your hands. The effused and exciting juices have exhilarated thee, wielder of the thunderbolt. Thus filled with nutriment, rejoice, with thy spouse.

SÚRTA X. (LXXXIII.)

Rishi and deity as before; the metre is Jagati.

1. The man who is well-protected, Indra, by thy varga IV. cares, (and dwells) in a mansion where there are horses, is the first who goes to (that where there are) cows. Enrich him with abundant riches; as the unconscious rivers' flow, in all directions, to the ocean.

2. In like manner as the bright waters flow to the sacrificial ladle, so they (the gods,) look down (upon it); as the diffusive light (descends to earth). The gods convey it, desirous of being presented to them, by progressive (movements, to the altar), and are impatient to enjoy it, filled with the oblation; as bridegrooms (long for their brides).

^{*} Apo * vichetasah. The epithet is explained, by the Scholiast, the sources of excellent knowledge,'-viśishfajnánahetubhútáh; and Rosen renders it, accordingly, sapientiam conferences: but it seems preferable to understand the prefix vi in its sense of privation; for it is not very intelligible how the waters should confer, or even possess, intelligence.

b In this stanza, as usual in the more elaborate metres, we

- 3. Thou hast associated, INDRA, words of sacred praise with both (the grain and butter of oblation), placed together in ladles, and jointly presented to thee; so that (the sacrificer), undisturbed, remains (engaged) in thy worship, and is prosperous: for, to the sacrificer, pouring out oblations (to thee), auspicious power is granted.
- 4. The Angirasas first prepared (for Indra,) the sacrificial food, and then, with kindled fire, (worshipped him) with a most holy rite: they, the institutors (of the ceremony), acquired all the wealth of Pani, comprising horses, and cows, and (other) animals.
- 5. Atharvan first, by sacrifices, discovered the path (of the stolen cattle): then the bright sun, the cherisher of pious acts, was born. Atharvan re-encounter strained collocations, and elliptical and obscure allusions, imperfectly transformed into something intelligible, by the additions of the Scholiast. Thus, avah paśyanti, 'they look down,' is rendered special by adding deváh, 'the gods,' who look down, it is said, upon the sacrificial ladle, hotriyam, well-pleased to behold it filled with the intended libation. The text, again, has only "as diffused light:" the comment adds, "descends on earth." In the next phrase, we have, "the gods lead that which is pleased, by the libation, and wishes for them, either by progressive movements, or in an eastern direction (práchaih), as bridegrooms delight." What is so led? And whither? The ladle, chamasa, the altar, vedi, as well as the bride or maiden, kanyaká, are filled up by the comment. The same character of brevity and obscurity pervades the entire hymn.

^{*} Ajani. But it may mean, as the Scholiast says, "the sun gained the cattle; KÁVYA (UŚANAS) was associated with him.^a Let us worship the immortal (INDRA), who was born to restrain (the Asuras).^b

6. Whether the holy grass be cut (for the rite) that brings down blessings; whether the priest repeat the (sacred) verse, in the brilliant (sacrifice); whether the stone (that expresses the Soma juice) sound like the priest who repeats the hymn; on all these occasions, INDRA rejoices.

SÚRTA XI. (LXXXIV.)

The deity and the Rishi are the same; but the metre is diversified.

The first six stanzas are in the Anushtubh measure; the three next, in Ushih; the three next, in Pankti; the three next, in Gayatri; and the next three, in the Trishlubh: the nineteenth verse is in the Brihati; and the twentieth, in the Satobrihati metre.

1. The Soma juice has been expressed, INDRA, appeared, in order to light the way to the cave where the cows were hidden."

- With Indra, according to the comment, which also identifies Kávya with Uśanas; and the latter, with Bhṛigu: Kávyah Kaveh putra Usaná Bhṛiguh; meaning, however, perhaps, only that Uśanas was of the family of Bhṛigu.—Vishāu Purāna, p. 82, n. 1. [See the new edition, Vol. I., p. 152, and, particularly, a note at p. 200.]
- b The text has only yamasya játam: the comment explains the former, asuráńám niyamanártham.
- Swapatyáya. Resolving this into su and apatya, Rosen renders it, egregiam prolem conferentis caussa; and M. Langlois has jaloux d'obtenir une heureuse postérité, (le chef de famille). Sáyaña understands it differently, and explains it by śobhanápatanahetu-bhútáya,—for the sake of the descent, or coming down, of what is good.

for thee: potent humbler (of thy foes), approach. May vigour fill thee (by the potation); as the sun fills the firmament with his rays.

- 2. May his horses bear INDRA, who is of irresistible prowess, to the praises and sacrifices of sages and of men.
- 3. Slayer of VRITRA, ascend thy chariot; for thy horses have been yoked by prayer. May the stone (that bruises the Soma) attract, by its sound, thy mind towards us.
- 4. Drink, Indra, this excellent, immortal, exhilarating libation, the drops of which pellucid (beverage) flow towards thee, in the chamber of sacrifice.
- 5. Offer worship, quickly, to INDRA; recite hymns (in his praise): let the effused drops exhilarate him: pay adoration to his superior strength.

Varga VI.

- 6. When, INDRA, thou harnessest thy horses, there is no one a better charioteer than thou: no one is equal to thee in strength: no one, although well-horsed, has overtaken thee.
- 7. He who alone bestows wealth upon the man who offers him oblations is the undisputed sovereign, INDRA. Ho! *
- 8. When will he trample, with his foot, upon the man who offers no oblations, as if upon a coiled-up

This verse and the two following end with the unconnected term anga, which the Scholiast interprets 'quick:' but it is, more usually, an interjection of calling. So Rosen has Ohe! M. Langlois, Oh viens!

- snake? When will INDRA listen to our praises?
- 9. Indra grants formidable strength to him who worships him, having libations prepared. Ho!
- 10. The white cows drink of the sweet Soma juice, thus poured forth, and, associated with the bountiful Indra, for the sake of beauty, rejoice: abiding (in their stalls), they are expectant of his sovereignty.^b

11. Desirous of his contact, those brindled cows dilute the Soma juice with their milk: the milch kine that are loved of Indra direct his destructive thunderbolt against his foes, abiding (in their stalls), expectant of his sovereignty.

12. These intelligent kine reverence his prowess with the adoration (of their milk); they celebrate his many exploits,—as an example to later (adversaries),—abiding (in their stalls), expectant of his sovereignty.

Varga VII.

^{*} The text has kshumpa, explained ahichchhatraka, properly, a thorny plant, but apparently intended, by the Scholiast, for a snake coiled up, or one sleeping in a ring, which is, therefore, killed without difficulty: mańdalákáreńa śayánam kaś chid anáyásena hanti. Rosen prefers the usual sense, pede fruticem velut, conteret.

b This, which constitutes the burden of the triad, is rather obscure. The text is vaswir anu swardjyam, literally, dwelling after, or according to, his own dominion. Sáyaña does not make it more intelligible. "Those cows," he says, "who, by giving milk, are the means of providing habitation (nivásakárinyah), remain looking to the kingdom of him, or Indra." So Rosen has domicilium procurantes, qua ipsius dominium respicientes adstant.

- 13. INDRA, with the bones of DADHYACH, slew ninety times nine VRITRAS.
- 14. Wishing for the horse's head hidden in the mountains, he found it at S'ARYANÁVAT.
 - 15. The (solar rays) found, on this occasion, the Dadhyach, also named Dadhicha and Dadhichi, is a wellknown sage in Pauráńik legend, of whom it is said that his bones formed the thunderbolt of Indra. The story seems to have varied from the original Vaidik fiction, as we shall have subsequent occasion to notice (Súkta CXVI.). In this place the story told by the Scholiast also somewhat differs. He relates, that, while Dadhyach, the son of Atharvan, lived, the Asuras were intimidated and tranquillized by his appearance; but, when he had gone to Swarga, they overspread the whole earth. Indra, inquiring what had become of him, and whether nothing of him had been left behind, was told, that the horse's head with which he had, at one time, taught the Madhuvidyá to the Aświns, was somewhere in existence, but no one knew where. Search was made for it, and it was found in the lake Saryanávat, on the skirts of Kurukshetra; and, with the bones of the skull, Indra slew the Asuras, or, as otherwise explained, foiled the nine times ninety (or eight hundred and ten) stratagems or devices of the Asuras or Vritras. The Scholiast accounts for the number by saying, that, in the beginning, the Asuri maya, or demoniac illusion, was practised, in the three worlds, for three periods in each,—past, present, and future,—whence it was ninefold: each being exerted with three śaktis, or energies, made the number twenty-seven: each of these, again, being modified by the three gunas, they become eighty-one; and the scene of their display extending to each of the ten regions of space, the total reaches the nine times ninety of the text, or eight hundred and ten. This seems to be pure invention, without any rational or allegorical meaning.

light of Twashfri, verily, concealed in the mansion of the moving moon.

16. Who yokes, to-day, to the pole of the car (of Varga VIII. INDRA) his vigorous and radiant steeds, whose fury is unbearable, in whose mouths are arrows, who trample on the hearts (of enemies), who give happiness (to friends)? (The sacrificer) who praises their (performance of their) duties obtains (long) life.

^{*} The text has only "they found;" the Scholiast, following Yáska (Nir., IV., 25), supplies Adityasya raśmayah, the rays of the sun. Twashfri is here used for the sun, being one of the Adityas; or, according to the Scholiast, for Indra, to whom the hymn is addressed, and who is, also, one of the Adityas. The purport of the stanza is, apparently, the obscure expression of an astronomical fact,—known to the authors of the Vedas,—that the moon shone only through reflecting the light of the sun. So it is said, "the rays of the sun are reflected back in the bright watery orb of the moon;" and, again, "the solar radiance, concealed by the night, enters into the moon, and thus dispels darkness by night, as well as by day." According to the Nirukta, II., 6, it is one ray of the sun (that named Sushumna,) which lights up the moon; and it is with respect to that that its light is derived from the sun. The Puráhas have adopted the doctrine of the Vedas. - Vishhu Puráha, p. 236.

b Another interpretation may be assigned to this verse, which turns upon rendering kah by Prajapati, instead of who, and gah by words of the Weda, instead of horses; making "Prajapati combines, to-day, with the burden of the sacrifice the sacred words that are effective, brilliant, essential, emitted from the mouth, animating the heart, and productive of happiness: the worshipper who fulfils the object of such prayers obtains life."

- 17. Who goes forth, (through dread of foes, when INDRA is at hand)? Who is harmed (by his enemies)? Who is terrified? Who is aware that INDRA is present? Who, that he is nigh? What need is there that any one should importune INDRA for his son, his elephant, his property, his person, or his people?
- 18. Who praises the (sacrificial) fire, (lighted for INDRA)? Or worships him with the oblation of clarified butter, presented in the ladle, according to the constant seasons? To whom do the gods quickly bring (the wealth) that has been called for? What sacrificer, engaged in offering oblations, and favoured by the gods, thoroughly knows INDRA?
- 19. Powerful Indra, be present, and be favourable to the mortal (who adores thee). There is no other giver of felicity, Maghavan, than thou. Hence, Indra, I recite thy praise.
- 20. Granter of dwellings, let not thy treasury, let not thy benefits, ever be detrimental to us. Friend of mankind, bring to us, who are acquainted with prayers, all sorts of riches.

^{*} That is, we know it very well, and are, therefore, secure in his presence, at this ceremony. Or kah may again be explained by Prajápati, with the sense of the stanza modified accordingly.

b Ritubhir dhruvebhih; in which, ritu may have its ordinary sense of 'season.' Or the passage may mean, 'presented by the divinities called Ritus, who preside over sacrifices,' as in the text Ritus vai prayajah,—The Ritus are the chief sacrifices, i.e., prayajadevatah, the deities presiding over them.

o Utayah, benefits, assistances: but it may be read dhútayah, shakers, agitators, i.e., the Maruts, or Winds.

ANUVÁKA XIV.

SÚKTA I. (LXXXV).

The deities are the Maruts; the Rishi, Gotama: the metre of the fifth and twelfth verses is Trishfubh; of the rest, Jagati.

- 1. The Maruts, who are going forth, decorate themselves like females: they are gliders (through the air), the sons of Rudra, and the doers of good works, by which they promote the welfare of earth and heaven. Heroes, who grind (the solid rocks), they delight in sacrifices.
- 2. They, inaugurated by the gods, have attained majesty: the sons of Rudra have established their dwelling above the sky: glorifying him (Indra,) who merits to be glorified, they have inspired him with vigour: the sons of Priśni have acquired dominion.
- 3. When the sons of earth^b embellish themselves with ornaments, they shine resplendent, in their persons, with (brilliant) decorations: they keep aloof every adversary: the waters follow their path.^c various weapons: incapable of being overthrown, they are the overthrowers (of mountains). MARUTS, swift as thought, entrusted with the duty of sending rain, yoke the spotted deer to your cars.

- 5. When, MARUTS, urging on the cloud, for the sake of (providing) food, you have yoked the deer to your chariots, the drops fall from the radiant (sun), and moisten the earth, like a hide, with water.
- 6. Let your quick-paced, smooth-gliding coursers bear you (hither); and, moving swiftly, come, with your hands (filled with good things). Sit, MARUTS, upon the broad seat of sacred grass, and regale yourselves with the sweet sacrificial food.

Varga X.

- 7. Confiding in their own strength, they have increased in (power): they have attained heaven by their greatness, and have made (for themselves,) a spacious abode. May they, for whom Vishâu defends (the sacrifice) that bestows all desires and confers delight, come, (quickly,) like birds, and sit down upon the pleasant and sacred grass.
- 8. Like heroes, like combatants, like men anxious for food, the swift-moving (Maruts) have engaged in battles. All beings fear the Maruts, who are the leaders (of the rain), and awful of aspect, like princes.
 - 9. Indra wields the well-made, golden, many-

- 10. By their power, they bore the well aloft, and clove asunder the mountain that obstructed their path. The munificent Maruts, blowing upon their pipe, have conferred, when exhilarated by the Soma juice, desirable (gifts upon the sacrificer).
- 11. They brought the crooked well to the place (where the Muni was), and sprinkled the water upon the thirsty Gotama. The variously-radiant (Maruts) come to his succour, gratifying the desire of the sage with life-sustaining (waters).
- 12. Whatever blessings (are diffused) through the three worlds, and are in your gift, do you bestow upon the donor (of the oblation), who addresses you with praise. Bestow them, also, MARUTS, upon us; and grant us, bestowers of all good, riches, whence springs prosperity.

^{*} Twashtri here reverts to his usual office of artisan of the gods.

b Dhamanto váñam. The Scholiast explains váñam to be a lute, a viñá with a hundred strings; a sort of Æolian harp, perhaps. Dhamanta, 'blowing,' would better apply to a pipe, a wind-instrument.

o In this and the next stanza, allusion is made to a legend in which it is related, that the Rishi Gotama, being thirsty, prayed to the Maruts for relief, who, thereupon, brought a well, from a distance, to his hermitage. This exploit is subsequently (Súkta CXVI.) related of the Aświns.

 - 3. And may he for whom ministrant priests have sharpened^b the sapient (troop of the MARUTS) walk among pastures crowded with cattle.

a Always associated in troops.

The term is rijishinah, which is not very clearly explained. Rijisha, in ordinary use, means a frying-pan; but here the Scholiast seems to consider it as a synonym of Soma; the Maruts being thus named, because they are entitled, at the third daily ceremonial, or the evening worship, to a share of the effusion of the rijisha,—rijishasyabhishavát. Or the term may signify, he adds, 'the acquirers or receivers of the juices,'—prárjayitáro rasánám; from arj, to acquire. Rosen has lance sacrifica culti; M. Langlois, amis de nos offrandes.

2. To what glorifier (of the gods) do they repair,

 The Scholiast here proposes various etymologies of the name Marut, some of which are borrowed from Yáska, Nir., XI., 13. They sound (ruvanti, from ru), having attained midheaven (mitam); or, They sound without measure (amitam); or, They shine (from ruch), in the clouds made (mitam) by themselves; or, They hasten (dravanti) in the sky. All the minor divinities that people the mid-air are said, in the Vedas, to be styled Maruts: as in the text, "All females whose station is the middle heaven, the all-pervading masculine Váyu, and all the troops (of demigods), are Maruts." Sáyana also cites the Pauránik tradition of the birth of the forty-nine Maruts, in seven

SÚKTA V. (LXXXIX.)

The Rishi, as before, Gotama; but the hymn is addressed to the Viśwadevas. The metre of the first five stanzas, and of the seventh, is Jagati; of the sixth, Virátstháná; and, of the last three, Trishtubh.

Varga XV.

- 1. May auspicious works, unmolested, unimpeded, and subversive (of foes), come to us from every quarter. May the gods, turning not away from us, but granting us protection day by day, be ever with us, for our advancement.
- 2. May the benevolent favour of the gods (be ours): may the bounty of the gods, ever approving of the upright, light upon us: may we obtain the friendship of the gods; and may the gods extend our days to longevity.
- 3. We invoke them with an ancient text, Bhaga, Mitra, Aditi, Daksha, Asridh, Aryaman, Varuŵa, Soma, the Aswins: and may the gracious Saraswatí grant us happiness.

^a Purvayá nividá. Nivid is a synonym of vách, speech, or a text,—here said to be a text of the Veda.

b Most of these, here included amongst the Viśwadevas, have occurred before. But the Scholiast here also explains their functions:—Bhaga and Mitra are Adityas; and the latter is, especially, the lord of day, as by the text Maitram vá ahah,—The day is dependent on Mitra. Aditi is the mother of the gods; Daksha is called a Prajápati, able to make the world: or, he is the creator (Hirańyagarbha), diffused among breathing or living creatures, as breath, or life; as by the text Práňo vai Dakshah,—Daksha, verily, is breath. - 5. We invoke that lord of living beings, that protector of things immoveable, Indra, who is to be propitiated by pious rites, for our protection. As Púshan has ever been our defender, for the increase of our riches, so may he (continue) the unmolested guardian of our welfare.

drying, unchanging; that is, the class of Maruts. Aryaman is the sun, as by the text Asau vá ádityo' ryamá,—He, the sun, is Aryaman. Varuna is named from vri, to surround, encompassing the wicked with his bonds: he is, also, the lord of night, as by the text Váruni rátrih,—The night is dependent on Varuna. Soma is twofold; the plant so called on earth, and the moon, as a divinity in heaven. The Aświns are so termed, either from having horses (aśwavantau); or from pervading all things, the one, with moisture, the other, with light, according to Yáska, who also states the question: Who were they? which is thus answered: According to some, they are heaven and earth; to others, day and night; according to others, the sun and moon; and, according to the traditionists (aitihásika), they were two virtuous princes.-Nirukta, XII., 1.

- * Bheshajam; that medicament which the Aświns, as the physicians of the gods, are qualified to bestow. No other specification is given.
- b Earth is so termed, as producing all things necessary for life; and heaven, as sending rain, and, therefore, indirectly nourishing all things.

- 6. May Indra, who listens to much praise, guard varga XVI. our welfare: may Púshan, who knows all things, guard our welfare: may Tárkshya, with unblemished weapons, guard our welfare.
- 7. May the Maruts, whose coursers are spotted deer, who are the sons of Priśni, gracefully-moving, frequenters of sacrifices, (seated) on the tongue of Agni, regarders (of all), and radiant as the sun,—may all the gods,—come hither for our preservation.
- 8. Let us hear, gods, with our ears, what is good: objects of sacrifice, let us see, with our eyes, what is good: let us, engaged in your praises, enjoy, with firm limb and (sound) bodies, the term of life granted by the gods.

^e Devahitam; whence it may be rendered, as the Scholiast proposes, in the singular; understanding, by deva, Prajdpati, either a patriarch or Brahmá. The Commentator says, the limit of human life is 116 or 120 years; but the next stanza specifies a century.

^{*} Tarkshya is a patronymic, implying son of Triksha, and, according to the Scholiast, Garutman. He is termed, in the text, Arishtanomi,—he who has unharmed or irresistible (arishta) weapons (nemi): or the latter may imply, as usual, the circumference of a wheel,—whose chariot-wheel is unimpeded. But Arishtanomi occurs, in the Váyu Puráha, as the name of a Prajápati, so that the passage might mean Arishtanomi, the son of Triksha, which, according to some authorities, is a name of the patriarch Kaśyapa: the same make Tárkshya a synonym of Aruha, the personified dawn. It is doubtful if we have any reference to the vehicle of Vishhu, Garuda.

b This may be predicated of all the deities; as they receive oblations through the mouth of Agni.

- 9. Since a hundred years were appointed (for the life of man), interpose not, gods, in the midst of our passing existence, by inflicting infirmity on our bodies, so that our sons become our sires.^a
- 10. Additib is heaven; Additi is the firmament; Additi is mother, father, and son; Additi is all the gods; Additi is the five classes of men; Additi is generation and birth.

SÚRTA VI. (XC.)

The Rishi and deities are the same; the metre is Gáyatri, except in the last stanza, where it is Anushiubh.

Varga XVII.

1. May VARUÑA and the wise MITRA lead us, by straight paths, (to our desires),—and ARYAMAN, rejoicing with the gods.

^{*} That is, let us not become so feeble and infirm as to be, as it were, infants, and to require the paternal care of our own sons.

b Aditi, literally meaning the independent or the indivisible, may, here, signify either the earth or the mother of the gods, according to the Scholiast. According to Yáska, the hymn declares the might of Aditi,—Aditor vibhútim dchashte (Nir., IV., 23); or, as Sáyaña, "Aditi is hymned as the same with the universe."

c As before noticed, the five orders of men are said to be the four castes and the outcastes. It is also interpreted, five classes of beings, or, Gods, Men, Gandharvas (including Apsarasas). Serpents, and Pitris; or, as it occurs in the Nirukta, III., 7, Gandharvas, Pitris, Gods, Asuras, and Rakshasas.

^a Játa is the actual birth of beings; janitwa, the faculty of being born, generation. Rosen renders the terms, natum and nasciturum.

[•] Aryaman is said to be the sun, in his function of separating day from night.

- 2. For they are the distributors of wealth (over the world), and, never heedless, discharge their functions every day.
- 3. May they, who are immortal, bestow, upon us mortals, happiness, annihilating our foes.
- 4. May the adorable Indra, the Maruts, Púshan, and Bhaga, so direct our paths, (that they may lead) to the attainment of good gifts.
- 5. Púshan, Vishnu, Maruts, make our rites restorative of our cattle; make us prosperous.
- 6. The winds bring sweet (rewards) to the Varga XVIII. sacrificer; the rivers bring sweet (waters). May the herbs yield sweetness to us.
- 7. May night and morn be sweet; may the region of the earth be full of sweetness; may the protecting heaven be sweet to us.
- 8. May Vanaspati be possessed of sweetness towards us; may the sun be imbued with sweetness; may the cattle be sweet to us.
- 9. May MITRA be propitious to us; may VARUÑA, may ARYAMAN, be propitious to us; may INDRA and BRIHASPATI be propitious to us; may the widestepping VISHÑU be propitious to us.

[·] Vishiu is said to mean the pervader, or pervading deity.

b The term of the text is evayávah, which is explained, by the Scholiast, the troop of Maruts, from their going with horses (evaih).

SÚKTA VII. (XCI.)

The Rishi is, still, Gotama; the deity is Soma: from the fifth to the sixteenth stanza, the metre is Gáyatri; the seventeenth, Ushhih; the rest, Trishlubh.

Varga XIX.

- 1. Thou, Soma, art thoroughly apprehended by our understanding; thou leadest us along a straight path. By thy guidance, Indra, our righteous fathers obtained wealth amongst the gods.
- 2. Thou, Soma, art the doer of good by holy acts; thou art powerful, by thine energies, and knowest all things; thou art the showerer (of benefits), by thy bounties, and (art great,) by thy greatness: thou, the guide of men, hast been well nourished by sacrificial offerings.
 - 3. Thy acts are (like those) of the royal VARUÑA:

^{*} Rájnah * te Varuhasya. The Scholiast would seem to argue that Varuha here means that which is enclosed in a cloth, or the Soma plant that has been purchased for a sacrifice,—yágártham áhritah krito vastrehávritah Somo Varuhah, chiefly because Soma is the king of the Brahmans; as by the text of the Veda, Somo 'smákam Bráhmahánám rájá,—Soma is the king of us Brahmans; and Somarájáno Bráhmahah,—The Brahmans have Soma for king. But, in that sense, the moon, not the plant, is usually understood by Soma; and there does not appear any reason for understanding the term Varuha in any other than its usual acceptation. The title of rájá, we have already seen, is, not unfrequently, assigned to him, although, as the following stanzas show, it was equally given to Soma.

thy glory, Soma, is great and profound: thou art the purifier (of all), like the beloved MITRA: thou art the augmenter of all, like ARYAMAN.

- 4. Endowed with all the glories (that are displayed) by thee in heaven, on earth, in the mountains, in the plants, in the waters, do thou, illustrious Soma, well-disposed towards us, and devoid of anger, accept our oblations.
- 5. Thou, Soma, art the protector, the sovereign of the pious, b or even the slayer of VRITRA; thou art holy sacrifice.
- 6. Thou, Soma, fond of praise, the lord of plants, art life to us. If thou wilt, we shall not die.

7. Thou bestowest, Soma, upon him who worships thee, whether old or young, wealth, that he may enjoy, and live.

8. Defend us, royal Soma, from every one seeking to harm us. The friend of one like thee can never perish.

9. Soma, be our protector with those assistances which are sources of happiness to the donor (of oblations).

10. Accepting this our sacrifice, and this our

Varga XX.

^{*} Or royal (rájan) Soma.

b Satpatis twam rájota. Sat may be explained, also, according to the Scholiast, by Brahman, making the sentence, "the protector, or lord (pati), or the king (rájá), of the Brahmans."

[°] Soma may be considered as identifiable with sacrifice, from the essential part it performs in it (tadrupo bhavati, sádhyatwád yajnánám).

praise, approach, Soma, and be, to us, as the augmenter of our rite.

Varga XXI.

- 11. Acquainted with hymns, we elevate thee with praises. Do thou, who art benignant, approach.
- 12. Be, unto us, Soma, the bestower of wealth, the remover of disease, the cognizant of riches, the augmenter of nutriment, an excellent friend.
- 13. Soma, dwell happy in our hearts, like cattle in fresh pastures, like men in their own abodes.
- 14. The experienced sage commends the mortal who, through affection, divine Soma, praises thee.
- 15. Protect us, Soma, from calumny; preserve us from sin: pleased with our service, be our friend.

Varga XXII.

- 16. Increase, Soma. May vigour come to thee from every side. Be diligent in the supply of food (to us).
- 17. Exulting Soma, increase with all twining plants: be, to us, a friend. Well-supplied with food, we may prosper.
- 18. May the milky juices flow around thee: may sacrificial offerings and vigour be concentrated in the destroyer of foes; and, being fully nourished, do thou provide, Soma, excellent viands in heaven, for our immortality.
- 19. Whichever of thy glories (men) worship with oblations, may our sacrifice be invested with them all. Come to our mansions, Soma, who art the bestower of wealth, the transporter (over difficulties), attended by valiant heroes, the non-destroyer of progeny.

- 20. To him who presents (offerings) Soma gives a milch-cow, a swift horse, and a son who is able in affairs, skilful in domestic concerns, assiduous in worship, eminent in society, and who is an honour to his father.
- 21. We rejoice, Soma, contemplating thee, in-varga XXIII. vincible in battle, triumphant amongst hosts, the granter of heaven, the giver of rain, the preserver of strength, born amidst sacrifices, occupying a brilliant dwelling, renowned, and victorious.
- 22. Thou, Soma, hast generated all these herbs, the water, and the kine; thou hast spread out the spacious firmament; thou hast scattered darkness with light.
- 23. Divine and potent Soma, bestow, upon us, with thy brilliant mind, a portion of wealth: may no (adversary) annoy thee. Thou art supreme over the valour of (any) two (mutual) opponents. Defend us (from our enemies,) in battle.^a

SÚRTA VIII. (XCII.)

The Rishi is Gotama: the deity is Ushas (the Dawn), except in the last triad, which is addressed to the Aswins: the metre of the first four verses is Jagati; of the last six, Ushaih; of the rest. Trishiubh.

1. These divinities of the morning b have spread Varga XXIV.

[•] There is, evidently, great confusion, in this hymn, between Soma, the moon, and Soma, the acid Asclepias. Few passages indicate the former distinctly, except, perhaps, verse twenty-two, which alludes to the function of scattering darkness by light.

b We have the term Ushasah, in the plural, intending, according light (over the world): they make manifest the light in the eastern portion of the firmament, brightening all things, like warriors burnishing their weapons: the radiant and progressing mothers of the earth), they travel daily, (on their course).

- 2. Their purple rays have readily shot upwards; they have yoked the easily-yoked and ruddy kine (to their car); the deities of the dawn have restored, as of yore, the consciousness (of sentient creatures), and, bright-rayed, have attended upon the glorious sun.
- 3. The female leaders (of the morning) illuminate, with their inherent radiance, the remotest parts (of the heaven), with a simultaneous effort,—like warriors (with their shining arms, in the van of battle),—bringing every kind of food to the performer of good works, to the bountiful, and to the worshipper who presents libations.
 - 4. Ushas cuts off the accumulated (glooms); as to the Commentator, the divinities that preside over the morning: but, according to Yáska, the plural is used honorifically only, for the singular personification.—Nirukta, XII., 7.

Or mátri may mean simply maker, author; authors of light, bháso nirmátryah.—Nirukta, XII., 7.

b Archanti; literally, worship,—that is, the heavens: but the term is used for spreading over, or extending.

[•] The text has only "like warriors." The Scholiast explains the comparison: "As they spread, with bright arms, along the front of the array, so the rays of the dawn spread along the sky, before the coming of the sun."

a barber (cuts off the hair): she bares her bosom; as a cow yields her udder (to the milker): and, as cattle hasten to their pastures, she speeds to the east, and, shedding light upon all the world, dissipates the darkness.

- 5. Her brilliant light is first seen towards (the east): it spreads and disperses the thick darkness. She anoints her beauty; as the priests anoint the sacrificial food in sacrifices. The daughter of the sky^b awaits the glorious sun.
- 6. We have crossed over the boundary of darkness. Ushas restores the consciousness (of living beings). Bright-shining, she smiles, like a flatterer, to obtain favour, and, lovely in all her radiance, she has swallowed, for our delight, the darkness.
- 7. The brilliant daughter of the sky, the exciter of pleasant voices, is praised by the descendants of Gotama. Ushas, grant us food, associated with progeny and dependants, and distinguished by horses and cattle.
- 8. May I obtain, Ushas, that ample wealth which confers fame, posterity, troops of slaves, and

Varga XXV.

[•] Nritur iva, "like a barber," is the phrase of the text. Or nritu may mean a dancing-girl, when the translation will be, "Ushas displays graces, like a dancing-girl" (peśánsi vapate); the former meaning either darkness or elegance, the latter, either to cut off, or to possess. There is no point of similitude expressed in Rosen's version: Tenebras dissipat Aurora, saltatrix veluti.

b Divah duhitá, the daughter of heaven, or the sky.

^c With the appearance of dawn, the cries of various animals and birds, and the voices of men, are again heard.

is characterized by horses,—which thou, who aboundest in riches, and art the giver of food, displayest, (when gratified) by hymns and holy sacrifices.

- 9. The divine (USHAS), having lighted up the whole world, spreads, expanding with her radiance, towards the west, arousing all living creatures to their labours. She hears the speech of all endowed with thought.
- 10. The divine and ancient Ushas, born again and again, and bright with unchanging hues, wastes away the life of a mortal, like the wife of a hunter cutting up and dividing the birds.

Varga XXVI.

- 11. She has been seen illuminating the boundaries of the sky, and driving into disappearance the spontaneously-retiring (night). Wearing away the ages of the human race, she shines with light, like the bride of the Sun.
- 12. The affluent and adorable Ushas has sent her rays abroad,—as (a cowherd drives) the cattle (to pasture),—and spreads, expansive, like flowing water.

^{*} Like a swaghni; literally, the wife of a dog-killer, but explained, vyádhastri, as in the text.

b Swasaram is the only term in the text, explained, swayam eva sarantim,—going of her own accord. The Scholiast adds night: otherwise, we might have understood it in its usual sense of 'sister,'—making night the sister of morning.

[°] Yoshá járasya. Jára, meaning the causer of the decay, or disappearance, of night, is explained by Súrya, the Sun.

She is beheld associated with the rays of the sun, unimpeding sacred ceremonies.

- 13. Ushas, possessor of food, bring us that various wealth by which we may sustain sons and grandsons.
- 14. Luminous Ushas, possessor of cows and horses, true of speech, dawn here, to-day, upon this (ceremony), that is to bring us wealth.
- 15. Possessor of food, Ushas, yoke, indeed, to-day, your purple steeds, and bring to us all good things.
- 16. Aswins, destroyers of foes, turn, with favour- Varga XXVII. able intentions, your chariot towards our abode, which contains cattle and gold.
- 17. Aświns, who have sent adorable light from heaven to man, bring us strength.
- 18. May the steeds, awakened at dawn, bring hither, to drink the Soma juice, the divine Aświns,—who are the givers of happiness, the destroyers of foes,—seated in a golden chariot.

Aminati daivyáni vratáni, not injuring, that is, favouring, divine rites, or offerings to the gods, which are to be performed by daylight, or after dawn; as by the text, Na rátrau na sáyam asti dovayá ajushtam,—Sacrifice is not acceptable to the gods at night, or in the evening.

b As before observed, the Aświns are, sometimes, identified with the sun and moon.

SÚKTA IX. (XCIII.)

The Rishi is Gotama: the deities are Agni and Soma: the metre of the three first stanzas is Anushiubh; of three, beginning with the ninth, Gáyatri; of the eighth, Jagati or Trishiubh; and, of the rest, Trishiubh.

Varga XXVIII.

- 1. Agni and Soma, showevers (of desires), favourably hear this my invocation, graciously accept my hymns, and bestow felicity on the donor (of the oblation).
- 2. Agni and Soma, grant, to him who addresses this prayer to you both, store of cattle with sound strength, and good horses.
- 3. Agni and Soma, may he who offers you the oblation of clarified butter enjoy sound strength, with progeny, through all his life.
- 4. Agni and Soma, that prowess of yours, by which you have carried off the cows that were the food of Pani, is (well-) known to us. You have slain the offspring of Brisava*; and you have acquired the one luminary (the sunb), for the benefit of the many.

^{*} Brisayasya śeshah. The latter is a synonym of apatya, off-spring.—Nirukta, III., 2. Brisaya is said to be a synonym of Twashtri, here styled an Asura. The offspring of Twashtri is Vritra; and the agency of Agni and Soma in his death is explained by identifying them with the two vital airs Prána and Apána, the separation of which from Vritra was the approximate cause of his death.

b By the destruction of Vritra, the enveloping cloud, or gathered darkness, the sun was enabled to appear in the sky.

- 5. You two, AGNI and SOMA, acting together, have sustained these constellations in the sky: you have liberated the rivers that had been defiled, from the notorious imputation.^a
- 6. Agni and Soma, the wind brought one of you from heaven; a hawk carried off the other, by force, from the summit of the mountain: b growing vast by praise, you have made the world wide, for (the performance of) sacrifice.
- 7. Agni and Soma, partake of the proffered Varga XXIX. oblation; be gracious to us: showevers (of desires), be pleased: prosperous and diligent protectors, be propitious; and grant, to the sacrificer, health and exemption from ill.
- 8. Agni and Soma, protect his sacrifice, and defend him from ill, who, with a mind devoted to

The imputation, or charge, of Brahmanicide was incurred by Indra, it is said, in killing Vritra, who was a Brahman, but which guilt he transferred to rivers, women, and trees. This looks rather like a Pauráńik legend. One of a more Vaidik character is, also, given: the rivers were defiled by the dead body of Vritra, which had fallen into them; their waters were, consequently, unfit to bear any part in sacred rites, until they were purified by Agni and Soma, that is, by oblations to fire, and libations of Soma juice.

b The legend relates that Váyu brought Agni from heaven, at the desire of Bhrigu, when performing a sacrifice; Soma was brought from Swarga, on the top of Mount Meru, by Gáyatri, in the shape of a hawk. These are, clearly, allegorical allusions to the early use of fire and the Soma plant in religious ceromonies.

the gods, worships you with clarified butter and oblations: grant to the man engaged (in devotion,) extreme felicity.

- 9. Agni and Soma, endowed with the like wealth, and invoked by a common invocation, share our praises; for you have (ever) been the chief of the gods.
- 10. Agni and Soma, give ample (recompence) to him who presents to you both this clarified butter.
- 11. AGNI and Soma, be pleased with these our oblations, and come to us, together.
- 12. Agni and Soma, cherish our horses; and may our cows, affording (milk that yields butter for) oblations, be well nourished. Give to us, who are affluent, strength (to perform) religious rites; and make our sacrifice productive of wealth.

ANUVÁKA XV.

SÚKTA I. (XCIV.)

The Rishi is Kutsa, the son of Anguras: the deity is Agni, associated, in three parts of the eighth stanza, with the gods in general, and, in the latter half of the last, with different divinities: the metre of the two last stanzas is Trishtubh; of the rest, Jagati.

Varga XXX. 1. To him who is worthy of praise, and all-

^{*} The term is simply devatra, explained deveshu prasastah. Another text is quoted, which states that Agns and Soma are they who are the two kings of the gods (rajanau va etau devanám yad agnishomau.)

knowing, we construct, with our minds, this hymn, as (a workman makes) a car. Happy is our understanding, when engaged in his adoration. Let us not suffer injury, AGNI, through thy friendship.^a

- 2. He for whom thou sacrificest accomplishes (his objects), abides free from aggression, and enjoys (wealth, the source of) strength: he prospers; and poverty never approaches him. Let us not suffer injury, Agni, through thy friendship.
- 3. May we be able to kindle thee. Perfect the rite; for, through thee, the gods partake of the offered oblations. Bring hither the ÁDITYAS; b for we love them. Let us not suffer injury, AGNI, through thy friendship.
- 4. We bring fuel, we offer oblations, reminding thee of the successive seasons (of worship). Do thou thoroughly complete the rite, in order to prolong our lives. Let us not suffer injury, Agni, through thy friendship.
- 5. His genial (flames), the preservers of mankind, spread around; and both bipeds and quadrupeds are enlivened by his rays. Shining with various lustre, and illuminating (the world by night), thou art superior to the dawn. Let us not, Agni, suffer injury, through thy friendship.

[•] This last clause is the burden of all the stanzas except the concluding two: Sakhye má rishámá vayam tava,—May we not be injured in, or by, thy friendship; that is, according to the Scholiast, Do thou preserve us.

b The sons of Aditi, that is, all the gods.

Varga XXXI.

- 6. Thou art the sacrificing or the invoking priest; thou art the principal (presenter of the offering), the director (of the ceremonies), their performer, or, by birth, the family-priest.^a Thus conversant with all the priestly functions, thou performest perfectly the rite. Let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.
- 7. Thou art of graceful form, and alike on every side, and, although remote, shinest as if nigh. Thou seest, divine Agni, beyond the darkness of night. Let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.
- 8. Gods,^b let the chariot of the offerer of the libation be foremost: let our denunciations overwhelm the wicked: understand and fulfil my words. Let us not suffer injury, Agni, through thy friendship.
- 9. Overcome, with your fatal (weapons), the wicked and the impious, all who are enemies, ^{*} Agni is here identified with the chief of the sixteen priests engaged at solemn sacrifices. He is the Adhwaryu, usually called the reciter of the Yajush,—here defined, by the Scholiast, as the presenter of the offerings: he is the Hotri, or invoking priest: he is the Praśástri, or the Maitrávaruña, whose duty it is to direct the other priests what to do, and when to perform their functions: he is the Potri, or priest so termed, and the family or hereditary Purohita: or Purohita may be the same as the Brahmá of a ceremony,—being, to men, what Brihaspati is to the gods.

^b Deváh. All the gods are here considered to be but portions or members of Agni.

c Purva, before. The Scholiast explains this by mukhya, principal: otherwise, it might be thought that we had, here, an allusion to chariot-races.

whether distant or near; and then provide an easy (path) for the sacrificer who praises thee. Let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

- 10. When thou hast yoked the bright red horses, swift as the wind, to thy car, thy roar is like that of a bull; and thou enwrappest the forest-trees with a banner of smoke. Let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.
- 11. At thy roaring even the birds are terrified: Varga XXXII. when thy flames, consuming the grass, have spread in all directions, (the wood) is easy of access to thee, and to thy chariots. Let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.
- 12. May this (thy adorer) enjoy the support of MITRA and of VARUÑA. Wonderful is the fury of the MARUTS. (Dwellers in the region) below (the heavens), encourage us; and may their minds again (be gracious) to us. Let us not suffer injury, AGNI, through thy friendship.
- 13. Thou, brilliant (AGNI), art the especial friend of the gods; thou, who art graceful in the sacrifice, art the confirmer of all riches. May we be present in thy most spacious chamber of sacrifice. Let us not, AGNI, suffer injury through thy friendship.
- 14. Pleasant is it to thee, when thou art lighted in thine own abode, and, propitiated by libations, art praised (by the priests). Then, much delighted, thou givest rewards and riches to the worshipper. Let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

Below Swargaloka, or in the antariksha, or firmament.

- 15 (Fortunate is the worshipper) to whom, (assiduous) in all pious works, thou, possessor of riches, indivisible Agni, grantest exemption from sin,—whom thou associatest with auspicious strength. May he be (enriched), by thee, with wealth that comprehends progeny.
- 16. Do thou, divine AGNI, who knowest what is good fortune, on this occasion prolong our existence; and may MITRA, VARUÑA, ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us.

SEVENTH ADHYÁYA.

SÚRTA II. (XCV.)

The deity is Agni, having the attributes of the dawn, or the Agni entitled to a share of the morning oblation, or the pure or simple Agni: the Rishi is Kutsa; the metre, Trishfubh.

Varga I. 1. Two periods, of different complexions, b revolve,

^{*} This verse terminates the following hymns, with two exceptions, as far as the hundred and first Súkta. Mitra, Varuña, and Aditi have been before noticed. By Sindhu is to be understood the divinity presiding over, or identified with, flowing water; and it may mean either the sea, or flowing streams collectively, or the river Indus. Prithivi and Div are the personified earth and heaven. These are requested to honour, meaning, to preserve, or perpetuate, whatever blessing has been asked for (tat * mámahantam); from mah, to venerate or worship: tat, that, refers, here, to dyus, or life.

b Virupe, of various nature, or, here, complexions; black and for their own purposes; and each, in succession, severally nourishes a son. In one, Hari is the receiver of oblations; in the other, the brilliant Agni is beheld.

2. The vigilant and youthful Ten beget, through the wind, this embryo Agni, inherent (in all be-white, or night and day. Day is said to be the mother of fire, which is then, as it were, in an embryo state, and is not fully manifested, or born, until it is dark. So the sun is in the womb of night, and is born, or shines, in the morning. Hari, or the sun, being manifested in the morning, is then to be worshipped; Agni, shining at night, is to be worshipped in the evening,—tasmá Agnaye sáyam húyate Súryáya prátah, which is rather at variance with the preliminary statement, that the Agni of the hymn is the one entitled to a share of the morning oblation (Ushasi prátahkále havirbhágyo 'gnir asti sa devatá): therefore, it is said, the Agni is that endowed with the properties of dawn: or it may be the simple, discrete Agni (aushasaguñavisishto 'gnih śuddho 'gnir vá devatá). We must, therefore, consider Agni to be treated as identical with Hari, or the sun, as well as referred to in his own personification.

This stanza is somewhat differently interpreted. The Ten are said, by the Scholiast, to be, in one acceptation, the ten regions of space, which generate the electrical fire, or lightning, as an embryo in the clouds, through the agency of the winds; as in the text: "Wind is the cause of fire; fire, of wind" (Agner hi váyuh kárañam, váyor agnih). The term, in the text, for wind, or its agency, is twashtuh, which is here said to mean 'brilliant,'—from "the brilliant central proximity of wind" (diptánmadhyamád váyoh sakását). Rosen connects twashtuh with garbham, and renders them, fulminatoris parentem. He also follows the explanation of the Ten, which applies it to the ten ings,) sharp-visaged, universally renowned, shining among men. Him they conduct (to every dwelling).

- 3. They contemplate three places of his birth,—one in the ocean, one in the heaven, one in the firmament; and, dividing the seasons of the year, for the benefit of earthly creatures, he formed, in regular succession, the eastern quarter.^b
- 4. Which of you discerns the hidden AGNI? A son, he begets his mothers by oblations. The germ of many (waters), he issues from the ocean, mighty and wise, the recipient of oblations.

- * Vibhritram, deposited in all creatures; that is, in the capacity of the digestive faculty, which is referred to the action of natural heat.
- b As submarine fire, Agni is born in the ocean; as the sun, in heaven; and, as lightning, in the firmament. In his character of the sun, he may be said to be the distributor of time and space,—regulating the seasons, and indicating the points of the horizon.
- c Latent heat; the natural heat extant in the waters, in the woods, and in all fixed and moveable things, although not perceptible to sense.
- d Agni, in the form of lightning, may be considered as the son of the waters collected in the clouds; and those waters he is said to generate by the oblations which he conveys: as, in the Smriti, it is said,—"Oblations offered in fire ascend to the sun: rain is produced from the sun; corn, from rain; and thence spring mankind."
- Agni is thought to rise, in the morning, in the shape of the sun from out of the ocean,—upasthát samudrát • nirgachchhati.

fingers, which generate Agni through the air of attrition, as an embryo in the sticks. Sayana gives both interpretations.

- 5. Appearing amongst them (the waters), the bright-shining (Agni) increases, rising above the flanks of the waving waters, spreading his own renown. Both (heaven and earth) are alarmed, as the radiant Agni is born; and, approaching the lion, they pay him honour.
- 6. Both the auspicious ones (day and night,) wait upon him, like two female attendants; as lowing kine (follow their calves), by the paths (that they have gone). He has been the lord of might among the mighty, whom (the priests), on the right (of the altar), anoint.
- 7. Like the sun, he stretches forth his arms; and the formidable AGNI, decorating both heaven and earth (with brightness), labours (in his duties). He draws up, from everything, the essential (moisture), and clothes (the earth) with new vestments, (derived) from his maternal (rains).
- 8. Associated, in the firmament, with the moving waters, he assumes an excellent and lustrous form; and the wise sustainer (of all things) sweeps over

Varga II.

b Sinham the Scholiast considers as applicable to Agni, to imply his ability to suffer or be overcome,—sahanaśilam, abhi-bhavanaśilam. There does not seem to be any objection to the metaphorical use of the literal meaning of the word, 'a lion.'

^c Both may, also, intimate heaven and earth; or the two pieces of wood rubbed together to produce flame.

the source (of the rains, with his radiance), whence a concentration of light is spread abroad by the sportive deity.

- 9. The vast and victorious radiance of thee, the mighty one, pervades the firmament. Agni, who hast been kindled by us, preserve us with all thy undiminished and protecting glories.
- 10. He causes the waters to flow, in a torrent, through the sky; and, with those pure waves, he inundates the earth. He gathers all (articles of) food in the stomach, and, for that purpose, sojourns in the new-sprung parents (of the grain).
- 11. Agni, who art the purifier, growing with the fuel we have supplied, blaze, for the sake of (securing) food to us who are possessed of wealth; and may Mitra, Varuña, Aditi, ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us.

SÚRTA III. (XCVI.)

The Rishi and metre are as before; the deity is Agni, but either in his general character, or as Dravinodá.

varga III. 1. Engendered by force, AGNI, verily, appropriates, as soon as born, the offerings of the sages:

^{*} Budhna is the term, in this and in the next verse, for the antariksha, or firmament, as the root, or source, of the rains.

b The text has merely navdsu * prasushu,—in the new parents, or mothers; that is, in the oshadhis, the annuals, or the cerealia, which ripen after the rains, and bear food, being impregnated by the terrestrial Agni.

the waters and voice make him their friend; and the gods retain him, as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.

- 2. (Propitiated) by the primitive laudatory hymn of Áyu, he created the progeny of the Manus, and pervades, with his all-investing splendour, the heavens and the firmament. The gods retain Agni, as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.
- 3. Approaching him, let all men adore Agni, the chief (of the gods), the accomplisher of sacrifices, who is gratified by oblations, and propitiated by praises, the offspring of food, the sustainer of (all men), the giver of continual gifts. The gods retain Agni, as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.
- 4. May AGNI, the dweller in the firmament, the nourisher with abundant benefits, the bestower of Swarga, the protector of mankind, the progenitor of heaven and earth, instruct my sons in the right way. The gods retain AGNI, as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.

^{*} The Agni alluded to is the ethereal or electric fire, combined, at its production, with rain and with sound.

b As the conveyer of oblations, the term is dravinodá, the giver of wealth; but the wealth is that of sacrifice, or abundance of clarified butter.

c Ayu is said, by the Scholiast, to be another name of Manu. What is intended by the progeny of the Manus is not very obvious; but it appears to intend simply mankind. The Scholiast says, being hymned by Manu, he created all the offspring of Manu (Manuná stutah san mánavíh sarváh prajá ajanayat).

[.] d The term is prathama,—the first, which the Commentator interprets by mukhya, chief.

5. The night and the day, mutually effacing each other's complexion, give nourishment, combined together, to one infant, who, radiant, shines between earth and heaven. The gods retain Agni, as the giver of sacrificial wealth.

Varga IV.

- 6. The source of opulence, the bestower of riches, the director of the sacrifice, the accomplisher of the desires (of the man) who has recourse to him,—him the gods, preserving their immortality, retain, as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.
- 7. The gods retain AGNI,—as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth,—who now is, and heretofore has been, the abode of riches, the receptacle of all that has been, and all that will be, born, and the preserver of all (that) exists, (as well as of all) that are coming into existence.
- 8. May Draviñodá grant us (a portion) of moveable wealth; may Draviñodá grant us (a portion) of that which is stationary; may Draviñodá give us food, attended by progeny; may Draviñodá bestow upon us long life.
 - 9. Thus, Agni, who art the purifier, growing with the fuel (we have supplied), blaze, for the sake of securing food to us who are possessed of wealth; and may Mitra, Varuña, Aditi, ocean, earth, heaven, preserve it to us.

[•] Agni, whom they nourish with the oblations offered during their continuance.

Varga V.

SÚKTA IV. (XCVII.)

The Rishi is the same; the deity, Agni, as pure fire, or that of which purity is the attribute; the metre is Gáyatri.

- 1. May our sin, AGNI, be repented of. Manifest riches to us. May our sin be repented of.
- 2. We worship thee, for pleasant fields, for good roads, and for riches. May our sin be repented of.
- 3. (In like manner as, among these thy worshippers, Kutsa) is the pre-eminent panegyrist, so are our encomiasts (of thee) the most distinguished. May our sin be repented of.
- 4. Inasmuch as thy worshippers (are blessed with descendants), so may we (by repeating thy praise,) obtain posterity. May our sin be repented of.
- 5. Since the victorious flames of Agni penetrate universally, may our sin be repented of.

Apa nah sosuchad agham. Sosuchat is from such, to sorrow, in the intensative form, and the Vaidik imperative, or let, with apa prefixed, although locally detached. The commentator proposes two interpretations: "Let our sin pass away from us, and light upon our adversaries;" or, "Let our sin, affected by grief, perish." Rosen renders it, nostrum expictur scelus.

b Pra * jdyemahi * vayam; from jan, to be born:—May we be born successively, in the persons of our posterity. Rosen has vincamus tuo auxilio; but this is, evidently, an oversight, from confounding the radical with ji—jaye, conquering. M. Langlois follows his rendering, with some additions:—O Agni! si ces chefs de famille, si nous-mêmes nous nous avançons avec respect, puissions-nous obtenir la victoire!

- 6. Thou, whose countenance is turned to all sides, art our defender. May our sin be repented of.
- 7. Do thou, whose countenance is turned to all sides, send off our adversaries, as if in a ship, (to the opposite shore). May our sin be repented of.
- 8. Do thou convey us, in a ship, across the sea, for our welfare. May our sin be repented of.

SÚKTA V. (XCVIII.)

The Rishi, as before; the deity is either Vaiśwanara, or the pure (śuddha) Agni; the metre is Trishtubh.

Varga VI.

- 1. May we continue in the favour of Vaiśwá-NARA; a for, verily, he is the august sovereign of all beings. As soon as generated from this (wood), he surveys the universe; he accompanies the rising sun.
- 2. Agni, who is present in the sky, and present upon earth, and who, present, has pervaded all herbs,—may the Agni Vaiśwánara, who is present

b Either as the combined heat with solar radiance; or, it is said, that, at the rising of the sun, in proportion as the solar rays descend to earth, so the rays of the terrestrial fire ascend, and mix with them.

[°] Prishta, explained by sansprishta, in contact with, or nihita, placed, or present, in the sky. Agni is in contact with, or present in, the sun; on earth, in sacred and domestic fire; and, in herbs, or annuals, as the cause of their coming to maturity.

in vigour, guard us, night and day, against our enemies.

3. Vaiśwánara, may this (thy adoration be attended) by real (fruit): may precious treasures wait upon us: and may Mitra, Varuña, Aditi, ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve them to us.

SÚKTA VI. (XCIX.)

The Rishi is Kaśyapa, the son of Maríchi; and the Hymn, consisting of a single stanza, in the Trishtubh metre, is addressed to Agni, as Játavedas.^b

1. We offer oblations of Soma to Játavedas. Varga VII. May he consume the wealth of those who feel enmity against us: may he transport us over all difficulties. May Agni convey us, as in a boat over a river, across all wickedness.

SÚKTA VII. (C.)

The deity is Indea; the Rishis are the Várshágiras,—or five sons of Vrishágir, a Rájá,—who were Rájarshis, or regal sages, severally named in the seventeenth stanza; the metre is Trishtubh.

1. May he, who is the showerer of desires; who Varga VIII.

Rosen has divitie nos opulentos sequentor; but the maghavanah of the text cannot be the accusative plural, which would be either maghavatah or maghanah. It is the adjective of the word immediately preceding, rayah, 'riches,' here said to mean wealth in family, or sons, grandsons, &c.

b There is nothing remarkable in this Súkta, except its brevity, it consisting of a single stanza.

[•] We have no mention of Vrishágir and his sons in the Puráhas.

is co-dweller with (all) energies, the supreme ruler over the vast heaven and earth, the sender of water, and to be invoked in battles;—may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

- 2. May he, whose course, like that of the sun, is not to be overtaken; who, in every battle, is the slayer of his foes, the witherer (of opponents); who, with his swift-moving friends, (the winds), is the most bountiful (of givers);—may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.
- 3. May he, whose rays, powerful and unattainable, issue forth, like those of the sun, milking (the clouds); he, who is victorious over his adversaries, triumphant by his manly energies;—may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.
- 4. He is the swiftest among the swift, most bountiful amongst the bountiful, a friend with friends, venerable among those who claim veneration, and preeminent among those deserving of praise. May Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.
- 5. Mighty with the Rudras, as if with his sons; victorious in battle over his enemies; and sending down, with his co-dwellers, (the waters, which are productive of) food,—Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

Angirobhir angirastamah, "the most Angiras of Angirasas," which might be thought to refer to the Rishis so named: but the Commentator derives it from ang, to go, and explains angirasah by gantárah, goers; 'those who go swiftly.'

Varga IX.

- 6. May he, the represser of (hostile) wrath, the author of war, the protector of the good, the invoked of many, share, with our people, on this day, the (light of the) sun. May Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.
- 7. Him his allies, the MARUTS, animate in battle; him men regard as the preserver of their property: he alone presides over every act of worship. May INDRA, associated with the MARUTS, be our protection.
- 8. To him, a leader (to victory), his worshippers apply, in contests of strength, for protection and for wealth; as he grants them the light (of conquest), in the bewildering darkness (of battle). May Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.
- 9. With his left hand he restrains the malignant; with his right, he receives the (sacrificial) offerings: he is the giver of riches, (when propitiated) by one who celebrates his praise. May Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.
 - 10. He, along with his attendants, is a bene-

[•] The Várshágiras are supposed to address this prayer to Indra, that they might have daylight, in which to attack their enemies, and to recover the cattle that had been carried away by them, or that the light may be withheld from their opponents.

b The expression jyotish, 'light,' and chittamasi, 'in the darkness of thought,' may, also, be applied more literally, and express the hope that Indra will give the light of knowledge to darkness of understanding.

factor: he is quickly recognized by all men, to-day, through his chariots: by his manly energies he is victor over unruly (adversaries). May INDRA, associated with the MARUTS, be our protection.

- Varga X.
- 11. Invoked by many, he goes to battle, with his kinsmen, or with (followers) not of his kindred: he secures the (triumph) of those who trust in him, and of their sons and grandsons. May INDRA, associated with the MARUTS, be our protection.
- 12. He is the wielder of the thunderbolt, the slayer of robbers, fearful and fierce, knowing many things, much eulogized, and mighty, and, like the Soma juice, inspiring the five classes of beings with vigour. May Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.
- 13. His thunderbolt draws cries (from his enemies); he is the sender of good waters, brilliant as (the luminary) of heaven, the thunderer, the promoter of beneficent acts: upon him do donations and riches attend. May Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.
- 14. May he, of whom the excellent measure (of all things), through strength, eternally and everywhere cherishes heaven and earth, propitiated by our acts, convey us beyond (evil). May Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.
 - 15. Nor gods, nor men, nor waters, have reached the limit of the strength of that beneficent (divinity); for he surpasses both earth and heaven by his foe-consuming (might). May INDRA, associated with the MARUTS, be our protection.

[•] Savasd manam, the distributor of all things, through his power. Or it may mean, that he is the pretotype of everything endued with vigour.

16. The red and black coursers,—long-limbed, well-caparisoned, and celestial, and harnessed, well-pleased, to the yoke of the chariot in which the showerer of benefits is conveyed, for the enrichment of Rijráśwa,—are recognized amongst human hosts.

17. Indra, showerer (of benefits), the Várshá-Giras,—Rijráśwa, and his companions, Ambarísha, Sahadeva, Bhayamána, and Surádhas,—address to thee this propitiatory praise.

18. Indra, who is invoked by many, attended by the moving (Maruts), having attacked the Dasyus and the S'imyus, slew them with his thunderbolt: the thunderer then divided the fields with his white-complexioned friends, and rescued the sun, and set free the water.

^{*} The text has na yasya dovd dovatá. The latter is said to be put for dovasya, a Vaidik license, and is explained, "endowed with the properties of giving, &c.": (dánádiguňayuktasya).

b Ndhushishu vikshu. Nahusha is explained by 'man;' whence the derivative will mean manly, or human: viś also imports 'man;' whence Rosen renders the phrase, inter humanas gentes. The Scholiast interprets vikshu by senálakshańdsuprajdsu, "people designated as an army."

^c The commentary explains these, 'enemies' and Rákshasas; but they, more probably, designate races not yet subjected by the Vaidik Hindus, or Arians.

a Sakhibhih świtnyebhih. These, according to the Scholiast,

19. May Indra be, daily, our vindicator; and may we, with undiverted course, enjoy (abundant) food; and may MITRA, VARUÑA, ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us.

SÚKTA VIII. (CI.)

The Riski is Kutsa, the son of Anguras; the deity, Indra: the metre of the first seven stanzas is Jagati; of the last four, Trisklubh.

- Varga XII.
- 1. Offer adoration, with oblations, to him who is delighted (with praise); who, with RIJIŚWAN, destroyed the pregnant wives of KRISHÑA. Desirous of protection, we invoke, to become our friend, him, who is the showerer (of benefits), who holds the thunderbolt in his right hand, attended by the MARUTS.
- 2. We invoke, to be our friend, Indra, who is attended by the Maruts; him who, with increasing wrath, slew the mutilated VRITRA, and S'AMBARA, are the winds, or Maruts; but why they should have a share of the enemy's country, (śatruńam bhumim), seems doubtful. Allusion is, more probably, intended to earthly friends, or worshippers, of Indra, who were white (świtnya) in comparison with the darker tribes of the conquered country.

* Rijiswan is said to be a king, the friend of Indra: Kṛishāa, to be an Asura, who was slain, together with his wives, that none of his posterity might survive. [See Vol. II., p. 35, note b, and Vol. III., p. 148, note 7.] Kṛishāa, the black, may be another name for Vṛitra, the black cloud; or we may have, here, another allusion to the dark-complexioned aborigines.

and the unrighteous Pipru, and who extirpated the unabsorbable S'ush A.

- 3. We invoke, to become our friend, Indra, who is attended by the Maruts; whose great power (pervades) heaven and earth; in whose service Varuña and Súrya are steadfast; and whose command the rivers obey.
- 4. Who is the lord over all horses and cattle; who is independent; who, propitiated by praise, is constant in every act; and who is the slayer of the obstinate abstainer from libations: we invoke, to become our friend, INDRA, attended by the MARUTS.
- 5. Who is the lord of all moving and breathing creatures; who, first, recovered the (stolen) kine, for the Brahman; and who slew the humbled Dasyus: we invoke, to become our friend, Indra, attended by the Maruts.
- 6. Who is to be invoked by the brave and by the timid, by the vanquished and by victors, and whom all beings place before them, (in their rites):

^{*} S'ambara and Pipru are, both, termed Asuras. The latter is also styled avrata, not performing, or opposing, vratas, or religious rites.

b Sushiam asusham, the dryer up; who is without being dried up, who cannot be absorbed.

^{*} Brahmańs, that is, for Angiras, or the Angirasas, who, according to the Scholiast, were of the Brahmanical caste. Several passages concur in stating the cows to have been stolen from the Angirasas; and Angiras cannot be identified with Brahmá. The term used, therefore, very probably denotes a Brahman: so Rosen has Brahmani * vaccas tribuit.

we invoke, to become our friend, Indra, attended by the Maruts.

Varga XIII.

- 7. The radiant Indra proceeds (along the firmament), with the manifestation of the Rudras: through the Rudras, speech spreads with more expansive celerity, and praise glorifies the renowned Indra: him, attended by the Marurs, we invoke, to become our friend.
- 8. Attended by the winds, giver of true wealth, whether thou mayest be pleased (to dwell) in a stately mansion, or in a lowly dwelling, come to our sacrifice. Desirous of thy presence, we offer thee oblations.
- 9. Desirous of thee, Indra, who art possessed of excellent strength, we pour forth, to thee, libations: desirous of thee, who art obtained by prayer, we offer thee oblations. Therefore, do thou, who art possessed of horses, sit down, with pleasure, upon the sacred grass, attended by the Marurs, at this sacrifice.

[•] Indra is here said to be radiant, through identity with the sun; and the Rudras, to be the same as the Maruts, in their character of vital airs, or práńah: as it is said, in another text, "When shining, he rises, having taken the vital airs of all creatures" (Yo'sau tapann udets sa sarveshám bhútánám práńan ádáyodeti). Hence, also, the subservience of the Rudras to the expansion of voice, or speech. Another application of the etymological sense of Rudra is here given by Sáyańa; he deriving it, as elsewhere, from the causal of rud, to weep. When the vital airs depart from the body, they cause the kindred of the deceased to weep: hence they are called Rudras.

- 10. Rejoice, INDRA, with the steeds who are of thy nature: open thy jaws; set wide thy throat, (to drink the Soma juice): let thy horses bring thee, who hast a handsome chin, (hither); and, benignant towards us, be pleased by our oblations.
- 11. Protected by that destroyer (of foes) who is united, in praise, with the Maruts, we may receive sustenance from Indra: and may Mitra, Varuña, Aditi, ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us.

SÚKTA IX. (CII.)

The Rishi and deity, as in the last: the metre of the first ten stanzas is Jagati; of the last, Trishiubh.

- 1. I address to thee, who art mighty, this ex- Varga XIV. cellent hymn; because thy understanding has been gratified by my praise. The gods have successively delighted that victorious Indra with the power (of praise), for the sake of prosperity and wealth.
- 2. The seven rivers display his glory: heaven, and earth, and sky display his visible form. The sun and moon, INDRA, perform their revolutions, that we may see, and have faith in what we see.
- 3. Maghayan, despatch thy chariot, to bring us wealth,—that victorious car which, Indra, who art much praised, by us, in time of war, we rejoice to behold in battle. Do thou, Maghayan, grant happiness to those who are devoted to thee.
- 4. May we, having thee for our ally, overcome our adversaries in every encounter. Defend our portion; render riches easily attained by us; enfeeble, Maghavan, the vigour of our enemies.

5. Many are the men who call upon thee for thy protection. Mount thy car, to bring wealth to us; for thy mind, INDRA, is composed, and resolved on victory.

Varga XV.

- 6. Thy arms are the winners of cattle; thy wisdom is unbounded; thou art most excellent, the granter of a hundred aids in every rite. The author of war, INDRA is uncontrolled; the type of strength: wherefore, men who are desirous of wealth invoke him in various ways.
- 7. The food, MAGHAVAN, (which is to be given, by thee,) to men, may be more than sufficient for a hundred, or for more, even, than a thousand. Great praise has glorified thee, who art without limit, whereupon thou destroyest thy enemies.
- 8. Strong as a twice-twisted rope, thou art the type of strength: protector of men, thou art more than able to sustain the three spheres, the three luminaries, and all this world of beings, INDRA, who hast, from birth, ever been without a rival.
- 9. We invoke thee, Indra, the first among the gods. Thou hast been the victor in battles. May Indra put foremost, in the battle, this our chariot, which is efficient, impetuous, and the uprooter (of all impediments).

The three fires; or, the sun in heaven, lightning in mid-air, and fire (sacred or domestic,) on earth.

b Or the epithets may be applied to putra, a son, understood,

- 10. Thou conquerest, and withholdest not the booty. In trifling, or in serious, conflicts, we sharpen thee, fierce Maghavan, for our defence. Do thou, therefore, inspirit us, in our defiances.
- 11. May Indra daily be our vindicator; and may we, with undiverted course, enjoy abundant food: and may Mitra, Varuña, Aditi, ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us.

SÚKTA X. (CIII.)

The Rishi and deity, as before; the metre, Trishfubh.

- 1. The sages have formerly been possessed of Varga XVI. this thy supreme power, INDRA, as if it were present with them, a—one light of whom shines upon the earth; the other, in heaven: and both are in combination with each other; b as banner (mingles with banner,) in battle.
- 2. He upholds, and has spread out, the earth. Having struck (the clouds), he has extricated the b The sun and fire are equally, it is said, the lustre of Indra. In the day, fire is combined (samprichyate) with the sun; in the night, the sun is combined with fire.

[—]may Indra give us (a son), an offerer of praises, all-wise, and the subduer of foes, and (give us), also, a chariot foremost in battle.

^{*} The term is parachaih, which is rather equivocal. Rosen renders the phrase,—two robore * contra ipsorum inimicos directo; but it, rather, means the contrary,—inverse, averted (parachina, paramukha). But the other sense proposed by the Scholiast seems preferable.—abhimukham eva, as if present.

waters. He has slain AhI; he has pierced RAUHIÑA; he has destroyed, by his prowess, the mutilated (VRITRA).

- 3. Armed with the thunderbolt, and confident in his strength, he has gone on destroying the cities of the Dasyus. Thunderer, acknowledging (the praises of thy worshipper), cast, for his sake, thy shaft against the Dasyu, and augment the strength and glory of the Arya.
- 4. Maghavan, possessing a name that is to be glorified, offers, to him who celebrates it, these (revolving) ages of man. The thunderer, the scatterer (of his foes), sallying forth, to destroy the Dasyus, has obtained a name (renowned for victorious) prowess.

b We have, here, the Dasyu and Arya placed in opposition; the one, as the worshipper, the other, as the enemy of the worshipper. Dásih, as the adjective to purah, cities, is explained 'of, or belonging to, the Dasyus.' The mention of cities indicates a people not wholly barbarous, although the term may designate villages or hamlets.

[•] Nama biblirat. The Scholiast interprets nama, strength, "that which is the bender or prostrator of foes;" from nam, to bow down. But it does not seem necessary to adopt any other than the usual sense.

d Manushema yugani, 'these mortal yugas'; the Krita, Treta, &c., according to the Scholiast, which Indra successively evolves, in the character of the sun.

- 5. Behold this, the vast and extensive (might of INDRA): have confidence in his prowess. He has recovered the cattle; he has recovered the horses, the plants, the waters, the woods.
- 6. We offer the Soma libation to him who is the Varga XVII. performer of many exploits, the best (of the gods), the showerer (of benefits), the possessor of true strength, the hero who, holding respect for wealth, takes it from him who performs no sacrifice,—like a foot-pad (from a traveller),—and proceeds (to give it) to the sacrificer.
- 7. Thou didst perform, INDRA, a glorious deed, when thou didst awaken the sleeping AhI with thy thunderbolt. Then the wives (of the gods), the MARUTS, and all the gods, imitated thy exultation.
- 8. Inasmuch, Indra, as thou hast slain S'ushna, Pipru, Kuyava, and Vritra, and destroyed the cities of S'ambara, therefore may Mitra, Varuna, Aditi, ocean, earth, and heaven, grant us that (which we desire).

SÚKTA XI. (CIV.)

The Rishi, deity, and metre, as before.

1. The altar has been raised, INDRA, for thy Varga XVIII. seat: hasten to sit upon it,—as a neighing horse (hastens to his stable),—slackening the reins, and letting thy coursers free, who, at the season of sacrifice, bear thee, night and day.

We have only 'for the season of sacrifice,' prapitue,—for prapte,—literally, 'arrived;' synonymous, in the Nirukta, III., 20,

- 2. These persons have come to Indra, (to solicit) his protection. May he quickly direct them on the way. May the gods repress the wrath of the destroyer, and bring to our solemnity the obviator of evil.
- 3. (The Asura), knowing the wealth of others, carries it off, of himself. Present in the water, he carries off, of himself, the foam. The two wives of Kuyava bathe with the water: may they be drowned in the depths of the S'IPHÁ river.
- 4. The abiding-place of the vagrant (Kuyava) was concealed (in the midst) of the water. The hero increases, with the waters formerly (carried off), and is renowned (throughout the world). The Anjasí, Kulisí, and Vírapatní rivers, pleasing him with their substance, sustain him with their waters.
- 5. Since the track that leads to the dwelling of the Dasyu^d has been seen by us,—as a cow knows the way to her stall,—therefore do thou, Maghayan, (defend us) from his repeated violence: do not thou cast us away, as a libertine throws away wealth.

with adverbs signifying proximity,—near, nigh, at hand. The Scholiast supplies yágakále prápte, the time of sacrifice being arrived.

Presently named Kuyava. His exploits are obscurely alluded to; and the river Siphá is not elsewhere found.

b Aya is said, by the Scholiast, to be an appellative of Kuyava; from ay, to go,—one going about to do mischief to others.

[·] Neither of these is found in the Pauráńik lists.

d Of Kuyava, according to the commentary; intending, possibly, by him, one of the chiefs of the barbarians.

- 6. Excite, in us, INDRA, veneration for the sun, Varga XIX. for the waters, and for those who are worthy of the praise of living beings, as exempt from sin. Injure not our offspring, while yet in the womb; for our trust is in thy mighty power.
- 7. Hence, Indra, I meditate on thee: on this (thy power) has our trust been placed. Showerer (of benefits), direct us to great wealth: consign us not, thou who art invoked by many, to a destitute dwelling: give, Indra, food and drink to the hungry.
- 8. Harm us not, INDRA; abandon us not; deprive us not of the enjoyments that are dear to us. Injure not, affluent S'AKRA, our unborn offspring; harm not those who are capable (only of crawling) on their knees.
- 9. Come into our presence. They have called thee, fond of the Soma juice: it is prepared: drink of it, for thine exhilaration. Vast of limb, distend thy stomach; and, when invoked, hear us, as a father (listens to the words of his sons).

SÚKTA XII. (CV.)

The Hymn is addressed to the Viśwadevas, by Trita, or by Kutsa, on his behalf; the metre is Pankti, except in the eighth verse, where it is Mahábrihati Yavamadhyá, and in the last, where it is Trishtubh.

1. The graceful-moving moon speeds along the Varga XX.

^{*} Chandramáh * * suparhah. The latter the Scholiast explains, sobhanapatana, the well, or elegantly, going. Or it may mean, middle region in the sky: bright golden rays (my eyes,) behold not your abiding-place. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

- 2. Those who seek for wealth obtain it: a wife enjoys (the presence of) her husband, and, from their union, progeny is engendered. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).
- 3. Never, gods, may this (my ancestry), abiding above, in heaven, be excluded (from it); never may we be in want (of a son), the cause of joy (to his progenitors), entitled to libations of the Soma juice. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

[&]quot;connected with the ray of the sun called Suparka," the combination with which gives the moon its light.

This refers to the supposed position of Trita, at the bottom of the well, which, being covered over, shuts out from him all visible objects: see the story of Trita, Hymn LII., note a, p. 141.

b The text has only "heaven and earth, know of this of me" (vittam me asya rodasi); that is, according to Sáyaña, either "be aware of this my affliction," or "attend to this my hymn."

^o By failure of posterity, such as Trita anticipates for himself; as by a text quoted: "By a son, a man conquers the worlds: there is no world (loka) for one who has no son." It may be observed, of this reference, that, although the Scholiast cites the Veda,—iti śruteh,—the passage occurs in the Aitareya Bráhmaña. It may, possibly, be found in the text of a hymn; but it is, also, possible that Sáyaña includes the Bráhmaña under the designation Sruti; in which case we must receive his citations, generally, with reserve; for the Bráhmaña is not the Sruti, as applicable to the original Vaidik text, although it is so regarded by all the native interpreters of the Vedas. (See Introduction, pp. ix., &c.)

- 4. I implore the first (of the gods), the object of sacrifice, that he will become my messenger, and narrate (my condition to the other deities). Where, Agni, is thy former benevolence? What new being now possesses it? Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).
- 5. Gods, who are present in the three worlds, who abide in the light of the sun, where, now, is your truth? Where, your untruth? Where, the ancient invocation (that I have addressed) to you? Heaven and earth, be conscious of (my affliction).
- 6. Where, deities, is your observance of the truth? Where, the (benignant) regard of VARUÑA? Where is the path of the mighty ARYAMAN,^b (so that) we may overcome the malevolent? Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).
- 7. I am he, Gods, who formerly recited (your praise), when the libation was poured out. Yet sorrows assail me, like a wolf (that falls upon) a thirsty deer. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).
- 8. The ribs (of the well close) round me, like the rival wives (of one husband): cares consume me, S'ATAKRATU,—although thy worshipper,—as a rat a According to the (Astareya) Brahmana, Agnir vai devanam avamah; which the Scholiast explains, the first-produced of all the gods; as, by another text, Agnir mukham prathamo devatanam,—Agni is the mouth, the first, of the deities.

b Varuña is here explained to mean the 'obstructor of evil,' as what is undesired (anishtaniváraka); Aryaman, the restrainer of enemies (ariadin niyantá).

(gnaws a weaver's) threads. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

- 9. Those which are the seven rays (of the sun), in them is my navel expanded.^b TRITA, the son of the waters,^c knows that (it is so); and he praises them for his extrication (from the well). Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).
 - 10. May the five shedders d (of benefits), who ^{*} Which, according to the Scholiast, have been steeped in rice-water, to render them more tenacious, and which are, therefore, palatable to rats. Or it may be rendered, "as a rat gnaws, or licks, its tail, having just dipped it in oil, or grease." The practice of thickening threads with starch we have noticed by Manu, where the law requires that the cloth returned shall be heavier than the thread given, on this account (viii., 397).

b It is not very clear what is intended by the term nábhi. Rosen renders it domicile: Hi qui septem solis radii sunt, inter illos meum domicilium collocatum est. But it is not so explained in the commentary; and the ordinary sense of nábhi is navel, in which the Scholiast seems to understand it; identifying the solar rays with the seven vital airs abiding in the ruling spirit (teshu suryaraśmishwadhyátmam saptapráňarupeňa vartamáneshu); alluding, perhaps, though obscurely, to the mystic practice of contemplating the umbilical region, as the seat of the soul.

o Aptya, explained apám putrah, son of the waters. But it may be doubted if it can properly bear such an interpretation; for, as admitted by the Scholiast, such a patronymic from apa would be, properly, ápya; and the insertion of the t is an anomaly.

^d They are said to be Indra, Varuña, Agni, Aryaman, and Savitri, or, according to other texts, Fire, Wind, the Sun, the Moon, and the Lightning: for these, according to the S'átyáyana Bráhmaña, are, all, luminous, in their respective spheres; or, fire,

- 12. That new praiseworthy and commended (vigour)^b is seated in you, ye gods, (by which) the rivers urge on the waters, and the sun diffuses his constant (light). Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).
- 13. Worthy of praise, Agni, is that thy relationship (with the gods). Do thou, who art most wise, seated at our (solemnity), worship (the gods), as (at the sacrifice of) Manus.

upon earth, wind, in the firmament, the sun, in heaven, the moon, in the planetary region, and lightning, in the clouds. The Taittiriyas substitute, for lightning, the nakshatras, or asterisms, shining in the Swarloka.

Alluding, it is said, to a story of a wolf, who was about to swim across a river, to devour Trita, but was deterred by the brightness of the solar rays. According to Yáska, as quoted by Sáyana, he interprets vrika, the moon, and apah, the firmament, and renders the passage: "The rays of the sun prevent the moon from appearing, or being visible, in the firmament."

b Bala, 'strength,' is said, by the Commentator, to be understood, -of which ukthya, praiseworthy, is an epithet. Rosen takes ukthya for the substantive, in its not unusual sense of 'hymn,' and translates the text: Nova hac cantilena dicata est vobie, dii!

- 14. May that wise and liberal Agni, a sage amongst the gods, seated at our rite, as at the sacrifice of Manus, be the invoker of the deities, and offer them oblations. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).
- 15. VARUNA performs the rite of preservation. We desire him, as the guide of our way; (to him the repeater of praise) addresses praise, with his (whole) heart. May he, who is entitled to laudation, become our true (support). Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

Varga XXIII. 16. The sun, who is, avowedly, made the path in heaven, b is not to be disregarded, gods, by you; but you, mortals, regard him not. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

17. TRITA, fallen into the well, invokes the gods, for succour. BRIHASPATI, who liberates many from sin, heard (the supplication). Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

18. Once, a tawny wolf beheld me faring on my [•] Brahmá kriňoti Varuńah. The first is here explained, rakshaharupam karma, "the act which is of the nature of preserving."

b Asau yah panthá ádityo divi praváchyam kritah. One meaning of pantháh is given as an epithet of áditya, the sun, as satatagámi, the ever-going: but the more usual sense is a road, a path; and this interpretation is borne out by texts which represent the sun as the road to heaven; as Súryadvárcha te virajáh prayánti,—Those who are free from soil go by the gate of the sun.

o For the gods depend, for existence, indirectly upon the sun, who regulates the seasons at which sacrifices are offered.

way, and, having seen me, rushed upon me, (rearing); as a carpenter whose back aches (with stooping stands erect from his work).

19. By this recitation may we, becoming possessed of Indra, and strong with multiplied progeny, overcome our foes in battle; and may MITRA, VARUÑA, ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, be gracious to us, in this (request).

ANUVÁKA XVI.

STRTA I. (CVI.)

The Rishi is Kutsa, or it may be Trita: the Hymn is addressed to the Viśwadevas: the metre is Jagati, except in the last verse, in which it is Trishtubh.

- 1. We invoke, for our preservation, Indra, MITRA, Varga XXIV. VARUÑA, AGNI, the might of the MARUTS, and ADITI. May they, who are bountiful, and bestowers of dwellings, extricate us from all sin, as a chariot from a defile.
- 2. Sons of Adiri, come, with all (your hosts), to battle. Be, to us, the cause of happiness in combats;

^{*} The meaning of the comparison is not very clear, and is only rendered intelligible by the additions of the commentary. The wolf, like the carpenter, was irdhwdbhimukha (standing in presence erect). The passage admits of a totally different rendering, by interpreting vrika, the moon, and uniting má sakrit, me once, into másakrit, month-maker. He, the moon, it is said, having contemplated the constellations going along the path of the sky, became united with one of them; paying, therefore, no attention to Trita in the well.

and may they, who are bountiful, and bestowers of dwellings, extricate us from all sin, as a chariot from a defile.

- 3. May the Pitris, who are easily to be praised, protect us; and may the two divinities, heaven and earth, the promoters of sacrifices, and of whom the gods are the progeny, protect us; and may they, who are bountiful, and the givers of dwellings, extricate us from sin, as a chariot from a defile.
- 4. Exciting him who is the praised of men and the giver of food, (to be present) at this rite, we solicit, (also,) with our praises, him who is the purifier, and destroyer of heroes. May they, who are bountiful, and the givers of food, extricate us from sin, as a chariot from a defile.
- 5. Brihaspati, always confer happiness upon us. We solicit that faculty of both (alleviating pain and obviating peril), implanted in thee by Manu. May they, who are bountiful, and the givers of dwellings, extricate us from all sins, as a chariot from a defile.
 - 6. Kursa, the Rishi, thrown into a well, has ^{*} The Agnishwattas and others.—See Manu, 111., 195.

b In the first clause, it is said, Agni is alluded to; in the second, Pushan is named: but the term is explained, by the Scholiast, poshakam dovam,—nutrientem doum.

^o S'am yor yat to Manur hitam,—the good, or blessing, of those two (things, or properties,) which was placed in them by Manu. The two are explained, in the commentary, as in the translated text.

d Kutsa here identifies himself, apparently, with Trita.

invoked, to his succour, INDRA, the slayer of enemies, the encourager of good works. May they. who are bountiful, and the givers of dwellings, extricate us from all sin, as a chariot from a defile.

7. May the goddess Adiri, with the gods, protect us; and may the radiant guardian, (the sun), be vigilant for our protection; and may they, who are bountiful, and the givers of dwellings, extricate us from all sin, as a chariot from a defile.

SÚRTA II. (CVII.)

The Rishi is Kutsa; the deities, the Viśwadevas; the metre, Trishtubh.

1. May our sacrifice give satisfaction to the gods. Varga XXV. ADITYAS, be gracious; and may your good intentions be directed towards us, so as to be an abundant source of affluence to the poor.

- 2. May the gods, who are to be lauded by the hymns of the Angirasas, come hither, for our protection: may Indra, with his treasures; the Maruts, with the vital airs; and ADITI, with the ADITYAS; (come, and) give us felicity.
- 3. May Indra, may Varuna, may Agni, may ARYAMAN, may SAVITRI, bestow upon us that food (which we solicit); and may MITRA, VARUÑA, ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it (to us).

^{*} S'achipati; which might be rendered 'the husband of S'achi.' But the more usual sense of śachi, in the Veda, is karma, act, or rite; and it is so rendered, in this place, by the Commentator.

SÚRTA III. (CVIII.)

The Rishi is, still, Kutsa, who addresses Indra and Agni; the metre is Trishtubh.

- Varga XXVI. 1. Indra and Agni, sitting together, in your car, —that wonderful car which illuminates all beings,
 —approach, and drink of the effused Soma juice.
 - 2. Vast as is the whole universe in expanse, and profound in depth, such, Indra and Agni, may this Soma be, for your beverage,—sufficient for your desires.
 - 3. You have made your associated names renowned, since, slayers of VRITRA, you have been allied (for his death). The showerers of benefits, INDRA and AGNI, are the two seated together (on the altar). Receive (your portion) of the libation.
 - 4. The fires being kindled, the two (priests stand by), sprinkling the clarified butter from the ladles,—which they raise,—and spreading the sacred grass (upon the altar). Therefore, Indra and Agni, come before us, for our gratification, (attracted) by stimulating Soma juices sprinkled all around.
 - 5. Whatever heroic exploits you have achieved, whatever forms (you have created), whatever benefits (you have poured down), whatever ancient and fortunate friendships (you have contracted, come, with them all), and drink of the effused Soma juice.

We have merely, in the text, the epithets in the dual number: the Commentator supplies the Adhwaryu and his assistant priest.

- 6. Come, and witness the sincere faith with varga XXVII. which, selecting you two, I first promised (you the libation). Drink of the effused libation; for the Soma juice is prepared by the priests.
- 7. If, adorable Indra and Agni, you have ever been delighted (with libations,) in your own dwelling, in that of a Brahman, or in that of a prince, then, showevers of benefits, come hither, from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.
- 8. If, Indra and Agni, you are amongst men who are inoffensive, malevolent, or tyrannical, or those who live (to fulfil the duties of life), or those who receive the fruits (of good deeds), b then, b The terms thus rendered, in conformity to the explanations of the Scholiast, would seem, rather, to be intended for proper names,—the names of tribes or families well known in the Puránas,—being, severally, Yadus, Turvaśas, Druhyus, Anus and Púrus, descendants of the five sons of Yayáti, similarly named. (Mahábh., I., 138.) Here, however, Yadu is explained by ahinsaka, non-injurious; Turvaśa, by hinsaka, injurious; Druhyu, by upadravechehhu, tyrannical; Anu, by pránair yuktah, having breath, or life, wherewith to acquire knowledge and perform religious acts; and Púru, by kámaih púrayitavyah, to be filled full of the objects of desire. The meanings may be supported by the etymology of the words; but the interpretation seems to be a needless refinement.

showerers of benefits, come hither, from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.

- 9. Whether, Indra and Agni, you are in the lower, the central, or the upper, region of the world, showevers of benefits, come hither, from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.
- 10. Whether, Indra and Agni, you are in the upper, central, or lower, region of the world, come, showevers of benefits, hither, from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.
- 11. Whether, Indra and Agni, you are in heaven, or upon earth, in the mountains, in the herbs, or in the waters, showerers of benefits, come hither, from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.
- 12. Although, Indra and Agni, in the midst of the sky, on the rising of the sun, you may be exhilarated by your own splendour, yet, showevers of benefits, come hither, from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.
- 13. Thus, Indra and Agni, drinking deep of the libation, grant to us all (kinds of) wealth: and may MITRA, VARUÑA, and ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us.

SÚRTA IV. (CIX.)

Rishi, deities, and metre, as in the last.

Varga XXVIII.

1. Indra and Agni, desirous of wealth, I consider you, in my mind, as kinsmen and relations.

The clear understanding you have given me (is given) by no one else; and, (so gifted), I have composed this hymn to you, intimating my wish for sustenance.

2. I have heard, INDRA and AGNI, that you are more munificent givers than an unworthy bridegroom, or the brother of a bride. Therefore, as [·] Vijamatri. The prefix vi indicates, according to the Scholiast, a son-in-law (jamatri) who is not possessed of the qualifications required by the Vedas, and who is, therefore, obliged to conciliate his father-in-law by liberal gifts; which is, in fact, paying for, or buying, his wife; as in the interpretation of this stanza, by Yáska, it is said (Nirukta, VI., 9), that the vijámátri is the asusamapta, the unfulfilled, or unaccomplished, bridegroom, which implies, according to some, that he is the husband of a purchased bride (kritápati). This recognition, in the Veda, of the act of receiving money from the bridegroom is at variance with the general tenour of the law of marriage, as laid down by Manu, which condemns the acceptance of anything, by the father of a maiden, beyond a complimentary present, and censures the receipt of money, as equivalent to a sale: "Let no father who knows the law receive a gratuity, however small, for giving his daughter in marriage; since the man who, through avarice, takes a gratuity for that purpose is a seller of his offspring." (Laws of Manu, III., 51.) And, again: "A bribe, whether large or small, is an actual sale of the daughter;" although a bull and cow might be given at a marriage of saintly persons or Rishis. (Ibid., 53.) We have, here, therefore, an indication of a different condition of the laws of marriage.

b The syála, the brother of the maiden, who makes her gifts through affection. The word is derived, by Yáska, from sya, a winnowing-basket, and lá, for lájá, fried grains, which are scattered, at the marriage ceremony, by the bride's brother.

I offer you a libation, I address you, Indra and Agni, with a new hymn.

- 3. Never may we cut off the long line (of posterity). Thus soliciting and asking for descendants endowed with the vigour of their progenitors, the (worshippers), begetting children, praise INDRA and AGNI, for their happiness; and they two, destroyers of foes, are nigh, (to hear this adoration).
- 4. The sacred prayer, desiring your presence, offers to you both, Indra and Agni, for your exhilaration, the Soma libation. Do you two, who have horses, handsome arms, and graceful hands, come quickly, and mix (the libation) with sweetness in the waters.
- 5. I have heard, (when you were present) at the division of the treasure (among the worshippers), that you two, Indra and Agni, were most vigorous in the destruction of VRITRA. Beholders of all things, seated at this sacrifice, upon the sacred grass, be exhibit at the destruction of the effused libation).

Varga XXIX.

- 6. Attending to the summons, at the time of battle, you surpass all men (in magnitude): you are vaster than the earth, than the sky, than the rivers, than the mountains: you exceed all other existent things.
- 7. Bring wealth, thunderers, and give it to us: protect us, Indra and Agni, by your deeds. May those rays of the sun,^b by which our forefathers ^{*} Devi dhishand, divine speech,—mantrarupd, in the form of prayer.

b By the rays of the sun, in this place, it is said, are intended have attained, together, a heavenly region, shine also upon us.

8. Indra and Agni, wielders of the thunderbolt, overturners of cities, grant us wealth; defend us in battles: and may MITRA, VARUÑA, ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, be propitious to this (our prayer).

SÚKTA V. (CX.)

This Hymn is addressed to the RIBHUS: the Rishi is KUTSA: the eighth and ninth stanzas are in the Trishfubh; the rest, in the Jagati metre.

1. Ribhus, the rite formerly celebrated by me Varga XXX. is again repeated; and the melodious hymn is recited in your praise. In this ceremony, the Soma juice is sufficient for all the gods. Drink of it, to your utmost content, when offered on the fire.

2. When, RIBHUS, you, who were amongst my ancestors, yet immature (in wisdom), but desirous of enjoying (the Soma libations), retired to the forest, to perform (penance), then, sons of Sudhanwan,b the radiance of Indra and Agni, as identical with the sun. praising the latter, therefore, Indra and Agni are praised also.

^{*} Sapitwam is explained, sahapráptavyam sthánam, a place to be obtained together; that is, according to the Commentator, the world of Brahmá, to which the pious proceed by the path of light, &c.—(archirádimárgena * Brahmalokam upásaká gachchhanti).

b Sudhanwan, the father of the Ribhus, was a descendant of Angiras; so is Kutsa: therefore, they are related; although, as Kutsa is the son of Angiras, it seems not very consistent to call them through the plenitude of your completed (devotions), you came to the (sacrificial) hall of the worshipper, SAVITRI.

- 3. Then Savitri bestowed upon you immortality, when you came to him,—who is not to be concealed, —and represented (your desire) to partake of the libations; and that ladle for the sacrificial viands, which the Asura had formed single, you made fourfold.
- 4. Associated with the priests, and quickly performing the holy rites, they, being yet mortals, acquired immortality; and the sons of Sudhanwan, the Ribhus, brilliant as the sun, became connected with the ceremonies (appropriated to the different seasons) of the year.
- 5. Lauded by the bystanders, the RIBHUS, with a sharp weapon, meted out the single sacrificial ladle,—like a field (measured by a rod),—soliciting the best (libations), and desiring (to participate of) sacrificial food amongst the gods.

varga XXXI. 6. To the leaders (of the sacrifice), dwelling in his kinsmen of a former period (pránchah, or púrvakálínáh). Rosen calls them sapientes: but this is an evident inadvertence; as the epithet is apákáh, unripe; aparipakwajnánáh, immature in wisdom.

[•] In the preceding verse, Savitri, derived from su, to offer oblations, might mean merely the presenter of oblations; but here we have, evidently, the sun alluded to.

b Twashfri; as in a former passage.—See p. 48, note b.

[°] Nribhyah, i.e., yajnasya netribhyah; as in the text Ribhavo hi yajnasya netarah,—"The Ribhus are the leaders of the sacrifice;" on which account they obtained immortality. Or the term may the firmament, we present, as with a ladle, the appointed clarified butter, and praise, with knowledge, those Ribhus, who, having equalled the velocity of the protector (of the universe,—the sun), ascended to the region of heaven, through (the offerings) of (sacrificial) food.

- 7. The most excellent RIBHU is, in strength, our defender; RIBHU, through gifts of food and of wealth, is our asylum. May he bestow them upon us, gods, through your protection. May we, upon a favourable occasion, overcome the hosts of those who offer no libations.
- 8. RIBHUS, you covered the cow with a hide, and reunited the mother with the calf: b sons of Sudhanwan, leaders (of sacrifice), through your good works, you rendered your aged parents young.
- 9. Indra, associated with the Ribhus, supply us, in the distribution of viands, with food, and consent to bestow upon us wonderful riches: and may be connected with antarikshasya, which precedes, in the text, and may mean, as Rosen has it, to the chiefs of the firmament (aeris regibus).

- A text of the Veda identifies the Ribhus with the solar rays (Adityaraśmayo'pyribhava uchyante). The Ribhus are, indeed, said to be the rays of the sun.
- b A story is related, that a Rishi, whose cow had died, leaving a calf, prayed to the Ribhus for assistance, on which they formed a living cow, and covered it with the skin of the dead one, from which the calf imagined it to be its own mother.

s See p. 47.

MITRA, VARUÑA, ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve them for us.

SÚRTA VI. (CXI.)

The Rishi and deities are the same: the metre of the fifth verse is Trishtubh; of the rest, Jagati.

Varga

- 1. The RIBHUS, possessed of skill in their work, constructed (for the Aświns,) a well-built car: they framed the vigorous horses bearing Indra; they gave youthful existence to their parents; they gave, to the calf, its accompanying mother.
 - 2. Prepare fully, for our sacrifice, resplendent's sacrificial food, and, for our rite, and for our strength, such nutriment as may be the cause of excellent progeny; so that we may live (surrounded) by vigorous descendants. Such wealth do you confer upon us, for our benefit.
 - 3. RIBHUS, conductors (of sacrifice), bestow ample sustenance upon us, upon our chariots, upon our horses. Let every one daily acknowledge our victorious wealth; and may we triumph, in battle, over our foes, whether strangers or kinsmen.
 - 4. I invoke the mighty o Indra, for protection;

See the preceding Hymn; also, Hymn xx., p. 45.

b Ribhumat; explained, having much light: for, according to the Nirukta etymology, ribhu means 'much light,' from uru much, and bhá, to shine.

[°] Ribhukshanam Indram might be 'Indra, who is Ribhukshan,' of which Ribhukshanam is the accusative. In the following expressions, Ribhun and váján, plural accusatives, we are to understand, and the RIBHUS, VÁJAS, and MARUTS, to drink the Soma juice; also, both MITRA, VARUÑA, and the Aświns: and may they direct us to opulence, to holy rites, and to victory.

5. May RIBHU supply us with wealth for war; may Vája, victorious in battle, protect us; and may Mitra, Varuña, Aditi, ocean, earth, and heaven, be propitious to this (our prayer).

SÚRTA VII. (CXII.)

The Rishi is Kursa: the first quarter-stanza is addressed to the Earth and Sky; the second, to Agni; the rest of the Hymn, to the Aswins. The metre of the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth stanzas is Trishiubh; of the rest, Jagati.

- 1. I praise Heaven and Earth, for preliminary meditation, (prior to the coming of the Aświns): I praise the hot and bright-shining Agni, upon their approach, (as preparatory) to their worship. With those appliances with which you sound the conchshell, in battle, for your share (in the booty),—with those aids, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.
- 2. Earnest and exclusive adorers stand, Aświns, round your car, (to benefit) by your bounty; as (disciples listen) to the words (of a teacher), for

according to the Commentator, the three sons of Sudhanwan,—Ribhu, Vibhu, and Vája.

[•] Utiblish, instr. plur. of úti, help, aid, assistance, protection. It is rather an awkward term to render into English with the sense of plurality, although not without precedent.

instruction. With those aids with which you defend the pious who are engaged in acts of worship, come, Aświns, willingly, hither.

- 3. By the vigour infused from celestial nectar, you are able, leaders (of sacrifice), to rule over those beings (who people the three worlds). With those aids by which you gave (milk) to the barren cow, come, Aświns, willingly, hither.
- 4. With those aids by which the circumambient (wind), endowed with the vigour of his son, be the measurer of the two worlds (of heaven and earth), and swiftest of the swift, beautifies (all things), and by which (Kakshívat) became learned in the three kinds of sacrifice; —with them come, Aświns, willingly, hither.

^{*} Alluding, according to the commentary, to the cow of a Rishi named S'ayu, to which, although barren, the Aświns, at his entreaty, gave abundance of milk. [See p. 313; also, Vol. IV., passim.]

b Agni is said to be the son of Váyu; as by the text Váyor Agnih, either as generated, in the character of digestive warmth, by the vital airs, or as having been excited into flame, by the wind, at the time of creation.

[•] Dwimatri may be applied to the wind, in conjunction with Agni, as the respective occupants of the earth and the firmament; the former being the region of Agni, the latter, of Váyu. Or it may be rendered, as in former instances, 'the son of two mothers;' or the two sticks used for attrition, and, thence, be applicable to Agni.

d Or trimantu, acquainted with the pákayajnas, or offerings of food; the haviryajnas, or oblations of clarified butter; and the somayajnas, or libations of Soma juice. In this sense, trimantu

- 5. With those aids by which you raised up, from the water, Rebha, who had been cast, bound, (into a well), and also Vandana (similarly circumstanced), to behold the sky; by which you protected Kanwa, when longing to see the light; —with them, Aswins, come, willingly, hither.
- 6. With those aids by which you rescued Antaka, (when cast) into a deep (pool), and about to be destroyed; by which, inflicting no distress, you preserved Bhujyu; and by which you relieved Karkandhu and Vayya; —with them, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.

Varga XXXIV.

is synonymous, apparently, with Kakshivat, whose name is supplied by the Scholiast.

[•] Rebha and Vandana are said to have been Rishis who were cast into wells by the Asuras. According to the Niti-manjari, they brought this upon themselves, by maintaining a friendly intercourse with the Asuras. Kańwa is said, also, to have been thrown, by them, into darkness. In these, and similar instances subsequently noticed, we may, possibly, have allusions to the dangers undergone, by some of the first teachers of Hinduism, among the people whom they sought to civilize.

b Antaka is called a Rájarshi, whom the Asuras threw into a pond, or a well.

of Bhujyu, the son of the Rájá Tugra, we shall hear again, rather more in detail. The tradition is remarkable. Bhujyu had embarked on a maritime expedition against the enemies of his father, but encountered a storm, in which his vessel was lost; he was saved, and brought back to his father, by the intervention of the Aświns.

^d These are said to be Asuras whom the Aswins extricated from misfortunes: but, for the latter, see p. 149.

- 7. With those aids by which you enriched S'UCHANTI, and gave him a handsome habitation, and rendered the scorching heat pleasurable to ATRI; and by which you preserved Prisnigu and Purukutsa;—with them, Aswins, come, willingly, hither.
- 8. Showerers (of benefits), with those aids by which you enabled (the lame) Parávrij (to walk), the blind (Rijráśwa) to see, and (the cripple) S'roña to go; and by which you set free the quail, when seized (by a wolf);—with those aids, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.
- 9. With those aids by which you caused the sweet stream to flow; by which you, who are exempt from decay, gratified Vasishtha; and by which

No account is given of this person.

b Atri, the patriarch, was thrown, it is said, by the Asuras, into a cave with a hundred doors, at all of which fires of chaff were kindled: they were extinguished, with cold water, by the Aświns. Or, according to Yáska, Atri is, here, a name of Agni,—the eater (atri) of clarified butter,—but whose appetite, or intensity, being checked by the heat of the sun in the hot weather, was renovated by the rain sent down by the Aświns.

^c We have no particulars of these, except that Priśnigu is so named from his possessing brindled cows (priśnayo * gávo yasya).

d Parávrij is called a Rishi; so are Rijráswa and Sroha. The first is named without an epithet, in the text; instead of the second (see p. 259), we have prándha, the totally blind; and Sroha is not called a cripple, but is said to have been made to walk. The Scholiast supplies the details. [But see Vol. II., p. 242, note b.]

[•] Vartiká the commentary calls a bird like a sparrow: the ordinary sense is 'quail.'

you protected Kutsa, S'Rutarya, and Narya; --- with them, Aswins, come, willingly, hither.

- 10. With those aids by which you enabled the opulent Viśpalá, when she was unable to move, to go to the battle rich in a thousand spoils; and by which you protected the devout Vaśa, the son of Aśwa; b—with them, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.
- 11. With those aids by which, beauteous donors, Varga XXXV. the cloud (was made to) shed its sweet (water), for the sake of the merchant Dírghaśravas, the son of Uśij; and by which you protected the devout Kakshívat; —with them, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.
- 12. With those aids by which you filled the (dry) river-bed with water; by which you drove the chariot, without horses, to victory; and by which Trisoka recovered his (stolen) cattle;—with them, Aswins, come, willingly, hither.

^{*} Vasishtha is well known; but in what manner he was assisted by the Aświns does not appear. Of the three others named in the text, it is only said that they were Rishis.

b The story of Viśpalá is subsequently more fully alluded to. She was the wife of Khela, the son of Agastya. Vaśa and Aśwa are called Rishis.

o Dirghasravas was the son of Dirghasamas, and, therefore, a Rishi. But, in a time of famine, he followed trade, to obtain a livelihood: hence he is termed a vanik, a merchant. As the son of Usij, he should be the same as Kakshivat (see p. 42, note a); but the text treats them, apparently, as distinct.

^d Triśoka is called a Rishi, the son of Kańwa. These holy persons were much exposed, apparently, to cattle-stealing.

- 13. With those aids by which you encompassed the sun, when afar off, (to extricate him from eclipse); by which you defended Mandhátri, in (the discharge of) his sovereign functions; and by which you protected the sage Bharadwája; —with them, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.
- 14. With those aids by which you defended the mighty and hospitable DIVODÁSA, (when, having undertaken) the death of S'AMBARA, he hid himself in the water, (through fear of the Asuras); by which you protected TRASADASYU, in war;—with them, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.
- 15. With those aids by which you preserved VAMRA, praised by all around him, when drinking (the dews of the earth); by which you protected Kall, when he had taken a wife, and Prith, when ^{*} Mandhátri is called a Rishi; but a Rájarshi, a royal sage, is intended; as Mándhátri is a celebrated prince of the solar dynasty (Vishñu Puráña, p. 363). His regal character is, also, evident from his office (kshaitrapatyeshu), the derivative of kshetrapati, the lord, either of fields or of the earth.

b Here we have, also, a name well known in Pauráńik tradition. (Vishňu Puráňa, p. 449, and note 15). He is termed, in the text, vipra, usually intending a Brahman, but here explained, medhávin, wise.

Oivodása is a king well known in the Pauráńik traditions (Vishňu Puráňa, p. 407). But no notice there occurs of his war with the Asura Sambara, whom we have elsewhere seen destroyed by Indra (p. 148), in defence, it is also said (p. 137), of this prince, or, as he is there named, Atithigwa, the cherisher of guests (atithi), which is here employed as an epithet.

The son of Purukutsa, according to the Scholiast, concurring, in this respect, with the Vishhu Purdha, p. 371. [And see Vol. III., p. 205, note 1, also p. 272; and Vol. IV., p. 63.]

he had lost his horse; --with them, Aswins, come, willingly, hither.

16. With those aids, leaders (of sacrifices), which you afforded to S'AYU, to ATRI, and, formerly, to Manu, anxious (to show them) the way to (escape from evil); with those by which you shot arrows (upon the foes) of SYÚMARAŚMI; b—with them, Aświns, willingly come hither.

17. With those aids by which Patharvan° shone with strength of form in battle, like a blazing fire piled up (with fuel); by which you defended S'AR-YATA in war;—with them, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.

Varga XXXVI.

^{*} Vamra is called a Rishi, the son of Vikhanas. The text calls him vipipána, drinking much and variously, which the Scholiast explains, drinking, especially earthly moisture, or dew, párthivam rasam. (See p. 138.) Of Kali, no more is said than that he was a Rishi; nor of Prithi, than that he was a Rájarshi.

b The second and third names have occurred before. The first is called a Rishi. The text has only, "You wished them to go" (gátum ishathuh): the Scholiast adds, "out of evil or danger." Manu is here called a Rájarshi, whom the Aświns extricated from want, by teaching him the art of sowing the seeds of barley and other grains. Syúmaraśmi is styled a Rishi.

[°] Patharvan is merely called a Rájarshi. Saryáta is, probably, intended for Saryáti, the fourth son of Vaivaswata Manu (Vishhu Puráha, pp. 354, 358); and the same prince is, no doubt, meant, in a former passage (see p. 139), by Sáryáta, which may be an epithet of yajna, sacrifice, understood,—the sacrifice of Saryáti,—rather than a patronymic, although there rendered as a proper name, upon the authority of Sáyaha. "Of the race of Bhrigu" applies, also, to Chyavana, not to Saryáti. [But see Vol. III., p. 81.]

- 18. Angeras, (praise the Aswins). Aswins, with those aids by which, with (gratified) minds, you delight (in praise), and thence preceded the gods to the cavern, to recover the stolen cattle; by which you sustained the heroic Manu with food; bwith them, Aswins, come, willingly, hither.
- 19. With those aids by which you gave a wife to Vimada; by which you recovered the ruddy kine; by which you conferred excellent wealth upon Sudás; —with them, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.
- 20. With those aids by which you are bestowers of happiness upon the donor (of oblations); by which you have protected Bhujyu and Adhrigu; and by which you have granted delighting and nourishing (food) to RITASTUBH; —with them, Aswins, come, willingly, hither.

b By making him aware, according to the commentary, of the grain hidden in the earth, or teaching him, in fact, agriculture.

^o The Aświns were the means, it is said, of obtaining the daughter of Purumitra as a wife for the Riski Vimada.

The name of a king, the son of Pijavana (p. 127). [Also see .Vol. III., p. 50, note 2,—where correct "Piyavana"; and Vol. IV., p. 62.] Both names are unknown in the Puráñas,—although we have more than one Sudása,—but they are sprung from other princes. (Vishhu Puráña, pp. 380, 455.) A prince named Paiyavana, or son of Piyavana, is noticed by Manu, VIII., 110.

[•] Bhujyu has been named before (p. 289, note c). Adhrigu is called a sacrificer, or immolator, along with Chápa, of the gods; as by the text: Adhrigus Chápas cha ubhau devánám samitárau. Ritastubh is called a Rishi. [See Vol. IV., p. 264.]

Varga XXXVII.

- 21. With those aids by which you defended Krisánu, in battle; with which you succoured the horse of the young Purukutsab in speed; and by which you deliver the pleasant honey to the bees;—with them, Aswins, come, willingly, hither.
- 22. With those aids by which you succoured the worshipper contending in war for cattle; by which you assist him in the acquisition of houses and wealth; by which you preserve his chariots and horses;—with them, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.
- 23. With those aids by which you, who are worshipped in many rites, protected Kutsa, the son of Arjuna, as well as Turvíti, Dabhíti, Dhwasanti, and Purushanti; wwith them, Aświns, come, willingly, hither.
- 24. Aświns, sanctify our words with works: showerers (of benefits), subduers of foes, (invigorate)

^{*} Kriśánu is enumerated, by the Taittiriyas, amongst a class called somapálas, venders or providers,—apparently, of the Soma plants; as by the text: Hastasuhastakriśánavah, te vah somakrayańáh. The term occurs also amongst the synonyms of Agni. [Also see Vol. III., p. 174.]

b Purukutsa, in the Purahas, is the son of Mandhatri, and husband of Narmada, the river (Vishhu Puraha, p. 371). The text has only "of the young:" the comment supplies Purukutsa. [See Vol. III., p. 205, note 1.]

d Kutsa and Turviti have occurred before, although the affiliation of the former is new. Of the other names no account is given, except that Purushanti is that of a Rishi.

our understanding, (for the sacred study). We invoke you both, in the last watch of the night, for our preservation. Be to us for increase in the provision of food.

25. Cherish us, Aświns, always, by night or day, with undiminished blessings: and may MITRA, VARUÑA, ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, be favourable to this (our prayer).

EIGHTH ADHYAYA.

SÚKTA VIII. (CXIII.)

The Hymn is addressed to Ushas (the Dawn), and, in the second half of the first stanza, also to Night. The Rishi is Kutsa; the metre, Trishiubh.

Varga I.

1. This most excellent luminary of all luminaries has arrived: the wonderful and diffusive manifester (of all things) has been born. In like manner as night is the offspring of the sun, so she becomes the birth-place of the dawn.

[•] Advitye, 'in the absence of light;' that is, in the last watch of the night, or that preceding the dawn, at which time, according to Aśwaláyana, as quoted by Sáyana, the Aświns are especially to be worshipped.

b That is, when the sun sets, the night comes on; or it is generated by the setting of the sun, and may, figuratively, be termed his offspring; and, in like manner, as the precursor, night may be termed the parent, or womb, of the dawn.

- 2. The white-shining dawn, the parent of the sun, has arrived: dark night has sought her own abode. Both allied to the same (sun), immortal, succeeding to each other, and mutually effacing each other's complexion, they traverse the heavens.
- 3. The path of the sisters is unending: they travel it alternately, guided by the radiant (sun). Combined in purpose, though of different forms, night and dawn, giving birth (to all things), obstruct not each other; neither do they stand still.
- 4. Brilliant guide of the speakers of truth, b the many-tinted dawn is recognized by us: she has opened our doors: having illuminated the world, she has made our riches manifest. Ushas gives back all the regions (that had been swallowed up by night).
- 5. The opulent (dawn) arouses to exertion the Varga II. man bowed down in sleep,-one man, to enjoyments; another, to devotion; another, to (the acquirement of) wealth. She has enabled those who were almost sightless to see distinctly. The expansive Ushas has given back all the regions.
- 6. The dawn rouses one man, to acquire wealth; another, to earn food; another, to achieve greatness; another, to sacrifices; another, to his own (pursuits); another, to activity; and lights all men to their

A like conceit to that of the preceding verse: the dawn precedes, and, therefore, figuratively bears, or is the parent of, the sun.

b Upon the appearance of the dawn, the animals and birds utter their true, or natural, cries.

various means of maintaining life. Ushas has given back all the regions.

- 7. The daughter of heaven, young, white-robed, the mistress of all earthly treasure, is beheld dissipating the darkness. Auspicious Ushas, shine upon us, to-day, in this (hall of sacrifice).
- 8. Following the path of the mornings that have passed, and first of the endless mornings that are to come, Ushas, the disperser of darkness, arouses living beings, and awakens every one (that lay) as dead.
- 9. Ushas, inasmuch as thou hast caused the sacred fire to be kindled, inasmuch as thou hast lighted the world with the light of the sun, inasmuch as thou hast wakened men to perform sacrifice, thou hast done good service to the gods.
- 10. For how long a period is it that the dawns have risen? For how long a period will they rise? Still desirous to bring us light, Ushas pursues the functions of those that have gone before, and, shining brightly, proceeds with the others (that are to follow).

Varga III.

- 11. Those mortals who beheld the pristine Ushas dawning have passed away: to us she is now visible; and they approach who may behold her in aftertimes.
- 12. The beings hostile (to acts of devotion) now withdraw; b for she is the protectress of sacred rites, who is manifested for their performance; she is the giver of happiness, the awakener of pleasant voices, the enjoyer of felicity, and provider of food for the gods. Most excellent Ushas, dawn, to-day, on this (sacrificial hall).

Fires for burnt-offerings being properly lighted at the dawn. Rákshasas and other malignant spirits vanish, with the dawn.

- 13. The divine Ushas dawned continually, in former times: the source of wealth, she still rises. on this (world). So will she give light hereafter, through future days; for, exempt from decay, or death, she goes on in her splendour.
- 14. The divine Ushas lights up, with her beams, the quarters of the heavens: she has thrown off her gloomy form, and, awaking (those who sleep), comes in her car drawn by purple steeds.
- 15. Bringing, with her, life-sustaining blessings, and giving consciousness (to the unconscious), she imparts (to the world) her wonderful radiance. The similitude of the numerous dawns that have gone by, the first of the brilliant (dawns that are to come), Ushas has to-day appeared.

16. Arise! Inspiring life revives; darkness has Varga IV. departed; light approaches. Ushas has opened the road for the sun to travel. Let us repair to where they distribute food.

•17. The offerer of praise, the reciter of praise, celebrating the brilliant Ushasas, repeats the wellconnected words (of the Veda). Possessor of affluence, dawn, to-day, upon him who praiseth thee; bestow upon us food, whence progeny may be obtained.

18. May he who has offered the libation obtain upon the conclusion of his praises, (enunciated), like the wind, (with speed,—the favour of) those Ushasas who are givers of horses, and of cattle, and of progeny, and who shed light upon the mortal presenting to them (offerings).

- 19. Mother of the gods, rival of Aditi, illuminator of the sacrifice, mighty Ushas, shine forth: approving of our prayer, dawn upon us. Do thou, who art cherished by all, make us eminent among the people.
- 20. Whatever valuable wealth the Ushasas convey is beneficial to the sacrificer and to the praiser. May Mitra, Varuña, Aditi, ocean, earth, and heaven, be favourable to this (our prayer).

SÚRTA IX. (CXIV.)

The deity is RUDBA; the Rishi, Kursa. The tenth and eleventh verses are in the Trishfubh metre; the rest, in the Jagati.

Varga V. 1. We offer these praises to the mighty RUDRA,

^{*} The gods are awakened at dawn, by the worship they then receive; and, hence, the dawn may be said, figuratively, to be their parent (mátá devánám); and, in that character, she is the enemy, or rival, of Aditi, who is their mother.

b We have a repetition, here, of the usual etymologies of Rudra, with some additions: He causes all to weep (rodayati) at the end of the world; or rut may signify 'pain,'—the pain of living, which he drives away (drávayati); or rut may mean 'word,' or 'text,' or the Upanishads of the Vedas, by which he is approached, or propitiated (drúyats); or rut may mean 'holy or divine speech,' or 'wisdom,' which he confers (ráti) upon his worshippers; or with the braided hair, the destroyer of heroes, in order that health may be enjoyed by bipeds and quadrupeds, and that all beings in this village may be (well-) nourished, and exempt from disease.

- 2. Be gracious to us, Rudra. Grant us happiness; for we worship the destroyer of heroes with oblations. And, by thy directions, Rudra, may we obtain that freedom from disease, and exemption from dangers, which our progenitor, Manu, bestowed upon us, (having obtained them from the gods).
- 3. Rudra, showever (of benefits), may we obtain, through our worship of the gods, the favour of thee, who art the destroyer of heroes. Come to our posterity, purposing to promote their happiness, while we, having our sons in safety, offer thee oblations.
 - 4. We invoke, for our preservation, the illustrious rut may mean 'darkness,' that which invests or obstructs (runaddhi) all things, and which he dissipates (driadti). Or, again, it is said, that, while the gods were engaged in battle with the Asuras, Rudra, identified with Agni, came and stole their treasure: after conquering the enemy, the gods searched for the stolen wealth, and recovered it from the thief, who wept (arudat); and Agni was, thence, called Rudra.

^{*} Kapardine, from kaparda, of which one meaning is, the jata, or braided hair, of Siva, whence the Scholiast gives, as its equivalent, jatildya. This looks very like a recognition of Siva in the person of Rudra. It is not easy to suggest any other interpretation, unless the term be an interpolation.

b Kshayad viráya, in whom heroes (viráh) perish (vinašyanti). Or it may mean, of whom the imperial (kshayantah práptaiśwaryáh) heroes (that is, the Maruts) are the sons. The epithet is repeated in the following verses.

RUDRA, the accomplisher of sacrifices, the tortuous, the wise. May he remove far from us his celestial wrath; for we earnestly solicit his favour.

5. We invoke, from heaven, with reverence, him who has excellent food, who is radiant, and has braided hair, who is brilliant, and is to be ascertained (by sacred study), holding, in his hands, excellent medicaments. May he grant us health, defensive armour, and a (secure) dwelling.

Varga VI. 6. This praise, the sweetest of the sweet, and cause of increase (to the reciter), is addressed to RUDRA, the father of the MARUTS.^d Immortal

b Vanku, he who goes crookedly. What is meant by this is not explained.

[°] The phrase is varáha, literally, a boar; and one who has a hard body, like a boar's, may be intended. But the Scholiast prefers considering it as an abbreviation of varáhára, from vara, good, and áhára, food.

The paternity of Rudra, with respect to the Maruts, is thus accounted for by the Scholiast: "After their birth from Diti, under the circumstances told in the Puráñas (Vishňu Puráňa, p. 152), they were beheld in deep affliction by Siva and Párvati, as they were passing sportively along. The latter said to the former: 'If you love me, transform these lumps of flesh into boys.' Maheśa accordingly made them boys, of like form, like age, and similarly accounted, and gave them to Párvati, as her sons, whence they are called the sons of Rudra." The Niti-manjari adds other legends; one, that Párvati, hearing the lamentations of Diti, entreated Siva to give the shapeless births forms, telling them not to weep (má rodih); another, that he actually begot RUDRA, grant us food sufficient for mortals, and bestow happiness on me, my son, and my grandson.

- 7. Injure not, RUDRA, those, amongst us, who are old, or young, who are capable of begetting, or who are begotten, nor a father, nor a mother; nor afflict our precious persons.
- 8. Harm us not, Rudra, in our sons, or grandsons, or other male descendants, nor in our cattle, nor in our horses. Inflamed with anger, kill not our valiant men; for we, presenting clarified butter, perpetually invoke thee.
- 9. I restore to thee the praises (derived from thee); as a shepherd (returns his sheep to their owner). Father of the Maruts, bestow happiness upon me. Thy auspicious benignity is the cause of successive delight: therefore, we especially solicit thy protection.
- 10. Destroyer of heroes, may thy cow-killing or man-slaying (weapon) be far away; and let the felicity granted by thee be ours. Favour us! Speak, brilliant hero, in our behalf; and grant us, thou who art mighty over the two (realms of heaven and earth), prosperity.
- 11. Desirous of protection, we have said: Reverence be to him. May RUDRA, with the MARUTS, them, in the form of a bull, on Prithivi, the Earth, as a cow. These stories are, evidently, fictions of a much later era than that of the Vedas,—being borrowed, if not fabricated, from the Tantras,—and may be set aside, without hesitation, as utterly failing to explain the meaning of those passages in the Vedas, which call the Maruts the sons of Rudra.

hear our invocation: and may MITRA, VARUÑA, ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, be favourable to this (our prayer).

SÚRTA X. (CXV.)

Kutsa is the Rishi; the deity is Súrva; the metre, Trishfubh.

- Varga VII.

 1. The wonderful host of rays has risen; the eye of MITRA, VARUÑA, and AGNI; the sun, the soul of all that moves or is immoveable, has filled (with his glory,) the heaven, the earth, and the firmament.
 - 2. The sun follows the divine and brilliant Ushas,—as a man (follows a young and elegant) woman,—at which season pious men perform (the ceremonies established for) ages, worshipping the auspicious (sun), for the sake of good (reward).

^a Or chakshus may mean 'the enlightener.' Mitra, Varuña, and Agni are said to be typical of the world,—or of the seasons, perhaps, over which they preside.

b Atmá jagatah, 'the soul of the world;' from his pervading and animating all things. Or jagatah may be rendered 'of what is moveable:' it is followed by tasthushah, 'of that which is fixed.' The sun is the cause of all effects, whether moveable or immoveable,—(sa hi sarvasya sthávarajangamátmakasya káryavargasya káraham).

o Yugani, which may also be rendered 'yokes for ploughs;' for, at this season (dawn), men, seeking to propitiate the gods by the profit which agriculture yields, equip their ploughs, or engage in the labours of the field.

- 3. The auspicious, swift horses of the sun, well-limbed, road-traversing, who merit to be pleased with praise, reverenced by us, have ascended to the summit of the sky, and quickly circumambulate earth and heaven.
- 4. Such is the divinity, such is the majesty, of the sun, that, when he has set, he has withdrawn (into himself) the diffused (light which had been shed) upon the unfinished task. When he has unyoked his coursers from his car, then night extends the veiling darkness over all.
- 5. The sun, in the sight of MITRA and VARUÑA,^b displays his form (of brightness) in the middle of the heavens; and his rays^c extend, on one hand, his infinite and brilliant power, or, on the other, (by their departure), bring on the blackness of night.
- 6. This day, gods, with the rising of the sun, deliver us from heinous sin: and may MITRA, VARUÑA, ADITI, ocean, earth, and heaven, be favourable to this (our prayer).

[•] Madhyá kartor vitatam, "spread in the middle of the affair;" that is, the cultivator, or artisan, desists from his labour, although unfinished, upon the setting of the sun.

b Mitra and Varuha are used, according to the commentary, by metonymy, for the world.

c Haritah, which may mean, also, his horses.

ANUVÁKA XVII.

SÚRTA I. (CXVI.)

The deities are the Aswins; the Rishi is Karshivar; the metre is Trishtubh.

- Varga VIII. 1. In like manner as a worshipper strews the sacred grass for the NÁSATYAS, so do I urge on their laudations,—as the wind drives on the clouds,—they who gave a bride to the youthful VIMADA, and bore her away in their car, outstripping the rival host.
 - 2. NÁSATYAS, borne by strong and rapid (steeds), and (urged) by the encouragements of the gods, the assb of you, thus instigated, overcame a thousand (enemies), in conflict, in the war grateful to YAMA.
 - 3. Tugra, e verily, Aswins, sent (his son,) Bhujyu

^{*} See p. 294. The story told by the Scholiast is, that Vimada, having won his bride at a swayamvara, or 'choice of a husband by a princess,' was stopped, on his way home, by his unsuccessful competitors, when the Aświns came to his succour, and placed the bride in their chariot, repulsed the assailants, and carried the damsel to the residence of the prince.

b An ass (rásabha) given by Prajápati. The chariot of the Aświns is drawn by two asses (rásabhávaświnoh)—Nighańtu, I., 14. Or it may mean "one going swiftly;" and the rest of the passage, "obtained precedence, for the Aświns, over other gods in the oblation, through his mastering the stanzas declared by Prajápati."

c See p. 289. Tugra, it is said, was a great friend of the Aświns. Being much annoyed by enemies residing in a different island, to sea; as a dying man parts with his riches. But you brought him back in vessels of your own, floating over the ocean, and keeping out the waters.

- 4. Three nights and three days, Násatyas, have you conveyed Bhujyu, in three rapid, revolving cars, having a hundred wheels, and drawn by six horses, along the dry bed of the ocean, to the shore of the sea.
- 5. This exploit you achieved, Aświns, in the ocean, where there is nothing to give support, nothing to rest upon, nothing to cling to,—that you brought Bhujyu, sailing in a hundred-oared ship, to his father's house.
- 6. Aświns, the white horse you gave to Pedu—whose horses were indestructible,—was ever, to him, success. That, your precious gift, is always to be celebrated: the horse of Pedu, the scatterer (of enemies), is always to be invoked.°

he sent his son Bhujyu against them, with an army, on board ship. After sailing some distance, the vessel foundered in a gale. Bhujyu applied to the Aświns, who brought him and his troops back, in their own ships, in three days' time, as appears from this and the two following stanzas.

- * This is a rather unintelligible account of a sea-voyage, although the words of the text do not admit of any other rendering.
- b Sataritrám návam, a ship with a hundred, that is, with many, oars. This stanza is consistent with the first of the triad.
- Pedu, it is said, was a certain Rájarshi, who worshipped the Aświns: they, therefore, gave him a white horse, through the possession of which he was always victorious over his enemies. [See Vol. IV., p. 154.]

- 7. You gave, leaders (of sacrifice), to Kakshivat, of the race of Pajra, various knowledge: you filled, from the hoof of your vigorous steed, as if from a cask, a hundred jars of wine.
- 8. You quenched, with cold (water), the blazing flames (that encompassed ATRI), and supplied him with food-supported strength: you extricated him, Aświns, from the dark (cavern) into which he had been thrown headlong, and restored him to every kind of welfare.°
- 9. Násatyas, you raised up the well, and made the base, which had been turned upwards, the curved mouth, so that the water issued, for the beverage of the thirsty Gotama, the offerer.^d
- 10. Násatyas, you stripped off, from the aged Chyavána, his entire skin, as if it had been a coat of mail; you reversed, Dasras, the life of the sage b No account of the occasion of this miracle is given.

⁴ This has been elsewhere related of the Maruts (p. 221). The manner in which the well was presented to Gotama is somewhat obscurely described. [See Vols. III. and IV., passim.]

[•] The restoration of the ascetic Chyavana to youth and beauty is related in several Puránas; following, probably, the Mahábhárata, Vana-parva, (Vol. I., p. 577). He is there called the son of Bhrigu, and was engaged in penance, near the Narmadá river, until the white ants constructed their nests round his body, and left only his eyes visible. Sukanyá, the daughter of King Saryáti, having come to the place, and seeing two bright spots in what who was without kindred, and constituted him the husband of many maidens.

Varga X.

- 11. Násatyas, leaders, glorious was that exploit of yours, one to be celebrated, to be adored, to be desired by us, when, becoming aware (of the circumstance), you extricated Vandana, (hidden,) like a concealed treasure, from the (well) that was visible (to travellers).
- 12. I proclaim, leaders (of sacrifice), for the sake of acquiring wealth, that inimitable deed which you performed,—as the thunder (announces) rain,—when, provided, by you, with the head of a horse, seemed to be an ant-hill, pierced them with a stick. visited the offence upon Saryáti and his attendants, and was appeased only by the promise of the king to give him his daughter in marriage. Subsequently, the Aświns, coming to his hermitage, compassionated Sukanya's union with so old and ugly a husband as Chyavana, and, having made trial of her fidelity, bestowed on the sage a similar condition of youth and beauty to their own. This story does not seem to be the same, however, as that of the text, in which no allusion occurs to Sukanyá, and the transformation of Chyavana precedes his matrimonial connexion. He is termed jahita, in the text,—properly, 'abandoned;' that is, according to the Scholiast, by sons, and others (putrádibhih parityaktah): but it may denote, perhaps, merely his solitary condition as an ascetic. In return for their friendly office, Chyavana compelled Indra to assent to the Aswins' receiving, at sacrifices, a share of the Soma libation, which is not noticed in the text.

* See p. 289. For 'well' we have only darsatát, in the text,—that which was to be seen by thirsty travellers, according to the commentary.

DADHYACH, the son of ATHARVAN, taught you the mystic science.

- 13. The intelligent (VADHRIMATÍ) b invoked you, NÁSATYAS, who are the accomplishers (of desires), and the protectors of many, with a sacred hymn: her prayer was heard,—like (the instructions of) a teacher;—and you, Aświns, gave, to the wife of an impotent husband, Hirańyahasta, her son.
- 14. Násatyas, leaders, you liberated the quail from the mouth of the dogo that had seized her;

We have, here, rather obscure allusions to a legend which was, probably, afterwards modified by the Purahas, in which the name also occurs as Dadhicha (see, also, p. 216). In the Mahábhárata, Vana-parva, (Vol. I., p. 554), it is merely related, that the gods, being oppressed by the Kálakeya Asuras, solicited, from the sage Dadhicha, his bones, which he gave them, and from which Twashfri fabricated the thunderbolt with which Indra slew Vritra and routed the Asuras. The legend of the text differs from this. Indra, having taught the sciences called pravarquavidyá and madhuvidyá to Dadhyach, threatened that he would cut off his head, if ever he taught them to any one else. prevailed upon him, nevertheless, to teach them the prohibited knowledge, and, to evade Indra's threat, took off the head of the sage, replacing it by that of a horse. Indra, apprised of Dadhyach's breach of faith, struck off his equine head with the thunderbolt; on which the Aswins restored to him his own. The pravargyavidyá is said to imply certain verses of the Rik, Yajur, and Sáma Vedas; and the madhuvidyá, the Bráhmaña.

b Vadhrimati was the wife of a certain Rájarshi who was impotent. The Aświns, propitiated by her prayers, gave her a son.

[°] Vrika, more usually, 'a wolf,' but here said to be synonymous and you, who are benefactors of many, have granted, to the sage who praises you, to behold (true wisdom).

- 15. The foot of (Vispala, the wife of) Khela was cut off, like the wing of a bird, in an engagement by night. Immediately you gave her an îron leg, that she might walk; the hidden treasure (of the enemy being the object of the conflict.)
- 16. When his father caused RIJRÁŚWA b—as he was giving, to a she-wolf, a hundred sheep cut up in pieces,—to become blind, you, Dasras, physicians (of the gods), gave him eyes, (that had been) unable to find their way, with which he might see.

17. The daughter of the Sund ascended your car, with swan, 'a dog.' It is elsewhere termed, by the commentary, áranyaśwan, a forest, or wild, dog. Yáska interprets it figuratively, and renders vrika by áditya, 'the sun,' from whose grasp, or overpowering radiance, the Aświns are said to have rescued the dawn, upon her appeal to them.

- * See p. 291. The story is here more fully detailed in the text. It is only added, in the notes, that Khela was a king, of whom Agastya was the purchita; and it was through his prayers that the Aswins gave Vispalá an iron leg.
- b Rijráśwa was one of the sons of Vrishágir (see p. 259): his blindness has been previously alluded to (p. 290); but here we have the story in detail.
- ^c The vriki was one of the asses of the Aświns, in disguise, to test his charitable disposition; but, as he exacted the sheep from the people, his father was angry, and caused him to lose his eyesight, which the Aświns restored to him.
- ⁴ Surya, it is related, was desirous of giving his daughter Surya to Soma; but all the gods desired her as a wife. They (like a runner) to a goal. When you won (the race), with your swift horse, all the gods looked on, with (anxious) hearts, and you, NÁSATYAS, were associated with glory.

- 18. When, Aświns, being invited, you went to his dwelling, (to give due rewards) to Divodása, offering oblations, then your helping chariot conveyed (food and) treasure, and the bull and the porpoise were yoked together.^a
- 19. NÁSATYAS, bearing strength and wealth, with posterity and vigour-sustaining food, you came, with one intention, to the family of Jahnu, (provided) with (sacrificial) viands, and possessing a third portion of the daily (offerings).
- 20. Undecaying Násatyas, you bore away, by night, in your foe-overwhelming car, Jáhusha, surrounded, on every side, by (enemies), through practicable roads, and went to (inaccessible) mountains.

agreed that he who should first reach the sun, as a goal, should wed the damsel. The Aswins were victorious; and Surya, well pleased by their success, rushed, immediately, into their chariot.

[•] The vrishabha and the sinsumdra. The Commentator calls the latter, gráha, which is, properly, an alligator. But the sisumdra, as it is usually read, is, everywhere else, considered to be a name of the Gangetic porpoise. They were yoked to the car of the Aswins, the comment says, to display their power.

b Jahnávi, not Jáhnavi. It is here considered as an adjective to prajá, progeny (Jahnoh * prajám). Jahnu is called a Maharshi. He is a prince of the lunar dynasty, in the Puráhas (Vishhu Puráha, p. 398.)

o The name of a certain king. We have nothing relating to him, beyond what is stated in the text. [See Vol. IV., p. 154.]

Varga XII.

- 21. You preserved Vasa, Aswins, (that he might obtain), in a single day, a thousand acceptable gifts. Showevers (of benefits), associated with Indra, you destroyed the malignant enemies of Prithusravas.
- 22. You raised the water from the bottom, to the top, of the well, for the drinking of S'ARA, the son of RICHATKA; and, by your powers, NÁSATYAS, you filled, for the sake of the weary S'AYU, the barren cow (with milk).
- 23. Násatyas, by your acts you restored to Viśwaka, the son of Krishña, soliciting your protection, adoring you, and a lover of rectitude, his son Vishñápť, (welcome,) to his sight, as an animal that had been lost.
- 24. Aświns, you raised up, like Soma in a ladle, Rebha, who, for ten nights and nine days, had lain (in a well), bound with tight bonds, wounded, immersed, and suffering distress from the water.
- 25. Thus, Aświns, have I declared your exploits. May I become the master (of this place), having abundant cattle and a numerous progeny, and re-

Deities, Rishi, and metre, as before.

Varga XIII.

- 1. Aswins, for your gratification by the pleasant Soma juice, your ancient worshipper adores you. The offering is poured upon the sacred grass; the hymn is ready (for repetition). Come, Násatyas, with food and with vigour.
- 2. With that car, Aswins, which, rapid as thought, drawn by good horses, appears before men, and with which you repair to the dwelling of the virtuous, come, leaders of (sacrifices), to our abode.
- 3. You liberated, leaders (of rites), the sage ATRI, who was venerated by the five classes of men, from the wicked prison, together with his troop (of children), destroying his enemies, and baffling, showerers (of benefits), the devices of the malignant Dasyus.
- 4. Leaders (of sacrifice), showevers (of benefits), you restored Rebha, b—cast, by unassailable (enemies), into the water, and wounded, like a (sick) horse,-by your (healing) skill. Your ancient exploits do not fade (from recollection).
- 5. You extricated, DASRAS, the sage VANDANA, o cast into a well, like a handsome and splendid orna-

6. That (exploit) of yours, leaders (of sacrifice), is to be celebrated, Násatyas, by Kakshívat, of the race of Pajra, when you filled, for the (expectant) man, a hundred vases of sweet (liquors) from the hoof of your fleet horse.^a

Varga XIV.

- 7. You restored, leaders (of sacrifices), VISHÑÁPÚ (his lost son,) to VIŚWAKA, the son of KRISHÑA, when he praised you: by you bestowed, AśWINS, a husband upon Ghoshá, growing old, and tarrying in her father's dwelling.
- 8. You gave, Aświns, a lovely bride to S'yáva: dyou gave sight to Kańwa, o unable to see his way. Showevers (of benefits), the deed is to be glorified by which you gave hearing to the son of Nrishad.
- 9. Aswins, who assume many forms, you gave to Pedus a swift horse, the bringer of a thousand c Ghoshá was the daughter of Kakshivat. She was a leper, and, therefore, unfit to be married; but, when advanced in years, she prayed to the Aswins, who healed her leprosy, and restored her to youth and beauty, so that she obtained a husband. [See Vol. II., p. 3.]

d Syáva, a Rishi, had the black leprosy, but was cured of it by the Aświns, and, consequently, married.

10. Liberal givers, these your exploits are to be celebrated; and the resounding prayer propitiates you, while abiding in heaven and earth. When the descendants of Pajra invite you, Aświns, come, with food, and grant strength to the sage (who worships you).

Varga XV. 11. Aświns, glorified by the praises of the son (of the jar), and giving food, nourishers (of men), to the sage (Bharadwája), exalted by Agastya with prayer, you restored, Násatyas, Viśpalá.

- 12. Whither were you going, sons of heaven, showerers (of benefits), when, on your way to the dwelling of KÁVYA, (to receive his) adoration, you raised up (REBHA), AŚWINS, on the tenth day, like a buried vessel full of gold?
- 13. You rendered, by your power, Aswins, the aged Chyavána again young. The daughter of the sun, Násatyas, invested your chariot with beauty.
- 14. Dissipators of affliction, as you were praised, with former praises, by Tugra, so were you, again, adored (by him), when you brought Bhujyu safe,

- 15. The son of Tugra, brought back by you, Aświns, (to his father), glorified you, when he had crossed the ocean in safety; and you bore him, showevers (of benefits), with your well-harnessed car, swift as thought, to safety.
- 16. The quail glorified you, Aświns, when you saved her from the mouth of the wolf: b you carried off (Jáhusha) to the top of the mountain, in your triumphant chariot, and slew the son of Vishwách with a poisoned (arrow).

17. You restored eyes to RIJRÁŚWA, who, on presenting a hundred sheep to the she-wolf, had been condemned to darkness by his indignant father, and gave light to the blind, wherewith to behold all things.

18. (Desiring) that the enjoyment (arising from the perfection) of the senses (should be restored to the blind), the she-wolf invoked you, (saying): Aświns, showerers (of benefits), leaders (of sacrifices), Rijráśwa, (lavish) as a youthful gallant, (has given me) a hundred and one sheep, cutting them into fragments.

^d Vishwarh is called an Asura: the text says, "whose son you killed with poison:" the Commentator explains this to imply a poisoned arrow.

- 19. Aświns, your powerful protection is the source of happiness: worthy of laudation, you have made whole the maimed: therefore has the intelligent (Gноsнá)^a called upon you. Showevers (of benefits), come hither, with your succours.
- 20. Dasras, you filled the milkless, barren, and emaciated cow of S'AYU with milk: by you brought, by your powers, the daughter of PURUMITRA, as a wife, to VIMADA.

Varga XVII.

- 21. Aswins, causing the barley to be sown (in the fields that had been prepared) by the plough, milking (the clouds) for the sake of Manu, destroying the Dasyu with the thunderbolt, you have bestowed brilliant light upon the Arya.
- 22. You replaced, Aswins, with the head of a horse, (the head of) Dadhicha, the son of Atharvan; and, true to his promise, he revealed to you the mystic knowledge which he had learned from Twashiri, and which was as a ligature of the waist to you.
 - 23. Sapient Aświns, I ever solicit your favour.

d Arydya. The Scholiast explains this, vidushe, 'to the sage,' that is, to, or upon, Manu; but the previous occurrence of Dasyu appears to warrant the understanding of Arya as its contrast, and to treat it as a national appellative. It may, also, be observed, that the text has Manusha, which, the Scholiast says, is, here, a synonym of Manu, but which, more usually, designates man.

o Twashtri is, here, considered synonymous with Indra. The

SÚRTA III. (CXVIII.)

The deities, Rishi, and metre, as before.

- 1. May your elegant and rich car, swift as a Varga XVIII. hawk, come, Aświns, to our presence; for it is as quick as the mind of man, surmounted, showerers (of benefits), by three columns, and rapid as the wind.

b He was cut into three pieces,—by the Asuras, it is said,—which were reunited into one by the Aswins.

^c See p. 94.

- 3. Dasras, (having come,) with your quick-moving, well-constructed car, hear this hymn, (recited by one) who reveres you. Do not the ancient sages say that you are most prompt, Aświns, (to avert) poverty from the worshipper?
- 4. May your quick-moving, prancing steeds, rapid as hawks, yoked to your car, bear you, Aświns, (hither), who, quick as (falling) water, like vultures flying through the air, convey you, Násatvas, to the sacrifice.
- 5. Leaders (of sacrifice), the youthful daughter of Súrya ascended, delighted, this your car. May your strong-bodied, prancing, fleet, and shining horses bring you near us.

Varga XIX.

- 6. By your deeds, Dasras, you raised up Van-Dana, and, showerers (of benefits), Rebha; you bore the son of Tugra over the sea, and made Chyavána young.
- 7. You (gave relief) to the imprisoned ATRI, (quenching) the scorching heat, and fed him with grateful food: solicitous of worthy praise, you gave sight to Kanwa, blinded (by darkness).
- 8. You filled his cow with milk, Aświns, for the ancient S'AYU, when imploring (your aid); you liberated the quail from danger; you gave a leg to Viśpalá.

[•] In this and most of the following verses, we have allusions to the same persons and incidents as have been previously noticed, in most instances, repeatedly, but in general, in this hymn, more summarily.

- 9. You gave to Pedu, Aswins, the white and foe-trampling steed which you had received from INDRA, loud-neighing (in battle), defying enemies, high-spirited, the acquirer of a thousand treasures, vigorous, and firm in body.
- 10. Earnestly we call you, leaders (of the sacrifice), such (as you have been described), and who are well-born, to our succour, -soliciting, Aswins, wealth. Contented with our laudations, come to us, with your wealthy car, to bring us felicity.
- 11. Come to us, auspicious Násatyas, with the fresh velocity of a hawk. Bearing an oblation, I invoke you, Aswins, at the rising of the ever-constant dawn.

Rishi and deities, the same; the metre is Jagati.

1. Desiring food, I invoke, (Aświns), to support Varga XX. my life, your wonderful car, swift as thought, drawn by fleet horses, worthy of veneration, many-bannered, bringing rain, containing wealth, abundantly yielding delight, and conferring riches.

- 2. Upon its moving, our minds have been raised on high, in praise; our hymns reach (the Aświns). I sweeten the oblation: the assistants come nigh: Úrjánía (the daughter of the sun,) has ascended, Aświns, your car.

- 4. You brought back, to his ancestors, Bhujyu, who, borne by his own steeds, had perished, (but that you rescued him) with your self-harnessed horses, and went, showevers (of benefits), to his distant dwelling: and great was the succour which, it is known, you rendered to Divodása.
- 5. Aswins, your admirable (horses) bore the car which you had harnessed, (first,) to the goal, for the sake of honour; and the damsel who was the prize came, through affection, to you, and acknowledged your (husbandship), saying: You are (my) lords.

Varga XXI.

- 6. You preserved REBHA from the violence around him; you quenched, with snow, for ATRI, the scorching heat; you generated milk, in the cow of S'AYU; and (by you) was VANDANA endowed with prolonged life.
- 7. Skilful Dasras, you restored Vandana, when debilitated by old age; as a (wheelwright repairs a worn-out) car: (moved) by his praises, you brought forth the sage (Vámadeva) from the womb. May your (glorious) deeds be (displayed) for him who, in this place, offers you worship.

The text does not name him. The Scholiast calls him Vanadeva: but nothing further is said of him, than that he invoked the aid of the Aswins, whilst yet in his mother's womb.

- 8. You repaired to him who, afflicted by the abandonment of his own father, praised you from afar. Hence your prompt and wonderful succours have been wished to be at hand, (by all).
- 9. That honey-seeking bee, also, murmured your praise: the son of Uśij invokes you to the exhilaration of the Soma juice. You conciliated the mind of Dadhyach; so that, provided with the head of a horse, he taught you (the mystic science).
- 10. Aswins, you gave to Pedu the white (horse), desired by many, the breaker-through of combatants, shining, unconquerable by foes in battle, fit for every work; like Indra, the conqueror of men.

SÚKTA V. (CXX.)

The deities and Rishi are the same, except that the last stanza is addressed to the Remedy against bad dreams. Of the thirteen stanzas of the hymn, the first nine are in as many different metres; the three last are in the Gáyatrí measure.

- 1. What praise may propitiate you, Aświns? Varga XXII. Who may give satisfaction to you both? How may any ignorant (man) pay fitting homage?
- 2. Thus may an ignorant man inquire the means of worshipping the all-wise; for every (one,) other (than the Aświns,) is unknowing. They, the unconquered, quickly (show favour) to the man (who worships them).

This refers, it is said, to the story of Bhujyu, whom his father, Tugra, had abandoned, or, rather, perhaps, was unable to succour.

- 3. We invoke you, who know all things. May you, who are omniscient, declare to us, to-day, the praise that is acceptable. Desirous of your presence, I reverence you, offering (oblations).
- 4. I invite not the gods, immature (in wisdom),^a but you, Dasras. Drink of the wonderful and strength-giving burnt-offering, and make us vigorous.
- 5. (Powerful is) the hymn that was repeated by the son^b of Ghoshá, and by Bhrigu, and with which hymn the Angirasas adore you. May the sage (Kakshívat), desirous (of food), obtain it abundantly.

ANUVAKA XVIII.

SÚRTA I. (CXXI.)

The deities are the Viśwadevas, or Indra; the Rishi is Kakshivat; the metre, Trishtubh.

- 1. When will Indra, the protector of men, and varga XXIV. granter of riches, listen to the praises, thus (recited), of the Angirasas, who are devoted to the gods? When he perceives the ministers of the master of the mansion, and is to be the object of worship in the sacrifice, he greatly exults.
- 2. He, verily, upholds the heaven: he, the brilliant, the leader of the (stolen) herd, pours forth the flowing (water), for the sake of food: the mighty INDRA manifests himself after his own daughter,^a ^{*} Indra is here identified with the Sun.

(the dawn): he made the female of the horse unnaturally the mother of the cow.

- 3. May he, illuminating the purple (dawn), listen to the invocation (addressed to him) of old, daily bestowing wealth upon the race of Angiras. He has sharpened his fatal shaft: he has supported the heaven, for the good of men, of quadrupeds, and bipeds.
- 4. In the exhilaration of this Soma juice, you have restored the celebrated herd of cattle, hidden (in the cave), for the sake of sacrifice, (to the Anguasas). When, Indra, the threefold crestb engages in combat, he opens the doors of the tyrannical descendants of Manus; —
- 5. When your parents, (heaven and earth), the protectors (of the world), brought the nutritious and invigorating oblation to thee, who art quick in act, and when they offered thee the pure and precious milk of the milch-cow.⁴

Varga XXV. 6. Now is INDRA manifested. May he, the overcomer (of his foes), grant us happiness,—he, who ^{*} Indra, in sport, is said to have made a mare bring forth a calf.

b Elevated, as a triple crest, in the three worlds.

c Pani, the stealer of the cattle.

d That is, the clarified butter of the oblations, from which the nutriment of all things proceeds; for the oblation ascends to the sun, by whom rain is engendered, from which springs corn, the support of living beings. When this has been done, Indra opens the doors of the cave, and rescues the cattle, as described in the preceding verse, with which this is connected.

shines brightly, like the sun of this dawn. May the excellent Soma, being sprinkled upon the place of sacrifice with a ladle, (exhilarate us), by whom, presenting the oblations we had prepared, it was imbibed.

When, INDRA, you shine upon the days that are appropriated to sacred rites, then (success attends) upon the man who goes, with his cart, (for fuel), the driver (of cattle), or the active (shepherd).
 - 8. Send hither thy horses, the quaffers of the ex-[•] Vanadhiti, the instrument that is to be applied to the forest, to cut down the trees.

b Pari rodhaná goh. The phrase is rather elliptical; and there is no verb. The Scholiast interprets it, paso rodhanáya yúpe niyojanáya, pari samartho bhavati,—the priest, the adhwaryu, is competent for the attachment of the animal to the stake. Or the whole passage may be differently rendered; vanadhiti being interpreted 'a collection of water' (vana), that is, a body of clouds (meghamálá): when this is ready for its office of raining, then Indra, being in the firmament, is able to remove any impediment to the shower;—goh being, also, rendered 'water,' or 'rain.'

d The phraseology is, here, very elliptical and obscure, the whole being merely anarvise paświshe turáya, being, literally, "to the carman, to the cattle-driver, to the quick," without any verb. The Scholiast, therefore, supplies the connexion, abhimatam sidhyet, "his wish may succeed," and amplifies, or translates, anarvise, 'carman,' as "he who goes to fetch fuel from the wood, in his hilarating libation: overcome, warrior, the adversary plundering us of our treasure, when they express, with stones, for the increase (of thy strength), the delightful, exhilarating, invigorating (juice), to be overtaken by thee, who art swifter than the wind.

- 9. Thou didst hurl thy iron bolt upon the quick-moving (Asura),—the swift destroyer of foes, that was brought(to you), by Ribhu, from heaven, —when thou, who art worshipped by many, striking S'ushña, for the sake of Kutsa, didst encompass him with numberless fatal (weapons).
- 10. When the sun (had emerged) from the struggle with darkness, thou didst break, wielder of the thunderbolt, the cloud that had been his annoyance, and didst sunder the well-fastened covering in which S'ushna had enveloped him.

Varga XXVI.

11. Then the vast, powerful, and immoveable earth and heaven animated thee, Indra, to glorious deeds; and thou didst hurl down, into the waters, with thy mighty thunderbolt, the everywhere-spreading and destroying VRITBA.

cart;" paświshe, the driver of cattle; and turáya, the active, or quick, gopála, or shepherd.

^{*} Divah * upanitam Ribhwa. The Scholiast considers the latter to be the same as Twashira, "by Twashiri." No doubt, Twashiri is, most usually, considered to be the fabricator of Indra's thunderbolt; but we have had it before stated, that the thunderbolt was brought to Indra by Ribhu (p. 285). [?]

b This is, most probably, allegorical, if it have any meaning at all. Sushia is 'drought;' and this, Indra removes, for the benefit of his worshippers, by many drops of rain.

- 12. Indra, friend of man, mount the horses whom you cherish, who are fleet as the wind, are easily yoked, and who bear (their burthen) well. You have sharpened the foe-destroying thunderbolt, the slayer of VRITRA, which inspiring (weapon) Uśanas, the son of Kavi, gave you.
- 13. Stop, Súra, by your yellow horses; for this Etaśa, Indra, drags the wheel. Having driven those who offer no sacrifice, to the opposite bank of the ninety rivers, you compel them (to do) what is to be done.
- 14. Indra, bearer of the thunderbolt, preserve us from this (poverty) that is so difficult to be destroyed, and from misfortune in war; grant us riches, conspicuous for chariots, remarkable for horses, for the sake of food, of fame, and of truth.
- 15. Famous for affluence, Indra, never may thy favour be withdrawn from us: may food ever sustain us. Opulent Maghavan, make us possessors of cattle; and may we, most assiduous in thy adoration, be happy, together (with our families).

This is an unusual attribution to Usanas, and rather incompatible with the statement of its having been the gift of Ribhu.

b Súra, that is, Indra, as the Sun.

c Etaśa is said to be the name of one of the horses of the Sun. The word occurs, in the Aitareya Bráhmaña, as that of a Rishi.

POSTSCRIPT.

This volume, as now printed, will be seen to differ but very immaterially from the original impression. Beyond the correction of oversights in quoting, transcribing, and press-reading, very little indeed has here been attempted.

On reference to the Translator's manuscript, I found justification for changing, at p. 87, line 17, "slept a long darkness" into "slept through a long dárkness." The same authority, fortified by the Sanskrit, shows, that, in p. 248, notes, line 1, the term "act" of the first edition should have been "air," now substituted therefor. M. Langlois—see p. 141, note, l. 6,—was formerly quoted as writing "ou libation qui porte le nom de Trita;" Dr. Rosen—see p. 255, notes, l. 1,was adduced for the words "fac nos opulentos," though he wrote "divitive nos opulentos sequentor; and, at p. 223, notes, l. 9,—which see,—we were told, that "Rosen has lance sacrificiis culti; M. Langlois, amis de nos sacrifices." It will suffice to have thus intimated several categories of improvements which have been introduced in the foregoing pages.

Of proper names and their derivatives the following misspellings, most of which occurred uniformly, have been rectified: Anhas, Árchitka, Chándogya, Dhabhíti, Ghritsamada, Kausítakí, Madhuchhandas, Maghaván, Maghavat, Panin, Priyamedhas, Ribhukshin, Richitka, S'ákapúrñi, Sthúlásh'tívin, Suhasti, S'unahśepas, Vaśishtha, Viśwanch, &c. &c. From the Introduction to III., XXXI.—see Vol. III., p. 42,—it appears that Kuśika was of the family of Ishíratha, not Ishírathi. Vala and Vrihaspati have here given place to Bala and Brihaspati, which the Translator, correctly, came, at last, to prefer. The Vaidik forms have, also, been restored, where he adopted the Pauránik, as in the cases of Chyavána, Manus, and Mandhátri. Dadhyanch has, further, been altered to Dadhyach. In commenting on Nárshada, Sáyana, as printed,-Vol. I., pp. 940, 941,-twice exhibits the equivalent of "son of Nrishada," the words of the first edition: but the Rigveda, as is proved by my reference at p. 315, evinces that some one has herein The scholiast, or his copyists, should have written Nrishad.

At p. 43, notes, l. 7 ab infra, I have replaced "the Kátthakas" by "Kátthakya;" and, at p. 272, notes, l. 2 ab infra, "Sátyáyana," by "the S'átyáyana Bráhmaña." At p. 139, l. 3 ab infra, S'atakratu has been discarded in favour of Sukratu. Compare Vol. IV., p. 125, l. 3

Under guidance of Sáyaña and the Sarvánukrama, grounds have offered for modifying the headings of no less than fifteen hymns. It may be added, that it would be an improvement, in the headings throughout, to render devatá—here translated "deity" and "divinity,"—by "object of invocation." See pp. 100,

323, where devatá designates the sacrificial post and the Remedy against bad dreams. At pp. 275, 277, I have harmonized the headings with the "Index to the Súktas," by giving to the simply translettered "Viśwadevas"—as Professor Wilson writes the expression,—the preference which it deserves to "all the gods."

Thirty or forty brief references have been incorporated in the foot-notes, for the purpose, with rare exceptions, of pointing out the Translator's own emendations, or additions, especially in Vols. II., III., and IV.

In several instances, it seemed advisable to indicate, by an explanatory "i. e.," fragments of elucidation quoted from Sáyaña. But for some such indication, it might be supposed,—as in pp. 184, 190,—that phrases extracted from the commentary were taken from the Rigveda itself.

The statement at the end of note a, p. 328, has not been verified, and, probably, arose from misrecollection.

Three passages which I have slightly altered—the second, with warrant from the Translator's manuscript,—are reproduced below, in the form in which they are presented in the first edition:

"We thus find that most, if not all, the deities to whom the hymns of the Rich, as far as those of the first Ashtaka, extend, are resolvable into three," &c.—Introduction, p. xxxix., l. 8.

"Who is so brilliant as S'ANYU, who gratifies like gold, the best of the gods, the provider of habitations?"—P. 118, l. 4.

"The red and black coursers, long-limbed, well-caparisoned, and celestial, and harnessed, well-pleased, to the yoke of the chariot in which the showerer of benefits is conveyed, for the enrichment of RIJRÁŚWA, and is recognized amongst human hosts."—P. 259, l. 5.

The "Index of Names," has been amended and very considerably amplified.

The Virapatni river, mentioned at p. 268, l. 7 ab infra, I would suggest to be one with the Saraswati; the word virapatni, "bride of the hero," occurring as an epithet of Saraswati, the goddess, in VI., XLIX., 7: see Vol. III., p. 483. Compare Soma, for its equivocalness of acceptation, so common in the Rigveda.

Though nothing approaching thorough revision has here been undertaken, it is hoped that this volume, as now cursorily retouched, will prove acceptable even to those who have profited by the venerable Translator's own edition.
