It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

INTRODUCTION.

§ 1. ON the eastern coast of Greece, just north of Thermopylae, lies a region which in ancient times was called Malis, 'the sheep-land.' This was the country of Philoctetes,—the home to which, in the play of Sophocles, his thoughts are constantly turning¹. It will be well to form some idea of its chief features and associations.

The home of Philoctetes.

Pindus, the spine of northern Greece, terminates at the south in Typhrestus, a great pyramidal height from which two mountain-ranges branch out towards the eastern sea. One of these is Othrys, which skirts the southern border of Thessaly; the other, south of it, is Oeta, which, like Malis, takes its name from its pastures. The deep and broad depression between them is the fertile valley of the Spercheius (the 'hurrying' or 'vehement')—which rises at the foot of Typhrestus, and flows into the Malian Gulf. A few miles from the sea, the valley opens. While Othrys continues its eastward direction, Oeta recedes southward, and then, with a sudden bend to the south-east,

¹ The Homeric Catalogue includes this district in Phthia, the realm of Achilles (Il. 2. 682). It assigns Philoctetes to a more northerly part of Thessaly,—viz., the narrow and mountainous strip of coast, N. and E. of the Pagasæan Gulf, which was known in historical times as Magnesia. His four towns were Methonè, Thaumacia, Meliboea and Olizon. (Il. 2. 716 f.) This agrees with the fact that Poeas, the father of Philoctetes, was called the son of Thaumacus, and was numbered among the Argonauts who sailed from Iolcus (Apollod. 1. 9. 16). In its original form, the story of Poeas and his son must have belonged, like that of Jason, to the legends of the Minyæ who dwelt on the eastern coasts of Thessaly. Cp. Anthol. append. 61 (vol. 11. p. 754 ed. Jacobs):

τόξων Ἡρακλέους ταμὴν, Ποιάντιον υἱόν, ἧδε Φιλοκτήτην γῇ Μινυᾶς κατέχει.

It was when the myth became interwoven with the apotheosis of Heracles that the home of Poeas was transferred to the country around Trachis.

sweeps down upon Thermopylae, where the fir-clad and snowy summit of Callidromus rises above the pass. Precipitous cliffs are thrown forward from this part of the Oetaean range, forming an irregular crescent round the southern and western sides of the plain. These cliffs were called of old 'the Trachinian Rocks.' Trachis, the 'city of the crags,' stood on a rocky spur beneath them, a little north of the point where they are cleft by the magnificent gorge of the Asopus,—that steep ravine by which Hydarnes led his Persians up through the mountain oak-woods, on the night before he surprised Leonidas. Between the Asopus and the Spercheus are the narrow channels of two lesser streams, anciently known as the Melas and the Dyras¹. The name Malis denoted this whole seaboard plain, with the heights around it, from the lower spurs of Othrys on the north to those of Oeta on the south and west. Just opposite the entrance of the Gulf, the bold north-west promontory of Euboea, once called Cape Cenaeum, runs out towards the mainland. There was a peculiar fitness in the phrase of Sophocles, when he described this district, with its varied scenery, as 'the haunt of Malian Nymphs'².

The ancient mouth of the Spercheus was some miles N.W. of Thermopylae; the present mouths are a little E.N.E. of it, and the line of the coast has been considerably advanced, so that there is no longer a narrow pass. The Asopus, Melas and Dyras formerly had separate courses to the sea. They are now mere affluents of the Spercheus,—the Melas and Dyras uniting before they reach it.

those beings of the forest and the river, of the hills and the sea.

It was in this region that legend placed the last deeds of Heracles, and his death, or rather his passage from earth to Olympus. After taking Oechalia in Euboea, he was sacrificing on Cape Ceneæ when the fatal robe did its work. He was carried to his home at Trachis; and then he commanded that he should be borne to the top of Mount Oeta, sacred to Zeus, and burnt alive. He was obeyed; as the flames arose on the mountain, they were answered from heaven by the blaze of lightning and the roll of thunder; and by that sign his companions knew that the spirit of the great warrior had been welcomed to the home of his immortal father. Somewhere in the wilds of those lonely summits tradition showed the sacred spot known as 'the Pyre'; and once, at least, in later days a Roman Consul, turning aside from a victorious progress, went up to visit the solemn place where the most Roman of Greek heroes had received the supreme reward of fortitude¹.

§ 2. Heracles had constrained his son Hyllus to aid in preparing the funeral-pile, but could not prevail upon him to kindle it. That office was performed, at his urgent prayer, by the youthful Philoctetes, son of Poeas, king of Malis². In token of gratitude, Heracles bequeathed to Philoctetes the bow and arrows which he himself had received from Apollo. The legend in epic poetry.

In the myths relating to the Trojan war a most important part belonged to the man who had thus inherited the invincible weapons. Homer, indeed, does not say much about him; but the Iliad contains only an episode in the tenth year of the war: the part played by Philoctetes came before and after that moment. The allusion in the Second Book of the Iliad is, however, significant ; it glances backwards and forwards. He is there mentioned as a skilful archer, who had sailed from Greece in command of seven ships, but had been left behind in Lemnos, wounded by the bite of a deadly water-snake. And then the poet adds that the Greeks at Troy will soon have cause to bethink them of Philoctetes¹. In the Odyssey he is named only twice ; in one place, as having been the best bowman at Troy ; in another, as one of those heroes who came safely home². But his adventures were fully told in other epics. The events preceding the action of the Iliad were contained in the Cypria, an epic whose reputed author, Stasinus of Cyprus, lived early in the eighth century B.C. That poem described how Philoctetes was bitten by the snake,—while the Greeks, on their way to Troy, were at Tenedos,—and was abandoned in Lemnos. His later fortunes were narrated in the Little Iliad, ascribed to Lesches of Mitylene (circa 700 B.C.), and in the Iliupersis, or ‘Sack of Troy,’ by Arctinus of Miletus (c. 776 B.C.). The contents of these lost works are known chiefly from the prose summaries of the grammarian Proclus (140 A.D.), as partly preserved by Photius in his Bibliotheca. The following is an outline of the story in its epic form.

§ 3. When the Greeks under Agamemnon were about to sail against Troy, it became known that an oracle had commanded them to offer sacrifice, in the course of their voyage across the Aegean, at the altar of a deity named Chrysè. All the accounts placed this altar somewhere in the north-east of the Archipelago. The prevalent version assigned it to a small island which, like the deity herself, was called Chrysè, and lay close to the eastern shore of Lemnos. Jason, it was said, had sacrificed at this altar when he was leading the Argonauts in quest of the golden fleece. Heracles had paid it a like homage when he was levying war against Laomedon.

Philoctetes, with his seven ships, was in the fleet of Agamemnon, and undertook to act as guide. He alone knew where the isle of Chrysè was to be found; for, in his early youth, he had been present at the sacrifice offered there by Heracles.

The altar stood in a sacred precinct, under the open sky. When, followed by the Greek chieftains, he approached it, he was bitten in the foot by a serpent. The wound mortified, and became noisome. His cries of pain made it impossible to perform the religious rites, which required the absence of all ill-omened sounds. The fetid odour of his wound also made his presence a distress to the chiefs. They conveyed him from the islet of Chrysè to the neighbouring coast of Lemnos, where they put him ashore; and then sailed for Troy.

It should be noticed that the circumstances of this desertion, as set forth in the early legend, were probably less inhuman than they appear in the version adopted by Sophocles. In the first place, it can hardly be doubted that these cyclic poets, like Homer, imagined Lemnos as an inhabited island¹. And, according to one account, some followers of Philoctetes were left in charge of him².

Ten years elapsed. The sufferer was still languishing in Lemnos; his former comrades were still on the shore of the Hellespont, besieging the city which they could not capture. Achilles had already fallen; Ajax had died by his own hand. In their despondency, the Atreidae turned to the prophet who had so often admonished or consoled them; but Calchas replied that the fate of Ilium must now be learned from other lips than his. They must consult the Trojan Helenus, son of Priam,—a warrior whom they had often seen in the front of battle on the plain; a seer who, as rumour told, had warned, though he could not save, his brother Hector.

Helenus was made prisoner by a stratagem of Odysseus, and then declared that, before the Greeks could prevail, two things must be done. First, Philoctetes must be brought back from Lemnos: Troy could never fall, until he launched against it the arrows of Heracles. Secondly, Neoptolemus, the youthful son of Achilles, must come from the island of Scyros, and must receive his due heritage, the wondrous armour wrought for his father by the god Hephaestus.

Both injunctions were obeyed. Diomedes went to Lemnos, and brought Philoctetes. Odysseus went to Scyros, and brought Neoptolemus. Philoctetes was healed by the physician Machaon, son of Asclepius. He then slew Paris in single combat, and shared with Neoptolemus the glory of final victory over Troy.

Charac-
version.

§ 4. In this epic form of the story, two points deserve remark. (1) The mission to Lemnos and the mission to Scyros are entrusted to different persons, and are conceived as simultaneous, or nearly so. In the Little Iliad of Lesches, the voyage to Lemnos seems to have been related first. (2) Diomedes has apparently no difficulty in persuading Philoctetes to accompany him. For the purposes of epic narrative, it would evidently suffice that Diomedes should announce an oracle which promised health to the sufferer and honour to the exile. The epic Philoctetes would accept these overtures in a speech of dignified magnanimity; and all would be happily settled. This particular point is curiously illustrated by Quintus Smyrnaeus, though in other respects he has varied widely from the old epic version. He represents the wrath of Philoctetes as immediately disarmed by the first soothing words of the Greek envoys (Diomedes and Odysseus). Indeed, that brevity which sometimes marks the poet of Smyrna is seldom quainter than in this passage of his ninth book. At verse 398 Philoctetes is preparing to shoot his visitors. At verse 426 they are carrying their recovered friend, with pleasant laughter, to their ship:—

οἱ δέ μιν αἰψ' ἐπὶ νῆα καὶ ἥϊόνας βαρυδούπους καρχαλῶντες ἐνείκαν ὁμῶς σφετέροισι βελέμοις.

§ 5. But all this was changed when Philoctetes became a subject of tragic drama. The very essence of the situation, as a theme for Tragedy, was the terrible disadvantage at which the irony of fate had placed the Greeks. Here was a brave and loyal man, guiltless of offence, whom they had banished from their company,—whom they had even condemned to long years of extreme suffering,—because a misfortune,—incurred by him in the course of doing them a service,—had rendered his person obnoxious to them. For ten years he had been pining on Lemnos; and now they learned that their miserable victim was the arbiter of their destinies. It was not enough if, by force or fraud, they could acquire his bow. The oracle had said that the bow must be used at Troy by Philoctetes himself. How could he be induced to give this indispensable aid?

The story
for drama.

A dramatist could not glide over this difficulty with the facile eloquence of an epic poet. If the Lemnian outcast was to be brought, in all his wretchedness, before the eyes of the spectators, nature and art alike required the inference that such misery had driven the iron into his soul. It would seem a violation of all probability if, when visited at last by an envoy from the camp, he was instantly conciliated by a promise—be the sanction what it might—that, on going to Troy, he would be healed, and would gain a victory of which the profit would be shared by the authors of his past woes. Rather the Philoctetes of drama would be conceived as one to whom the Greeks at Troy were objects of a fixed mistrust, and their leaders, of an invincible abhorrence; one to whom their foes were friends, and their disasters, consolations; one who could almost think that his long agony had been an evil dream, if he could but hear that they were utterly overthrown, and that it was once more possible for him, without misgiving or perplexity, to recognise the justice of the gods¹.

§ 6. Aeschylus, Euripides, and Sophocles—to place their names in the chronological order of their plays on this subject—solved the problem each in his own manner. A comparison of their methods is interesting. That it is possible, is due in great measure to a fortunate accident. Dion, surnamed the golden-mouthed, eminent as a rhetorician and essayist, was born at Prusa in Bithynia about the middle of the first century, and eventually settled at Rome, where he enjoyed the favour of Nerva and of Trajan. The eighty 'discourses' (λόγοι) extant under his name are partly orations, partly short pieces in the nature of literary essays,—many of them very slight, and written in an easy, discursive style. In one of these (no. LII.) he describes how he spent a summer afternoon in reading the story of Philoctetes at Lemnos, as dramatised by Aeschylus, Euripides, and Sophocles. He reflects that, even if he had lived at Athens in their time, he could not have enjoyed precisely this treat,—of hearing the three masters, one after another, on the same theme. And, as the result of his perusal, he declares that, if he had been a sworn judge in the Dionysiac theatre, it would have puzzled him to award the prize. After such a preface, it is rather disappointing that he does not tell us more about the two plays which are lost. However, his little essay, which fills scarcely seven octavo pages, throws light on several points of interest; and in another of his short pieces (LIX.) he gives a prose paraphrase of the opening scene in the Philoctetes of Euripides. Apart from these two essays of Dion, the fragments of the plays themselves would not help us far. From the Aeschylean play, less than a dozen lines remain; from the Euripidean, about thirty-five. Such, then, are the principal materials for a comparison.

The
of Aeschylus.

§ 7. In the play of Aeschylus, the task of bringing Philoctetes from Lemnos to Troy was undertaken, not by Diomedes,—as in the epic version,—but by Odysseus. This change at once strikes the key-note of the theme, as Tragedy was to handle it. Odysseus was the man of all others whom Philoctetes detested; no envoy more repulsive to him could have been found. On the other hand, the choice of that wily hero for the mission implies that its success was felt to depend on the use of stratagem. As Dion shows us, Aeschylus boldly brought Odysseus face to face with Philoctetes, and required the spectators to believe that Philoctetes did not recognise his old enemy. The excuse which Dion suggests for this improbability is not that the appearance of Odysseus was greatly altered, but that the memory of Philoctetes had been impaired by ten years of suffering. It may be inferred that the text of Aeschylus supplied no better explanation.

The unrecognised Odysseus then proceeded to win the ear of Philoctetes by a false story of misfortunes to the Greeks at Troy; Agamemnon was dead; Odysseus, too, was gone—having been put to death for an atrocious crime (Dion does not say what): and the whole army was in extremities. This story having won the confidence of Philoctetes, the Aeschylean Odysseus perhaps seized the arms while the sick man was in a paroxysm of his disease. A fragment indicates that Aeschylus described the bow as hanging on a pine-tree near the cave. How Philoctetes was finally brought away, we do not know: but it may be assumed that there was no deus ex machina, and also that Odysseus had no accomplice. The play probably belonged to a period when Aeschylus had not yet adopted the third actor. Inhabitants of the island formed the Chorus. These Lemnians, Dion says, vouchsafed no apology for having left Philoctetes unvisited during ten years; and he told them his whole story, as if it were new to them. But, as the essayist adds, the unfortunate are always ready to speak of their troubles, and we may charitably suppose that some Lemnians had occasionally cheered his solitude.

The general impression made on Dion's mind by the play of Aeschylus was that of a simplicity and dignity suitable to ideal Tragedy. It had an austere grandeur of diction and of sentiment which sustained the characters on the heroic level¹; though in some respects the management of the plot was open to the cavils of a more critical and more prosaic age.

§ 8. The Philoctetes of Euripides was produced in 431 B.C.², The Philoctetes of Euripides.
—some forty years or more, perhaps, after that of Aeschylus.

Euripides combined the epic with the Aeschylean precedent by sending Diomedes along with Odysseus to Lemnos. A soliloquy by Odysseus opened the play¹. The astute warrior was in a highly nervous state of mind. 'Such,' he said in effect, 'are the consequences of ambition! I might have stayed at Troy, with a reputation secured; but the desire of increasing it has brought me here to Lemnos, where I am in great danger of losing it altogether, by failing in this most ticklish business.' He then explained that, when the Atreidae had first proposed the mission to him, he had declined, because he knew that all his resources of persuasion would be thrown away on Philoctetes, the man to whom he had done a wrong so terrible. His first appearance would be the signal for an arrow from the unerring bow. But afterwards his guardian goddess Athena had appeared to him in a dream, and had told him that, if he would go to Lemnos, she would change his aspect and his voice, so that his enemy should not know him. Thus reassured, he had undertaken the task. We note in passing that Euripides was here indirectly criticising Aeschylus, who had assumed that Odysseus could escape recognition. The device of Athena's intervention was borrowed from the Odyssey, where she similarly transforms her favourite at need. But Euripides, in his turn, invites the obvious comment that such a device was more suitable to epic narrative than to drama².

Continuing his soliloquy, Odysseus said that, as he had reason to know, a rival embassy was coming to Philoctetes from the Trojans, who hoped by large promises to gain him for their side. Here, then, was a crisis that demanded all his energies. At this moment, he saw Philoctetes approaching, and, with a hasty prayer to Athena, prepared to meet him.

Philoctetes limped slowly forward,—clad (according to Dion's paraphrase) in the skins of wild beasts which he had shot¹. On finding that his visitor is a Greek from Troy, Philoctetes pointed an arrow at him². But he was quickly appeased by learning that the stranger was a cruelly wronged fugitive,—a friend of that Palamedes whom the unscrupulous malice of Odysseus had brought to death on a false charge of treason³. 'Will Philoctetes befriend him?' 'Hapless man!'—was the reply—'the ally whom you invoke is more forlorn than yourself. But you are welcome to share his wretched abode, until you can find some better resource.' Philoctetes then invited his new friend into his cave.

Presently the Chorus entered,—composed, as in the Aeschylean play, of Lemnians. They began by excusing themselves for their long neglect of the sufferer. This was another glance at Aeschylus, whose Lemnians had made no such apologies. As the judicious Dion says, however, that was perhaps the wiser course. But Euripides had a further expedient for redeeming the character of the islanders; he introduced a Lemnian called Actor, who had occasionally visited the sick man⁴. The climax of dramatic interest must have been marked

Hyginus Fab. 102 (in an outline of the story, taken from Euripides) says:—quem expositum pastor regis Actoris nomine Iphimachus Dolopionis filius nutrit. Schneidewin, supposing that Hyginus had accidentally interchanged the names, proposed to read, pastor regis Iphimachi Dolopionis filii nomine Actor. Milani (Mito di Filottete p. 34) obtains the same result in a more probable way when he conjectures, pastor regis Iphimachi nomine Actor Dolopionis filius. As he remarks, Euphorion, in his Φιλοκτήτης (on which see below, § 18), introduced a Δολοπιονίδης (Stobaeus Flor. 59. 16). And Dion's description of Actor as ἓνα Λημνίων would apply to a shepherd better than to a king. Ovid, however, seems to make Actor king of Lemnos (Trist. 1. 10. 17): Fleximus in lacuum cursus, et ab Actoris urbe | Venimus ad portus, Imbria terra, tuos. The best MSS. there have Actoris: others, Hectoris.

by the arrival of that Trojan embassy which Odysseus had foreshadowed in the prologue. It came, probably, before the seizure of the bow, and while, therefore, Odysseus was still disguised. Two verses, spoken by him in the play, run thus:—

αἰσχροὺν σιωπᾶν βαρβάρους δ' εἶαν λέγειν¹.

Such words would be fitting in the mouth of a Greek speaker who pretended to have been wronged by his countrymen. They suggest a context of the following kind;—‘(Although I have been badly treated by the Greek chiefs,) yet, in the cause of the Greek army at large, I cannot be silent, while barbarians plead.’ The leader of the Trojan envoys—perhaps Paris—would urge Philoctetes to become their ally. Then the appeal to Hellenic patriotism would be made with striking effect by one who alleged that, like Philoctetes himself, he had personal injuries to forget. This scene would end with the discomfiture and withdrawal of the Trojan envoys. It may be conjectured that the subsequent course of the action was somewhat as follows. Philoctetes was seized with an attack of his malady; the disguised Odysseus, assisted perhaps by the Lemnian shepherd, was solicitous in tending him; and meanwhile Diomedes, entering at the back of the group, contrived to seize the bow. Odysseus then revealed himself, and, after a stormy scene, ultimately prevailed on Philoctetes to accompany him. His part would here give scope for another great speech, setting forth the promises of the oracle. Whether Athena intervened at the close, is uncertain.

This play of Euripides struck Dion as a masterpiece of declamation, and as a model of ingenious debate,—worthy of study, indeed, as a practical lesson in those arts. When he speaks of the ‘contrast’ to the play of Aeschylus, he is thinking of these qualities¹. With regard to the plot, no student of Euripides will be at a loss to name the trait which is most distinctive of his hand. It is the invention of the Trojan embassy,—a really brilliant contrivance for the purpose which he had in view. We cannot wonder if, in the period of classical antiquity during which controversial rhetoric chiefly flourished, the Philoctetes of Euripides was more generally popular than either of its rivals.

§ 9. The originality of Sophocles can now be estimated. Sophocles. Hitherto, one broad characteristic had been common to epic and dramatic treatments of the subject. The fate of Philoctetes had been considered solely as it affected the Greeks at Troy. The oracle promised victory to them, if they could regain him : to him it offered health and glory. This was an excellent prospect for him : if he would not embrace it voluntarily, he must, if possible, be compelled to submission. But there had been no hint that, outside of this prospect, he had any claim on human pity. Suppose him to say,—‘I refuse health and glory, at the price of rejoining the men who cast me forth to worse than death ; but I pray to be delivered from this misery, and restored to my home in Greece.’ Would not that be a warrantable choice, a reasonable prayer ? Not a choice or a prayer, perhaps, that could win much sympathy from a Diomedes or an Odysseus, men who had consented to the act of desertion, and who now had their own objects to gain. But imagine some one in whom a generous nature, or even an ordinary sense of justice and humanity, could work without hindrance from self-interest ;—

The word πολιτικός is here used in the special sense which Greek writers on rhetoric had given to it. By πολιτικός λόγος they meant public speaking as distinguished from scholastic exercises,—especially speaking in a deliberative assembly or a law-court. See Attic Orators, vol. i. p. 90. Dion’s reiteration of the word marks his feeling that the rhetorical dialectic of Euripides in this play would have been telling in the contests of real life. And hence the play is described by him as τοῖς ἐντυγχάνουσιν πλείστην ὠφέλειαν παρασχέιν δυναμένη,—‘to those who engage in discussion.’ For this use of ἐντυγχάνειν, cp. Arist. Top. i. 2, where dialectic is said to be profitable πρὸς τὰς ἐντεύξεις : and Rhet. i. i. 12, with Cope’s note.

might not such a man be moved by the miseries of Philoctetes, and recognise that he had human rights which were not extinguished by his refusal to obey the summons of the Atreidae?

Again, the two plays on this subject which Sophocles found existing, both depended, for their chief dramatic interest, on the successful execution of a plan laid by the envoys. The Odysseus of Aeschylus, the Odysseus and Diomedes of Euripides, alike carry a stratagem to a triumphant issue.

In associating Odysseus with Neoptolemus, the youthful son of Achilles, Sophocles chose the person who, if any change was to be made in that respect, might most naturally be suggested by the epic version of the fable. But this new feature was no mere variation on the example of his predecessors. It prepared the way for a treatment of the whole story which was fundamentally different from theirs.

This will best be shown by a summary of the plot. The events supposed to have occurred before the commencement of the play can be told in a few words. Achilles having fallen, his armour had been awarded to Odysseus, and Ajax had committed suicide. Then Helenus had declared the oracle (as related above, § 3). Phoenix and Odysseus had gone to Scyros, and had brought the young Neoptolemus thence to Troy; where his father's armour was duly given to him. (In his false story to Philoctetes, he represents the Atreidae as having defrauded him of it.) Then he set out with Odysseus for Lemnos,—knowing that the object was to bring Philoctetes, but not that any deceit was to be used. The chiefs had told him that he himself was destined to take Troy; but not that the aid of Philoctetes was an indispensable condition.

§ 10. The scene is laid on the lonely north-east coast of Lemnos. Odysseus and Neoptolemus have just landed, and have now walked along the shore to a little distance from their ship, which is no longer visible. Odysseus tells his young comrade that here, long ago, he put Philoctetes ashore, by command of the Atreidae. He desires the youth to examine the rocks which rise above their heads, and to look for a cave, with a spring near it. Neoptolemus presently finds the cave, with traces in it which show that it is still inhabited.

A seaman, in attendance on Neoptolemus, is then despatched to act as sentry, lest Philoctetes should come on them by surprise.

Odysseus explains that it is impossible for him to face Philoctetes; he must remain concealed, on peril of his life; Neoptolemus must conduct the parley. Neoptolemus must tell Philoctetes truly who he is—but must pretend that he has quarrelled with the Greeks at Troy, for depriving him of his father's arms, and is sailing home to Greece.

The youth at first refuses to utter such a falsehood; but yields at last to the argument that otherwise he cannot take Troy. Odysseus now departs to the ship,—promising that, after a certain time, he will send an accomplice to help Neoptolemus in working on the mind of Philoctetes. This will be the man who had been acting as sentry; he will be disguised as a sea-captain.

The Chorus of fifteen seamen (from the ship of Neoptolemus) now enters. They ask their young chief how they are to aid his design. He invites them to look into the cave, and instructs them how they are to act when Philoctetes returns. In answer to their words of pity for the sufferer, he declares his belief that heaven ordains those sufferings only till the hour for Troy to fall shall have come.

Philoctetes appears. He is glad to find that the strangers are Greeks; he is still more rejoiced when he learns that the son of Achilles is before him. He tells his story; and Neoptolemus, in turn, relates his own ill-treatment by the chiefs. The Chorus, in a lyric strophe, confirm their master's fiction. After some further converse about affairs at Troy, Philoctetes implores Neoptolemus to take him home. The Chorus support the prayer. Neoptolemus consents. They are on the point of setting out for the ship, when two men are seen approaching.

The supposed sea-captain (sent by Odysseus) enters, with a sailor from the ship. He describes himself as master of a small merchant-vessel, trading in wine between Peparethus (an island off the south coast of Thessaly) and the Greek camp at Troy. He announces that the Greeks have sent emissaries in pursuit of Neoptolemus:—also that Odysseus and Diomedes have sailed in quest of Philoctetes. He then departs.

Philoctetes is now more anxious than ever to start at once. Accompanied by Neoptolemus, he enters his cave, in order to fetch his few necessaries.

Stasimon:

In the choral ode which follows, the seamen give full expression to their pity for Philoctetes. They have heard of Ixion, but they have never seen any doom so fearful as that of this unoffending man.

III. Second episode:
730—826.

Just as he is leaving the cave with Neoptolemus, Philoctetes is seized with a sharp attack of pain. He vainly seeks to hide his agony. Neoptolemus is touched, and asks what he can do. Philoctetes, feeling drowsy, says that, before he falls asleep, he wishes to place the bow and arrows in his friend's hands. Thus Neoptolemus (still with treason in his heart) gets the bow into his keeping.

A second and sharper paroxysm now comes upon Philoctetes. In his misery, he prays for death—he beseeches his friend to cast him into the crater of the burning mountain which can be seen from the cave. Neoptolemus is deeply moved. He solemnly promises that he will not leave the sick man; who presently sinks into slumber.

Kommos
827—864.

Invoking the Sleep-god to hold Philoctetes prisoner, the Chorus urge Neoptolemus to desert the sleeper, and quit Lemnos with the bow. Neoptolemus replies that such a course would be as futile as base,—since the oracle had directed them to bring not only the bow, but its master.

IV. Third episode:

Philoctetes awakes, and, aided by Neoptolemus, painfully rises to his feet. They are ready to set out for the ship. And now Neoptolemus has reached the furthest point to which the deception can be carried; for at the ship Philoctetes will find Odysseus. Shame and remorse prevail. He tells Philoctetes that their destination is Troy.

The unhappy man instantly demands his bow—but Neoptolemus refuses to restore it. And then the despair of Philoctetes finds terrible utterance. The youth's purpose is shaken.

He is on the point of giving back the weapon, when suddenly Odysseus starts forth from a hiding-place near the cave, and prevents him. Philoctetes—whom Odysseus threatens to take by force—is about to throw himself from the cliffs, when he is seized by the attendants. In answer to his bitter reproaches, Odysseus tells him that he can stay in Lemnos, if he chooses :—other hands can wield the bow at Troy. Odysseus then departs to the ship, ordering his young comrade to follow ; but, by the latter's command, the Chorus stay with Philoctetes, in the hope that he may yet change his mind.

In a lyric dialogue, Philoctetes bewails his fate, while the Chorus remind him that it is in his own power to escape from Lemnos. But at the bare hint of Troy, his anger blazes forth, and he bids them depart. They are going, when he frantically recalls them. Once more they urge their counsel—only to elicit a still more passionate refusal. He craves but one boon of them—some weapon with which to kill himself.

They are about to leave him—since no persuasions avail—when Neoptolemus is seen hurrying back, with the bow in his hand,—closely followed by Odysseus, who asks what he means to do. Neoptolemus replies that he intends to restore the bow to its rightful owner. Odysseus remonstrates, blusters, threatens, and finally departs, saying that he will denounce this treason to the army.

The youth next calls forth Philoctetes, and gives him the bow. Odysseus once more starts forth from ambush—but this time he is too late. The weapon is already in the hands of Philoctetes, who bends it at his foe, and would have shot him, had not Neoptolemus interposed. Odysseus hastily retires, and is not seen again.

Philoctetes now hears from Neoptolemus the purport of the oracle ; he is to be healed, and is to share the glory of taking Troy. He hesitates for a moment—solely because he shrinks from paining his friend by a refusal. But he cannot bring himself to go near the Atreidae. And so he calls upon Neoptolemus to fulfil his promise—to take him home.

Neoptolemus consents. He forebodes the vengeance of the Greeks—but Philoctetes reassures him : the arrows of Heracles shall avert it. They are about to set forth for Greece, when a divine form appears in the air above them.

Heracles has come from Olympus to declare the will of Zeus. Philoctetes must go to Troy with Neoptolemus, there to find health and fame. He yields to the mandate of heaven, brought by one who, while on earth, had been so dear to him. He makes his farewell to Lemnos; and the play closes as he moves with Neoptolemus towards the ship, soon to be sped by a fair wind to Sigeum.

General

§ 11. Even a mere outline of the plot, such as the above, will serve to exhibit the far-reaching consequences of the change made by Sophocles, when he introduced Neoptolemus as the associate of Odysseus. The man who retains the most indelible memory of a wrong may be one who still preserves a corresponding depth of sensibility to kindness; the abiding resentment can coexist with undiminished quickness of gratitude for benefits, and with loyal readiness to believe in the faith of promises. Such is the Philoctetes of Sophocles; he has been cast forth by comrades whom he was zealously aiding; his occasional visitors have invariably turned a deaf ear to his prayers; but, inexorably as he hates the Greek chiefs, all the ten years in Lemnos have not made him a Timon. He is still generous, simple, large-hearted, full of affection for the friends and scenes of his early days; the young stranger from the Greek camp, who shows pity for him, at once wins his warmest regard, and receives proofs of his absolute confidence. It is the combination of this character with heroic fortitude under misery that appeals with such irresistible pathos to the youthful son of Achilles, and gradually alters his resolve. But this character could never have been unfolded except in a sympathetic presence. The disclosure is possible only because Neoptolemus himself, a naturally frank and chivalrous spirit, is fitted to invite it. In converse with Diomedes or Odysseus, only the sterner aspects of Philoctetes would have appeared.

Nor, again, was it dramatically possible that Diomedes or Odysseus should regard Philoctetes in any other light than that of an indispensable ally: they must bring him to Troy, if possible: if not, then he must remain in Lemnos. Hence neither Aeschylus nor Euripides could have allowed the scheme of Odysseus to fail; for then not even a deus ex machina could have made the result satisfactory. It was only a person like Neoptolemus, detached from the past policy of the chiefs, who could be expected to view Philoctetes simply as a wronged and suffering man, with an unconditional claim to compassion. The process by which this view of him gains upon the mind of Neoptolemus, and finally supersedes the desire of taking him to Troy, is delineated with marvellous beauty and truth. Odysseus is baffled; but the decree of Zeus, whose servant he called himself, is performed. The supernatural agency of Heracles is employed in a strictly artistic manner, because the dead-lock of motives has come about by a natural process: the problem now is how to reconcile human piety, as represented by the decision of Neoptolemus, with the purpose of the gods, as declared in the oracle of Helenus. Only a divine message could bend the will of Philoctetes, or absolve the conscience of the man who had promised to bring him home.

Thus it is by the introduction of Neoptolemus that Sophocles is enabled to invest the story with a dramatic interest of the deepest kind. It is no longer only a critical episode in the Trojan war, turning on the question whether the envoys of the Greeks can conciliate the master of their fate. It acquires the larger significance of a pathetic study in human character,—a typical illustration of generous fortitude under suffering, and of the struggle between good and evil in an ambitious but loyal mind. Dion, in his comparison of the three plays on this subject, gives unstinted praise, as we have seen, to the respective merits of Aeschylus and of Euripides; but he reserves for Sophocles the epithet of ‘most tragic’¹. Sophocles was indeed the poet who first revealed the whole capabilities of the fable as a subject for Tragedy.

The
oracle.

§ 12. While the general plot of the Philoctetes is simple and lucid, there are some points in it which call for remark.

In the first place, some questions suggest themselves with regard to the oracle which commanded the Greeks to bring Philoctetes from Lemnos. Helenus appears to have said that he must be brought by persuasion, not by force (vv. 612, 1332). Odysseus, indeed, offered to compel him, if necessary (618); and, at one moment, threatens to do so (985). But it would be in keeping with his character—as depicted in this play—that he should think it unnecessary to observe the letter of the oracle in this respect. If his stratagem had succeeded, force would have been needless.

Then at v. 1340 Helenus is quoted as saying that Troy is doomed to fall in the summer. The Greeks could understand this only in a conditional sense, since he had told them that their victory depended on the return of Philoctetes (611 f.). But the absolute statement in v. 1340 is intelligible, if the seer be conceived as having a prevision of the event, and therefore a conviction that, by some means, Philoctetes would be brought.

Again,—is the ignorance of the oracle shown by Neoptolemus at v. 114 inconsistent with the knowledge which he shows afterwards? (197 ff.: 1337 ff.). I think not. The only fact of which v. 114 proves him ignorant is that Troy could not be taken without Philoctetes. What he says afterwards on that point could be directly inferred from what Odysseus then told him (v. 115). He may have known from the first that Philoctetes was a desirable ally, and that, if he came to Troy, he would be healed.

At v. 1055 Odysseus declares his willingness to leave Philoctetes in Lemnos. It is enough that the bow has been captured. But the oracle had expressly said that Philoctetes himself must be brought (841). Indeed, the difficulty of securing him is the basis of the whole story. Therefore, in 1055 ff., Odysseus must be conceived as merely using a last threat, which, he hopes, may cause Philoctetes to yield. The alternative in the mind of Odysseus—we must suppose—was to carry him aboard by force. In vv. 1075 ff. Neoptolemus directs the Chorus to stay with Philoctetes—on the chance of his relenting—until the ship is ready, and then to come quickly, when called. It would certainly seem from this that Neoptolemus understood his chief as seriously intending to leave Philoctetes behind. And the words of the Chorus at v. 1218 suggest the same thing. But it does not follow that they had penetrated the real purpose of their crafty leader.

§ 13. The part assigned to the pretended merchant (542—Episode of the merchant. 627) has been criticised, and not altogether without reason. Odysseus says in the opening scene that, if Neoptolemus seems to be staying too long at the cave—if, that is, there is reason to fear some miscarriage of their plan—he will send this disguised accomplice, from whose words Neoptolemus will receive useful hints. It would be natural to expect that this person was destined to arrive at a critical moment, and to solve some difficulty. But everything goes smoothly; Neoptolemus has already won the confidence of Philoctetes,—who is eager to sail with him,—when the pretended merchant appears (542). The story which he tells makes Philoctetes still more impatient to start than he was before; but that is all. It has no new effect upon the action. So far as the structure of the plot is concerned, it might be simply cut out. The scene, which is admirably written, has, however, an indirect advantage, which must be considered as its justification from a dramatic point of view. The merchant's statement that Odysseus is on his way to Lemnos brings out the feeling with which Philoctetes regards such an errand. 'Sooner would I hearken to that deadliest of my foes, the viper which made me the cripple that I am!'

§ 14. The management of the Chorus deserves notice. If The Chorus. Sophocles had followed the example of Aeschylus and Euripides, he would have composed it of Lemnians. He felt, probably, that it was better to avoid raising the question which was then suggested,—viz., why some effective succour had not been rendered to Philoctetes in the course of the ten years. But there was a further motive for the change. The attitude of a Lemnian Chorus would be that of a sympathetic visitor, leading Philoctetes to recount his sufferings, and speaking words of comfort in return; while, with respect to the scheme of Odysseus for bringing him to Troy, it would be neutral. But the dramatic effect of the situation is heightened by every circumstance that contributes to the isolation of the central figure. As in the Antigone the heroine is the more forlorn because the Theban elders support Creon, so here the loneliness of Philoctetes becomes more complete when the Chorus is formed of persons attached to the Greek chiefs. In these ten years he has seen no human face, and heard no voice, save when some chance vessel put in at the coast, only to mock him with a gleam of delusive hope. And now he stands alone against all.

The key-note of the part played by the seamen is their wish to second the design of their master, Neoptolemus; but they also feel genuine pity for Philoctetes. This is powerfully expressed in the stasimon (676 ff.), where they are alone upon the scene; though, at the close of that ode, when the sufferer returns, they once more seek to deceive him with the belief that he is going home to Malis (718 f.). But there is one passage which is in startling discord with the general tone of their utterances: it is where they press Neoptolemus to seize the moment while Philoctetes sleeps, and to decamp with the bow (833 ff.). It would be a poor excuse to suggest that they regard his sleep as the presage of imminent death (861 ὡς Ἀἶδα πάρα κείμενος). The dramatic motive of this passage is, indeed, evident: it elicits a reproof from Neoptolemus, and illustrates his honourable constancy (839 ff.). As for the Chorus, it may at least be said that this jarring note is struck only once. The humane temper which they had shown up to that point reappears in the sequel.

The Chorus of this play is essentially an active participator in the plot—aiding the strategy of Neoptolemus, and endeavouring to alter the purpose of Philoctetes (1081—1217). Hence it is natural that there should be only one stasimon. The other lyrics subsequent to the Parodos either form parentheses in the dialogue (391 ff., 507 ff.), or belong to the κομμοί.

Odysseus.

§ 15. It is curious to compare the Odysseus of this play—one of the poet's latest works—with that of the Ajax, which was one of the earliest. There, Odysseus appears as one who has deeply taken to heart the lesson of moderation, and of reverence for the gods, taught by Athena's punishment of his rival; and, if there is no great elevation in his character, at least he performs a creditable part in dissuading the Atreidae from refusing burial to the dead. Here, he is found avowing that a falsehood is not shameful, if it brings advantage (v. 109); he can be superlatively honest, he says, when there is a prize for honesty; but his first object is always to gain his end (1049 ff.). He is not content with urging Neoptolemus to tell a lie, but adds a sneer at the youth's reluctance (84 f.). Yet, as we learn from Dion, he is 'far gentler and simpler' than the Odysseus who figured in the Philoctetes of Euripides. The Homeric conception of the resourceful hero had suffered a grievous decline in the later period of the Attic drama; but Sophocles, it would seem, was comparatively lenient to him.

In the Ajax, it will be remembered, Odysseus is terrified at the prospect of meeting his insane foe, and Athena reproves his 'cowardice' (74 f.). His final exit in the Philoctetes is in flight from the bent bow of the hero, who remarks that he is brave only in words (1305 ff.). And, at an earlier moment in the play, he is ironically complimented by Neoptolemus on his prudence in declining to fight (1259). All these passages indicate that the conventional stage Odysseus to whom Attic audiences had become accustomed was something of a poltroon. But it is instructive to remark the delicate reserve of Sophocles in hinting a trait which was so dangerously near to the grotesque. For it is no necessary disparagement to the courage of Odysseus that he should shrink from confronting Ajax,—a raging maniac intent on killing him,—or that he should decline to be a passive target for the 'unerring' shafts of Philoctetes,—or that he should refrain from drawing his sword on his young comrade, Neoptolemus.

§ 16. A few words must be added concerning the topography of the play¹. Mount Hermaeum, which re-echoed the cries of Philoctetes, may safely be identified with the north-eastern promontory of Lemnos, now Cape Plaka. His cave was imagined by the poet as situated in the cliffs on the north-east coast, not far south of Hermaeum (cp. 1455 ff.), and at some height above the shore (v. 1000: cp. v. 814). The east coast is probably that on which the volcano Mosychlus (visible from the cave) once existed; and the islet called Chrysè lay near it. Philoctetes describes Lemnos as uninhabited (v. 220), and as affording no anchorage (v. 302). This raises a curious point as to the degree of licence that a dramatist of that age would have allowed himself in a matter of this sort,—and as to the choice which he would have made between two kinds of improbability. In the time of Sophocles, Lemnos had long been a possession of Athens, and it was a familiar fact to Athenians that the island possessed excellent harbours on every side except the east. Then, if an Athenian audience were required to suppose that, in the heroic age, Lemnos was a desert island, they would at once remember the ‘well-peopled’ Lemnos of the Iliad. Hence, the simplest supposition—viz., that Sophocles chose to make Lemnos desolate for the nonce—is not really so easy as it might appear. One asks, then, did he mean us to remember, here also, the maimed condition of Philoctetes, who could not move many yards from his cave in the eastern cliffs? The centres of population, in ancient times, were on the west and north coasts. The area of Lemnos has been computed as about a hundred and fifty square miles, or nearly the same as that of the Isle of Wight¹. It would not, then, be absurd to suppose that, even in the space of many years, no Lemnian had chanced to find that particular spot, at the extreme verge of a desolate region, in which the sick man was esconced.

Other literature

§ 17. The fortunes of the hero after his return to Troy formed the subject of another play by Sophocles (Φιλοκτήτης ὁ ἐν Τροίᾳ). The healing of Philoctetes, and his slaying of Paris, must have been the principal incidents; but the few words which remain give no clue to the treatment. It is only a conjecture—though a probable one—that Asclepius himself was introduced as aiding the skill of his sons².

² At v. 1437 Heracles promises to send Asclepius to Troy,—a passage which has groundlessly been regarded as inconsistent with the mention of the Asclepiadae in 1333. If the Philoctetes at Troy was the earlier play, this may be an allusion to it,—like that to the Antigone in the Oedipus Coloneus (v. 1410 n.).

Besides the three great dramatists, other tragic poets of the same period wrote on the story of Philoctetes¹. Nothing of interest is known concerning these lost works,—except, indeed, one curious detail. Theodectes, whose repute stood high in the time of Aristotle, represented the sufferer as wounded in the hand, not in the foot². The motive of this innovation is not difficult to divine. Aristophanes touches on the predilection of Euripides for maimed heroes, and in the comedies which had been written on the subject of Philoctetes, his disabled foot had doubtless been made a prominent trait³. Theodectes wished to avoid all associations of burlesque. His expedient for dignifying the warrior's misfortune is very characteristic of the decadence.

§ 18. In the best age of Roman Tragedy, Attius (c. 140 B.C.) composed a Philocteta, of which some small fragments remain,—less than fifty lines in all. Much ingenuity has been expended on conjectures as to the plot. But the evidence is too scanty to warrant any conclusion⁴. Many of the verses have a rugged

One point of interest may, however, be noticed. Attius made some one tell the same story which is told by the Neoptolemus of Sophocles—viz., that Odysseus still held the armour of Achilles (see fr. 16). But no one could use this fiction with so much effect as the person chiefly aggrieved. Perhaps, then, Attius followed Sophocles in associating Odysseus with Neoptolemus.

Heu ! qui salsis fluctibu' mandet
Me ex sublimo vertice saxi ?
Iamiam absumor : conficit animam
Vis vulneris, ulceris aestus.

Eu-

The adventures of Philoctetes after the Trojan war were related by Euphorion of Chalcis (c. 220 B.C.), in a short epic (Φιλοκτήτης), of which only five lines, preserved by Stobaeus, are extant, but of which the contents are partly known from a note of Tzetzes on Lycophron¹. Philoctetes arrived in southern Italy, and there founded the city of Cremissa, near Crotona. He raised a shrine to Apollo the protector of wanderers², and dedicated in it the bow of Heracles. He was slain while aiding an expedition of Rhodians against some Achaeans of Pellene who had settled in Italy.

Fénelon's

§ 19. Once, at least, in modern literature the story of Philoctetes has been treated with a really classical grace. The mind of Fénelon was in natural sympathy with the spirit of ancient Greek poetry; and the twelfth book of the Télémaque, where Philoctetes relates his fortunes to Telemachus, is marked by this distinction. Fénelon varies the earlier part of the legend, following a version which is given by Servius³. Heracles, when about to perish on Mount Oeta, wished that the resting-place of his ashes should remain unknown. Philoctetes swore to keep the secret. Odysseus afterwards came in search of Heracles, and at last prevailed on Philoctetes to reveal the spot,—not, indeed, by words, but by stamping upon it. It was for this that Philoctetes was punished by the gods. One of the arrows of Heracles—tinged with the venom of the Lernaean hydra—dropped from his hand, and wounded the offending foot. For almost all that part of the story which passes in Lemnos, Fénelon has closely followed the play of Sophocles. Many passages are translated or paraphrased with happy effect. He wished, however, to present the father of Telemachus in a more favourable light; and so it is Odysseus, not Neoptolemus, who restores the bow.

'Farewell, thou promontory where Echo so often repeated my cries,'—says the Philoctetes of Fénelon,—true to the text of Sophocles. The Télémaque appeared in 1699. More than half a century later, these laments of Philoctetes became the starting-point of a discussion destined to have fruitful results. Winckelmann, speaking of the Laocoon, had observed that the marble indicates no loud cry, but rather 'a subdued groan of anguish': 'Laocoon suffers, but he suffers like the Philoctetes of Sophocles.' Lessing, in his Laocoon (1766), pointed out that the Philoctetes of Sophocles shrieks aloud, and that Heracles, in the Trachiniae, does the same. 'The ancient Greek uttered his anguish and his sorrow; he was ashamed of no mortal weakness.' If, then, the poet expresses the cry of bodily pain, while the sculptor refrains from expressing it, the reason must be sought in the different conditions of the two arts. At the time when Lessing wrote, the general tendency of contemporary taste was in agreement with the view on which Cicero insists, that any outward manifestation of pain is unworthy of a great mind, and that a wrong had been done to the heroic character by those poets who had permitted their heroes to utter lamentations¹. This maxim is exemplified in the tragedies of the stoic Seneca, whose persons are forcibly described by Lessing as 'prize-fighters in buskins²': it had also been observed on the classical stage of France.

In a passage of excellent criticism,—which has lost nothing of its value because it closed the aesthetic controversy which it concerns,—Lessing shows how Sophocles, in the Philoctetes, has reconciled the necessary portrayal of physical suffering with the highest requirements of tragic art. He takes up three points.

(1) The nature of the suffering itself. The wound is a divine punishment, and there is a supernatural element in its operation: 'a poison worse than any to be found in nature' vexes the victim. Then this affliction is joined to other evils,—solitude, hunger, hardship. (2) The expression of the suffering. It is true that, in the scene where Philoctetes utters his cries of pain (vv. 730 ff.), he believes that he is about to be rescued from Lemnos: his anguish, there, is physical only. But these cries are wrung from him by extreme torment, despite his efforts to stifle them (vv. 742 f.). They detract nothing from the heroic firmness of his character,—displayed not only in the strength of his attachments, but also (as ancient Greeks would deem) in the fixity of his resentments. 'And then we are asked to suppose that Athenians would have scorned this rock of a man, because he reverberates to waves which cannot shake him!'¹ (3) The effect of this expression upon the other persons. As Lessing acutely remarks, the dramatic inconvenience of a hero who cries aloud from bodily pain is that such a cry, though it need not excite contempt, seems to demand more sympathy than is usually forthcoming. Sophocles has forestalled this difficulty 'by causing the other persons of the drama to have their own interests.' That is, when Philoctetes shrieks, the mind of the spectator is not occupied in gauging the precise amount of sympathy shown by Neoptolemus, but rather in watching how it will affect his secret purpose. 'If Philoctetes had been able to hide his suffering, Neoptolemus would have been able to sustain his deceit... Philoctetes, who is all nature, brings back Neoptolemus to his own nature. This return is excellent, and the more affecting because it is the result of pure humanity.'

The last words allude to a French drama in which a different motive had been employed. Châteaubrun, in his Philoctète (1755), had given the hero a daughter named Sophie, who (with her gouvernante) visited Lemnos; and the romantic passion with which Sophie inspired Neoptolemus became his chief reason for assisting her father. Two other French dramas of the same title, those of Ferrand (1780) and La Harpe (1781), are noticed by M. Patin¹; but a comparative respect for the example of Sophocles is the highest merit which he ascribes to either.

§ 20. The legend of Philoctetes, as embodied in classical poetry, is illustrated at every step by extant monuments of classical art,—vase-paintings, engraved gems, reliefs, or wall-paintings,—ranging in date from the fifth century B.C. to the second or third century of the Christian era². He is seen assisting, in his youth, at the sacrifices offered to Chrysè by Heracles and by Jason;—standing beside the pyre of Heracles on Oeta;—wounded by the serpent, at his second visit to Chrysè's shrine;—abandoned in Lemnos;—finally, tended by the 'healing hands' at Troy, and victorious over Paris.

A peculiar interest belongs to the representations of his sufferings in Lemnos, since they exhibit three principal types, each of which can be traced to the influence of an eminent artist. (i) The sculptor Pythagoras of Rhegium (c. 460 B.C.), famous especially for his athletes, excelled in the expression of sinews and veins. One of his best-known works was a statue at Syracuse, which represented a man limping, with a sore in his foot. 'Those who look at it,' says Pliny, 'seem to feel the pain³.' There can be no doubt that the subject was Philoctetes. As an example of the later works which were probably copied, more or less directly, from this statue, may be mentioned a cornelian intaglio, now in the Museum of Berlin⁴. Philoctetes is walking, with the aid of a stick held in his left hand: in his right he carries the bow and quiver: his left foot,—the wounded one, as a bandage indicates,—is put forward, while the weight of the body is thrown on the right foot. The figure illustrates a principle which Pythagoras of Rhegium is said to have introduced,—viz.,

a correspondence between the attitude of the left leg and that of the right arm, or vice versa,—a symmetry obtained by an artificial balance of movements¹. It is noteworthy that a standing or walking Philoctetes occurs only on engraved gems, and in one mural painting at Pompeii (of about 30 B.C.) which may also have been suggested by the Syracusan statue. (ii) A very beautiful Athenian vase-painting, of about 350 B.C., shows Philoctetes sitting on a rock in Lemnos, under the leafless branches of a stunted tree; his head is bowed, as if in dejection; the bandaged left foot is propped on a stone, and the left hand clasps the left knee². He wears a sleeveless Doric chiton, girt round the waist; at his right side the bow and arrows rest on the ground. It is probable that the source of this vase-painting was a picture by Parrhasius, who is known to have taken Philoctetes for his subject at a date slightly earlier than that to which the vase is referred. The distinctive feature here is the predominance of mental over physical pain;—a conception which might have been suggested to the painter by the Attic dramatists. (iii) In a third series of representations, Philoctetes reclines on the ground, fanning his wounded foot with the wing of a bird, or with a branch. This type occurs only on gems, and appears to have been originated by Boethus of Chalcodon, a gem-engraver of high repute, who lived probably in the early part of the third century B.C.³

Some other scenes found on works of art, in which Philoctetes is no longer alone, were directly inspired by Attic Tragedy. An engraved gem, now in the British Museum, represents the theft of the bow by Odysseus, as Aeschylus appears to have imagined it⁴. Euripides has been the source of some reliefs

² Ib. p. 80. Milani has chosen this picture as the frontispiece of his monograph. The vase is an aryballos, now the property of Sign. A. Castellani, of Rome.

on alabaster urns of the second century B.C.; two Trojan envoys, on the left hand of Philoctetes, are inviting him to follow them, while on his right hand are Odysseus and Diomedes, in an attitude of remonstrance; or Philoctetes, in acute pain, is tended by Odysseus, while Diomedes, at the sufferer's back, seizes the bow and quiver¹. Nor has Sophocles been neglected; Odysseus instructing Neoptolemus appears on a marble medalion² of the first or second century A.D.; and a sarcophagus³ of the same period shows the moment when Odysseus starts forward to prevent his more generous comrade from restoring the bow to its despairing master (v. 974).

sacrifice.

The place is the sacred precinct of Chrysè—'the roofless sanctuary' of which Sophocles speaks—in the island of the same name, near the eastern coast of Lemnos. Philoctetes, who has just been bitten in the foot by the snake, is lying on the ground, overcome by pain, and crying aloud, as the recumbent Philoctetes fanning his foot to keep off some winged creatures; while Odysseus, characterised by the πίλος, stands at his back, in the act of taking the bow from the place where it is suspended. This recalls a fragment of the Aeschylean Philoctetes, κρεμάσασα (κρεμασὰ?) τόξα πίτυος ἐκ μελανδρόου. See Milani, Mito di F., p. 90.

open mouth indicates. The laurel-wreath worn by him, as by all the other persons of the group, denotes that he had been sacrificing. A beardless youth who bends over the sufferer, as if about to raise him in his arms, is probably Palamedes ; his chlamys is girt about his loins in the manner used by sacrificers. On the left, the image of Chrysè is seen behind her burning altar ; the snake, 'the lurking guardian' of her shrine (v. 1327 f.),—which had crept forth as Philoctetes approached—is again seeking its hiding-place, while Agamemnon strikes at it with his sceptre. Next to him on the right is the beardless Achilles, with chlamys girt at the waist, and a piece of flesh, roasted for the sacrifice, on a spit (ὀβελός) in his hand : then the bearded Diomedes, wrapt in his himation : and, on the extreme right, a similar form, possibly Menelaus¹. The attitudes express horror at the disaster². If the followers of the Greek chiefs are imagined as gathered around this group, awe-struck spectators of the interrupted rite, nothing is wanting to a picture of the moment indicated by Sophocles, when the 'ill-omened cries' of Philoctetes 'filled the camp,' and at length prompted the cruel resolve to carry him across the narrow strait, and abandon him on the lonely shore of Lemnos.

§ 22. A further point of interest in this vase-painting is its representation of the mysterious Chrysè. Her image has the rigid character of a primitive temple-image (ξόανον). The high κάλαθος or πόλος on her head seems to indicate a Chthonian power, as in the case of Demeter, Artemis Tauropolos, and Artemis Orthia. A very similar representation of her occurs on another vase—a 'vinegar-cup' (oxybaphon) of the fifth or fourth century B.C., now in the Lamberg collection at Vienna¹. The scene there depicted is the first sacrifice of Philoctetes at Chrysè's altar, in company with Heracles; and there, as here, her identity is made certain by her name being written above. There, too, her hands are uplifted; but she wears a corona, not the calathus; and a broad stripe, which runs down her robe from neck to feet, is studded with two rows of discs, which appear to symbolise stars. Here, also, such discs are seen, though only on the girdle and on the lower edge of the garment. According to one theory, Chrysè was merely a form of Athena,—the epithet 'golden' having been substituted for the personal name,—and the serpent at her shrine is to be compared with the guardian of the Erechtheum (see on 1327 ff.). But there is more probability in the view of Petersen², that Chrysè is a Greek form of Bendis. The Thracian Bendis was a lunar deity, sharing some attributes of Artemis (with whom the Greeks chiefly associated her), Hecate, Selene, and Persephone. The worship of Bendis seems to have existed in Lemnos, as at Athens. On the other hand, Chrysè is always connected with places near the Thracian coasts. Lenormant, adopting this view, remarked that, if the name

Bendis meant 'bright', then Χρύση (= χρυσή) may have been a direct translation of it². Thus, when Heracles, Jason and Agamemnon—all bound on perilous enterprises—offered sacrifice at Chryse's altar, they might be regarded as seeking to conciliate an alien deity. Sophocles imagines her as a cruel being (ὠμόφρων) whom higher powers—for their own good purpose—have permitted to wreak her anger; but he does not further define her supernatural rank³.

Supposed
reference.

§ 23. The Philoctetes was produced at the Great Dionysia, late in March, 409 B.C., and gained the first prize⁴. Sophocles, according to the tradition, would then have been eighty-seven. Able critics have favoured the view that his choice of this subject was in some way connected with the return of Alcibiades⁵. It was in 411 B.C. that Thrasybulus had prevailed on the democratic leaders at Samos to send for Alcibiades, and to elect him one of the ten generals⁶,—a measure by which, as Grote says, 'he was relieved substantially, though not in strict form,' from the penalties of banishment. In 410 Alcibiades had been the principal author of the Athenian victory at Cyzicus. Thus, at the date of the Philoctetes, men's minds had already been prepared for his formal restitution to citizenship—which took place on his return to Athens in 407 B.C. It is easy to draw a parallel between the baffled army at Troy, with their fate hanging on an estranged comrade, and the plight of Athens, whose hopes were centred on an exile. Nay, even the passage where Philoctetes learns who have perished, and who survive, in the Greek army has been read as a series of allusions to dead or living Athenians. Then Neoptolemus is Thrasybulus: and the closing words of Heracles (εὐσεβεῖν τὰ πρὸς θεούς) convey a lesson to the suspected profaner of the Mysteries. Now, to suppose that Sophocles intended a political allegory of this kind, is surely to wrong him grievously as a poet. At the same time it must be recognised that the coincidence of date is really remarkable. It is not impossible that his thoughts may have been first turned to this theme by the analogy which he perceived in it to events of such deep interest for his countrymen¹. But the play itself is the best proof that, having chosen his subject, he treated it for itself alone.

⁵ Ad. Schöll, Sophokles. Sein Leben und Wirken. (Frankfort, 2nd ed. 1870.) Ch. Lenormant, in the Correspondant of July 25, 1855. M. Patin (Sophocle, p. 125) mentions, as the earliest expression of such a view, an art. by M. Lebeau jeune in the Mém. de l'Acad. des Inscriptions, vol. xxxv.

§ 24. The diction of the Philoctetes has been regarded by Schneidewin and others as somewhat deficient in the lofty force of earlier compositions. But this criticism is not warranted by those passages which gave the fittest scope for such a quality,—as the invocation of the Great Mother (391—402),—the noble stasimon (676—729),—and the denunciations by Philoctetes of the fraud practised against him (927—962: 1004—1044). If, in the larger part of the play, the language is of a less elevated strain, this results from the nature of the subject; since the gradual unfolding of character, to which the plot owes its peculiar interest, is effected by the conversations of Neoptolemus with Odysseus or with Philoctetes, in which a more familiar tone necessarily predominates. Diction.

§ 25. The versification, however, clearly shows, in one respect, the general stamp of the later period. If the Philoctetes is compared (for example) with the Antigone, it will be apparent that the structure of the iambic trimeter has become more Euripidean. The use of tribrachs is very large. Two such feet occur consecutively in the same verse (1029 καὶ νῦν τί μ' ἄγετε; τί μ' ἀπάγεσθε; τοῦ χάριν); a tribrach precedes a dactyl (1232 Versification.

παρ' οὐπερ ἔλαβον τάδε τὰ τόξ', αὖθις πάλιν): or follows it (932 ἀπόδος, ἰκνοῦμαί σ', ἀπόδος, ἰκετεύω, τέκνον). In two instances a verse ends with a single word which forms a 'paeon quartus' (1302 πολέμιον, 1327 ἀκαλυφῇ),—a licence used, indeed, by Aeschylus, but in a trimeter which belongs to a lyric passage (Eum. 780). An anapaest in the first place of the verse occurs not less than thirteen times (308, 470, 486, 544, 742, 745, 749, 898, 923, 939, 941, 967, 1228),—without counting 815 (τί παραφρονεῖς, where the first foot may be a tribrach), 549 (a proper name), or 585 (ἐγὼ εἰμ', a case of synizesis). Not a single instance occurs in the Antigone; and in no other play are there more than five. These relaxations of metre in the Philoctetes may be partly explained, perhaps, by the more colloquial tone which prevails in much of the dialogue. But at any rate the pervading tendency to greater freedom is unmistakable, and is certainly more strongly marked than in any other of the poet's plays.

MANUSCRIPTS, EDITIONS, ETC.

§ 1. THE MSS., other than L, to which reference is made in the MSS. critical notes are the Parisian A, B, K, T; the Florentine F, Lc, L², R; the Venetian V, V², V³; the Roman Vat., Vat. b; and the London Harl. Some account of these has been given in former volumes (Oed. Tyr., Introd., pp. liii ff., 2nd ed.: Oed. Col., p. xlix, 2nd ed.),—with three exceptions, viz., K, Lc, and Harl. The readings of K, when given, are cited from the edition of Blaydes (1870), who was the first to collate it for the Philoctetes. It is a MS. of the 15th century, cod. 2886 in the National Library at Paris, and, as a rule, closely follows L: though, as Cavallin remarks (Prolegom. pp. xxxv f.), ‘nonnunquam suam quandam est aut corrumpendi aut corrigendi viam ingressus.’ It is curious that in v. 1322, where L has εὔνοιάν σοι λέγων, K has the true εὔνοιαν λέγων, with σοι merely written above. Dindorf’s Lc (the N of Blaydes), is cod. 32. 2 in the Laurentian Library at Florence, and dates from the 14th century. The Harleian ms. is no. 5743 of that collection in the British Museum; it is ascribed to the 15th century, and contains the Philoctetes only.

§ 2. With regard to the readings of L and its peculiarities as a ms., some points of interest will be found (e.g.) in the critical notes on vv. 533, 715, 727, 942, 1263, 1384. Attention may be drawn, also, to vv. 82 and 945, as instances of the manner in which L, even when it has lost the true reading, sometimes preserves a hint of it which has vanished from later MSS. In what concerns the relations between L and the other codices, the most remarkable point presented by this play is the twofold reading in v. 220,—καὶ ποίας πάτρας (L), and ναυτίλῳ πλάτῃ (A). Cavallin’s theory that both arose from καὶ ποία πλάτῃ seems more ingenious than probable; but it does not therefore become necessary to regard the discrepancy as evidence that A had an archetype distinct from L (see commentary). Another passage which deserves notice, as illustrating the character of L, is 639, ἐπειδὴν πνεῦμα τοῦκ πρώτας ἀνῆ. Here all the mss. have lost ἀνῆ. L has ἀη (ᾶη), which shows the corruption in its first stage,—a simple loss of ν. The ᾶη was taken as = ‘blows,’ and was allowed to stand, although contrary to the sense required by the context. But in the Paris Ms., A, a wish to suit the sense has carried the corruption to a second stage: it has ἀγῆ, meant for ἀγγῆ (from ἐάγγη),—‘be broken,’ i.e., ‘fall,’ ‘subside.’ In 767, again, we find A itself holding the intermediate place between L and a ms. still later than A:—L there has the true ἐξίη: A has the unmeaning ἐξήη, which, in its turn, led to the ἐξήκη of Paris B.

Scholia.

§ 3. In four instances the scholia preserve a true reading which the mss. have lost: v. 538 κακά: 954 ἀνανοῦμαι: 1199 βροντᾶς αἰγαῖς: 1461 Λύκιον. At v. 639, where the schol. has πέσση, θραυσθῆ, the first word has been taken as pointing to the lost reading ἀνῆ: but more probably it merely refers, like θραυσθῆ, to the spurious ἀγῆ.

Interpolations.

§ 4. After v. 1251 a verse appears to have been lost. On the other hand, two examples of interpolation are scarcely doubtful,—viz., (1) the words οἱ τὸν ἄθλιον...ἐκριναν in 1365 ff., first rejected by Brunck; (2) the words σῆς πάτρας...αὐδᾶς in 1407 f., first rejected by Dindorf.

Many other passages have been condemned or suspected by various critics, but, so far as I can perceive, without sufficient cause. The objections have been discussed in the notes, wherever it seemed requisite. The following is a list of the impugned verses (about 70 in all):—

§ 5. Emendations proposed by the editor will be found at vv. 147, 491, 728, 752, 782, 1092, 1125, 1149 f., 1153.

Editions, etc.

§ 6. Besides the complete editions of Sophocles (Oed. Tyr. p. lxi), these separate editions of the Philoctetes have been consulted:—Ph. Buttmann (Berlin, 1822). G. Burges (London, 1833). M. Seyffert (Berlin, 1866). Chr. Cavallin (Lund, 1875). In the Journ. of Philo- logy, vol. xvi. pp. 114 ff., Mr J. Masson has printed some previously unpublished conjectures in this play by Turnebus, Lambinus and Auratus. They are taken from ms. notes by Lambinus, contained in a copy of the Turnebus Sophocles (ed. 1553) which is now in the British Museum. Although they contain nothing new of any value, they are occasionally curious as establishing claims of priority in regard to more or less obvious corrections. Turnebus, it seems, had anticipated Schneidewin by conjecturing ἐλών in v. 700. Lambinus had forestalled the following corrections:—324 θυμὸν...χεῖρὶ (Brunck): 636 ὀρίζῃ (Reiske, Brunck): 639 ἀνῇ (Pierson). As to v. 782, however, where Lambinus seems to have suggested εὔχῃ [‘εὔχ’], there is no proof that he anticipated Camerarius, whose ed. of Sophocles appeared in 1534: and when at v. 1461 (γλύκιόν τε ποτόν) he wrote ‘al. Λύκιόν,’ he probably referred to the notice of that variant by the scholiast. That Auratus was the author of some true conjectures, has been noted in my commentary or Appendix (190 ὑπακούει, 554 ἀμφὶ σοῦ νεία, 992 τίθης, 1149 μηκέτ’). It may be added here that he was the first to propose ἐπι in 648, and that in 1032 he suggested ἐξέστ’ (meaning, probably, ἐξέσται)¹.

¹ As to δοκῆτέ τι in 126, and ἐγώ in 571, those corrections may, indeed, have been his own; but he could also have found them in the 14th century ms. B at Paris, where he held a Professorship. A similar remark applies to κλύων in 688, which is in some of the later MSS.

METRICAL ANALYSIS.

IN addition to anapaests, the lyric metres used in the Philoctetes are the following.

(1) Logaoedic, based on the choree (or 'trochee'), $- \cup$, and the cyclic dactyl, which is metrically equivalent to the choree, $\sim \cup$. A logaoedic tetrapody, or verse of four feet (one cyclic dactyl and three chorees) is called 'Glyconic.' According as the dactyl comes first, second, or third, the verse is a First, Second, or Third Glyconic. A logaoedic tripody (one cyclic dactyl and two chorees) is called 'Pherecratic.' According as the dactyl comes first or second, it is a First or Second Pherecratic. Logaoedic verses of six and of five feet also occur. The logaoedic dipody ('versus Adonius') is found once in this play: see Analysis, No. III., Stasimon, Second Strophe, per. 11, v. 2.

(2) Choreic verses, based on the choree, $- \cup$, are ordinarily of four or of six feet, and are often used to vary logaoedic measures (cp. No. I., Parodos, First Strophe, etc.).

(3) Dactyls occur in the form of the hexameter, the tetrapody, and the tripody. (For the two latter, see Analysis, No. IV., Kommos, First Strophe, per. 1.)

(4) Dochmiacs. The single dochmius, $\cup : -- \cup | - \wedge ||$, occurs in No. V., Second Kommos, First Str., per. 111, v. 1. The dochmiac dimeter, of which the normal form is $\cup : -- \cup | -, \cup || -- \cup | - \wedge ||$, appears in No. II., Hyporcheme, periods 11. and 111., and in No. IV., Kommos, Strophe, per. 111. In the first of these passages (No. II., per. 11.), the two dochmiac dimeters are separated by a verse consisting of bacchii ($-- \cup$) in two dipodies. Such a measure was akin to the dochmiac, in which the bacchius was the primary element.

(5) The ionic measure, $- - \cup \cup$, is found once (No. V., Anomoiostrophā, first section, per. 11.). It is there used with anacrusis, $\cup \cup : - - \cup \cup$, i.e., in the form called ionicus a minore. This passage also exemplifies the not uncommon licence by which dichorees ($- \cup - \cup$) could be interchanged with ionics. Such substitution was termed ἀνάκλασις ('breaking up'). On this see Schmidt, Rhythmic and Metric, § 23. 2.

(6) Choriambics ($- \cup \cup -$) occur in the same passage, a little further on. (No. V., Anomoiostr., first sect., per. iv.)

This sequence of ionics and choriambics is instructive, as illustrating the fine sense which varied lyric metres according to shades of feeling. The ionic was an animated measure; here, it expresses the lively repugnance with which Philoctetes regards the prospect of going to Troy. But the choriambic was more than animated,—it was passionate; and so it is reserved for the climax, where, in his despair, he conjures the Chorus not to depart,—μή, πρὸς ἀραίου Διός, ἔλθης, ἰκετεύω. The same ethical relation between the two measures may be seen in the Oedipus Tyrannus, 483 ff. (Metr. Analysis, p. xciv).

In the subjoined metrical schemes, the sign \sqcup , for $-$, denotes that the time-value of $-$ is increased by one half, so that it is equal to $- \cup$ or $\cup \cup \cup$. The sign \geq means that an 'irrational' long syllable (συλλαβὴ ἄλογος) is substituted for a short. The letter ω , written over two short syllables, indicates that they have the time-value of one short only.

At the end of a verse, \wedge marks a pause equal to \cup , $\overline{\wedge}$ a pause equal to $-$. The anacrusis of a verse (the part preliminary to the regular metre) is marked off by three dots placed vertically, \vdots .

The end of a rhythmical unit, or 'sentence,' is marked by \parallel . The end of a rhythmical 'period' (a combination of two or more such sentences, corresponding with each other) is marked by \parallel .

If a rhythmical sentence introduces a rhythmical period without belonging to it, it is called a προῳδός, or prelude: or, if it closes it, an ἐπῳδός, epode, or postlude. Similarly a period may be grouped round an isolated rhythmical sentence, which is then called the μεσῳδός, mesode, or interlude.

I. Parodos, vv. 135—218.

FIRST STROPHE.—Logaoedic, in hexapodies (Period I.), and tetrapodies (II., III.). The First Glyconic is used in II. 2; the Second Glyconic, in II. 3, 4 and III. 1. There are some choreic verses, viz. I. 1 (a choreic hexapody, or iambic trimeter): II. 1, III. 2, 3 (choreic tetrapodies). A similar blending of logaoedic and choreic measures may be seen in Ant. 332—375 and 582—625 (Metr. Anal. pp. lix ff.).

FIRST STROPHE.—Logaoedic. In Period I. the verses are of six, five, and four feet: Periods II. and III. consist of tetrapodies only. As in the First Strophe of the Parodos, there is an admixture of choric verses (I. 1 and 6: II. 2).

§ This example—where there is no doubt about the reading, either in the strophe or in the antistrophe—proves that the antistrophic correspondence of Glyconic verses did not necessarily require the dactyl to occur in the same place. Just below (Per. II., v. 1) there is another instance, if the reading μηκέτ' άπ' αύλιων φυγά be right: see commentary on 1149 f.

1 Χρύσης Ἀθηνᾶς] ἐν χρυσῇ ἀθηνᾷ L: ἐν χρυσῇ ἀθηνᾶς T. 2 ἐφ' οὐπερ] εἰς τὸ περ L. 3 ἦδει L: ἦδη T.—ποθ' T: τόθ' L. 4 The first three verses, and the first half of the fourth, are written in L as prose. Having perceived that the Argument was metrical, the scribe then stopped abruptly after the syllable ναυ of ναυβάτη, and began afresh with verse 3. Hence verse 3 and the first half of v. 4 are written twice in L.—ναυβάτη...στόλῳ] ναυβάτη...στόλον L: ναυάτην...στόλον T. 5 ἐν Λήμνῳ νοσῶν] ἐν λήμνῳ νο L, the three last letters of νοσῶν having been lost. 6 εἶφ' L: εἶπ' L. 7 τόξοισι] τόξοις L, which a later hand has sought to alter into τόξοισι. 8 τόξ' ὑπῆρχε] τότ' ὑπείρχε L.

This metrical Argument, with the heading Φιλοκτῆτου $\overline{\nu}$, stands in L (p. 79 b) immediately after the ἄθλοι Ἡρακλέους, twelve hexameters which are placed at the end of the Trachiniae. Then comes the prose Argument, with the heading ἄλλως, followed by τὰ τοῦ δράματος πρόσωπα. The metrical Argument was first printed in the ed. of Sophocles by Turnebus (Paris, 1553), who found it in the Paris 15th century ms., T (cod. 2711). It is absent from the earlier editions (those of Aldus, Junta, and Camerius), since the mss. on which they were chiefly based did not contain it. (Cp. O. C. p. liv.)—The workmanship of these iambics is decidedly worse (and presumably much later) than that of the metrical Argument to the Oedipus Tyrannus. In v. 2 an anapaest holds the second, and in v. 9, the fourth place; while in v. 6 ἀλώσεσθ' Ἴλιον combines an impossible elision with an impossible spondee. In v. 5 ἐλίπετ' has the sense of ἐλείφθη, a Homeric use of the aor. midd. which is unknown to later classical Greek.

1 Χρύσης Ἀθηνᾶς. The second scholium on v. 194, and the schol. on 1326, identify Χρύση with Athena; but nothing in the play itself favours that view. Sophocles seems rather to think of Chrysè as a nymph.—βωμόν: cp. Dion Chrysostom, or. 59 § 9 (where he paraphrases a dialogue, from the Euripidean Philoctetes, between that hero and Odysseus), ὥσπερ ἀμέλει καὶ ἐξέθηκας, ὑπὲρ τῆς κοινῆς σωτηρίας τε καὶ νίκης περιπεσόντα τῇδε τῇ ξυμφορᾷ, δεικνύντα τὸν Χρύσης βωμόν, οὐ θύσαντες κρατήσιν ἐμελλον τῶν πολεμίων· εἰ δὲ μή, μάτην ἐγίγνετο ἡ στρατεία.—ἐπικεχωσμένον, in classical Greek, would mean, 'heaped up,' and would be pointless here. Probably, however, the post-classical writer of these verses intended to express the idea, 'encumbered with earth or débris,' and so, 'decayed,' 'neglected.' Cp. the scholium of Tzetzes on Lycophron v. 911 ὅτε ἐκάθαιρεν ἐν Χρῶσῃ τὸν κεχωσμένον βωμόν τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς (where κεχωσμένον, 'defiled,' would, indeed, be a possible v. l.); Tzetzes seems to mean, 'the decayed altar,' using χώω in a sense suggested by its application to the 'choking up' of harbours. 3 ποθ' Ἡρακλεῖ ξυνῶν=ἐπειδὴ ποτε Ἡρ. ξυνῆν. Not in the expedition of Heracles against Troy,—which was referred by legend to the generation before the Trojan War,—but in some later wanderings. The altar was said to have been founded by Jason on his way to Colchis. Cp. Philostratus Imag. 17 τὸν τῆς Χρύσης βωμόν, ὃν Ἰάσων ποτὲ ἰδρύσατο, ὅτε εἰς Κολχόδος ἔπλεε. Φιλοκτήτης δὲ ἐκ τῆς ξυνῆς Ἡρακλεῖ μνήμης τὸν βωμόν τοῖς ζητοῦσι δεικνύς, ἐγγχρίσαντος αὐτῷ τοῦ ὕδρου τὸν ἰὸν ἐς θάτερον τοῖν ποδοῖν,...ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ ταύτῃ κείται, κ.τ.λ.

ΑΛΛΩΣ.

Ἀπαγωγὴ Φιλοκτῆτου ἐκ Αἰγύπτου εἰς Τροίαν ὑπὸ Νεοπτολέμου καὶ Ὀδυσσεύς καθ' Ἑλένου μαντείαν, ὅς κατὰ μαντείαν Κάλχαντος, ὡς εἰδὼς χρησμούς συντελοῦντας πρὸς τὴν Τροίας ἄλωσιν, ὑπὸ Ὀδυσσεύς νύκτωρ ἐνεδρευθεὶς, δέσμος ἦχθη τοῖς Ἑλλήσιν. ἡ δὲ σκηνὴ ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ· ὁ δὲ χορὸς 5 ἐκ γερόντων τῶν τῷ Νεοπτολέμῳ συμπλεόντων. κείται καὶ παρ' Αἰσχύλῳ ἡ μυθοποιία. ἐδιδάχθη ἐπὶ Γλαυκίππου· πρῶτος ἦν Σοφοκλῆς.

5 τῶν τῷ] τῷ L. The loss of τῶν in L may have been due to the preceding γερόντων, esp. as it is the last word of a line.—κείται L: κείται δὲ vulg.

2 Κάλχαντος] Soph. refers to the nocturnal ambushade by which Odysseus captured Helenus (606 ff.), but nowhere hints that Calchas had prompted it. The advice of Calchas appears to have been mentioned by Lesches in the Ἰλιάς Μικρά (circa. 700 B.C.), and the author of this Argument may have found it noticed in the Philoctetes of Aeschylus, to which he alludes. Quintus Smyrnaeus (9. 325 ff.) names Calchas only, and says nothing of Helenus. 5 Διοχόλῳ] See Introduction. The writer ignores the Philoctetes of Euripides, and the treatment of the subject by other dramatic poets. 6 ἐπὶ Γλαυκίππου] Glaucippus was archon from July 410 to July 409 B.C. (Ol. 92. 3). The play was brought out, then, at the great Dionysia at the end of March, 409 B.C. Sophocles was then eighty-seven.

ΧΟΡΟΣ.

ΝΕΟΠΤΟΛΕΜΟΣ.

ΕΜΠΟΡΟΣ.

ΦΙΛΟΚΤΗΤΗΣ.

ΗΡΑΚΛΗΣ.

The ἐμπορος is an attendant of Neoptolemus who appears in the disguise of a ναύκληρος, or captain of a ship (v. 542). At v. 128 he is identified with the σκοπός. But the latter was a 'mute person,' while the ἐμπορος was really played by the tritagonist. Wecklein suggests that the word ἐμπορος may have been suggested to the grammarians by ξυνέμπορον in v. 542: but that word ('companion') is there applied, not to the supposed ναύκληρος, but by the latter to a sailor who accompanies him. And the designation ἐμπορος seems fitting enough, when we observe that the man describes himself as trading between Peparethus and the Greek camp at Troy (547 ff., cp. 582 ff.). In the list of Dramatis Personae L has ἄγγελος ἐμπορος, but in the text of the play, ἐμπορος only. Some editors give σκοπὸς ὡς ἐμπορος.

The protagonist played Philoctetes, and the deuteragonist, Neoptolemus; while the tritagonist took the parts of Odysseus, the pretended merchant, and Heracles.

STRUCTURE OF THE PLAY.

1. πρόλογος, 1—134.
2. πάροδος, 135—218.
3. ἐπεισόδιον πρῶτον, 219—675. In this are inserted two short choral songs,—a strophe (391—402) and an antistrophe (507—518),—having the character of a 'dance-song' or ὑπόρχημα (see on O. T. 1086).
4. στάσιμον, 676—729.
5. ἐπεισόδιον δεύτερον, 730—826.
6. κομμός, taking the place of a second stasimon, 827—864.
7. ἐπεισόδιον τρίτον, 865—1080.
8. Second κομμός, taking the place of a third stasimon, 1081—1217.
9. ἐξοδος, 1218—1471.

L=cod. Laur. 32. 9 (first half of eleventh century). r=one or more of the later MSS. This symbol is used where a more particular statement is unnecessary. 'MSS.,' after a reading, means that it is in all the MSS. known to the editor.

Scene:—A lonely place on the N.E. coast of Lemnos, near the promontory of Mount Hermæum (1455 ft.). A rocky cliff rises steeply from the sea-shore (cp. 1000 ff.); in it is seen the cave of Philoctetes. ODYSSEUS and NEOPTOLEMUS enter on the left of the spectators.

1—184 Prologue. Odysseus tells Neoptolemus that this is the spot where, ten years before, he had put Philoctetes ashore. Neoptolemus presently finds the cave, with traces in it which show that it is still inhabited. Odysseus then suggests that he should capture Philoctetes and his bow by a stratagem. He is to pretend that he has quarrelled with the Atreidae, and is sailing homeward. The youth at first refuses; but ultimately yields to the argument that only thus can he win the glory of taking Troy.—Odysseus returns to his ship, leaving Neoptolemus to watch for Philoctetes at the cave.

1 ἀκτὴ μὲν ἦδε, implying the antithesis, τῷ δὲ ἔργῳ ἦδη ἐπιχειρητέον, which is virtually given by vv. 11 ff. For μὲν thus deprived of its answering δέ by a change in the form of a long sentence, cp. Ant. 1199 ff.

2 ἀστιπτος is the form given by L here, which also has στιπτῇ in v. 33. στιπτός, not στείπτός, is also the best attested form in Aristophanes Ach. 180, and in Theophrastus De Ignē § 37. See Appendix.

οὐδ' οἰκουμένη. Aeschylus and Euripides had both written a Φιλοκτήτης, and each had composed his chorus of Lemnians,—thus making it seem strange that the sufferer should have been left so long without aid (Dion Chrysostom, or. 52). Sophocles wished to avoid that defect. Everything that is said of Lemnos throughout this play would naturally suggest a wholly uninhabited island. And the words ascribed to Philoctetes (vv. 220 f., 300 ff.) require us to suppose that he, at least, believed it to be so. The Iliad, however, represents Εὐνηος, son of Jason and Hypsipylē, as reigning in Lemnos during the Trojan war (7. 467); and it was into 'well-peopled Lemnos' that Achilles sold Lycaon (21. 40). It is simplest to suppose that Sophocles, finding it convenient to have a desert island, ignored the Homeric notices. But it is also possible that he conceived the island as inhabited in some parts and desolate in others. This is the scholiast's view: ἐν ἐρήμῳ γὰρ μέρει τῆς Λήμνου ἐξετέθη. The area of Lemnos is about 150 square miles, or more than thrice that of Jersey. Philoctetes could not crawl far from his sea-side cave (cp. 163, 291).

3 κρατίστου...τραφεῖς: strictly, 'bred from' (not, 'reared by') 'a sire who was the bravest of the Greeks.' πατὴρ is not a gen. of agency (like πληγὴς θυγατρός, Eur. Or. 497), but a gen. of origin, as 1284 ἀρίστου πατὴρ ἀλαχιστος γεγώς: cp. O. T. 1082 τῆς γὰρ πέφυκα μητρός, O. C. 1322 μητρός λοχευθείς. τραφεῖς is more forcible than γεγώς, as suggesting, not birth merely, but the inborn qualities. Cp. Ai. 556 δεῖ σ' ὅπως πατρός|δείξεις ἐν ἐχθροῖς οἷος ἐξ οἴου ἱράφης, 'thou must see that thou provest among thy father's foes of what mettle and what breed thou art.'

ODYSSEUS.

This is the shore of the sea-girt land of Lemnos, untrodden of men and desolate. O thou whose sire was the noblest of the Greeks, true-bred son of Achilles, Neoptolemus,—here, long ago, I put ashore the Malian, the son of Poeas, (having charge from my chiefs so to do,)—his foot all ulcerous with a gnawing sore, —when neither drink-offering nor sacrifice could be attempted

2 δοσιπτος L, and Γ (cod. Abbat. Flor. 152, late 13th cent.): δοσιπτος A, with the other later MSS. Cp. on σιπητή, v. 33. 6 Nauck places this verse after v. 7.

In Aesch. Th. 792 θαρσεῖτε, παῖδες μητέρων τεθραυμέναι, the gen. seems again to be one of origin, 'maidens who are true daughters of your mothers' (i.e., who resemble them, rather than your intrepid fathers). Wakefield's conjecture ἐνθ' ᾧ <'κ> κρατίστων was warranted by the commoner usage of τραφείς (with ἐκ, Ai. 557, Eur. Ion 693; with ἀπό, Ion 262, Ai. 1229); but it was needless here.

4 Νεοπτόλεμος, four syllables, the voice gliding so rapidly over the first ε that, with ο, it gives the effect of only one syllable. So in 241, and Eur. Andr. 14, Tro. 1126. But the name is a word of five syllables in Or. 1655 Νεοπτόλεμος γαμῖν νιν, οὐ γαμῖ ποτε. Elmsley thought that verse corrupt; the same variation occurs, however, in Θεοκλύμενος, which is of four syllables in Eur. Helen. 9, but of five ib. 1168 and 1643.—τὸν Μηλιά, belonging to Malis ('the sheep-country,' from μήλον, as the neighbouring Mount Oeta takes its name from οἶς),—a district almost enclosed by hills, at the head (i.e., west) of the Μαλιακὸς κόλπος. That bay forms a deep recess in the south coast of Thessaly, just opposite the N.W. end of Euboea. Cp. n. on 490. The Iliad (2. 682) includes this region in the domain of Achilles, and assigns Philoctetes to the more northerly region of Thessaly, afterwards called Magnesia: see Introduction.—Her., consistently Ionic, has, ἡ Μηλις γῆ, ἡ Τρηχυνή: Attic writers always have Τραχίς: but Thuc. and Xen. say of Μηλιεῖς, while Aeschines, like later writers, has of Μαλιεῖς. Cp. 725 Μηλιάδων νυμφᾶν.

5 ἐξέθηκ' = ἀπεβίβασα: cp. Arist. Poet. 24 τὰ περὶ τὴν ἐκθεσιν, the story of Odysseus being put ashore by the Phaeacians in Ithaca (Od. 13. 116 ff.).

6 2. Nauck's transposition of these two verses effaces a delicate touch. Odysseus is anxious to present his conduct in the best light. After ἐξέθηκ' ἐγώ, he hastens to add that he was merely obeying his chiefs (v. 6). And then, in vv. 7 ff., he palliates their conduct by describing how unendurable Philoctetes was.

7 καταστέζοντα agrees with υἱόν (5): πόδα is acc. of respect: Ai. 9 κἀρα | στάζων ἰδρώτι.—διαβόρω: Tr. 1084 ἡ τάλαινα διαβόρος νόσος (the venom of the hydra). So below, 313 βόσκων τὴν ἀδηφάγον νόσον: 745 βρόκομαι. Aesch. fr. 249 (Philoctetes speaking) φαγέδαν' αἶ μου σάρκας ἐσθλεί ποδός: a v. which Euripides borrowed in his own Philoctetes, changing σάρκας ἐσθλεί to σάρκα θοινῶται (Arist. Poet. 22).

8 2. λοιβῆς...θυμάτων. The sacrifice regularly preceded the libation (cp. Il. 1. 462); the order here is prompted by metrical convenience (as in Il. 9. 500 λοιβῇ τε κνίσῃ τε), while the natural order is given below, 1033 (αἰθεὶν ἱερὰ, ...σπένδειν).—προσθιγῖν, fig., 'engage in'; so the simple θιγγάνω (408, Ant. 546), and ἄπτομαι: cp. Ant. 1005 ἐμπύρων ἐγενόμην.—δυσφήμiais, cries of anguish, such as he utters below (743, 785). Cp. Eur. Andr. 1144 κραυγὴ δ' ἐν εὐφήμοισι δυσφήμος δόμοις | πέτραισιν ἀντέκλαγ' (cries of strife echoing in the Delphian temple from the rocks hard by). At a sacrifice, all present were first sprinkled with consecrated water, then silence was proclaimed, and then the offering began: Ar. Av. 958 αἰθὺς σὺ περιχώρει λαβὼν τὴν χέρνιβα. | εὐφημί' ἔστω. XP. μὴ κατάρξῃ τοῦ τράγου.

The sacrifice which the cries of Philoctetes interrupted must be that which an oracle had commanded the Greeks to offer at Chryse's altar, in the islet Chryse. Thence they sailed to Lemnos, which was close by, and put him ashore (270). The word στρατόπεδον could be said of a fleet (Thuc. i. 117); but the reference in vv. 8 f. can hardly include attempts at sacrifice made between Chryse and Lemnos.

12 ἀκμή...λόγων: cp. El. 22 ἔργων ἀκμή. Possibly a covert criticism on the length of the prologue in some previous Philoctetes: cp. O. C. 1116 n.

13 f. μὴ καί: this καί = 'e'en' (not 'both'): cp. 46, 534.—ἐκχέω (aor. subj.), 'waste' (El. 1291), which would properly be said of the labour bestowed on devising the scheme, is here applied, in the sense of 'frustrate,' to the σόφισμα itself: cp. Eur. fr. 787 μόχθων τῶν πρὶν ἐκχέαι χάριν. (Cp. Virg. G. 4. 491 ibi omnis | Effusus labor.)—τῷ for φ: O. C. 747 n.—Aesch. and Eur. had both represented Odysseus as boldly confronting Philoctetes, who failed to recognise him; a marvel which Eur. excused by supposing that Athena had changed the aspect of Odysseus. These two verses remind us that dramatic probability required Odysseus to keep himself in the background. Cp. 70.

15 ἔργον...σὸν: a familiar Attic phrase, as appears from its frequency in Ar., either (a) with inf., as Nub. 1345, σὸν ἔργον, ὧ πρεσβύτα, φροντίζειν κ.τ.λ.: or (b) as a parenthesis before an imperat., as Av. 862, λερεῦ, σὸν ἔργον, θθε: Th. 1208, σὸν ἔργον, φεύγε. It occurs more often without ἐστί than with it.

16 δπου 'στ'. Three modes of writing these words are possible: (1) as above, with prodelision of the ε in ἐστι. Cp. O. T. 732 καὶ ποῦ 'στ' ὁ χῶρος...; Ar. Ach. 129 ἀλλ' Ἀμφιθεός μοι ποῦ 'στω; So O. C. 974 ὡς ἐγὼ φάνην, Ani. 457 ἐξ δτου φάνην. (2) ὅπουστ', with crasis, the mode followed by the scribe of L: cp. 812 ὡς οὐ θέμις γ' ἐμοῖσσι. (3) δπου ἐστι, with synizesis, the mode preferred by several recent edd. The fact that the 2nd syll. of δπου has ictus appears to render (1) or (2) slightly preferable to (3); and (1) seems recommended by the analogy of φάνην, φάνη, where, at the end of the verse, a synizesis would have had a very harsh effect.—δπου...ἐνταῦθ', i.e., where (precisely) in this region. Ar. Ran. 432 ἐχοῖτ' ἂν οὖν φράσαι νῶν | Πλούτων' δπου νθάδ' οἰκεῖ;

17 f. τοιάδ', ἵν', 'such that in it': ἵν' = ἐν ᾗ (for τοιαύδε...δς, see O. C. 1353). Cp. Eur. fr. 183 νέμων τὸ πλείστον ἡμέρας

Come, to work!—'tis for thee to help in what remains, and to seek where in this region is a cave with twofold mouth, such that in cold weather either front offers a sunny seat, but in summer a breeze wafts sleep through the tunnelled grot. And a little below, on the left hand, perchance thou wilt see a spring, if it hath not failed.

ήλλου διπλή... ένθάκησις, lit., 'a twofold means of sitting in the sun.' Cp. Arist. Probl. 5 § 36 έσθηκότες έν τώ ήλίω: ib. 16 § 1 έάν έν ήλίω τεθώσι. So θακύν έν (or ένθακύν) ήλίω could mean, 'to sit in the sun'; and the genit. in ήλλου ένθάκησις is objective, corresponding to the dat. with the verb. This is better than to make it a gen. of quality, as if the phrase meant, 'a sunny seat in (the cave).' The morning sun could be enjoyed at the seaward mouth of the cave, which had a s. or s. E. aspect (cp. 1457); while the afternoon sun fell on the other entrance, looking N. or N.W.

άμφιτρήτος, 'pierced at both ends,' 'tunnelled': perh. suggested by Eur. Cycl. 707 δι' άμφιτρήτος τήσδε προσβαίνων πέτρας (so Kirchhoff for ποδι). This pass. sense of άμφιτρής (άμφοτέρωθεν τετρημένον, schol.), in which άμφιτρήτος would be normal, cannot be illustrated by σιδηροκμής ('slain with the sword,' Ai. 325), or δορκμής Aesch. Ch. 365), since those adjectives = 'succumbing to' the sword, etc. (from the poet. sense of οι καμώντες, etc.). But βοτοίς σιδηροκμήσιν in the former passage illustrates the use of άμφιτρής, properly masc. or fem., as a neuter adj.—αύλλου, as 954, 1087: cp. 30 n.

22 ε. ά μοι προσελθών...κυρεί: 'advance, I pray thee (μοι), towards them'

[the cave and spring], 'and sign (to me) whether he still occupies this same spot, or is elsewhere.' The position of μοι indicates that it is the ethic dat. (O. T. 1512), rather than dat. with σήμαινε, with which it can easily be understood.—In the Appendix reasons are given for the following views. (1) The words σήμαιν' έτ' έχει break the metrical rule, since έτ' must be considered as metrically belonging to έχει rather than to σήμαινε, and therefore the 5th foot ought to be an iambus. But nevertheless the words are sound, since the natural stress on the first syllable of the imperative σήμαιν', coinciding with the rhythmical ictus, has the effect of making the next syllable (αν) seem relatively short to the ear. (2) In v. 23 the traditional χώρον πρός αυτόν is untenable. πρός with acc. could here mean only, 'looking towards,' 'facing'; it could not mean merely, 'in the neighbourhood of.' And έχει | χώρον πρός αυτόν τόνδε could not mean either, '(the cave and spring) are situated facing just this spot'; nor, 'he dwells facing this spot.' We should read with Blaydes, χώρον τόν έτ', έτ' is the best correction of L's τόνδ', ήτ' in v. 23: and έτ' confirms the view that Philoctetes is the subject to the verbs. Odysseus is sure that the cave is somewhere near (16). His doubt is whether Philoctetes still lives in it, or has removed to some other part of the island.

24 ε. τὰπίλοιπα τῶν λόγων, not τοὺς ἐπιλοίπους, because the λόγοι are thought of collectively, not singly: cp. 131; Ant. 499 τῶν σῶν λόγων | ἀρεστὸν οὐδέν: Plat. Rep. 352 B τὰ λοιπὰ τῆς ἐστιᾶσεως. The ref. is to the plan disclosed at 50 ff.—κοινὰ, subst., 'joint action' (not adv., 'jointly,' as though the subject to ἦ were 'our plan,' implied in τὰπίλοιπα τῶν λόγων): cp. Thuc. 1. 8 πλωμώτερα ἐγένετο παρ' ἀλλήλους.—ἐξ ἀμφοῖν ἦ, lit., 'proceed from both': cp. Eur. Hec. 294 λόγος γὰρ ἐκ τ' ἀδοξούντων ὧν | κακ τῶν δοκούντων αὐτὸς οὐ ταῦτ' ὁ σθένει.

26 τοῦργον οὐ μακράν λέγεις,=τὸ ἔργον δὲ λέγεις οὐ μακρὰν ἐστί, 'the task of which thou speakest is not far off,' i.e. I can do thy bidding without going far. τὸ ἔργον is the search for (and in) the cave. This seems simpler than to take μακράν as='to a distance' (O. T. 16), and τοῦργον as='mission'. For the adverb as predicate, cp. O. C. 586 ἄλλ' ἐν βραχεὶ δὴ τήνδε μ' ἐξαιτεῖ χάριν, n.: Tr. 962 ἀγχοῦ δ' ἄρα κού μακράν | προηκλαῖον (sc. δν), 'the sorrow foretold by my lament is near, and not afar.'

29 καὶ στίβου γ' οὐδεὶς κτύπος, 'and of foot-fall, at least, there is no sound.' The γε, which has been suspected, is fitting; he is still a little below the cave, and cannot yet see whether it is empty. Seyffert's καὶ στίβου δ' would be appropriate only if it followed the mention of some other sign that the cave was empty.—στίβου, usu. 'track (path),' or 'foot-print,' here, the act of treading: cp. 206 στίβου κατ' ἀνάγκαν, n. Remark how strongly κτύπος (L's reading) is confirmed, as against τύπος, by v. 30, where Odysseus says (in effect), 'perhaps the reason why you hear no sound is that he is asleep within.'—Other readings are καὶ στίβου γ' οὐδεὶς τύπος (Tricl. and Brunck): καὶ στίβου 'στ' οὐχ εἰς τύπος (Mudge): καὶ στίβου 'στ' οὐδεὶς τύπος (Bergk; though οὐδας is the only case of the noun found in Tragedy). These assume that there was sand or earth just in front of the cave on the side towards the sea. But vv. 1000 ff. imply that the cave's seaward mouth opened on steep rocks at some height above the beach. And if v. 29 referred to the presence or absence of foot-prints, v. 30 would lose its special point.

Naber proposed κάστ'ι τοῦ γ' δδ' ἔκτοπος. 30 κατακλιθεῖς L, with V and others: κατακλιθεῖς A, B, T, which Nauck prefers and Blaydes reads.—κυρῆ MSS.: κυρεῖ Schaefer, Seyffert, Nauck, Wecklein. 32 τροφή MSS. Welcker and Burges conj. τροφή: Bergk, ἔστ' ἐπιστροφή.

304 (Electra speaking of her rustic cottage) οἶος ἐν πέπλοις αὐλίζομαι (cp. ib. 168 ἀγρότειραν αὐλάν). κατακλιθεῖς, the weak reading of some later MSS., was prob. suggested by καθ' ἕπνον.—κυρῆ is the reading of our MSS., and, though their authority on such a point is not great, the subjunct. seems here slightly better than κυρεῖ. δρα μὴ...κυρεῖ, 'see whether he is not,' would imply that in the speaker's mind there was little doubt on the subject: cp. notes on Ant. 278, 1253: Plat. Charm. 163 A ἀλλ' δρα μὴ ἐκεῖνον κωλύει: Lach. 196 C ἀλλ' ὀρώμεν μὴ Νίκλας οἰεταί τι λέγειν: Theaet. 145 C δρα μὴ παῖζων ἔλεγεν. These are admonitions in the polite guise of suggestions. Now here we may, indeed, conceive Odysseus as saying μὴ...κυρεῖ: but, in the anxious uncertainty which he actually feels, it is more natural that he should say μὴ...κυρῆ. If it be said that general Attic usage rather favours the indic. after δρα μὴ, we may refer to 519, El. 1003 and fr. 83 as a few places out of several where the subjunct. after δρα μὴ is proved by metre.

31 ὄρω. Neoptolemus, mounting the rocks, has now just reached the mouth of the cave. κατήν is made more explicit by ἀνθρώπων δῖχα: 'empty,—yes, there is no man there.' Such iteration is natural when the mind confirms itself in a first impression, or dwells on a striking thought; so Verg. Aen. 4. 588 vacuos sensis sine remige portus ('empty,—no rower there'); Ai. 464 γυμνὸν φανέντα τῶν ἀριστέων δρεπ ('when I return) ungraced,—aye, without the meed of valour.' Cp. 487: O. T. 57 n., Ant. 445 n.

32 οἰκοποιός...τις τροφή, 'any comforts, such as make a human dwelling,' in contradistinction to a wild beast's lair. τροφή here = 'what sustains life,'—not only food and drink, but also provision for necessary repose and warmth: cp. Plat. Legg. 667 B ἐδωδῆ μὲν καὶ πόσει καὶ ξυμπόσῃ τροφή, 'food and drink and the comforts of life generally.' The question of Odysseus is comprehensive; in reply, Neopt. can only mention a bed; but that does not require us to assume that Od. used τροφή in the specific sense of 'furniture.' The objection which has been made to τροφή here thus falls to the ground. Against Welcker's τροφή, remark:—(1) The irony would be misplaced here, where Od. is anxiously seeking information; it is otherwise in v. 37, where the slightly ironical tone of θρσάρισμα shows the first gleam of sinister joy. (2) The phrase οἰκοποιός...τροφή would be infelicitous. The adjective itself shows that the substantive ought to denote the rudiments, not the refinements, of a home.

33 στιπτή L, A (ει over ι from the corrector), with most MSS., and Suidas: στειπτή T and Eustathius.—ἐν αὐλίζοντι L, with an erasure of one or two letters after ἐν.

33 στιπτή γε κ.τ.λ., 'aye, a heap of leaves pressed down, as if for the use of one who sleeps in the place.' Here γε serves to correct the suggestion contained in the negative question: 'There is nothing there?' 'Yes, there is something'. In this use it may be compared with the Fr. si, since it is corrective without being emphatic. ('Vous n'avez pas été là?'—'Si.') Cp. 35. For the spelling στιπτή, see v. 2. A bed of leaves (or rushes, etc.) was called στιβάς (Eur. Tro. 507 στιβάδα πρὸς χαμαιπετῇ). [Eur.] Rhes. 9 λείπε χαμεύνας φυλλοστρώτους (of soldiers bivouacking). στιπτή means, pressed down by the body of the person who has slept on it. Some take ἐναυλίζοντί τῳ as dat. of agent with στιπτή (pressed down by some one lodging here); but the order of words renders it simpler to take the dat. as one of interest. Hartung, whom Nauck follows, changes στιπτή to στρωτή, finding a hint of the latter in one of the two scholia on this v. in L, χαμαιστρωσία ἐκ φύλλων. But that may refer to the one word φύλλας: while the other scholium unequivocally refers to στιπτή, —ἡπλωμένη καὶ πατουμένη, ('spread out, and pressed down,') ὡς κοιμωμένου ἐπ' αὐτῇ τῶος. If it be said that ἡπλωμένη might refer to στρωτή, we may reply that πατουμένη could refer only to στιπτή: and by ἡπλωμένη the schol. meant (I think) to express that the leaves formed, not a soft heap, but only a shallow layer. στιπτή is more graphic than στρωτή: it suggests the recent impress of the body, and the cheerless discomfort of the couch.—For ὡς with ἐναυλίζοντί τῳ, cp. 203.

34 τὰ δ' ἄλλ', all parts of the cave except that covered by the bed of leaves: ἔρημα, 'bare,' i. e. without any sign of inhabitation. The second question, κούδέν κ.τ.λ., repeats the first in a more precise form.

35 αὐτόξυλον, 'of mere wood,' means here, 'of wood not artistically treated'; the piece of wood remained as nearly in its original state as was compatible with its serving for a cup. Cp. fr. com. 322 αὐτόποκον ἱμάτιον, a cloak of rough wool: Alexis Κύπριος 2 τὸν δ' αὐτόπυρον ἄρον, the loaf of unbolten wheat-flour: see O. C. 192 αὐτοπέτρον βήματος n.—φλαουρουγοῦ: seemingly the only extant instance of the form φλαῦρος in a compound adj.

36 τεχνήματ': the poet. plur. has a certain dignity, and there is possibly a shade of designed irony in its use here: Hes. Scut. 313 τρίπους, κλυτὰ ἔργα περιφρονος Ἡφαίστιο: Eur. Or. 1053 μῆμα, ... κέδρου τεχνάσματα (a coffin, ... finely wrought of cedar): Virg. Aen. 5. 359 clypeum... Didymaonis artes.—πυρεῖα, ἱγmaria, 'means of kindling a fire,' the stones mentioned in 296, and perhaps also bits of wood with which to catch the spark.

37 κείνου, predicate, cp. Plat. Apol. 20 E οὐ γὰρ ἐμὸν ἐρῶ τὸν λόγον (= ὁ λόγος, ὃν ἐρῶ, οὐκ ἐμὸς ἐσται).—θησαύρισμα, 'store' (not so strong as 'treasure'): the verb θησαυρίζω was used of 'laying in' supplies for household use (Xen. Cyr. 8. 2. 24); cp. Eur. El. 497 θησαύρισμα Διονύσου (store of wine). Yet here the word is ironical, since the 'store' is so wretched.

38 λοῦ λοῦ, a cry of surprise, with which the watcher greets the beacon in Aesch. Ag. 25,—where it is 'extra metrum,' as in Ai. 737. It stands within the verse, as here, in O. T. 1071, 1182, Tr. 1143.—καὶ ταῦτά γ'. In v. 29, καὶ στίβου γ', γε specially emphasises the word στίβου: here, it does not specially emphasise ταῦτα, but helps καὶ to introduce the new fact; i.e., it is not, 'and here are rags,' but rather, 'yes, and here are rags.' Wherever καὶ...γε occurs, it is well to note in which of these two ways it is used. Examples like καὶ ταῦτά γ' here are, below, 674 καὶ σέ γ' εἰσάξω: 1277 καὶ πέρα γ' ἰσθ' ἢ λέγω.—ἄλλα, 'withal' (i.e., besides the other objects already found): cp. O. T. 290 n.: Aesch. Theb. 424 γίγας ὅδ' ἄλλος.—θάλλεται, 'are drying' in the sun at the seaward mouth of the cave (cp. 17). Not, 'are warm' to the touch,—as if recently used. Cp. Eur. Helen. 181 ἀλίου πέπλους | αὐγαῖσιν ἐν ταῖς χυρσαῖς | ἀμφιθάλλουσ'.

39 βαρέας, 'grievous,' the epithet of the malady itself, as 1330 νόσου βαρέας. Not 'fetid' (like gravis...hircus, Hor. Ep. 12. 5),—a sense in which βαρύς occurs only when it is the epithet of ὄσμη, ἀτμίς (Arist. Hist. An. 9. 5), etc.—νοσηλείας, (subst. from νοσηλός, 'morbid,') here=the matter discharged from the ulcer in the foot; cp. 824. Isocr. uses νοσηλεύς as = 'to tend the sick,' and Plut.

has νοσηλεία as either (i) 'sickness,' or (ii) 'nursing of the sick.'—πλέα, tainted, stained with: cp. Xen. Cyr. 1. 3. 5 (ἡ χεὶρ) πλέα σοι ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἐγένετο, has been defiled by those things: so πλήρεις, Ant. 1017.

41 ε. οὐχ ἐκὰς που, as 163 πέλας που, O. T. 1410 ἐξω...που.—κηρί, 'plague,' as 1166 κῆρα τάνδ' ἀποφεύγειν,—but without ref. to the idea that the νόσος was ordained by fate (1326).—προσβαίη, in the sense of 'advance,' where we should have expected προβαίη, is certainly strange. It is partly excused, however, by the fact that the speaker is himself outside of the cave, and so can the more naturally place himself in imagination at the external point towards which the movement is made,—saying, 'come far,' instead of, 'go far'. I do not feel sure, then, that προσβαίη is corrupt, though it is suspicious. If corrupt, it probably conceals a compound with πρό. In the Classical Review (vol. II. p. 324, 1888) I have conjectured προσκάξοι, 'limp forth'. Minuscule β and κ often resemble each other (thus in Ant. 1094 λακεῖν is corrected from λαβεῖν). If προσκάξοι had become προσβάξοι, the latter would easily have generated προσβαίη. A verb describing painful movement would be fitting here, after νοσῶν...κῶλον παλαιὰ κηρί: cp. δγμεῖν (163), εἰλνόμεν (291). It is immaterial that this particular compound of σκάξω does not occur elsewhere; many verbal compounds occur once only, as, e.g., προδείσας (O. T. 90), προκίλνας (O. C. 201). For other conjectures, see Appendix.

43 φορβῆς νόστον. The defence of this much-impugned phrase depends on three points. (1) νόστος is poetically used in the general sense of oḗs: Eur. I. A. 1261 (speaking of the Greeks), oἷς νόστος οὐκ ἔστ' Ἰλίου πύργους ἐπι. (2) In φορβῆς-νόστος, a food-journey, the gen. denotes the object of the νόστος: the principle is the same as in Eur. I. T. 1066 γῆς πατρώας νόστος, 'a fatherland-return,' i.e. a return to it: Orph. Argon. 200 ἐπὶ πλόον Ἀφεινοῖο, on a voyage to the Euxine. (3) The poet has not said, ἐξελέλυθε φορβῆς νόστον ('cognate' acc.), but ἐξελέλυθεν ἐπὶ φορβῆς νόστον, thus marking that νόστον denotes, not merely the act of going out, but the purpose of that act, viz., a quest. In other words, the presence of ἐπὶ before it already tinges νόστον with the sense of ζητήσιν: cp. Her. 4. 140 ὑπέστρεφον ἐπὶ ζήτησιν τῶν Περσέων.—The conjecture ἀλλ' ἢ 'πὶ φορβῆν νόστον ἐξελέλυθεν seems, then, needless; but it is also open to a strong positive objection, viz., that νόστον then becomes a mere pleonasm. A cognate acc. added to ἐξελέλυθεν ought here to qualify it in some manner (cp. Ai. 287 ἐξέδους ἔρπειν κεν ἄς).

44 ἢ φύλλον κ.τ.λ. The constr. is, ἢ, εἰ φύλλον νώδυνον τι κάτοιδ' εἴ ποιν, (ἐπ' αὐτό): rather than, ἢ (ἐπὶ) φύλλον, εἰ τι νώδυνον (φύλλον) κάτοιδ' εἴ ποιν.—νώδυνον, in active sense: Anthol. app. 57 φαρμάκοις ἀνωδύνους.

the young chief's πρόσπολος, who is called σκοπός at v. 125. The phrase does not imply that he is actually at his master's side on the rocks.

46 ε. μὴ καὶ, cp. 13.—προσπесών, of sudden and unforeseen approach (O. C. 1157): the same phrase below, 156, and Eur. Heracl. 338.—ἐλοιτό μ'. The enclitic me is warranted here (though ἐλοιτ' ἐμ' might seem more natural), since the words, μὴ καὶ λάθῃ με προσπесών, have already indicated Odysseus as the person chiefly menaced. It is as though he said: 'We must take care that he does not surprise me; it would delight him more than to capture all the Greeks'; where the unemphatic 'it' would resemble the enclitic me as merely referring back to a case already indicated. A similar instance (and one that is certified by metre) occurs below, 1049 ff.: οὐ γὰρ τοιοῦτων δεῖ, τοιοῦτός εἰμ' ἐγώ· | χῶπον δικαίων κάγαθων ἀνδρῶν κρίσις, | οὐκ ἂν λάβοις μου μᾶλλον οὐδέν' εὐσεβή: where the ἐγώ in 1049 makes it needless to have ἐμοῦ in 1051. Such cases are distinct from those in which the enclitic form of the pers. pron. is justified by the fact that the chief emphasis is on a verbal notion (e.g., 958: Ant. 546 μὴ μοι θάνῃς σὺ κοινά, 'share not my death').—The first hand in L seems to have written ἐλοιτε μ' (sic): the corrector changed the second e to o, accenting the latter. If there had been reason to think that the first hand in L wrote

No, he hath gone forth in quest of food, or of some soothing herb, haply, that he hath noted somewhere. Send thine attendant, therefore, to keep watch, lest the foe come on me unawares; for he would rather take me than all the Greeks beside.

NE. Enough, the man is going, and the path shall be watched.—And now, if thou wouldst say more, proceed.

OD. Son of Achilles, thou must be loyal to thy mission,—and not with thy body alone. Shouldst thou hear some new thing, some plan unknown to thee till now, thou must help it; for to help is thy part here.

variant μολεῖν (found in A, and thence taken by the Aldine) may, as Boissonade conjectured, have come from μ' ἐλεῖν: but μ' ἐλεῖν would have required ἐλοιτ' ἂν instead of ἐλοιτό μ'. Toup conj. λαθεῖν: Valckenaer and Blaydes, βαλεῖν. 50—54 Nauck holds that the verses, from δεῖ σ' ἐφ' οἷς ἐλήλυθας to τί δῆτ' ἀνωγας (inclusive), ἐλοιτ' ἔμ', then I should have taken that reading, not as better than ἐλοιτό μ', but as equally good and better attested.—λαθεῖν, 'catch,' 'find in his power.' μολεῖν in A was prob. a conjecture, or a mere error, rather than, as Boissonade supposed, a corruption of μ' ἐλεῖν. For the difference between ἐλεῖν and λαθεῖν (in regard to warfare), see Il. 5. 144 ἐνθ' ἔλεν Ἀστυνόον ('slew'), and ib. 159 ἐνθ' υἷας Πριάμοιο δύν λαβεε Δαρδανίδαο, | εἰν ἐνὶ διφρῷ ἐόντας ('caught'). Cp. below, 101, 103; O. T. 266 ζητῶν τὸν αὐτόχειρα τοῦ φόνου λαθεῖν ('find').—Blaydes says that λαθεῖν is 'clearly wrong,' and reads βαλεῖν ('hit').

50 π. ἐφ' οἷς = ἐπὶ τοῖτοῖς ἐφ' οἷς, 'for' (i.e., 'so as to aid') 'the objects for which,' etc.; cp. O. T. 1457 μή 'πὶ τῷ δεινῷ κακῷ.—The sentence begins as if the form were to be, δεῖ... γενναῖον εἶναι, μή μόνον τῷ σώματι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῇ γνώμῃ: he must show his true-bred spirit, not merely physically, but morally,—i.e., by bringing himself (τόλμα, 82) to aid plans which may be repugnant to him. Neopt. supposed that his task was to take Phil. by force (πρὸς βίαν, 90). Odysseus seeks to prepare the disclosure very gently. Hence the hypothetical clause which takes the place of a simple ἀλλὰ καὶ τῇ γνώμῃ, viz., ἀλλ' ἤν τι καινόν, κ.τ.λ. After that clause, a modal partic., ὑπουργοῦντα ('by serving'), ought to have balanced the instrumental dat. τῷ σώματι. But, instead of it, we have a second infin., ὑπουργεῖν, depending, like εἶναι, on δεῖ: just as, in independent sentences, a new finite verb is often substituted for a second participial clause (O. C. 351 n.: Ant. 256, 816).

γενναῖον, 'true-bred.' τὸ γενναῖον is, as Arist. defines it (Hist. An. 1. 1. 32), τὸ μὴ ἐξιστάμενον ἐκ τῆς αὐτοῦ φύσεως. Odysseus calls on Neopt. to prove himself a true son of his sire (cp. 3) by complete loyalty to his mission.—τῷ σώματι: cp. Eur. Suppl. 886 ἵπποις τε χαίρων τόξα τ' ἐντεινῶν χερσίν, | πόλει παρασχέιν σῶμα χρήσιμον θέλων.

καινόν, euphemistic, as oft.: cp. Antiph. Tetr. A. 8. § 2 καινότατα γὰρ δὴ, εἰ χρὴ καινότατα μᾶλλον ἢ κακουργότατα εἰπεῖν, διαβάλλουσί με.—ἄν (τοῖτων ἂ) πρὶν οὐκ ἀκήκοας, ('some novel thing'), viz., one of those things which thou hast not heard before'; i.e., 'a part of my plans which has not hitherto been disclosed to thee.' Cp. Eur. Med. 356 οὐ γὰρ τι δράσεις δεινός, ὦν φόβος μ' ἔχει.

54 ε. τί δῆτ' ἄνωγας; The division of the verse between the speakers (ἀντιλαβή) serves at once to mark the surprise of Neopt. and to introduce the words of Od. with a certain abrupt force: cp. O. C. 722 n.

σε δεῖ κ.τ.λ. Two other examples of this constr. are extant: Ai. 556 δεῖ σ' ὅπως πατὴρ | δέξῃς ἐν ἐχθροῖς ὅς ἐξ οἴου τ' ἀράης: Cratinus (the poet of the Old Comedy), Nέμεσις fr. 3 δεῖ σ' ὅπως εὐσχημονος | ἀλεκτρούβης μηδὲν διόσεις τοὺς τρόπους. In both those passages, as in this, the constr. is used by an elder, or superior, in giving a precept of conduct. The admonitory tone thus associated with the formula confirms the text, as against Matthiae's conjecture, σε δεῖν | ψυχὴν ὅπως λόγοισιν ἐκκλέψεις λέγω. The partic. λέγων explains the instrum. dat. λόγοισιν more clearly; it is not instrumental ('by speaking'), but temporal; i.e., literally, 'as you go on speaking.' It indicates that Neopt. is to converse alone with Phil. (cp. γο, ὁμιλία), and is to deceive him in the course of their conversation. The next verse makes this still clearer:— 'When he asks, say,' etc. A similar use of λέγων, to denote the process of talk, is frequent in Herod., when, after epitomising part of a speech, he gives the sequel in the speaker's own words; as 3. 156, 'νῦν τε,' ἔφη λέγων, ... 'And now,' he went on to say, ... (lit., said, as he went on speaking).—Other ways of taking λέγων, which seem less good, are:—(1) As instrum. partic., with which αὐτοῦς is to be supplied from λόγοισιν: 'with words, ... i.e., by speaking them.' For this view, Schneidewin cp. Plat. Legg. 885 v ὅσα λόγῳ καὶ ὅσα ἔργῳ περὶ θεοῦς ὑβρίζει τις λέγων ἢ πράττων. (2) As instrum. partic., used absolutely, to emphasise λόγοισιν,— 'with words,—I repeat, by speaking.' (3) As instrum. partic., to be taken closely with λόγοισιν, in the sense, 'speaking vain words.' This is Seyffert's view, who explains λόγους λέγειν as meris verbis dicere: a sense which the phrase could not bear.—ἐκκλέψεις: here related to κλέπτειν, fallere (Tr. 243 εἰ μὴ συμφορὰ κλέπτουσι με), ἐξαπατᾶν to ἀπατᾶν. Cp. 968. Il. 14. 217 ἦ τ' ἐκλεψε νόον πύκα περ φρονεόντων.

58 ε. πλείς is more dramatic than πλείν, which would also be awkward after λέγειν.—ὡς πρὸς οἶκον. πρὸς states the direction of the voyage: ὡς merely adds an indication of the voyager's purpose: 'thou art homeward bound.' Odysseus and Phoenix were sent from Troy to bring the young Neoptolemus from Scyros: 343 ff.

61 μόνην. If L's μόνην δ' were sound, then στείλαντες (μέν) and ἔχοντες δέ would express two reasons why the conduct of the Atreidae was bad:—'when they had brought thee from home, and when that was their only way of taking Troy,'—the second clause implying that, as his presence was so momentous, his claim to good treatment was the stronger. But μόνην, without δ', is clearly right. Then ἔχοντες is causal, expressing the motive of στείλαντες,—'having brought thee,...since they had no other way,' etc. The insertion of δ', if not a mere error, may have been due to a corrector who, not perceiving the relation of the two participles, thought that they required a copula.—ἄλωσιν, means of capture: Thuc. 2. 75 χῶμα ἔχουν πρὸς τὴν πόλιν, νομίζοντες ταχίστην αἰρεσιν [τὴν αἰρεσιν Classen] ἐσεσθαι αὐτῶν (the quickest way of taking the place).

62 ε. τῶν Ἀχιλλείων δπλαν, gen. depending on the principal verb ἤξίωσαν, instead of an acc., τὰ Ἀχιλλεία ὅπλα, depending on the infin. δοῦναι. This construction arises from eagerness for compact expression of the main idea,—as here the main idea is completely expressed by v. 62. The 'exegetic' infin., like δοῦναι, is usu. the only word added: but here it is naturally supplemented by the words which denote the aggravating circumstances (ἐλθόντι...κυρίως αἰτουμένῳ). 64 ε. παρέδωσαν, handed over,—a word suggesting fraud or treachery, as oft.; cp. 399.—λέγων refers back to λέγειν in 57 (with which, as infin. for imperat., the nomin. is rightly used in the 2nd pers., O. T. 1529 n.). Odysseus leaves the available epithets to his young friend's imagination. Cp. O. T. 1287 βοᾶ̃ διοίγειν κλῆθρα καὶ δηλοῦν τινα | τοῖς πᾶσι Καδμείοις τὸν πατροκτόνον, | τὸν μητρός, αὐδῶν ἀνδρσί οὐδὲ ρητά μοι. Eur. I. T. 16 καὶ λέγει Κάλχας τάδε· | ... O. T. 465 ἀρρητ' ἀρρήτων n.

66 *τούτῳ γὰρ κ.τ.λ. The reading τούτων γὰρ οὐδέν μ' ἀλγυνεῖς is probably that which stood in L's archetype; for the inserted ν, by which οὐδέμ' has been made into οὐδέν μ', is due to the first corrector of L, who revised the work of the scribe by comparing the copy with the original. The first question, then, is whether that reading can be kept. It is required to mean:—'for in regard to no one of these things' (viz., the κακά, taunts) 'wilt thou pain me.' But it would properly mean:—'for thou wilt not cause me any of these pains.' Cp. 1021 ἐγὼ δ' ἀλγύνομαι | τοῦτ' αὐθ' ὅτι ζῶ κ.τ.λ., 'I feel just this pain,—that I live,' etc.: Ar. Ach. 2 ἦσθην δὲ βαδ... | α δ' ὠδυνήθην, κ.τ.λ.: Ant. 550 τί ταῦτ' ἀνίης μ' (cause me this distress).

Before τούτων γὰρ οὐδέν μ' ἀλγυνεῖς could be accepted, it would be needful to show that a cognate acc. (οὐδέν) could thus replace an instrum. dat. The next question concerns its origin. It might be suggested that the οὐδέμ' of the 1st hand in L came, not from οὐδέν μ', but from οὐδέν, and that the sense is, 'thou wilt pain no one of them' (masc.),—so that καθ' ἡμῶν in 65 should mean, Odysseus and the Atreidae. But this cannot be; for, here, there has been no direct mention of the Atreidae,—only of Ἀχαιῶν generally (59); and so, for contrast with πᾶσιν Ἀργείοις (67), the pain denoted by ἀλγυνεῖς must be pain to Odysseus. τούτων γὰρ οὐδέν ἀλγυνεῖς being thus set aside, we have to weigh (1) τούτων γὰρ οὐδέν ἀλγυνεῖ μ',—Dindorf's conjecture; and (2) τούτῳ γὰρ οὐδέν μ' ἀλγυνεῖς,—Buttmann's. Both being possible, the question is, which of them is most likely to have generated τούτων γὰρ οὐδέν μ' ἀλγυνεῖς. The fact that ἀλγυνεῖς precedes ἐργάσει diminishes the probability that ἀλγυνεῖς arose from ἀλγυνεῖ μ' by assimilation of persons. Further, had οὐδέν μ' ἀλγυνεῖς come from οὐδέν ἀλγυνεῖ μ', we might have expected to find a variant, οὐδέν ἀλγυνεῖς μ'. If, on the other hand, the words οὐδέν μ' ἀλγυνεῖς are genuine, we have only to suppose a change of τούτῳ into τούτων. On these palaeographical grounds Buttmann's reading appears preferable to Dindorf's.

67 μῆ: for εὐ ἐργάσει μῆ, instead of εὐ μῆ ἐργάσει, cp. 332, 653, O. T. 328 n.: for μῆ as first word of a verse, when a word but made them over to Odysseus. Of me, say what thou wilt,—the vilest of vile reproaches;—thou wilt cost me no pang by that;—but if thou fail to do this deed, thou wilt bring sorrow on all our host. For if yon man's bow is not to be taken, never canst thou sack the realm of Dardanus.

And mark why thine intercourse with him may be free from mistrust or danger, while mine cannot. Thou hast come to Troy under no oath to any man, and by no constraint; nor hadst thou part in the earlier voyage:

ἀλγυνεῖς. All have τούτων. Buttmann conj. τούτω (for τούτων) γὰρ οὐδέν μ' ἀλγυνεῖς: so Wund. and Blaydes. Dindorf, τούτων γὰρ οὐδέν ἀλγυνεῖ μ'.—ἐργάσει] ἐργάσει L; as below, 78 γενήσῃ, 108 ἡγήμ, and passim. 67 ἀργέουσι L, the final i with which it is construed stands in the preceding verse, cp. O. C. 1349 (ἐλ... | μῆ), O. T. 348 (δσον | μῆ). —βαλεῖς here = ἐμβαλεῖς (or προσβαλεῖς), 'inflict' on them: cp. Eur. Phoen. 1534 σκότον δμμασι σοῖσι βαλῶν. In poetry the simple dat. (instead of dat. or acc. with a prep.) is sometimes thus used to denote the object to, or against, which an action is directed: cp. n. on Ani. 1232 πτύσας προσώψω. Not, 'launch against them,' as though the λύπη were a missile; nor, 'sow' sorrow for them, like ἀνίας μοι κατασπείρας, Ai. 1005.

68 ε. ἐλ...μὴ ληφθήσεται, οὐκ ἔστι κ.τ.λ. 'if the bow is not to be taken, then it is impossible' etc. Here the condition expressed by the fut. ind. in the protasis is really a present one; the meaning is, 'if it is (now) settled that the bow is not to be taken.' Cp. Xen. An. 3. 4. 39 οὐκ ἔστι παρελθεῖν, εἰ μὴ τούτους ἀποκόψομεν: 'it is an impossibility to advance, if we are not to dislodge these men' (i.e. assuming that we do not mean to dislodge them). Practically, this is a more emphatic way of expressing the necessity of the act to which the protasis refers. Distinguish those cases in which the condition expressed by the fut. indic. is really future; as in 66 f., εἰ μὴ ἐργάσει ('if thou fail to do this'), βαλεῖς: and in 75 f. εἰ με αἰσθήσεται ('if he shall perceive me'), δῶλα (i.e. δλοῦμαι): where ἐάν μὴ ἐργάσῃ, ἐάν με αἰσθῇ would differ from the fut. ind. with εἰ only as being somewhat less vivid.

οὐκ ἔστι πέρας σοι. The difference between σοι and σοί here resembles that between 'thou canst never take' and 'thou canst never take.' L supports σοί, which is, of course, quite tenable. But σοι seems preferable, because (a) in giving a reason, as γὰρ implies, why 'all the Greeks' will be pained, it seems less fitting to place the personal concern of Neoptolemus in the foreground; and (b) the necessary emphasis on σοί in v. 70 would have a slightly awkward effect if the same pron. had been emphasised in v. 69. Cp. n. on 47, ἔλοιτό μ'.

τὸ Δαρδάνου πέδον, the land of Dardanus,—meaning Τροία in its larger sense, the town with its territory (cp. 920 τὰ Τροίας πεδία, 1435 ελεῖν τὸ Τροίας πέδον). So O. C. 380 τὸ Καδμείων πέδον = Θήβης πέδον (ib. 415). Dardanus, son of Zeus, was fifth ancestor of Priam (Il. 20. 215 ff.). Cp. Pind. O. 13. 56 πρὸ Δαρδάνου τειχέων: Eur. Helen. 1493 Δαρδάνου | πόλιν.

70 ε. ὥς δ' ἔστ' ἐμοὶ μὲν οὐχί κ.τ.λ.: cp. Xen. An. 2. 5. 35 οἱ δὲ πάντες μὲν οὐκ ἤλθον, Ἀριαῖος δὲ καὶ Ἀρτάξος κ.τ.λ. —Odysseus anticipates the objection that, if there is to be a stratagem, he should conduct it himself,—as Aesch. and Eur. had made him do: cp. 13 n.—ὁμιλῶ, merely 'intercourse,' in a general sense: the special meaning, 'colloquy,' (seen in the Mod. Gk. ὁμιλέω = 'to speak,') is post-classical.—πιστῇ, trusted by Philoctetes; cp. 1272. βέβαιος, safe for Neoptolemus.

72 ε. ἑνὸρκος. Odysseus was bound by the oath which all the suitors of Helen had sworn to her father Tyndareus,—that they would come to her husband's aid, if he was robbed of her: Eur. I. A. 61 δτου γυνὴ γένοιτο Τυνδαρίς κόρη, | τούτω ξυναμυνεῖν, εἰ τις ἐκ δόμων λαβὼν | ὀλχοιτο. So Ajax came to Troy οὐνεχ' ὀρκων ὅσιν ἦν ἐνώμοτος (Ai. 1113). Paus. was shown the place, called Πικου μνήμα, on the road from Lacedaemon into Arcadia, where Tyndareus, having sacrificed a horse, τοὺς Ἑλένης ἐξώρκου μνησιτῆρας (3. 20. 9).—ἐξ ἀνάγκης: Odysseus feigned madness, in order to avoid going to Troy,

75 ε. ἐγκρατὴς: for the omission of ὦν, even when, as here, the adj. marks a condition, cp. n. on Ant. 1327 βράχιστα γὰρ κράτιστα τὰν ποσὶν κακά i.e. βράχιστα (δυνά) κράτιστά (ἐστι).—ὄλῳλα: cp. *O. Plaut. Amphitruo 1. 1. 164 perii, si me adspexerit.—προσδιαφθερῶ ought not to be changed (as Tournier proposed) to προσδιαφθείρω. The force of δλωλα, used in the sense of δλοῦμαι, would be weakened, not enhanced, by a repetition of the device; while, on the other hand, the natural future προσδιαφθερῶ makes the rhetorical δλωλα more impressive: cp. Eur. I. T. 1002 τούτου δὲ χωρισθεῖς (= εἰ χωρισθῶσμαι) ἐγὼ μὲν δλλυμμαι, | σὺ δ' ἂν τὸ σαιτουθ θέμενος εὐ νόστου τύχοις.

77 ε. αὐτὸ τοῦτο prepares the emphasis on κλοπεύς, while it also refers back to 54 f. τὴν Φιλοκτῆτον...ἐκκλέ-

ψεις. The connection of thought is:—'No; open force is out of the question; the object which our ingenuity must compass is precisely that (which I have already indicated),—viz., how the how can be taken by craft.'—σοφισθῆναι: cp. Ar. An. 1401 χαρλεντά γ', ὡ πρεσβύτ', ἐσοφίσω καὶ σοφά.—κλοπεύς...γενήσῃ: cp. O. T. 721 φονέα γενέσθαι πατρός: O. C. 582 δταν θάνω γ'ὼ καὶ σύ μου ταφὴς γένη.

79 ε. ἔξοιδα, *παῖ. Erfurd't's correction of καὶ to παῖ appears certain. The caressing tone of παῖ (cp. O. T. 1008, Ant. 1289) is dramatically happy at this moment, when he has just used the jarring word κλοπεύς. The arguments in defence of καὶ are examined in the Appendix.—φύσει is excusably added to πεφυκότα, since the force of the latter had become weakened by usage (πεφυκέναι oft. meaning little more than εἶναι): as here, πεφυκότα...τεχνᾶσθαι (without φύσει) would not necessarily mean more than 'apt to contrive,'—whether the aptitude was innate, or acquired. So Eur. Bacch. 896 φύσει πεφυκός: Plat. Crat. 389 c τὸ φύσει ἐκάστῳ πεφυκὸς ὄργανον.—φωνεῖν: for the inf. with πεφυκότα, cp. 88, 1052.

81 ἡδὺ γάρ τι κτῆμα (τὸ κτῆμα) τῆς νίκης λαβεῖν (ἐστι): the possession consisting in victory (defining gen.) is a pleasant possession to win. κτῆμα, which, without an art., stands as predicate, has to be supplied, with an art., as subject. So Plat. Theat. 209 ε ἡδὺ χρέμ' ἂν εἴη but none of these things can I deny. And so, if he shall perceive me while he is still master of his bow, I am lost, and thou, as my comrade, wilt share my doom. No; the thing that must be plotted is just this,—how thou mayest win the resistless arms by stealth. I well know, my son, that by nature thou art not apt to utter or contrive such guile; yet, seeing that victory is a sweet prize to gain, bend thy will thereto; our honesty shall be shown forth another time. But now lend thyself to me for one little knavish day,

αρ. τοῦ καλλίστου τῶν περὶ ἐπιστήμης λόγου, i.e. (τὸ χρήμα) τοῦ...λόγου ἡδὺν χρημ' ἂν εἴη, ('our most successful definition of knowledge would be a pretty affair'): where (τὸ χρήμα) τοῦ...λόγου is a mere periphrasis for ὁ...λόγος. Eur. Andr. 957 τόφον τι χρήμα τοῦ διδάξαντος βροτοῦς | λόγους ἀκούειν, 'a wonder of wisdom was he who taught' (etc.), where (τὸ χρήμα) τοῦ διδάξαντος is a periphrasis for ὁ διδάξας. Sometimes the defining gen. has no art.: Eur. Anacr. 181 ἐπιφθονὸν τι χρήμα θηλειῶν ἔφν: i.e., (τὸ) θηλειῶν (χρήμα) ἐπιφθονὸν τι χρημὶ ἐστίν.—The reading ἡδὺν γάρ τοι (instead of τι) is preferred by several edd. The combination ἀλλὰ... γάρ τοι is unusual (no example occurs in Soph.); but that matters little, since here ἀλλὰ γάρ is not elliptically used (cp. Ant. 148 n.); i.e. ἀλλὰ goes with τόλμα, and therefore γάρ, in the parenthetic clause, could be followed by τοι as legitimately as if there were no ἀλλὰ in question. The reasons for preferring τι seem to be these: (α) τοι would be bluntly sententious, while τι has a more delicate persuasiveness: (β) τι is elsewhere associated with the peculiar constr. used here: see Eur. Andr. 181, 957, quoted above, and ib. 727 ἀνείμενον τι χρήμα πρεσβυτῶν ἔφν.—(τὸ κτήμα) τῆς νύκτς: for the defining gen., cp. 159 f., 403 f.: O. T. 1474 τὰ φίλτατ' ἐκγόνοι ἐμοῖν ('my darlings—my two daughters'), Ant. 471 τὸ γέννημα τῆς παιδός.—λαβεῖν epehexe, as Ant. 439 ταῦθ' ἤσσω λαβεῖν | ἐμοὶ πέφυκε, n. The conjecture λαχεῖν would be as good, but no better.

cp. 481, O. C. 184, Ai. 528.—δικαιοι... ἐκφανοῦμεθα sc. ὄντες (cp. O. T. 1063 ἐκφανεί κακῆ): Il. 13. 278 ἐνθ' ὅτε δειλὸς ἀνὴρ, ὅς τ' ἄλκιμος, ἐξεφάνθη.—αὐθις, afterwards,—some other day: Ant. 1204 n.

83 νῦν δ' κ.τ.λ., has been suggested by the contrast with αὐθις, and so the thought already conveyed by τόλμα is re-stated more explicitly: then ἡμέρας μέρος βραχὺ suggests, in its turn, κἄτα τὸν λοιπὸν χρόνον κ.τ.λ., which repeats the sense of δικαιοὶ δ' αὐθις ἐκφανοῦμεθα. Cp. n. on Ant. 465 ff.—εἰς ἀναιδὲς ἡμέρας μέρος βραχὺ, 'for one little roguish day': ἡμέρας μέρος βραχὺ = 'a short space (consisting in) one day' (cp. Eur. Med. 1247 ἀλλὰ τῇδε γε | λαθοῖ βραχείαν ἡμέραν παίδων σέθεν, | κάπειτα θρήνη). μέρος is a fraction of the life-time which is before him: and since ἡμέρας-μέρος ('day-space') forms one notion, ἀναιδὲς has the same force as if it were ἀναιδοῦς, agreeing with ἡμέρας (Ant. 794 νεῖκος—ἀνδρῶν ξύναμιον, n.). For several epithets joined (without copula) to one subst., cp. Ant. 586 ποντίαις...δυσπνοῖς... | Θρησσαισιν... πνοαῖς. For εἰς marking a limit of time, cp. below, 1076 χρόνον τοσοῦτον εἰς ὅσον τὰ τ' ἐκ νεὼς | στείλωσι ναῦται, κ.τ.λ.—Others take εἰς ἀναιδὲς by itself, as = εἰς ἀναιδείαν (ἡμ. μέρος βρ. being acc. of duration of time), 'for shamelessness.' Such an abstract sense for the neut. adj., without the art., seems impossible. Campbell compares Plat. Gorg. 504 c ἐμοὶ γὰρ δοκεῖ ταῖς μὲν τοῦ σώματος τάξεσιν ὄνομα εἶναι ὑγεινόν (as though ὑγεινόν stood for τὸ ὑγεινόν, or ὑγίειαν): but cp. Cope's version: 'For my opinion is, that order in the body of every kind bears the name of 'healthy':' i.e., δνομα is equiv. to 'epithet.' In Thuc. 5. 18 § 4 δικαίῳ χρησθῶν καὶ νόμοις, δικαίῳ is certainly a subst. ('law,' in the sense of 'legal procedure'); but that does not warrant ἀναιδὲς as = ἀναλδεια.—Blaydes, again, takes εἰς ἀναιδὲς in a concrete sense, as = 'for a shameless deed' (supplying ἔργον). We can hardly supply τι (cp. O. T. 517, 1312, Ant. 687). This view seems just possible, but very improbable.

84 f. δός μοι σεαυτόν, i.e. allow me to overrule your scruples, a phrase applicable to friendly remonstrance, as Tr. 1117 δός μοι σεαυτόν, μὴ τοσοῦτον ὡς δάκνει | θυμῷ δύσσοργος: cp. n. on Ant. 718. Brunck cp. Ter. Adelph. 5. 3. 838 Mitte iam istaec: da te hodie mihi: | Exporge frontem.—κέκλησο: for the perf., cp. 119, El. 366, Tr. 736.

86 f. μὲν merely emphasises ἐγὼ (Ant. 11 n.); it is not opposed to ἄλλ' in 90.—Λαερτίου: the same form (always in the 1st or 5th place, the α being long,) 417, 628, 1357, Al. 101: but Λαέρτρου below, 360, 614, fr. 827: and Λαερτίου, 401, 1286, Al. 1, 380. Eur., too, has these three forms: while in the Od., where the name occurs 22 times, Λαέρτης alone is used.—τοῦσδε, referring back to οὐς ἂν: cp. O. C. 1332 οὐς ἂν σὺ προσθῇ, τοῖσδ' ἔφασκ' εἶναι κράτος: so El. 441, Tr. 23. Prose would here use τούτους, because οὗτος regularly (though not always) points back, while δὲ points forward. Buttmann's τοὺς δὲ, though admissible, would be too emphatic: see Appendix.

πράσσειν λόγους, as meaning, 'to put words into acts,' is not a strictly correct phrase, but the verb is used here, with some poetical freedom, as if οὐς ἂν τῶν λόγων... τοῦσδε were ἂν λέγόμενα... τάδε: i.e. λόγοι are virtually 'proposed deeds.' The prose equivalent of this πράσσειν would be ἐργῶ ἐπιτελεῖν (Thuc. 1. 70). Distinguish Eur. H. F. 1305 ἐπραξε γὰρ βούλησιν ἢ ἐβούλετο, where the verb = ἐξέπραξε, 'effected.'—Isocr. or. 1 § 15 has the converse maxim, ἃ ποιεῖν ἀσχρόν, ταῦτα νόμιζε μηδὲ λέγειν εἶναι καλόν (cp. O. T. 1409).

88 f. ἐκ τέχνης: for ἐκ = 'by means of,' cp. 563, 710, El. 279 ἐκ δόλου. Ant. 475 ὁπτόν ἐκ πυρὸς περισκελῇ.—πράσσειν: for the inf., cp. 80: for the repetition of the word from 87, cp. O. C. 554 n., Ant. 76 n.—οὐτ' αὐτὸς κ.τ.λ.: instead of οὔτε

A.* 926 ἐγὼ δ' ἐν ἀνδρὸς εὐσεβεστάτου τραφέις | Χείρωνος ἔμαθον τοὺς τρόπους ἀπλοῦς ἔχειν.

90 π. πρὸς βίαν: so 594 πρὸς ἰσχύος κράτος: cp. πρὸς ἡδονήν, πρὸς χάριν, etc.: ἀγειν=ἀπάγειν (cp. 941), as 102, 985 etc.—καὶ μὴ δόλοισιν: μὴ is generic (it does not, and could not here, go with the inf. ἀγειν): i.e., the phrase means strictly, 'and by such means as are not frauds': cp. on 409 (μηδὲν δίκαιον), Anl. 494 τῶν μηδὲν ὁρθῶς...τεχνωμένων.

οὐ γὰρ κ.τ.λ.: the γὰρ implies, 'this ought to satisfy thee, for force cannot fail'; it is thus already a trace of irresolution. ἐξ ἑνὸς ποδός, lit., 'starting from one foot,' i.e., 'when he has the use of only one foot,'—ἐκ marking that εἰς ποὺς is the condition which makes his victory impossible. Cp. n. on O. C. 848 οὐκουν ποτ' ἐκ τούτου γε μὴ σκῆπτρον ἐτι | ὀδοιπορήσῃς. In El. 455 Ὀρέστην ἐξ ὑπερτέρας χειρὸς | ἐχθροῖσιν...ἐπεμβῆναι, ('that, with victorious might, he may trample on his foes,') the ὑπερτέρα χεῖρ is similarly the antecedent condition.—τοσοῦσδε (sc. δντας, cp. n. on ἐγκρατής, 75): the 15 seamen who form the Chorus will be at hand to help them.

O. T. 437 n.).

97 ἀργόν, fem.: in good Attic prose as well as verse this adj. is of two terminations, and the v. l. ἀργήν here represents only a later usage: Aristotle (if our MSS. may be trusted) wrote in Meteor. 1. 14 (Berl. ed. p. 352 a 13) ἡ μὲν γὰρ (χώρα) ἀργὴ γέγονε, yet in Oecon. 2 (Berl. ed. p. 1348 a 3) τῆς χώρας ἀργοῦ γενομένης.

98 ε. εἰς ἑλεγχον ἐξῶν, going forth to those contests of real life by which the adult tries the maxims learned in youth. ἑλεγχος here is the test which the man applies to the principle (γλῶσσαν μὲν ἀργὸν κ.τ.λ.); not the test applied to the man himself. The latter is, however, the usual sense of this phrase: cp. fr. 102 γένος γὰρ εἰς ἑλεγχον ἐξῶν καλὸν | εὐκλειαν ἂν κτήσαστο: Eur. Alc. 640 εἰδείξας εἰς ἑλεγχον ἐξελθὼν δς εἰ: Plat. Phaedr. 278 c εἰς ἑλεγχον ἰὼν περὶ ὧν ἔγραψε.—βροτοῖς, 'for men,' i.e. in their estimation, an ethic dat. 100 τί οὖν μ' MSS. (in L οὖν has been made from οὐ by S): τί μ' οὖν Wakefield.

also take βροτοῖς directly with ἡγοῦν, as = 'showing the way in all things to men' (cp. 133): but here the notion required is that of 'swaying' rather than 'guiding'; and in the former sense ἡγουμένην would take the genit. βροτῶν. There is an allusion to the Athenian demagogues (cp. 388 διδασκάλων λόγοις): as Cleon says (Thuc. 3. 38) of the citizens in the ecclesia, εἰώθατε θεαταὶ μὲν τῶν λόγων γίγνεσθαι, ἀκροαταὶ δὲ τῶν ἔργων ('absorbed in the drama of debate, but content with rumours from the field of action').

100 τί μ' οὖν. With Nauck, I adopt Wakefield's transposition here, while recognising that much may be said for τί οὖν μ'. Two questions are involved, and should be kept distinct; viz. (1) whether Tragedy ever used the licence, denied to it by Porson (Phoen. 892), of hiatus after τί: and (2) whether Sophocles is likely to have written τί οὖν μ' rather than τί μ' οὖν here. As to (1), the strongest instance is Aesch. Theb. 704 τί οὖν ἔτ' ἂν σαινόμεν δλέθριον μόρον; where τί δ' οὖν, τί νῦν, τί δῆτ' are all improbable. It would seem, then, that Aesch., at least, sometimes admitted the hiatus; so that, if we transpose μ' here, it does not necessarily follow that the same transposition should be made in Aesch. Eum. 902 τί οὖν μ' ἄνωγας τῇδ' ἐφυμνήσαι χθονί; But the prevailing character of Sophoclean verse certainly favours τί μ' οὖν rather than τί οὖν μ'. As against conjecturing τί νῦν μ', it is well to note Tr. 1247 πρᾶσσειν ἄνωγας οὖν με πανδίκως τάδε; Al. 1364 ἄνωγας οὖν με τὸν νεκρὸν θάπτειν εἶν; though no argument can be drawn from the fact that οὖν precedes με in those places. Cp. 733, 753, 917. See Appendix.—τί...ἄλλο, sc. ποιεῖν: cp. 310, and n. on Ani. 497 θέλεις τί μείζον ἢ κατακτείνειν μ' ἐλῶν;

101 λέγω σ'...λαβεῖν, 'I say that thou art to take.' In this constr., 'say' means 'command'; the act commanded is denoted by the inf., and the agent by the acc., as subject to the inf. Cp. Al. 1047 σὲ φωνῶ τόνδε τὸν νεκρὸν χερσὶν | μὴ συγκομίζειν: O. C. 932 εἶπον μὲν οὖν καὶ πρόσθεν, ἐννέπω δὲ νῦν, | τὰς παῖδας ὡς τάχιστα δεῦρ' ἄγειν τινά. The agent can also stand in the dat., as object to the verb of saying; O. C. 840 χαλᾶν λέγω σοι.—This verse has no caesura: cp. 1369: Ani. 1021 οὐδ' ὄρνις εὐσήμους ἀπορροιβδεῖ βοάς, with n. there. Distinguish these rare examples from those which have an elision after the 3rd foot ('quasi-caesura'), as 276: Ani. 44 ἡ γὰρ νοεῖς θάπτειν σφ', ἀπόρρητον πῶδει;

102 ἐν δόλῳ: cp. 60.—πείσαντ', i.e. by persuading him that it is for his own good to come to Troy,—instead of deceiving him by a pretext of taking him home to Greece (58).

103 οὐ μὴ πίθεται, a strong denial: cp. 381, 418, O. C. 849 n.—πρὸς βίαν δ': persuasion will be in vain: and, when persuasion has failed, force will be useless (cp. 90).

104 οὕτως...τι δεινὸν κ.τ.λ. It seems truer to regard τι as adj. with

NE. What, then, is thy command? What, but that I should lie?

OD. I say that thou art to take Philoctetes by guile.

NE. And why by guile rather than by persuasion?

OD. He will never listen; and by force thou canst not take him.

NE. Hath he such dread strength to make him bold?

OD. Shafts inevitable, and winged with death.

NE. None may dare, then, e'en to approach that foe?

OD. No, unless thou take him by guile, as I say.

NE. Thou thinkest it no shame, then, to speak falsehoods?

OD. No, if the falsehood brings deliverance.

108 δῆτα τὰ ρ: δὴ τὰ δε (=τὰδε) L (and so K, cod. Par. 2886): the δὴ was omitted at first, and then added (by the 1st hand itself) above the line. Vauvilliers conj. δῆτα τὸ: Wecklein, δῆτα σὺ: Cavallin, δηλαδῇ. The reading δὴ τὰ ψευδῇ in L² seems δεινὸν than as adv. with οὕτως: cp. Xen. Cyr. 5. 1. 24 οὕτω δεινός τις ἔρως... ἐγγίγνεται. For the enclitic τις preceding its noun, cp. 519, O. C. 280 n. In Herod., indeed, οὕτω δὴ τι ('so very...') often qualifies adjectives (1. 185, 3. 12, etc.): but in the Attic examples of οὕτω τι with an adj. the latter is usually a neut. sing., as Posidippus Μύριος fr. 2 οὕτω τι πολὺπουν ἐστὶν ἡ λύπη κακόν.—109 λοῦς θράσος, strength-confidence, i.e., strength which makes him confident. Against κράτος, conjectured by Nauck and Blaydes, (the latter placing it in the text,) observe that θράσος agrees well with οὐ μὴ πίθεται. If Philoctetes is deaf to persuasion, and risks the alternative of having force used against him, he must have some resource which inspires him with such boldness.

106 λοῦς: we might expect λοῦς γ', since the question in 104 is not, 'what resource has he?' but, 'has he some resource?' And in 104 we cannot well change τι to τί. L has probably lost γ' in some other places: see, e.g., on Ant. 648, 1241. But γ' is not indispensable, and by its absence the reply gains a certain abrupt force. Cp. 985.

106 ἐκείνῳ γ': γε emphasises the pron., 'then we dare not even approach him,'—a man with such arrows as those.—προσμεῖξαι: the spelling μείζω, ἐμείξα, is attested for saec. VI.—IV. B.C. by numerous Attic inscriptions (Meisterhans, p. 87, n. 690).—θρασύ, a thing that may be dared; Pind. has this pass. sense, N. 7. 50 θρασύ μοι τόδ' εἰπεῖν. Cp. Plat. Rep. 450 Ε τάληθῇ εἰδόμενα λέγειν ἀσφαλὲς καὶ θαρραλέον.

107 μὴ δόλω λαβόντα, acc. as subj. to προσμεῖξαι, (it is not safe that one should approach him,) unless one has ensnared him; for λαβόντα, cp. 47 n.

108 τὰ ψευδῇ. The art. with the neut. adj. gives a certain emphasis ('those things which are false'), and the objection to it here would have point only if, instead of the adj., we had the subst., τὰ ψεύδη. For the same reason, τὰ ψευδῇ λέγειν seems rather better than τὸ ψευδῇ λέγειν, though at first sight the latter is specious. In fr. 325 καλὸν μὲν οὖν οὐκ ἔστι τὰ ψευδῇ λέγειν, also, τὰ appears sound. Cp. Antiphon or. 1 § 10 αὕτη γὰρ καὶ τοὺς τὰ ψευδῇ παρεσκευασμένους λέγειν τὰ ληθῇ κατηγορεῖν ποιήσει. Cavallin changes δῆτα τὰ to δηλαδῇ, 'evidently' (O. T. 1501); but this would be better suited to ironical reproof than to ingenuous surprise.

109 τὸ σωθῆναι: i.e. the success of the Greeks at Troy. The aor. inf. is used because the speaker is thinking of that success as an event (to be marked by the fall of Troy), not as a process or state (τὸ σῶζεσθαι). Cp. Andoc. or. 2 § 12 οὐ περὶ τοῦ σῶσαι τὰς Ἀθήνας ὁ κίνδυνος ἦν αὐτοὺς μάλλον ἢ περὶ τοῦ μηδὲ αὐτοὺς σωθῆναι (referring to the Athenian army at Samos in 411 B.C.): where, as here, the aorists infinitive mark the critical moments.

A v. l. was θηρατέα γοῦν (V², Vat.). Triclinius gave θηρατέ' οὖν: Elmsley conj. θηρατέ' ἂν γίγνεται ἂν: Tournier, θηρατέ' ἂν γίγνεται ἄρ': Nauck, γίγνεται ἂν, εἶπερ ὧδ' ἔχει, θηρατέα.—γένεται, a v. l. found in T and other late MSS., was perh. due to Triclinius: see 110 πῶς οὖν βλέπων κ.τ.λ. By using οὖν, he concedes (at least for argument's sake) what Od. has just said. 'Granting, then, that a falsehood is not disgraceful when it has such a motive, how is one to have the face to tell it?' In vv. 91 ff. we saw the first trace of irresolution: this verse marks a further step. He now demurs to play the part, not (as in v. 108) because it is immoral, but because it is distasteful and difficult. For πῶς οὖν, cp. O. T. 124 πῶς οὖν ὁ ληστὴς ('granting that there was a robber, how then...?'): for πῶς...βλέπων, O. T. 1371 δμῶσιν τοιοῦς βλέπων, n.—λακεῖν of bold or impudent utterance, as Ar. 116 θηρατέ' οὖν γίγνεται ἂν, they would then become (by logical inference) desirable prizes: cp. Plat. Prot. 338 c εἰ δὲ ἀληθεύσθε..., αἰσχρὸν γὰρ τοῦτο τῷδε γίγνεται. So γίγνομαι denotes arithmetical process (Thuc. 3. 17 αἰ πᾶσαι (νῆες) ἅμα ἐγίγνοντο διακόσια κ.τ.λ.), or legal succession to property (Isae. or. 5 § 44 ἃ ἐκείνων ἐγίγνετο). This usage of γίγνομαι is decisive for γίγνεται ἂν against γένεται, a v. l. found in a few late MSS.—οὖν, the conjecture of Triclinius, seems better here than the other corrections, θηρατέ' ἂν γίγνεται ἂν (or γίγνεται ἄρ').

πῶσω. Numerous Attic inscriptions of the 5th and 4th centuries B. C. show that in this verb the letter ι was regularly omitted before a following E-sound (ε or η), though never before an O-sound (ο or ω): hence (e.g.) ποεῖ, ποήσας, but ποιούσι, ποιῶν. It should be noted that πο- and ποι-, according as the E- or O-sound follows, sometimes occur in the same inscription: thus in C. I. A. 167, 55 (of 334—326 B.C.) we find ποιῶν (thrice) in company with ποήσας. The omission of ι before the E-sound was not, indeed, rigorous; thus an Attic inscription of the 5th cent. B.C. gives Εὐφρων ἐξ-εποίησ' οὐκ ἄδαις Πάριος: but the facts prove that it was usual. See Meisterhans, Gramm. d. Att. Inschriften, p. 27. As to L, its practice is not constant. It almost always gives πο, not ποι, before ε or η, when the first syllable is short,—as here, and in vv. 552, 752, 926, 1010. In a few such places where the first hand had written ποι it has been corrected to πο. But there are also a few places where ποι remains. See Appendix. In writing πῶσω, etc., I rely primarily on the epigraphic evidence belonging to the poet's own time: but L's prevailing practice must also be considered as strengthening the grounds for believing that those inscriptions represent the general rule.

πάσαν αλσχύνην ἀφέις. This verse does not (as some have objected) mark an abrupt change of mind; that change has come by a series of steps which the poet has indicated by light touches (91 ff., 110, 116, 118). Rather this very phrase hints that the feeling shown in v. 110 still lingers with him. He will do the deed, but there is still a sense of αλσχύνῃ which it costs an effort to shake off. These are the words of one who may yet feel remorse.

The alternative conj. ἀπόστελλ' αὐ, ascribed by Blaydes to Musgrave, seems to be that of Burges (ed. 1833). Cavallin in his crit. note credits Musgrave with ἀποστέλλου, but in his commentary, p. 29, quotes Blaydes as his authority for it, and must therefore mean ἀπόστελλ' αὐ. Blaydes suggests that, reading ἀπόστελλ' αὐ, or ἀποστείλαι, we should transpose vv. 124, 125.

121 f. μνημονεύεις. Almost all recent edd. adopt the conjecture μνημονεύσεις, but without necessity. The question, 'dost thou remember my advice?' naturally implies here, 'dost thou intend to observe it?'—and so N.'s answer, σάφ' ἴσθ', follows the present tense just as fitly as it would follow the future.—ἃ...παρήνεσα: referring to 56 ff.—συνήνεσα, 'agreed': O. C. 1508 n. Remark the two compounds of αἰνέω at the end of two successive verses: cp. Ar. Eq. 1370 f. μετεγγραφήσεται, | ...εγγεγράφεται.

123 ἐκδέχου, excipe. The idea of the compound is, 'be ready for him,'—prepared to deal with him the moment that he appears. The figurative use of the word in Her. 4. 1 is essentially the same, —Σκύθας...κατιόντας ἐς τὴν σφετέρην ἐξεδέξατο οὐκ ἐλάσσω πόνος (as if it had been lying in wait for them).

124 f. κατοπτευθῶ: cp. Aí. 829 πρὸς ἐχθρῶν του κατοπτευθείς.—καὶ τὸν σκοπὸν κ.τ.λ. The σκοπός is the attendant of Neoptolemus who had been sent to watch the neighbourhood of the cave, lest Philoctetes should take Odysseus by surprise (46). Now that Odysseus is going back to the ship, such a σκοπός is no longer needed. And it is natural that Odysseus should expect to meet the sentinel, since the latter would be keeping watch on that side of the cave at which Odysseus himself had hitherto been standing; viz., the side nearest to the ship.

126 f. καὶ δεῦρ'. If any undue delay occurred, Odysseus might reasonably suppose that Neoptolemus was failing to persuade Philoctetes. In case of such delay, then, Odysseus will send back N.'s man, disguised as the captain of a ship. The object of the disguise is that the supposed captain may tell a story which shall quicken the desire of Philoctetes to leave Lemnos, and shall also confirm his trust in Neoptolemus.

τοῦ χρόνου...τι κατασχολάζειν. Nauck's conjecture πέρα σχολάζειν would suit the sense; but it would leave the origin of the vulgate unexplained. I believe that Soph. has used κατασχολάζειν τοῦ χρόνου, somewhat boldly, in the sense of 'to lag behind the due time,'—the use of σχολάζειν in the sense 'to linger,' 'to delay,' permitting a genitive to be used, as after ὑστερεῖν, λείπειν, etc. The compound κατασχολάζειν may be compared with καθυστέρειν, where κατά merely implies that the delay is to be regretted or blamed. At first sight there is much in favour of the more generally received view, that τοῦ χρόνου τι κατασχολάζειν means, 'to waste part of our (precious) time by lingering.' But the tone of that phrase seems very unsuitable here: see Appendix.—ἐκπέμψω. The prep. is not

OD. Art thou mindful, then, of the counsels that I gave?

NE. Be sure of it,—now that once I have consented.

OD. Do thou, then, stay here, in wait for him; but I will go away, lest I be espied with thee, and will send our watcher back to the ship. And, if ye seem to be tarrying at all beyond the due time, I will send that same man hither again, disguised as the captain of a merchant-ship, that secrecy may aid us; and then, my son, as he tells his artful story, take such hints as may help thee from the tenor of his words.

otiose, as Burgess thought, but marks that the person sent will come as the sender's agent.

128 ναυκλήρου: the man, when he comes, pretends to be the captain of a small merchant-ship, trading between Greece and the Troad (547 ff.). In Plaut. Mil. 4. 3. 41 ff. the 'skipper's dress' (ornatus nauclicus) consists of a dark-coloured hat with broad brim (causia), and a garment of the same colour, well girt-up, and looped on the left shoulder, leaving the right arm bare, like the Greek ἐξομῆς. The colour of both hat and tunic is described by ferrugineus, ('nam is colos thalassicus'). This was a dark violet, rather than, as Nonius (p. 549) makes it, iron-grey: see Conington on Verg. G. 1. 467, and Munro on Lucr. 4. 76.—τρόποις, as Aesch. Cho. 479 τρόποισιν οὐ τυραννικοῖς, θανόν: often with ἐν, as Ag. 918 γυναικὶς ἐν τρόποις. Not τρόπον, which would mean, ὥσπερ ναυκλήρος δολοῖ τὴν μορφήν: cp. Her. 2. 57 δρυιθος τῶρον... φθέγγεσθαι = ὥσπερ δρυὶς φθέγγεται.

129 ἀγνόα: ignorance, on the part of Philoctetes, as to the real quality of the σκοπός. Disyllables in οἰα (as Τροία) have final ā, but longer words have ā. Other exceptions are: Tr. 350 ἀγνόα μ' ἔχει: fr. 521 ἀνόα τρέφει: fr. 748 παλιρροία βυθοῦ: Aesch. Theb. 402 ἀνόα τῶν (Blomf. ἐννόα): Eur. Andr. 520 καὶ γὰρ ἀνόα | μεγάλη (in anapaests): Ar. fr. 29 ὦ παρανόα καὶ ἀναιδεία (do).—

προσῆ, may be an attendant circumstance, i.e., may aid our plan: cp. Ani. 1251 ἦ τ' ἄγαν σιγῇ βαρὺ | δοκεῖ προσεῖναι, n.—The reading ἀγνόα is certainly wrong: the sense would then be, 'that he (the σκοπός) may be added to your company without suspicion' (dat. of circumstance): it could not be, as Musgrave took it, 'that thou mayest approach the man without seeming to know him' (προσῆ being then 2nd pers. subj. aor. midd. of προσῆμι).

130 α. οὐ δῆτα. Blaydes conjectures οὐ δὴ σὺ. But δῆτα is right. It means, 'then, of course'—differing from δὴ by implying more clearly that the step prescribed by δέχον is the obvious one.—οὐ=παρά οὐ, with δέχον: cp. O. T. 1163 ἐδεξάμην δέ του. This is better than to take οὐ...αὐδωμένου as gen. absol.—ποικίλως, 'craftily,'—i.e., in terms fitted to beguile Philoctetes. Not, 'in riddling speech,' as if the point of the artifice lay in second meanings which Neoptolemus was to divine. The word could, indeed, mean that (cp. O. T. 130 ἡ ποικιλῶδης Σφίγξ): but the more general sense agrees better with vv. 542—617.—αὐδωμένου, midd., as 852, Ai. 772: the pass. occurs below, 240, 430.—τὰ συμφέροντα: for the neut., cp. 24 n. τῶν ἀεὶ λόγων, the words spoken by him from moment to moment,—the tenor of his discourse. The phrase is explained by the dialogue between the disguised σκοπός and Neo-τῶν λόγων δει. 134 ἀθηνᾶ MSS.: Ἀθάνα Eustath. 758. 44.—Πολιάς] The Harleian MS. of this play (Brit. Mus. 5743, 15th cent.) has παλλάς, whence Burges inclines to read Παλλάς: but the πολλὰς in V (13th cent.) and Vat. (14th cent.) indicates plainly enough that the process of corruption was from πολιάς to παλλάς, not vice versa.—σφῆζει] Nauck conj. σφῆζι. 135 με, δέσποτ' Triclinius. δέσποτά ptolemus (vv. 542—627). The σκοπός tells a story; N. follows his lead, and strikes in from time to time with artful comments,—reasserting his hatred of the Atreidae, his sympathy with Philoctetes, etc. These opportunities, or 'cues,' are 'the useful hints' (τὰ συμφέροντα).—σοὶ παρεῖς τάδε, 'having committed these matters to thee,'—a parting reminder of the responsibility. Not, 'having given thee these directions.'

133 Ἑρμῆς ὁ πέμπων δόλιος=Ἑρμῆς δόλιος δὲ πέμπει, the god of stratagems, who escorts men on their way.—ὁ πέμπων: cp. Tr. 620 (the herald Lichas speaks) ἀλλ' εἴπερ Ἑρμοῦ τῆνδε πομπεύω τέχνην: Aesch. Eum. 91 (Zeus to Hermes) πομπαῖος ἴσθι, τόνδε ποιμαίνων ἐμὸν ἰκέτην. So he is ὀδῖος, ἐνὸδτος, ἡγεμόνιος, ἀγῆτωρ, and, in relation to the dead, ψυχοπομπός (O. C. 1548 n.).—δόλιος. Near Pellene in Achaia Pausanias saw a statue of Ἑρμῆς,—ἐπικλησιν μὲν Δόλιος, εὐχὰς δὲ ἀνθρώπων ἔτοιμος τελέσαι (7. 27. 1). Cp. Ar. Th. 1202 Ἑρμῇ δόλιε, ταυτὶ μὲν ἐτι καλῶς ποιεῖς. The Corcyrean month ψυδρεὺς was probably sacred to Hermes as ψυδρός (=ψευδής). In Babrius fab. 57 Hermes is conducting 'a waggon-load of lies,' when he is way-laid and robbed of his whole stock by Arabs. Especially, he is the arch-thief (Hor. Carm. 1. 10. 7: cp. Ovid Fast. 5. 691).—His character of δόλιος is similarly combined with that of πομπός in El. 1396 Ἑρμῆς σφ' ἀγει δόλον σκότῳ | κρύψας, κ.τ.λ.: and in [Eur.] Rhes. 216 ἀλλ' εὖ σ' ὁ Μάλας παῖς ἐκέισε καὶ πάλιν | πέμ-ψειεν Ἑρμῆς, ὅς γε φηλητῶν ἀναξ.—νῶν, dat.: cp. on 98.

134 Νίκη τ' Ἀθάνα Πολιάς. The personified Νίκη meant Victory not merely in war but in any contest. She was especially associated with Zeus; but his daughter was the only goddess with whom she was actually identified. Thus Eur. (Ion 452 ff.): τὰν...ἐμὰν | Ἀθάναν ἱκετεύω, | ...ὦ μάκαιρα Νίκα, | μὸλε. And Aristeides, in his oration on Athena, says of her, μόνη μὲν πάντων θεῶν, ὁμοίως δὲ πασῶν, οὐκ ἐπώνυμος τῆς νίκης ἐστίν [in such epithets as νικηφόρος], ἀλλ' ὁμῶνυμος (i. p. 29). At Athens the small Ionic temple of Ἀθηνᾶ Νίκη stood on the platform of a bastion (πύργος) springing from the south wing of the Propylaea, on the right hand of one ascending to the Acropolis. The figure of the goddess, probably a work of Calamis, bore a helmet in her left hand, and in her right a pomegranate (σίδη), her regular attribute in the Athena-cult at Sidē in Pamphylia. As Benndorf has shown (Ueber das Kultusbild der Athena Nike, Vienna, 1879), the temple probably commemorated Cimon's victory over the Persians at the mouth of the Eurymedon, near Sidē (466 B.C.). This Ἀθηνᾶ Νίκη was the figure which at Athens came to be popularly known as the Wingless Victory, Νίκη Ἀπτερος. Wings were the distinctive attribute of Νίκη in art: and Athenians were familiar with the winged Νίκη which the chryselephantine Athena of Pheidias, in the Parthenon, held in her outstretched right hand (cp. Ar. Av. 574).

Now I will go to the ship, having left this charge with thee; and may speeding Hermes, the lord of stratagem, lead us on, and Victory, even Athena Polias, who saves me ever!

CHORUS.

A stranger in a strange land, what am I to hide, what^{1st} am I to speak, O Master, before a man who will be swift to^{strophe.} think evil? Be thou my guide: his skill excels all other skill, μ' MSS., and so Blaydes (reading in 150 μέλον πάλαι μοι σὺ λέγεις, ἀναξ, τὸ σὸν). Bergk reads δέσποτ' (omitting με before it), and in 150 μέλον πάλαι μοι λέγεις, ἀναξ, τὸ σὸν.

The conception of 'Ἀθηνᾶ Νίκη was not exclusively Athenian. Thus Pausanias saw at Megara ἱερὸν 'Ἀθηνᾶς...καλομένης Νίκης (1. 42. 4).

The same remark applies to the name Πολιάς. At Athens it denoted Athena as guardian of citadel, city, and land. Athena Polias was represented by the old βρέτας of olive-wood in the Erechtheum. But she bore the title Πολιάς in many other places also, especially in the Ionic cities of Asia Minor,—as at Erythrae, Prienè, Teos, Phocaea (Paus. 7. 5. 3, 4: 2. 31. 9). Equivalent titles were Πολιάτις, Πολιούχος, and (in a case noticed by Leake, Morea, II. p. 80) Ἀγροκόλις. Cp. Aristides 1. p. 21: καὶ εἰσὶν αἱ πόλεις δῶρα 'Ἀθηνᾶς· ὅθεν δὴ καὶ Πολιούχος ἅπασιν κέκληται. Thus Sophocles, though writing for Athenians, is not making purely local allusions.—ἡ σφίλει μ' αἶε: as in the Odyssey. In Ai. 14 he calls her φιλότατης ἐμοὶ θεῶν.

135—218 Parodos. For the metres see Metrical Analysis. The framework is as follows. (1) 1st strophe 135—143 = 1st antistrophe 150—158. (2) 2nd str. 169—179 = 2nd antistr. 180—190. (3) 3rd str. 201—209 = 3rd antistr. 210—218. An anapaestic system (σύστημα) of six verses (144—149) follows the 1st strophe; another, of ten verses (159—168) follows the 1st antistrophe; and a third, also of ten (191—200), follows the 2nd antistrophe. With respect to the manner in which the anapaests are interspersed with the lyrics, we may compare the Parodos of the O. C. (where see n. on 117),—the play which is probably nearest in date to the Philoctetes, both being among the poet's latest works. On the other hand, in the Parodos of the Antigone (an early play), there is a stricter symmetry between the anapaestic systems (see n. there on 100).

The Chorus consists of 15 men belonging to the ship of Neoptolemus, who is their prince and their 'captain' (ναυκράτωρ, 1072). As he is so youthful (παῖς, ib.), they can address him as τέκνον (141), παῖ (201). It does not follow that they were actually γέροντες, as the author of the prose Argument (p. 4) calls them.

This ode is well fitted for its place at the opening of the play. In the prologue Neoptolemus has been the pupil of a crafty veteran; now he is the young leader to whom the sailors look for guidance. Hitherto the foremost topic has been the importance of capturing Philoctetes; here our thoughts are turned to his sufferings. And so, when the ode closes, the mind has been prepared for the coming conflict of motives.

135 ε. ἐν ξένῳ ξένον: cp. 685 n.: O. C. 184 ξείνος ἐπὶ ξένῳ.—στέγειν...λέγειν: for the likeness of form in the words (παρονομασία), combined with likeness of sound (παρομοίωσις), cp. Isocr. or. 4 § 186 φήμην δὲ καὶ μνήμην.—ὑπόπταν: the subst. expresses a fixed habit of mind more forcibly than ὑποπτον would have done: cp. Thuc. 6. 60 ὁ δῆμος...χαλεπὸς ἦν τότε καὶ ὑπόπτῃς ἐς τοὺς περὶ τῶν μυστικῶν τὴν αἰτίαν λαβόντας. Xen. Eq. 3. 9 τοὺς...ὑπόπτῃς φύσει (ἵππους), naturally shy. The Chorus, now entering the orchestra for the first time, cannot be conceived as thinking of what Od. has said (70 ff.): but they know how Philoctetes has been treated, and may naturally expect him to be 'shy' of Greek strangers.

140 ἀνάσσεται] L has ἀνά :: 'σσεται (sic). Dübner reports the 1st hand as having written ἀναναν. σσεται, with a letter, which was not α, erased between ν and σ. A reference to the autotype facsimile (p. 81 B, l. 5) will show that this interpretation of the lacuna is at least very doubtful.—Seyffert conj. ἀτσεται, Blaydes ἐρσεται. 141 σὲ δ' L, from σὲ δ'

As dist. from τέχνη—the art of ruling—γνώμη here is intellectual power generally. The latter would not be separately ascribed to the king, if we adopted γνώμας, which is thus the weaker reading.—παρ' ὧτ': in whose keeping. The anteced. is ἐκείνου understood: cp. 956: O. C. 1388 κτανεῖν θ' ὑφ' οὐπερ ἐξελέλθασαι: Aí. 1050 δοκοῦντ' ἐμοί, δοκοῦντα δ', δς κραινει στρατοῦ.—τὸ θεῖον Διὸς σκῆπτρον, the godlike Zeus-sceptre, i.e., sceptre derived from Zeus (gen. of source), διόσδοτον.—ἀνάσσεται implies ἀνάσσω σκῆπτρον (an almost adverbial cogn. acc.), as='to rule with sceptre': cp. O. C. 449 σκῆπτρα κραινειν, to have sceptred sway.—The tone here is genuinely Homeric. Cp. Il. 9. 98 λαῶν ἐσσι ἀναξ καὶ τοι Ζεὺς ἐγγυάλιξεν | σκῆπτρόν τ' ἠδὲ θέμιστας, ἵνα φρίσι βουλεύεσθαι.

141 f. σὲ...ἐλήλυθεν, hath come to thee. There is perhaps no other example of the simple ἐρχομαι with acc. of person: but there is an exact parallel in the rare use of βαίνω with acc. of person, Eur. Hípp. 1371 καὶ νῦν ὁδύνα μ' ὁδύνα βαίνειν. It is doubtless more than a mere coincidence that both these instances are lyric; and that a lyric boldness was felt in them may be inferred from the parody in Ar. Nub. 30, ἀτὰρ τί χρεὼς ἔβα με; If σὲ δ'...ἐλήλυθεν occurred in an iambic trimeter, the case for σοὶ δ' would be strong: but here, in lyrics, we should keep σὲ δ'.—We cannot properly compare κνείσθαι, or κνάνειν, after which an acc. of pers. was common.

πᾶν κράτος, complete (i.e. sovereign) power. Distinguish the phrase with the art., Her. 6. 35, εἶχε μὲν τὸ πᾶν κράτος Πεισιστράτος, which gives the same meaning in a slightly different way ('the whole power').—ὠγύγιον, predicate with ἐλήλυθεν, 'from of old, i.e., 'from thine ancestors': for ὠγύγιον, see O. C. 1770 n.

τὸ, 'therefore': Il. 3. 176 ἀλλὰ τὰδ' οὐκ ἐγένοντο· τὸ καὶ κλαίονσα τέτηκα. So, in Attic, ταῦτα, Xen. An. 4. 1. 21 ταῦτ' ἔσπευδον καὶ διὰ τοῦτο οὐχ ὑπέμενον: esp. ταῦτ' ἄρα, Ar. Nub. 319, etc.—For the like use of τῷ, cp. O. T. 511 n.

144 f. The Chorus has asked, How are we to help? He replies, in effect, 'The moment for you to help has not come yet. Meanwhile you can approach, and look at the cave. When Philoctetes returns, then you must be guided by the signs that I shall give you.' The Chorus are supposed to be on the shore, below the cave, and at a point from which they have not a clear view of it. Invited by Neoptolemus, they now advance nearer. The word ἀμφίθυρον (159) implies that, having approached the seaward mouth of the cave, they can see right through it; and v. 161 (ποῦ γὰρ ὁ ὀτλήμων...;) confirms this; their own eyes his counsel hath no peer, with whom is the sway of the godlike sceptre given by Zeus. And to thee, my son, that sovereign power hath descended from of old; tell me, therefore, wherein I am to serve thee.

NE. For the present,—as haply thou wouldst behold the place where he abides on ocean's verge,—survey it fearlessly: but when the dread wayfarer, who hath left this dwelling, shall return, now assure them that the cave is empty. But nothing indicates that they actually enter it.

ἐσχατιαῖς, locative dat. (O. C. 411 n.), 'in the extreme parts' of the island,—those, namely, which are on the edge of the sea. This reading, which has the best authority, is also intrinsically better than the gen. sing.: τόπον ἐσχατιάς ('region, part, of the sea-marge') would be an unusual phrase. Homer, indeed, uses only the sing. of this word: and it is very likely that Soph. was thinking of Od. 9. 182 ἐνθα δ' ἐν ἐσχατιῇ σπέος ἔδομεν ἀγχι θαλάσσης, ib. 5. 238 νῆσον ἐπ' ἐσχατιῇ, etc. But that is no reason why Soph. should not have used the plur., which was familiar in Attic (e.g. Xen. H. 2. 4. 4 τῶν ἀγρῶν... εἰς τὰς ἐσχατίας).

ὄντινα κείται, in which he is situated, abides. The verb is esp. suitable to a crippled sufferer; cp. 183: Il. 2. 721 (of Philoctetes) ἐν νήσῳ κείτο κρατέρ' ἄλγεα πάσχων. Verbs of position (as 'sitting' or 'standing') sometimes take an acc. (which may be regarded as a kind of 'cognate' acc.), denoting the place in or on which one sits, stands, etc. Aesch. Ag. 183 σέλμα... ἡμένων (on the same principle as ἔδραν ἔξομαι): Eur. Suppl. 987 τί ποτ' αἰθερίαν ἔσθηκε πέτραν; (as if one said, ἔσθηκε πετρίνην στάσιν): ib. 657 δεξιὸν τεταγμένους | κέρας (τάξιν). Poetry could say, then, τόπον... ὄντινα ἔσθηκε or τέτακται: and so also κείται. It is true that κείται τόπον is not precisely like κείται θέσιν (Thuc. 1. 37 ἡ πόλις... αὐτάρκη θέσιν κειμένη): for κείμεαι served as perf. pass. of τίθηναι (τέθειμαι being midd.), and in κείται θέσιν the acc. is therefore as strictly

'cognate' as it would be in ἐτέθη θέσιν. But the difference between κείται θέσιν and κείται τόπον is, in principle, only the same as that between ἔξομαι ἔδραν and ἔξομαι ζυγόν.

147 τῶνδ' οὐκ μελάθρων. For ἐκ I read οὐκ. Wakefield and Hermann were right in feeling that the sense required τῶνδ' ἐκ μελάθρων to be connected with ὀδίτης ('metuendus vir qui ex hoc antro abiit'), and not with μόλῃ. Then, however, the article ὁ becomes indispensable. Let it be granted that we could say, ὁρῶ ὀδίτην ἐκ τῶν μελάθρων, 'I see one leaving the abode,'—ὀδίτην having the constr. of ὀδεύω: as, in τὰς... κινήσεις τῷ σώματι (Plat. Legg. 631 c), the dat. after κινήσεις is that which might follow κινεῖσθαι. But no Greek could have written ὁπόταν μόλῃ ὀδίτης ἐκ τῶν μελάθρων in the sense, 'when he who has left the abode shall return to it,'—the movement denoted by ἐκ τῶν μελάθρων being opposite to that denoted by μόλῃ. For the order of words, τῶνδε ὁ ἐκ μελάθρων, instead of ὁ τῶνδε ἐκ μ., cp. O. T. 735 καὶ τίς χρόνος τοῖσδ' ἐστὶν οὐξ ἐληλυθώς = ὁ τοῖσδε ἐξ ἐληλυθώς. For other examples of this crasis in Soph., cp. below, 639 πνεῦμα τοῦκ πρῶρας: O. C. 1540 τοῦκ θεοῦ παρὼν: El. 731 γνοῖς δ' οὐξ Ἀθηνῶν δεινὸς ἡμιστρόφος.—With the simple ἐκ, only two versions are possible. (1) Taking ἐκ with μόλῃ: 'when he shall come forth from this abode.' But N. knows that Ph. is not now in the cave, and he cannot assume that, on returning, Ph. will enter it from the landward side, to emerge at the other. Philoctetes is, in fact, outside of the cave from his first appearance at ὁπλίτης. 148 χεῖρα προχωρῶν] Burges conj. χέρα προσχωρῶν. A ms. ascribed to the 15th cent. (B, cod. Par. 2787) has προσχωρῶν,—doubtless by a mere blunder. 150 f. L has μέλον πάλαι μέλημά μοι λέγεις ἀναξ τὸ σὸν | φρουρεῖν [from φρορεῖν] ὄμμ' ἐπὶ σῶι μάλιστα καιρῷ. So also A. Verse 150 thus exceeds v. 135 by an iambus. Hence, in v. 150, (1) Triclinius omitted τὸ σὸν: (2) Cavallin, keeping τὸ σὸν, omits ἀναξ. (3) Burges conj. μέλον πάλαι δὴ μοι λέγεις, ἀναξ, τὸ σὸν. (4) For the readings of Blaydes and Bergk, see cr. n. on 135. In v. 151 (1) Seyffert conj. φρουρεῖν ὄμματι σὸν μάλιστα καιρὸν: (2) Nauck, omitting ὄμμ', conj. τὸ φρουρεῖν ἐπὶ σῶ μάλιστα καιρῷ. (3) Burges, guided by the schol., τὰ σὰ νεύματα φυλάττειν, conj.

v. 219 up to v. 675. (2) Taking ἐκ with προχωρῶν, as referring to the Chorus: 'moving forth from this abode.' But the Chorus never enter the cave,—they only look into it: and, in any case, a gradual retreat from it (πρὸς ἐμὴν αἰεὶ χεῖρα) would be unsuitable.—Seyffert refers τῶνδ' ἐκ μελάρων to the Chorus, but does not connect it with προχωρῶν, taking ἐκ in the pregnant sense of ἔξω ὦν: i.e., 'having quitted the cave (= ἐκ), advance ever at my beck,' etc. This seems impossible.

148 πρὸς ἐμὴν αἰεὶ χεῖρα προχωρῶν, coming forward towards my (beckoning) hand,—i.e., at a sign given by me,—from time to time (αἰεὶ). This phrase is explained by the part which the Chorus actually plays in the dialogue between Philoctetes and Neoptolemus,—interposing, from time to time, with some utterance fitted to confirm the belief of Philoctetes in the story which Neoptolemus is telling (317, 391, 508, 676, etc.). προχωρῶν, because the sailors would remain at some distance from their master while he conversed with Ph., but would naturally move a step or two nearer at the moments when they offered their own remarks. Not in a fig. sense, 'directing your course of action.' πρὸς ἐμὴν ... χεῖρα, too, is literal (i.e., it does not mean simply, 'following the lead' of my words).

149 τὸ παρὸν θεραπεύειν, to provide for the need of the moment. Cp. Dem. or. 18 § 307 τοὺς ὑπὲρ τῶν ἐχθρῶν καιροὺς ἀντὶ τῶν τῆς πατρίδος θεραπεύειν. Cp. the proverb τὸ παρὸν εὖ ποιεῖν (Plat. Gorg. 499 C), 'to do the best one can.'

150 f. μέλον...μέλημα: with a certain emphasis; cp. Eur. Andr. 868 δέμω δ δειμαίνεις. The Chorus first reply to the last words of N., and then respond to his suggestion that perhaps they wish to see the abode of Ph.—The text is sound, when, with Triclinius, we have ejected τὸ σὸν (see cr. n.),—a gloss added by some one who, taking the ὄμμα to be that of N., naturally felt the want of the pos-come forward at my beck from time to time, and try to help as the moment may require.

CH. Long have I been careful of that care, my prince,—^{1st anti-strophe.} that mine eye should be watchful for thy good, before all else. And now tell me, in what manner of shelter hath he made his abode? In what region is he? 'Twere not unseasonable for me to learn, lest he surprise me from some quarter. sessive pron. The δμμα is that of the Chorus, and is the subject to φρουρεῖν: this appears certain, when we compare Tr. 225 οὐδέ μ' δμματος | φρουρὰν [φρουρὰ L] παρήλθε, 'nor hath it escaped my watchful eye.' Dindorf takes δμμ' as a sort of 'cognate' acc., 'to watch with the eye,' and compares Tr. 914 κἀγὼ λαθραῖον δμμ' ἐπεσκιασμένη | φρούρου: but there the partic. is the warrant for it.

ἐπὶ σὺ καιρῷ = lit., 'for thine occasion,' i.e., 'for the moment at which a thing can be done for thine advantage.' The use of the sing. καιρός with the possessive is rare, but is akin to a freq. use of the plur., as Isocr. or. 6 § 80 ἐν τοῖς ἡμετέροις καιροῖς (i.e. at the moments advantageous for us) ἀλλὰ μὴ τοῖς αὐτῶν ποιήσασθαι τοὺς κινδύνους. And how naturally ὁ σὸς καιρός might approximate (esp. in lyric poetry) to the sense of τὸ σὸν κέρδος, is suggested by such phrases as that in Her. 1. 206 οὐ γὰρ ἂν εἰδείης εἰ τοι ἐς καιρὸν ἔσται ταῦτα τελέόμενα, 'seasonably for thee,' = 'for thine advantage.'

152 αἰ. αὐλὰς πολίας: cp. 30. The plur. αὐλαί could denote a single chamber (Ant. 945). The Chorus are not supposed to have been present when the cave was found, and do not yet know the nature of Ph.'s quarters.—ἐνεδρος, 'resident,' is not pleonastic, since ναλεῖ can be said of a wanderer with ref. to the place that he is in at a given moment: 892: O. C. 117 n.—χῶρον τίς ἔχει, i.e., where he is now: cp. 22, O. C. 37.—τὸ γὰρ οὐκ ἀποκ. μολ' (ἐστὶ) μαθεῖν: τό is pron. in nom. case (cp. Tr. 1172 τὸ δ' ἦν ἀρ' οὐδέν ἄλλο): μαθεῖν, expege. inf.—προσπεσὼν: 46 n.

157 εἰ τίς τόπος...θυραῖον; The iteration, and the want of coherence, are meant to mark eager anxiety.—ἔχει στίβον here = 'is planting his steps' (cp. 29), rather than, 'is following a path' (48): hence the narrow space implied by ἐναυλον is no objection. But with Wakefield's τίς ἔχει στίβος the sense 'path' would be unavoidable.

159 αἰ. οἶκον...κόλτης, a home consisting in a rocky sleeping-place (defining gen.: cp. 81 n.).—ἀμφιδυρον: cp. 16.—The μὲν implies, 'but where he is, I know not.' The Chorus then say, ποῦ γὰρ...; i.e., (you surprise me;) for (if he is not here) where can he be?

162 εἰ φορβῆς: cp. 43.—ὄγμευε, ὄγμος, from ῥτ. ἀγ of ὄγω (cp. agmen), is prop. any line drawn out by movement; then, esp., a furrow in ploughing (Il. 18. 546, Theocr. 10. 2); or the track ('swathe') made by reapers through corn.

163 τόνδε MSS.: except that Γ (13th cent.) has τῇδε. Blaydes conj. τῇδε.
 166 στυγερὸν στυγερῶς MSS.: Brunn conj. συμυγερὸν συμυγερῶς. Benedict omits the words, and thus (having omitted also vv. 159—161) makes the anapaestic system, 162—168, equal to that in 144—149. 167 αὐτῷ γ: αὐτῷ L. The words οὐδέ τιν' αὐτῷ are bracketed by Herm. They are absent from one of the later MSS. (R, 14th cent.). 168 ἐπινωμᾶν] Burges conj. πόδα νωμᾶν. 170 μὴ του κηδομένου made from μῆ

Here the image is from ploughing; the furrow which the ploughman leaves behind him is compared to the track left by the helpless foot which Philoctetes drags after him. Cp. 291 ἐλλύμην, δύσ-τηνον ἐξέλικον πόδα (where see n.). The word ὀγμεύει also serves to suggest the laborious character of the progress. Cp. Lucan 9. 721 (of a serpent) contentus iter cauda sulcare.—τῇδε seems a necessary correction of τόνδε, since στίβον...τόνδε would mean, 'his path yonder' (as though N. could point to it): not merely 'his path in this neighbourhood' (though invisible).

164 f. ταύτην, i.e., by making expeditions in quest of food,—referring to 162 f. Others take it to mean, 'in the following manner,'—viz., θηροβολοῦντα. This is possible (O. C. 787): but then we should expect θηροβολεῖν.—φύσιν=τρόπον.

166 στυγερὸν στυγερῶς: cp. 1369 κακῶς...κακοῖς: O. T. 479 μέλεος μελέῳ ποδὶ χηρεῦων. Tragedy applies στυγερῶς, in the sense of 'wretched,' not only to things (Tr. 1016 βλου...τοῦ στυγεροῦ), but also to persons, as Ant. 144 τοῖν στυγεροῖν (the sons of Oed.: where see n.). Almost all recent editors, however, have received Brunn's conjecture, συμυγερὸν συμυγερῶς, i.e., 'with painful toil.' At first sight, this is favoured by the schol. here, ἐπιμόνως, which can scarcely be explained as meaning 'with grim resolve,' and ought doubtless to be ἐπιπόνως. Now, as Brunn points out, Hesych. has συμυγερὸν, ἐπίπονον, οἰκτρὸν, μοχθηρόν συμυγερῶς, ἐπιπόνως. So Eustath. p. 1463 ἐστὶ δὲ συμυγερῶς, τὸ ἐπιπόνως, ὀδυνηρῶς. Yet the following considerations make me hesitate to forsake the MSS. (1) Is it so clear that, in this context, the schol. could not have used ἐπιπόνως to explain στυγερῶς, seeing that the notions of πόνος and 'wretchedness' are often so near to each other, esp. in poetry? (2) Apollonius Rhodius seems to be the earliest extant writer who uses συμυγερῶς: 2. 374 συμυγερῶτατοι ἀνδρῶν ('most laborious'); 4. 380 συμυγερῶς, 'painfully.' Homer has only ἐπισμυγερῶς: Hesiod has ἐπισμυγερῶς. On

NE. I doubt not but he is trailing his painful steps somewhere near this spot, in quest of food. For rumour saith that in this fashion he lives, seeking prey with his winged shafts, all-wretched that he is; and no healer of his woe draws nigh unto him.

CH. I pity him, to think how, with no man to care for him, and seeing no companion's face, suffering, lonely evermore, he is vexed by fierce disease, and bewildered by each want as it arises. How, how doth he endure in his misery? Alas, the dark dealings of the gods!

τοῦς κηδομένοισι L. 171 μὴ σύντροφον L.: μὴδὲ σύντροφον r. Brunck conj. μὴδὲ ξύντροφον: Pauli, μὴδ' ἐς σύντροφον: Wecklein, μὴδὲν σύντροφον: Cavallin, μὴ του σύντροφον. 172 atē Triclinius: del L, with A and most of the other MSS. 174 ἐπὶ παντὶ τῷ] Aristeides (i. p. 61) loosely quotes these words as ἐπὶ ἅπαντι τῷ (sic). 177 *θεῶν Lachmann: θνητῶν MSS.

the other hand, the form μογερός is used five times by Aesch., thrice by Eur., once by Soph. (El. 93), and once by Ar.; but συμγερός never.

168 ἐπινομᾶν, intrans., 'direct his course towards,' 'approach': cp. 717, where προσενώμα also seems to be intrans., 'bent his course towards' the water. This intrans. use must come from the trans. sense of νωμάω 'to ply' the limbs, or 'guide' a chariot, etc., as Il. 10. 358 γούνατα νωμᾶν: O. T. 468 πόδα νωμᾶν: Pind. P. 4. 18 δίφρου τε νωμάσοισιν: we must mentally supply πόδα, ὁδόν, or the like. Apart from the two instances in this play, there appears to be no sound example of an intrans. νωμάω. See Appendix.

169 οἰκτῶ, the spelling attested by Attic inscriptions (O. T. 13 n.).—δπως, '(thinking) how': cp. Ai. 510 οἰκτιρε δ', ὦναξ, παῖδα τὸν σόν, ... ὅσον κακὸν κείνῳ τε κάμοι τοῦθ', δταν θάνης, νεμεῖς.

170 ε. μὴ του. The force of μὴ (as dist. from οὐ) is here 'generic,' i.e., it presents the situation as typical of a class; 'in a case where there is none to tend': and this implies the cause of pity, 'seeing that there is none to tend.' Cp. 256, 715: O. T. 397 n.—μὴδὲ seems better than any of the proposed corrections (see cr. n.): and for μὴ του κηδομένου..., μὴδὲ ἔχων, cp. O. C. 737 οὐκ ἐξ ἐνὸς στελλαντος, ἀλλ' ἀστὼν ὑπο | πάντων κελευσθῆς, n.: Tr. 291 νῦν σοι τέρψις ἐμφανῆς κυρεῖ, | τῶν μὲν παρόντων, τὰ δὲ πεπνυμένῃ λόγῳ.—The second syllable of the verse might be short (see Metr. Anal.), and therefore σύντροφον could stand. But, as there is no other instance of that syllable being shortened in this strophe or antistrophe, Brunck's ξύντροφον is better, and is received by Heinrich Schmidt (Compositionslehre, p. clxii.).—ξυντρ. δμμ', the face of a man who lives with one; cp. Ai. 977 ὦ φίλτατ' Ἀλας, ὦ ξύναιμον δμμ' ἐμοί.

174 ε. ἀλῦει, properly, 'wanders in mind'; hence, here, of despairing perplexity, cp. 1194. This use of the word might be illustrated by Alexis Κυβερνήτης 13 εἰθ' οἱ μὲν εὐποροῦμεν, οἱ δ' ἀλῦομεν, 'some of us are rich, while others are at their wits' ends.'—παντὶ τῷ χρεῖας = each item or article of need, i.e., each new form in which need besets him. Cp. n. on Ani. 1229 ἐν τῷ (=τίνι) συμφορᾶς. ἱσταμένῳ = ὅτε ἱσταται, as it arises. Cp. 1263: Il. 21. 240 κυκόμενον ἱστατο κύμα.

177 ὁ παλάμαι *θεῶν: the 'devices' of the gods are their mysterious dispensations, which can bring such misery on a man who was once fortunate. Cp. Pind. P. 1. 48 εὐρίσκοντο θεῶν παλάμαι τιμάν. I have accepted Lachmann's conjecture here, θεῶν for θνητῶν, because (1) there is a prima facie case for a short penult., answering to that of ἀθυρόστομος (188); and (2) θνητῶν, so closely followed by βροτῶν, is very awkward, while θεῶν not only gives a forcible contrast with βροτῶν, but suggests a thought well suited to the solemn pathos. Hermann defends θνητῶν at the cost of reading ἀθυρόγλωστος in 188. Heinrich Schmidt also keeps it, but retains ἀθυρόστομος in 188, on the ground that, in this logaoedic measure, the 'irrational syllable' is admissible in the choree (αἰ θνητ). A probably authentic example is δειῶν in 218 (=θροεῖ in 209). παλάμαι θνητῶν, if sound, would mean, 'the resources of men' (as shown by Philoctetes): so Theognis 623 παντοῖα κακότητες ἐν ἀνθρώποισιν ἔασιν, | παντοῖα δ' ἀρεταὶ καὶ βιότου παλάμαι. Cp. the praise of man as παντοπόρος in Ant. 360. Not, 'the (wicked) devices of men,' as seen in the hero's enemies.

178 γένη, 'races,' in the narrower sense of 'houses' or 'families,' such as the princely house to which Philoctetes belonged: cp. Od. 15. 533 ὑμετέρου δ' οὐκ ἔστι γένος βασιλεύτερον ἄλλο. Not 'generations,' γενεαὶ (O. T. 1186): nor, again, 'sons of men,'—a sense which could not be justified by the bold phrase in Ant. 784, Τέκμησσα, δύσμορον γένος. In Her. 3. 159 read ἵνα σφί γενεῇ (not γένεα) ὑπογίγηται.

179 οἷς μὴ μέτριος αἰών. αἰών here = not 'life' merely (as Ant. 583), but 'fortune in life,' as Tr. 34 τοιοῦτος αἰὼν εἰς δόμους τε καὶ δόμῳν | αἰεὶ τὸν ἀνδρ' ἔπεμπε. μὴ ('generic,' 170) μέτριος, 'such as to exceed the ordinary lot,'—in prosperity, and afterwards in misery. The more highly placed a man is, the greater may be his fall. Cp. 505 f.: O. T. 1186 ff., 1282 ff. (the reverses of Oed.): Ant. 1161 ff. (those of Creon). Aesch. Eum. 528 παντὶ μέσῳ τὸ κράτος θεὸς ὥπασεν. Eur. Med. 123 ἐμοὶ γοῦν ἐπὶ μὴ μεγάλοις | ὀχυρῶς εἴη καταγῆράσκειν. | τῶν γὰρ μετρίων πρῶτα μὲν εἰπεῖν | τοῦνομα νικᾷ: where it is added that 'excess of good fortune' (τὰ ὑπερβάλλοντα) 'brings greater calamities on houses, when the god is wroth,' μέλινος δ' αἶτας, δταν ὀργισθῇ | δαίμων, οἴκους ἀπέδωκεν. Her. 7. 10 φιλέει γὰρ ὁ θεὸς τὰ ὑπερέχοντα πάντα κολοῦεν.—Others take μὴ μέτριος as, 'exceeding the ordinary measure of woe.' Cp. Eur. Tr. 717 οὐ γὰρ μέτρια πάσχομεν κακά. I prefer the former view, because (a) the sense of γένη suggests the greatness that precedes the abasement; and (b) vv. 180 ff., which comment on οἷς μὴ μέτριος αἰών, show that these words suggested a contrast between Ph.'s past and present fortunes.

180 ε. πρωτογόνων: schol. εὐγενῶν. Elsewhere πρωτόγονος always = 'first-born.' But as ἀρχαῖογονος can mean 'of ancient race' (Ant. 981), so πρωτόγονος 'of foremost race.' Cp. Thuc. 3. 65 ἄνδρες ὑμῶν οἱ πρῶτοι καὶ χρήμασι καὶ γένει.—ἴσως does not imply a doubt as to whether Philoctetes is of noble birth, but merely gives a certain vagueness to the surmise that no one else was nobler. Yet Nauck (following Burges) changes ἴσως to γεγῶς because the Chorus must have known the hero to be noble. Cp. Tr. 301 (Deianeira is pitying the captives sent to her by Heracles), αἱ πρὶν μὲν ἦσαν ἐξ ἐλευθέρων ἴσως | ἀνδρῶν: where ἴσως does not mean that she doubts their former freedom, but merely that she does not know their fathers' names. Cp. πον in Thuc. 7. 77 (Nicias speaking of him-

Alas, hapless races of men, whose destiny exceeds due measure!

This man,—noble, perchance, as any scion of the noblest ^{2nd anti-}house,—reft of all life's gifts, lies lonely, apart from his fellows, ^{strophe.} with the dappled or shaggy beasts of the field, piteous alike in his torments and his hunger, bearing anguish that finds no cure; self), οὐτ' εὐτυχία δοκῶν που ὑπερὸς του εἶναι. So we sometimes guard a statement by saying, 'perhaps' the greatest, etc.

182 ἐν βίῳ] Blaydes conj. ἐς βίον.

184 μετὰ] μέτα L. To avoid the short syll. at the end of the v., Herm. wrote θηρῶν ἢ λασίων μέτ' ἢ | στικτῶν (doubting whether metai was permissible). Burges conj. μετ' ὦν: Meineke, μέσφ: Lehrs, πέλας. 186 α. L has: λιμῶν τ' οἰκτρὸς ἀνήμερος μερίμνηματ' ἔχων βαρεῖαδ' (sic) ἀθυρόστομος | ἀχῶ τῆλεφανῆς πικρᾶσ | οἰμωγᾶσ ὑπὸκειται. The point after ἔχων is faint, and not, apparently, from the first hand. The later MSS. agree with L, except that Vat. b (cod. Urb. 141, 14th cent.) has βαρεῖ | ἀ δ'.—For the conjectures, see comment. and Appendix.

οὐδενὸς sc. ἀνδρός. οὐδεὶς οἶκων πρωτογόνων could mean either (a) no house of those houses, or (b) no man belonging to them; cp. Plat. Prot. 316 B 'Ἀπολλοδώρου νόος, οἰκίας μεγάλης: O. T. 336 n. Here it is possible, indeed, to supply οἶκων ('a man inferior to no house, i.e., 'to no member of a house'). But in compressed Greek comparison the type τὸ ἐκείνου γένος οὐχ ὑστερὸν ἐστὶ τῶν βασιλείων (sc. τοῦ γένους), is commoner than ἐκείνος (for τὸ ἐκείνου γένος) οὐχ ὑστερὸς ἐστὶ τοῦ τῶν βασιλείων γένους,—which latter would be the type here. Further, the fact that οὐδενὸς (οἶκων) depends on οἶκων would increase the awkwardness. The reading ἦκων for οἶκων is specious; cp. Αἰ. 636 ὅς ἐκ πατρίδας ἦκων γενεᾶς <ἀριστος>: though ἀριστος is there doubtful. But οἶκων is confirmed (a) by Eur. Ion 1073 ἀ τῶν εὐπατριδῶν γεγῶσ' οἶκων: and (b) by the bold use of πρωτογόνων, which οἶκων helps to interpret.—οὐδενὸς ὑστερος, as Plat. Tim. p. 20 A οὐσία καὶ γένει οὐδενὸς ὑστερος ὦν τῶν ἐκεῖ.

182 ἐν βίῳ belongs to ἀμφορος (destitute, in his life, of all things): it cannot go with πάντων, as if we had πάντων τῶν ἐν βίῳ: but the sense is virtually the same.

183 α. μόνος ἀπ' ἄλλων, alone, apart from his fellows: an epic phrase; Hymn. Hom. 3. 193 ὁ δὲ ταῦρος ἐβόσκειτο μόνος ἀπ' ἄλλων: cp. Od. 16. 239 μόνῳ ἀνθεῖ' ἄλλων.—στικτῶν (the epithet of an εἰλαφος in El. 568, and of νεβρίδες in Eur. Bacch. 111) naturally suggests deer, and, acc. to one interpretation, is meant here to denote the class of 'peaceful animals,' as dist. from λασίων, beasts of prey. The latter epithet, it might be objected, could equally well suggest goats and sheep. Another and stranger view is that στικτῶν means birds (pictae volucres), as dist. from beasts. Obviously the poet used the epithets simply in order to call up a general picture of creatures that haunt the wilds; he was not carefully classifying them. Cp. 937.—μετὰ. The last syllable of a verse is of variable value (ἀδιάφορος, anceps); i.e., a short may stand for a long, as here, or vice versa. Cp. Heinrich Schmidt, Rhythmic and Metric, p. 58, who cites Aesch. Ag. 1531 εὐπάλαμον μερίμναν | ὅπα κ.τ.λ.: the -αν there serves as -αν. So 188 (ἀθυρόστομος), 1089 (ἄμαρ), 1104 (ὑστερον), 1110 (χερσίν), etc. It is needless, then, to alter μετὰ.—ἐν τ' ὀδύναις = ἐν ὀδύναις τε (cp. O. T. 258 n.): for this ἐν of circumstance, id. 1112 ἐν...μακρῷ | γήρα, n.

187 α. *ὀρεῖα δ', S. Mekler's correction of βαρεῖα δ', occurs in his revision of Dindorf (6th Teubner ed., 1885), where it is placed in the text. But, so far as I know, the arguments for it have not yet been stated. It is one of those emendations, the probability of which cannot be adequately estimated at a first glance, but must be carefully considered in relation to the peculiarities of the MS. (1) We observe, then, that L has βαρεῖαδ' ἀθυρόστομος. This favours the view that v. 188 began with ἀ δ' rather than ἀ δ'. But, as metre proves, that α must have been \bar{a} , not \check{a} : and this points to an ending $-\epsilon\bar{i}\bar{a}$, as in $\delta\rho\epsilon\bar{i}\bar{a}$. (2) Some corruptions in L, as in other MSS., have arisen through the genuine word being mistaken for one resembling it in form; as $\acute{\alpha}\chi\omicron\varsigma$ has become $\acute{\alpha}\chi\theta\omicron\varsigma$ in O. T. 1355. And this could occur even when the initial of the false word did not belong to the true word. See Tr. 887 $\sigma\tau\omicron\nu\delta\epsilon\nu\tau\omicron\varsigma$ ἐν τομῇ σιδάρου. For τομῇ, L there has $\sigma\tau\omicron\mu\alpha\acute{\iota}$: and this, not merely through the influence of $\sigma\tau\omicron\nu\delta\epsilon\nu\tau\omicron\varsigma$, but, evidently, because the scribe was thinking of $\sigma\tau\acute{o}\mu\alpha$. Thus, even without assuming an intermediate $\delta\rho\epsilon\bar{i}\bar{a}$ or $\delta\rho\epsilon\bar{i}\bar{\iota}\bar{a}$, we see that $\beta\alpha\rho\epsilon\bar{i}\bar{a}$ was a possible corruption of $\delta\rho\epsilon\bar{i}\bar{a}$. Note, as increasing the probability, that v. 208, $\beta\alpha\rho\epsilon\bar{i}\bar{a}$ τηλόθεν αὐδά, stands in L in the middle of the same page (82 A) which contains this verse. (3) $\delta\rho\epsilon\bar{i}\bar{a}$, as an epithet for Echo here, is illustrated by the only other place in the play where such echo is spoken of: 1458 πολλὰ δὲ φωνῆς τῆς ἡμετέρας | Ἑρμαῖον δρος παρέπεμψεν ἐμοί. The $\theta\eta\eta\epsilon\varsigma$ have just been mentioned (185); and at 937 we have $\theta\eta\rho\omega\bar{\nu}$ $\delta\rho\epsilon\bar{i}\bar{\omega}\bar{\nu}$. Cp. Ηγμν. Hom. 19. 21 κορυφὴν δὲ περιστένει οὐρεὸς ἡχῶ. Echo is the 'neighbour' of Pan (Moschus 6. 1), himself $\delta\rho\epsilon\sigma\sigma\iota\beta\acute{\alpha}\tau\eta\varsigma$ (O. T. 1100).—For other conjectures, see Appendix.

$\delta\theta\upsilon\rho\acute{o}\sigma\tau\omicron\mu\omicron\varsigma$ is not extant elsewhere. Cp. Eur. Or. 903 ἀνὴρ τις ἀθυρόγλωσσος, $\lambda\omicron\chi\acute{\upsilon}\nu\omega\bar{\nu}$ θράσει. Ar. Ran. 838 ἔχοντ' ἀχάδλων ἀκρατὲς ἀθύρων τὸ σῶμα. Theog-nis 421 πολλοῖς ἀνθρώπων γλώσση θύρα οὐκ ἐπίκεινται | ἀρμύδιαι.—Wecklein reads $\delta\theta\upsilon\rho\acute{o}\sigma\tau\omicron\mu\omicron\varsigma$ (comparing $\theta\rho\alpha\sigma\upsilon\sigma\tau\omicron\mu\epsilon\bar{\iota}\nu$, $\pi\omicron\lambda\upsilon\sigma\tau\omicron\mu\epsilon\bar{\iota}\nu$), for the sake of the long final syll.: but see on $\mu\epsilon\tau\grave{\alpha}$ in 184.

189 f. Ἀχὼ τηλεφανῆς, Echo, appearing afar,—as if she came forth from her secret abode in response to the voice. Eur. introduced Echo as an (unseen) speaker in his Andromeda; cp. Ar. Th. 1059 ff. (Ἥχῶ, λόγων ἀντὶδός, ἐπικοκκάστρια 'mockers'). But she was not, in the classical age, a distinctly recognised $\delta\alpha\bar{i}\mu\omega\bar{\nu}$: though Paus. (2. 35. 10) saw at Corinth a $\iota\epsilon\rho\acute{o}\nu$ of ἡ $\chi\theta\omicron\nu\bar{i}\alpha$, locally called Ἥχῶ. Cp. Wieseler, Die Nymphe Echo (Göttingen, 1854).

while the mountain nymph, babbling Echo, appearing afar, makes answer to his bitter cries.

NE. Nought of this is a marvel to me. needful. For ὑπακούει, cp. Od. 4. 283 (Helen was calling to the heroes in the wooden horse; they were eager) ἡ ἐξεληθέμεναι, ἡ ἐνδοθεν αἰψ' ὑπακούουσα, 'to come forth, or to answer promptly from within.' And ib. 10. 82 ποιμένα ποιμήν | ἡ πύει εἰσελάων, ὁ δέ τ' ἐξελάων ὑπακούει, 'herdsman hails herdsman as he drives in, and the other, as he drives forth, makes answer.' In classical prose, ὑπακούει more often means to 'respond' in the sense of 'comply.' But the passages just cited prove that the word was also familiar as 'to speak in reply': nor was this latter sense confined to poetry; cp. Arist. Top. 8. 11 (Berl. ed. p. 157 b 14) ἐρωτώμενοι τάναντία καὶ τὸ ἐν ἀρχῇ πολλάκις ὑπακούουσιν, = ἀποκρίνονται (the word used previously in the same passage).—Other emendations of ὑπόκειται are examined in the Appendix.

192 π. θεῖα, predicate, 'from the gods': cp. 1039, 1326.—καὶ γὰρ, I also (as well as others): the καὶ gives a modest tone; Ant. 719 n.—καὶ τὰ παθήμ. κείνα. The MSS. have παθήματ' ἐκείνα. Such an omission of the regular anapaestic caesura is not very rare (cp. 1445, 1470), but is improbable here, where κείνα was equally available. The καὶ here = 'e'en': its force is to mark that, from the very beginning, his troubles were heaven-ordained. This seems better than to take it as 'both,' answering to the καὶ νῦν in 195.—τῆς ὠμόφρ. Χρύσης, gen. of source, with ἐπίβη. Such a simple gen. usu. denotes the place whence (O. T. 152 Πυθῶνος ἐξας), but the idea of 'source' could easily be connected with a person also; cp. O. C. 1515 στράψαντα χεῖρὸς τῆς ἀνικήτου βέλη. It is also possible to join παθήματα...Χρύσης as 'sufferings inflicted by her': cp. 422 τὰ κείνων κακά, n.: but (a) the order of words renders this less natural: and (b) a gen. after πάθημα ought to denote the sufferer.—Philoctetes was bitten by a serpent that guarded the altar of the nymph Chrysè, in the islet of the same name, near Lemnos: cp. 1326.—ὠμόφρονος, as cruelly punishing his intrusion. The Iliad (2. 723) speaks of him as ἔλκει μοχλίζοντα κακῶ ὀλοόφρονος ὕδρου. The relation of Chrysè to the gods is like that of Calypso in the Odyssey. The Nymph can work her will on the mortal; but only so far as the higher powers permit.

196 οὐκ ἔσθ' ὥς οὐ, sc. πονεῖ: for ὥς instead of the usual ὅπως, cp. Ant. 750 ταύτην ποτ' οὐκ ἔσθ' ὥς ἐτι ζῶσαν γαμείς. This shows that we ought not to read οὐκ ἔστιν ὅπως οὐ θεῶν μελέτη (omitting του).

197 ε. τοῦ μὴ...τεῖναι, 'in order that he should not bend...' τοῦ μὴ is not to be taken with μελέτη ('care to prevent his bending'), but with the whole preceding sentence. This constr. occurs (a) after words of hindering, Xen. An. 3. 5. 11 πᾶς...ἀσκὸς δύο ἀνδρας ἐξει τοῦ μὴ καταδύναι: (b) where the notion of hindering is not expressed, but only implied, as Thuc. 1. 23 τὰς αἰτίας προέγραφα..., τοῦ μὴ τινα ζητήσαι ποτε ἐξ ὅτου τοσοῦτος πόλεμος...κατέστη. Id. 2. 22 ἐκκλησίαν οὐκ ἐποίη..., τοῦ μὴ ὀργῇ...ἐνελθόντας ἐξαμαρτεῖν. So, in affirmative sentences, τοῦ without μὴ: id. 1. 4 τὸ τε ληστικὸν...καθήρει..., τοῦ τὰς προσόδους μᾶλλον ἰέναι αὐτῷ.—τεῖναι...βέλη, point them, like sagittas tendere (Hor. C. 1. 29. 9): we need not suppose that a word proper to the bow ('stretch') is transferred to the arrows. τὰ θεῶν, i.e., given by the gods (cp. 140 Διὸς σκῆπτρον), because the bow of Philoctetes was originally the gift of Apollo to Heracles (Apollod. 1. 4. 11 § 9). Cp. 943.

199 f. πρὶν...ἐξήκοι, not πρὶν ἂν ἐξήκη, although the tense of the principal verb (πονεῖ, understood in v. 196) is primary, since a secondary tense is implied in the phrase θεῶν του μελέτη: i.e., 'he is suffering, because the gods ordained that he should suffer, until the time should be fulfilled,' etc. Cp. Dem. or. 22 § 11 τοῦτον ἔχει τὸν τρόπον ὁ νόμος...ἵνα μηδὲ πεισθῆναι μηδ' ἐξαπατηθῆναι γένοιτ' ἐπὶ τῷ δήμῳ: 'the law stands thus, that the people might not even have the power': where 'stands' (ἔχει) implies 'was made' (ἐτέθη). γένηται would be regular there, as πρὶν ἂν ἐξήκη would be here: yet in both places the optat. is natural. The speaker is tracing a present fact to a past motive.—λέγεται: the Trojan seer Helenus had said that Troy was to be taken by Philoctetes before the summer was over (1340).—τῶνδε, τῶν βελῶν: cp. on τούσδε, 87.

203 σύντροφος, sharing his life, i.e., constantly attending on him, habitual to him: cp. Αἰ. 639 οὐκέτι συντρόφους | ὀργαῖς ἐμπεδος, the dispositions that have grown with his growth,—the promptings of his own nature. Thuc. 2. 50 (the plague) ἐδήλωσε...ἄλλο τι ὃν ἡ τῶν ξυντρόφων τι (the familial maladies). Polyb. 4. 20 (τὴν μουσικὴν σύντροφον ποιεῖν). The genit. (φωτὸς), though less usual than the dat., hardly requires us to view σύντροφος as a subst. ('companion'): cp. Plat. Phaed. 96 D τὰ αὐτῶν οἰκεία, the things appropriate to them.

204 f. ἥ που: cp. 215. Cavallin reads ἥ που with a note of interrogation after τόπων: but they do not doubt that it comes from one of the two quarters. τῇδ'...τῇδε: O. T. 857 n. The Attic form seems warranted by the colloquial tone; then, with ἐτύμα, we return to lyric Doricism. τόπων with τῇδε: O. T. 108 ποῦ γῆς;—βάλλει: the fuller phrase till the time be fulfilled when, as men say, Troy is fated by those shafts to fall.

CH. Hush, peace, my son! NE. What now? CH. A ^{3rd} sound rose on the air, such as might haunt the lips of a man in weary pain.—From this point it came, I think,—or this.—It smites, it smites indeed upon my ear—the voice of one who creeps painfully on his way; I cannot mistake that grievous cry of human anguish from afar,—its accents are too clear.

Then turn thee, O my son— NE. Say, whither?— CH. — ^{3rd anti-} to new counsels; for the man is not far off, but near; ^{strophe.}

ἐτύμα 1: ἐτοίμα L. Seyffert, ἐτυμ' á. Nauck, guided by L's reading, gives μέτοι (instead of ἐτύμα) here, and in 214 ἀγρότας instead of ἀγροβάτας. 206 στίβου L, with A and most of the later MSS.: but a few have στίβον, as Γ and V². 207 λάθει L: λήθει 1. 209 γάρ θροεῖ MSS., except those which (like T) have the reading of Triclinius, θροεῖ γάρ. Dindorf conj. γάρ θρηνεῖ (= 218 γάρ δεινόν). Cp. 218 n. 212 ἀνῆρ] ἀνὴρ L.

in Ant. 1187 καὶ με φθόγγος... | βάλλει δι' ὤτων. So βάλλω, simply, of smell, ib. 412. —ἐτύμα, real,—not due to a hallucination of the senses. Cp. Theocr. 15. 82 (with ref. to painted figures), ὡς ἐτυμ' ἐστάκαντι καὶ ὡς ἐτυμ' ἐνδινεύντι ('move in the dance'), | ἐμψυχ', οὐκ ἐνυφαντά. Elsewhere the Attic fem. is ἐτυμος (Eur. Helen. 351, Ar. Pax 114).

206 στίβον... ἐρποντος: cp. 1223: Αἰ. 287 ἐξόδους ἐρπειν κενάς.—κατ' ἀνάγκαν, i.e., under stress of pain: cp. 215 πταίων ὑπ' ἀνάγκας. Eur. Bacch. 88 ἐν ὤδων | λοχλαῖς ἀνάγκαισι.—The reading στίβου κατ' ἀνάγκαν would mean, 'with painfulness of movement,' στίβου being then the act of planting the steps (cp. 20, 157). This is tenable; but I prefer στίβον, because (a) the phrase with στίβου seems a little forced, and (b) with the gen. του... ἐρποντος the effect of an interposed gen. would be somewhat displeasing.

207 π. οὐδέ με λάθει: this reiteration is natural, since the sound continues, and draws nearer. For the negative form after the positive, cp. El. 222 ἔξιδ', οὐ λάθει μ' ὀργά, and ib. 131: Il. 24. 563 καὶ δέ σε γινώσκω, Πρίαμε, φρεσίν, οὐδέ με λήθεις.—βαρεία, grievous, i.e., expressing pain; so Eur. Hipp. 791 ἡχώ βαρεία. τρυσάνωρ should properly be active, 'man-wearing,' like φθισήνωρ, 'man-destroying' (epith. of πόλεμος, Il. 2. 833). And so some understand αὐδὰ τρυσάνωρ as = a lament for a disease that wears one: cp. on 695 f. στόνον... βαρυβρῶτ'. This, however, seems very strained. More probably the poet has boldly used αὐδὰ τρυσάνωρ as = αὐδὰ ἀνδρὸς τετρυμένον, like αἷμα ἀνδρόφθορον for αἷμα ἀνδρὸς ἐφθαρμένον (Ant. 1022), κτύπος διόβολος for κτύπος δίου βέλους (O. C. 1463). Cp. Ar. Nub. 421 φειδωλοῦ καὶ τρυσιβίου γαστροῦ, where τρυσ. seems to be pass., = τετρυμένον βίον ἔχοντος, rather than act. (as if it imposed the hardships).—διάσθημα γάρ θροεῖ. This, the reading of the MSS., seems sound. As to the metre, see n. on 218 (τροβοᾷ τι γάρ δεινόν).

210 π. ἀλλ' ἔχε. In many editions ΧΟ. is printed before these words, presumably to mark that they open the 3rd antistrophe. But, as the part of the Chorus is continuous from v. 202, a ΧΟ. here is confusing. It does not exist in L.—ἀλλ', hortative, like, 'come, then.' ἔχε... φροντίδας νέας: i.e. turn from thy reflections on his hard lot (162—168) to such thoughts as the moment of action demands. The effect of N.'s interpellation, λέγ' ὅτι, is to mark excitement, and to bring into the reply with greater force. See n. on O. C. 645.

211 π. οὐκ ἔξεδρος: for they have now learned that he has a permanent dwelling here (cp. 153).—μολπᾶν... ἔχων, engaged in it; cp. Od. 24. 515 ἀρετῆς πέρι δῆριν ἔχοντες.—σύριγγος: cp. Il. 18. 525 (on the shield) δῶν θ' ἄμ' ἔποντο νομῆες, | τερπόμενοι σύριγγι. Plat. Rep.

 required here, where μολπὰν precedes,
 and ἀγροβότας, ἀνάγκας, ἰωάν follow.

 1103 πλάκες ἀγρόνομοι, n. Philoctetes is returning from wild places to his dwelling. This suggests the contrast with a shepherd who, playing his pipe, comes cheerily home from the 'otia dia

215 ε. ἀλλ' ἣ που κ.τ.λ. After οὐ μολπὰν ἔχων we ought to have had ἀλλὰ ...βοᾶν: but a finite verb, βοᾷ, takes the place of a second participle, as oft.: see n. on O. C. 351.—Join ὑπ' ἀνάγκας with πταίων rather than with βοᾷ: the ἀνάγκη, or stress of pain (206),—from the ulcered foot which he drags after him (291),— causes him to stumble on the rough ground.—τηλωπὸν ἰωάν, a cry heard from a distance. τηλωπὸς = (1) 'of distant aspect,' (ὥψ), i.e., 'seen afar': then (2) simply, 'distant,' though the object is not visible: Ai. 564 τηλωπὸς οἰκνεῖ. It is in this general sense of 'distant' that τηλωπὸς is here applied to a sound heard from afar. We cannot properly compare τηλεφανῆς, said of the personified Echo (189). In Aesch. Theb. 103 κτύπον δέδορκα may imply the mental picture called up by the clash of arms, as Verrall observes.

217 ναὸς ἄξενον...ὄρμον, a haven that has no ship for its guest: cp. O. C. 1383 ἀπάτωρ ἐμοῦ, 'having no father in me':
 and ib. 677 n. ἄξενος is here the opposite of πολύξενος rather than of εὖξενος.
 Thus ναὸς ἄξενον is not less correct, while it is more forcible, than ναυσίν ἄξενον would be. The waters off the rock-bound coast are a ὄρμος ἀνορμος (cp. 302).—
 Others render, 'the inhospitable anchorage of our ship,'—which was not visible from the cave (cp. 467), but might have been seen by Philoctetes from another point. The sense seems, however, to be:—'his cry is caused, either by physical pain, or by a feeling of despair as he looks at the lonely sea.' The Chorus have been dwelling on his two great calamities—disease, and solitude (173 f., 185 f.). In this closing strain, it is natural that the two motives of their pity should be identified with the two sources of his anguish.

προβοᾷ τι γὰρ δεινόν. Wunder thus transposes γὰρ τι. It was hardly needful to defend the place of γὰρ by Eur. I. 7.
 1036 (ὑποπτεύω τι γάρ): cp. below, not with music of the reed he cometh, like shepherd in the pastures,—no, but with far-sounding moan, as he stumbles, perchance, from stress of pain, or as he gazes on the haven that hath no ship for guest : loud is his cry, and dread.

variant: L, with many later MSS., as B, R, T, and K. (2) κάκ ποίας πάτρας, but with indication of a variant: V³ (14th cent.), γρ. ναυτίλῳ πλάτῃ. In V (13th cent.) and L² (14th cent.) the gloss appears, in a corrupted form, as ναυτίλῳ κώπῃ τῇ πλάτῃ προσωρμίσατε [corrected to προσωρμίσατε]. (3) ναυτίλῳ πλάτῃ, without indication of a variant: A (13th cent.), Vat. (14th cent.). Most of the modern edd. give ναυτίλῳ πλάτῃ. Nauck conj., κάκ ποίας τύχης: Wecklein (Ars Soph. em. 6) κάκ ποίας χθονός: Seyffert, κάκ ποίας φορᾶς: Cavallin, καὶ ποίᾳ πλάτῃ. See comment.

1450 f. Heinrich Schmidt seems right in holding that δewón here does not require θρηνεί (for θροεί) in 209. Lachmann's conjecture, προβοᾷ γὰρ αἰωνιν, hardly deserved to be adopted by Blaydes. See Metrical Analysis.—Hermann's view, that in 209 διάσημα θροεί γάρ should be read, as here, προβοᾷ δέ τι δεινόν, involves the arbitrary substitution of δέ for γάρ. It would be obvious to suggest προβοᾷ τι γὰρ αἰνόν, or προβοᾷ γὰρ ἑλεινόν: but neither is probable.

219—678 First ἐπεισόδιον. Philoctetes tells his story to Neoptolemus; who pretends that he has quarrelled with the Atreidae, and is sailing home. He promises to take Ph. with him. At this point the emissary of Odysseus (126) enters, disguised as the captain of a merchant-ship. He says that the Greeks have sent men in pursuit of N.; while Odysseus and Diomedes are coming to take Ph. It is decided that N. and Ph. must sail at once; they then withdraw into Ph.'s cave.

219 ὦ ξένοι, 'extra metrum,' as 736 ὦ θεοί, O. T. 1468 ὦ, ὦναί, etc. Here ὦ is a cry of surprise. In O. C. 822 ὦ ξένοι (within the verse) is a despairing appeal ('Alas, friends...').

220 κάκ ποίας πάτρας. In judging between this reading and the variant ναυτίλῳ πλάτῃ (see crit. n.), the probabilities of corruption must be carefully weighed. Suppose, first, that the poet wrote κάκ ποίας πάτρας. A transcriber who found ποίας πάτρας in v. 222 might well assume that there was a fault either there or in v. 220: and since in v. 222 the words fit the construction, he might think that the fault was in v. 220. The substitute, ναυτίλῳ πλάτῃ, might then be suggested by κατίσχετ' itself: cp. Ar. Ran. 1207 ναυτίλῳ πλάτῃ | 'Ἄργος κατασχών (from the Archelaus of Eur.). Emendations not less arbitrary were sometimes made in early times: see, e.g., on O. T. 134 and 1529. Next, suppose that ναυτίλῳ πλάτῃ was the true reading. It is clear and neat. To account for the variant κάκ ποίας πάτρας, we must then suppose either (a) that a scribe wrote those words by an oversight,—his eye having wandered to v. 222; which is the less likely, since v. 222 did not give him κάκ: or (b) that, ναυτίλῳ πλάτῃ having been somehow lost, he filled the gap with a clumsy loan from v. 222. Neither hypothesis seems so probable as that a double ποίας πάτρας should have led to guess-work in v. 220. Another point, though not a strong one, in favour of κάκ ποίας πάτρας is that the two questions ('who, and whence?') are habitually combined in such inquiries: e.g., Eur. El. 779 χαίρετ', ὦ ξένοι· τίνας | πόθεν πορεύεσθ', ἐστὲ τ' ἐκ ποίας χθονός; Her. 1. 35 τίς τε ἔων καὶ κόθεν... ἦικων: id. 2. 115 τίς εἴη καὶ ὁκόθεν πλέοι: 4. 145 τίνας τε καὶ ὁκόθεν εἰσί. On the other hand, we cannot insist on L's authority as against A's; for L has sometimes lost a true reading which A has kept (as in Ai. 28).

But κάκ ποίας πάτρας in v. 220 and ποίας πάτρας in 222 cannot both be wholly sound. The first πάτρας might easily be corrected to χθονός (with Wecklein). It is slightly more probable, how-have ye put into this land, that is harbourless and desolate? What should I deem to be your city or your race?

The fashion of your garb is Greek,—most welcome to my sight,—but I fain would hear your speech: and do not shrink from me in fear, or be scared by my wild looks; nay, in pity for one so wretched and so lonely, for a sufferer so desolate and so friendless, speak to me, if indeed ye have come as friends.—Oh, answer! 'Tis not meet that I should fail of this, at least, from you, or ye from me.

NE. Then know this first, good Sir, that we are Greeks,—since thou art fain to learn that.

the land, not the clothes, of Hellas; and because he cannot yet be sure that these Greeks are friends.

225 f. ὄκνῳ κ.τ.λ. It seems simplest and best to construe thus: καὶ μὴ ὄκνῳ ἐκπλαγῆτε, δεισαντές με ἀπηγριωμένον (cp. Eur. I. A. 1535 ταρβοῦσα τλήμων κάκῃ ἐπληγμένη φόβῳ); though ἐκπλαγῆτε could directly govern με (El. 1045 οὐδὲν ἐκπλαγείσά σε). In O. C. 1625 στήσαι φόβῳ δεισαντας ἐξαίφνης τρίχας, the dat. is causal ('through fear'): in Tr. 176, φόβῳ...ταρβοῦσαν, it has an adverb. force ('sorely afraid'; cp. O. T. 65).

ἀπηγριωμένον, made like to an ἄγριος, or wild man: cp. the description of Philoctetes, as Diomedes and Odysseus found him at Lemnos, in Quintus Smyrnaeus 9. 364 ff.: αὐαλαίαι δὲ οἱ ἀμφὶ κόμαι περὶ κρατὶ κέχυντο | θηρὸς ὅπως ὀλοοῖο... | καὶ οἱ πᾶν μεμάραντο δέμας, περὶ δ' ὁστέα μούνον | ῥινὸς ἔην, ὀλοὴ δὲ παρηΐδας ἀμφέχυντ' αἰχμῇ | λευγαλέον ρυπώνωτος. as (1) pass., 'called,'—explained by Blomfield as being here little more than δντα: or (2) midd., 'invoking' you. Soph. once uses the midd., O. C. 1385 (ἀράς) ἄς σοι καλοῦμαι: but here the obscurity would be extreme.

230 f. ἄλλ', appealing, 'nay' (O. C. 237 n.).—ὅμων ἁμαρτεῖν τοῦτό γ', lit., to be disappointed, in regard to this, on your part. The gen. ὅμων is not construed directly with ἁμαρτεῖν (as though 'to fail of you' meant 'to be repulsed by you'), but is like the gen. in O. T. 580 πάντ' ἐμοῦ κομίζεται ('from me'), ib. 1163 ἐδεξάμην δέ του. The acc. τοῦτο, again, is not directly governed by ἁμαρτεῖν, but is analogous to the acc. of pronouns or adjectives which can stand, almost adverbially, after τυγχάνω and κυρῶ, as Aesch. Ch. 711 τυγχάνειν τὰ πρόσφορα: see O. T. 1298 n. In L the reviser has written eis τοῦτο over τοῦτο, showing that he understood it thus. Cp. Eupolis fr. 25 λέγ' ὅτου πῖθυμεις, κοῦδὲν ἀτυχῆσαι ἐμοῦ (so Meineke, with Priscian 18. 1175, who has καὶ οὐδὲν: though Bekker Anecd. 462 gives οὐ γὰρ). Thus Wunder's change of τοῦτό γ' to τοῦδ' ἑ γ' seems needless, though the double gen. could be illustrated by 1315 (cp. O. C. 1170 n.), and the phrase by Eur. Med. 867 οὐ τῶν ἁμάρτοις τοῦδ' ἑ γ', ἄλλ' ἀκούσομαι.

κάλλους.—τὸ καὶ λαβεῖν, 'that I should εἶεν, really, have 'received....' Cp. Eur. Med. 1051 ἀλλὰ τῆς ἐμῆς κᾶκης, [τὸ καὶ προσέσθαι μαλθακοὺς λόγους φρενί ('nay, out upon my cowardice,—that I should εἶεν have admitted such soft pleadings to my soul!'). Xen. Cyr. 2. 2. 3 εἶπε πρὸς αὐτὸν τῆς τύχης, τὸ ἐμὲ νῦν κληθέντα δεῦρο τυχεῖν ('to think that....!').—τοιοῦδ' ἀνδρὸς, not merely a Greek, but one of such gentle breeding as is announced by the stranger's mien and speech.—ἐν χρόνῳ μακρῷ, after it: cp. Eur. Phoen. 305 χρόνῳ σὺν ὄμμα μυρία ἐν ἀμέραις | προσειδόν: O. C. 88 n.

236 προσέσχε has been much suspected, because προσέχω, in its nautical use, means, 'touch at' a place, not, 'cause one to touch at it.' But προσέχω, as = 'touch at,' meant properly, 'to guide one's ship towards' (Her. 9. 99 προσσχόντες τὰς νέας)—ναῦν being commonly understood. Where prose, then, would say, τινος χρήζην προσέσχες (τὴν ναῦν); poetry might surely say, τίς χρεῖα προσέσχε σε; 'what need guided thy course to land?' It may be added that προσήγαγεν is itself an argument for προσέσχε. 'Brought thee to this shore,—aye, brought thee to my side.' προσέσχε implies only a passing visit to the coast; προσήγαγε supplements it in a way suitable to the forlorn man's eager hope.

(ἀνεμος), ἀνέμων ὁ φίλτατος (ὦν); the art. emphasises the superl.: see n. on Ani. 100 τὸ κάλλιστον...τῶν προτέρων φῶς.—γέγωνε, imperat. of the perf. γέγωνα, of which the subjunct. γεγῶνῃ occurs O. C. 213 (n.).—ὅπως εἰδῶ without ὦν, as Ani. 776, Ai. 6, etc.: O. C. 889 λέξαθ', ὡς εἰδῶ τὸ πᾶν.

239 ε. γένος, acc. of respect: El. 706 Ἀνιῶν γένος: fr. 61. 3 κάργεια γένος. Verg. Aen. 8. 114 Qui genus (sc. estis)?—Σκύρον: for the gen., cp. O. T. 236 n. Scyros (still Skvro), the small island, about 25 miles long from N.W. to S.E., which lies about 35 miles E. of Euboea, nearly in the latitude of Trachis. In 469 B.C. Cimon expelled the predatory Dolopes from the island, and brought the reputed remains of Theseus to Athens. Scyros then became a possession of the Athenians, in whose estimation it was a dreary and insignificant little place ([Dem.] or. 52 § 9): Σκυρία ἀρχή suggested the same idea as vacuis aediliis Ulubris. The name means 'stony.' σκύρος (ὄ), which Curtius connects with ξύειν 'to scrape,' was used to denote 'chips from hewn stones' (λατύπη). At Cyrene the σκυρωτή ὁδός (Pind. P. 5. 93) was not a 'paved' road, but a road 'hewn' out of the solid rock.—Cp. Apollodorus 3. 13. 8: 'Thetis, in the foreknowledge that Achilles must perish if he went to the war, disguised him in woman's attire, and

NE. My birthplace is the seagirt Scyros; I am sailing homeward; Achilles was my sire; my name is Neoptolemus:—thou know'st all.

PH. O son of well-loved father and dear land, foster-child of aged Lycomedes, on what errand hast thou touched this coast? Whence art thou sailing?

NE. Well, it is from Ilium that I hold my present course.

PH. What? Thou wast not, certainly, our shipmate at the beginning of the voyage to Ilium.

σε, παῖ. 237 τίς ἀνέμων] τίς δ' ἀνέμων L. 241 οἶσθα δὴ γ, οἶσθ' ἤδη L. 242 ὦ φίλης] ὦ κ φίλης Blaydes. 245 ἐξ Ἰλίου τοι] Burges conj. ἐξ Ἰλίου γῶ.—δὴ τανῦν Buttmann: δὴ τα νῦν (sic) L. 246 οὐ γὰρ δὴ] In L the 1st hand wrote οὐ δὴ γάρ. The δὴ has been erased, and, as there was not room to insert it between γάρ and σύ γ', it has been written immediately over γάρ by S. Several of the later left him, as a girl, in Scyros. There he grew up, and married Deidameia (Δηιδάμεια) daughter of Lycomedes [king of Scyros]; and a son was born to them, Pyrrhus, afterwards called Neoptolemus.

241 Νεοπτόλεμος: ———: cp. 4 n.—οἶσθα δὴ τὸ πᾶν: cp. 389: 1240: Ant. 402 πάντ' ἐπίστασαι, n.

242 ὦ φίλης χθονός, 'O thou (who belongest to) a dear land! The possessive gen. can thus be used, without a subst., just as the gen. of origin (a special form of the possessive) is so used, Ant. 379 ὦ δύστηνος | καὶ δυστήνου πατρός. We cannot well repeat παῖ with ὦ φίλης χθονός, because, though classical idiom allowed παῖδες Ἑλλήνων, it would hardly allow παῖς Ἑλλάδος in the fig. sense, 'a son of Greece.' That would mean rather, 'a boy belonging to Greece' (cp. Ἑλλάδος νεανίας, Eur. I. A. 52). It seems needless to write ὦ κ φίλης χθονός.

(221 n.): cp. 355 f. In Polyb. 2. 9. 2 μέρος δέ τι (τῶν λέμβων) προσέσχε τὸν Ἐπιδαμνίων λιμένα, Bekker is probably right in adding πρὸς before τὸν.—After γῆν a comma seems better than a note of interrogation: cp. τίς πόθεν εἰς, etc. (220 n.).

245 ἐξ Ἰλίου τοι δὴ κ.τ.λ. Here τοι = 'you must know,' and δὴ = 'then' (i.e., 'since you ask me'). The effect of the particles (which could be properly represented only by voice and manner) is to give an easy, ready tone to the answer. Cp. n. on O. T. 1171 (though the tone there is somewhat different) κείνου γέ τοι δὴ παῖς ἐκλήζεθ'. Burges thinks that τοι δὴ, without a preceding γε, is strange, and conjectures γῶ δὴ. But τοι and δὴ have each their proper force, which does not depend on γε: and here a γε before τοι would have over-emphasised Ἰλιον.

246 ε. οὐ γὰρ δὴ σύ γ' : (How can you be coming from Troy?),—for you certainly did not go there with us at first. For this use of οὐ γὰρ δὴ...γε in rejecting an alternative supposition, see O. C. 110 n.—The order of the words almost compels us to join κατ' ἀρχὴν τοῦ...στόλου: cp. Plat. Legg. 664 ε κατ' ἀρχὰς τῶν λόγων. Then ἦσθα ναυβάτης (cp. 1027) ἡμῶν (dat. of interest) = 'sailedst in our fleet.' But it would also be possible to join ναυβάτης with τοῦ στόλου (partitive gen., cp. 73), taking κατ' ἀρχὴν as = 'originally.'

MSS. have οὐ γὰρ without δῆ. 249 οἶσθά μ' L: οἶσθά γ' r. 250 ὃν γ'] γ' was omitted by Triclinius. Hence it is absent from T, and from other Triclinian MSS., as R; also from the ed. of Turnebus, who followed T (see O. C., Introd., p. liv.). The Aldine, based on A, retains γ', and so Brunck. 251 οὐδ' ὄνομ' οὐδὲ L, with most of the later MSS.: οὐδ' ὄνομ' A. Erfurdt's insertion of ἄρ' has 248 ἡ γὰρ in eager question: 322, 654, O. C. 64.—πόνου, of warfare, the peculiarly Homeric use (as Il. 11. 601 εἰσορῶν πόνον αἰπὸν ἰώκα τε δακρυέσσας), also freq. in Herod. (9. 27 ἐν τοῖσι Τρωϊκοῖσι πόνοισι): cp. Eur. Cycl. 107 ἐξ Ἰλίου τε καὶ Τρωϊκῶν πόνων.

249 f. οὐ γὰρ...; As in ἡ γὰρ (248) and πῶς γάρ (250), the γάρ marks surprise ('your words are strange,—for...' etc.).—οἶσθα...κάτοιδ', as Ant. 1063 f. ἴσθι...κάτισθι: El. 922 HΛ. οὐκ οἶσθ' ὅποι γῆς οὐδ' ὅποι γνώμης φέρει. XP. πῶς δ' οὐκ ἐγὼ κάτοιδ' ἃ γ' εἶδον ἐμφανῶς;—πῶς...κάτοιδ'; 'how do I know?'= 'of course I do not know.' This form is more emphatic, because more direct, than πῶς ἂν ᾔδῃ (or εἰδείην), or πῶς ἐμελλον εἰδέναι; But it is rare except in affirmation (i.e., with πῶς οὐ...), as in El. l. c.; Xen. Oecon. 18 § 3 τοῦτο μὲν οἶσθα...τί δ' οὐκ, ἔφην ἐγὼ, οἶδα; See, however, Her. 1. 75 κῶς γὰρ...διέβησαν αὐτόν; (= 'how can they have crossed the river?').

251 f. ὄνομ' ἄρ' is better than ὄνομα γ' (cp. fr. 315 ὅμεις μὲν οὐκ ἄρ' ᾔστε τὸν Προμηθεῖα). The variant οὐδ' ὄνομ' might seem to favour οὐ τοῦνομ', but the latter (without ἄρα) would be too abrupt: οὐδ' is clearly genuine. More probably ὄνομ' (a form unknown to Tragedy) was merely a late attempt to mend the metre.—Ph. here asks, in effect: 'Finding me, a lonely sufferer, here in Lemnos, cannot you guess who I am?'—and the youth answers, No. This is quite consistent with 261, where Ph. assumes that his name, when announced, will be recognised. Neoptolemus might have heard of him as possessing the bow of Heracles (262), and yet not have heard of him as suffering on Lemnos. We could not join ὄνομα, as = 'mention,' with κακῶν.—διωλλύμην, all these ten years, while my former comrades have been active at Troy.

253 ἴσθι με ὥς μηδὲν εἰδὸτ', rest assured that I know nothing. ὥς marks the mental point of view ('regard me in the light of one who knows nothing'): distinguish this use of it from that in 117 (n.). μηδὲν is generic (170 n.), not due to the imperat.: cp. 415; Ant. 1063 ὥς μὴ 'μπολήσων ἴσθι τὴν ἐμὴν φρένα. For ὥς cp. also below, 567: O. T. 848.

254 πόλλ', adv., 'very': O. C. 1514 n.—πικρὸς: schol. ἐχθρὸς. Cp. Eur. Phoen. 955 (a soothsayer) ἦν μὲν ἐχθρὰ σημήνας τύχῃ, | πικρὸς καθέστηκεν οἷς ἂν οἰωνοσκοπή, 'odious.' Hence the conjct. στυγνός (Nauck) is wholly needless. The active sense, 'hostile,' is more freq., as At. 1359 νῦν φίλοι καθ' οἷς πικροί.

NE. Hadst thou, indeed, a part in that emprise?

PH. O my son, then thou know'st not who is before thee?

NE. How should I know one whom I have never seen before?

PH. Then thou hast not even heard my name, or any rumour of those miseries by which I was perishing?

NE. Be assured that I know nothing of what thou askest.

PH. O wretched indeed that I am, O abhorred of heaven, that no word of this my plight should have won its way to my home, or to any home of Greeks! No, the men who wickedly cast me out keep their secret and laugh, while my plague still rejoices in its strength, and grows to more!

253 ε. Nauck brackets ὧδ' ἔχοντος... γῆς, so as to leave one ν., οὐ μὴδὲ κληδῶν μηδαμοῦ διήλθε πον.—For μὴδ' Ἑλλάδος, Herm. reads μήθ' Ἑλλάδος, with the Aldine. —For πον, Blaydes gives πω (conjecturing also μηδαμοῖ... ποῖ). For διήλθε πον, Nauck

255 ε. οὐ μὴδὲ κ.τ.λ., a man of whom no report (the generic μῆ, 170 n.).—οἰκαδε, to Malis (4 n.),—where the tidings would have had a special interest: μὴδ' Ἑλλάδος γῆς μηδαμοῦ, nor in any part of Hellas (for the gen., cp. 204 τῇδε τόπων n.). As Neoptolemus is coming from Troy, the words have more force if we suppose the poet to use Ἑλλάς in the larger sense which was so familiar in his own day,—as including all lands inhabited by Greeks. Thus the Ἑλλάς of Her. comprises Ionia (1. 92) and Sicily (7. 157); and Soph. himself (Tr. 1060) has οὐθ' Ἑλλάς οὐτ' ἀγλασσοῖς. The thought will then be, 'he had not heard of me from the mainland of Greece before he left Scyros; nor has he heard of me, since he has been at Troy, from any part of the Greek world.' It is no objection, of course, that the Homeric poems do not recognise the Greek colonies in Asia Minor; the Attic drama was not careful in such matters. Even, however, if we restricted Ἑλλάδος γῆς to Greece Proper, it would still be natural that Ph. should say, 'neither to Malis, nor to any part of Greece.' Nauck, thus limiting Ἑλλάς, pronounces the distinction unmeaning; he further objects to ὧδ' ἔχοντος (because Ph. means that, not merely his plight, but his existence, is unknown); and therefore rejects ὧδ' ἔχοντος οἰκαδε | μὴδ' Ἑλλάδος γῆς.—μηδαμοῦ need not be changed to μηδαμοῖ: cp. O. C. 1019 ὁδοῦ... τῆς ἐκεῖ (= ἐκεῖσε): El. 1099 ὁδοιποροῦμεν ἐνθα (= οἷ) χρῆζομεν.—πω should prob. be read instead of πον. The long lapse of time imagined renders πω forcible; while πον could mean only, 'I ween'; it could not go with μηδαμοῦ as='to no place whatsoever.' In O. C. 1370, where πω is certain, L has πον from the first hand. In fr. 465, again, λόγῳ γάρ ἔλκος οὐδὲν οἶδά πον τυχεῖν, the correction πω (Dindorf) is clearly right.

proposes διήλυθεν, or διήλθε γῆς. 264—269 R. Prinz, suspecting an interpolation, would reduce these six vv. to three, viz., δισσοὶ στρατηγοὶ...ἀναξ | πληγέντ'...χαράγματι | ἔρριψαν αἰσχροῦς, ἥνικ' ἐκ τῆς ποντίας |. 265 ἀγρία] Wakefield conj. ἀθλία. 266 τῆς is due to J. 263 ε. ὃν οἱ: for the art. at the end of the v., see on Ant. 409 ἡ κατείχε τὸν | νέκυν.—χῶ Κεφαλλήνων ἀναξ: cp. Il. 2. 631 αὐτὰρ Ὀδυσσεὺς ἦγε Κεφαλλήνας μεγαθύμους: who are there described as inhabiting Ithaca, Zacynthus, Samos (=Cephalonia, first so called in Her. 9. 28), and other islands off the coast of Acarnania, as well as part of the mainland itself. So Od. 24. 378 (Laertes) Κεφαλλήνεσσι ἀνάσσων. Buttmann thinks that both here and in 791 (ὡς ἐνε Κεφαλλήν) the name is used scornfully. Its Homeric associations, at least, are honourable (cp. Il. 4. 330, Κεφαλλήνων ἀμφὶ στίχες οὐκ ἀπαυδαῖαι). To assume that the Cephallenians were despised because the Taphii, their neighbours, were pirates (Od. 15. 427), seems a little unfair to them. But it is very likely that the name is used, if not with scorn, yet with a tone of dislike,—‘king of those crafty islanders.’ The Athenians had experienced the skill of Cephallenians in laying a deadly ambushade (Thuc. 2. 33).

265 ἀγρία is followed by ἀγρίῳ in 267. The effect is certainly unpleasant. But with regard to such repetitions it must always be remembered that ancient poetry was far less fastidious than modern: see n. on 88 (πράσσειν). On the other hand, Eustathius, the witness for φοινῶ in 267 (cp. cr. n.), was frequently loose in citation: see Ant., append., p. 249. The recurrence of ἔρημον in 269 offends less, but is noteworthy. It is not surprising that interpolation should have been suspected. Three views have been held. (1) Prinz would reduce vv. 264—269 to three (see crit. note). This reconstruction is too violent to be probable. (2) Nauck would omit the words ἔρημον, ἀγρία | νόσω καταφθίνοντα. But ξὺν ᾗ in 268 confirms νόσω: it could not refer to ἐχίδνης. And ξὺν ᾗ would hardly have become ξὺν ᾗ. (3) A. Jacob proposed to omit vv. 268—70. This would obviate the repetition of ἔρημον, and of ᾗχοντ' (273); but it would also suppress the notice of Chryse; which, however, Ph. would naturally mention, as he supposes that the whole story is new to the youth. I believe that there has been no interpolation, though Soph. has written with some verbal negligence. The point of vv. 264—267 is the putting ashore (ἐρ-behold, I am he of whom haply thou hast heard as lord of the bow of Heracles,—I am the son of Poeas, Philoctetes, whom the two chieftains and the Cephallenian king foully cast upon this solitude, when I was wasting with a fierce disease, stricken down by the furious bite of the destroying serpent; with that plague for sole companion, O my son, those men put me out here, and were gone,—when from sea-girt Chrysè they touched at this coast with their fleet. Glad, then, when they saw me asleep—after much tossing on the waves—in the shelter of a cave upon the shore, they abandoned me,—first putting out a few rags,—good enough for such a wretch,—and a scanty dole of food withal:—may Heaven give them the like!

271 ε. ἄσμενοι, because they could now slip away without being vexed by his entreaties and reproaches. The word adds an effective touch to the picture of their heartlessness. Dindorf's ἄσμενον (received by Nauck and Blaydes) is far weaker; nor is it suitable. In Lys. or. 1 § 13 ἐκάθειδον ἄσμενος means, ‘I gladly went to sleep’ (inchoative imperf.). Here, however, ἄσμενον εὐδόντα would mean, not ‘gladly going to sleep,’ but ‘gladly sleeping,’—as though with conscious satisfaction.—ἐκ πολλοῦ σάλου, after the κατηρεφεῖ, roofed over, i.e., here, over-arching,—forming a cave; cp. Ant. 885 n.—πέτρα, ‘a rock,’ is a necessary correction of πέτρῳ, ‘a stone.’ πέτρος is never used in the larger sense, nor could the epithet here justify such a use. Cp. Xen. An. 4. 3. 11 ἐν πέτρῳ ἀντρώδει: but ib. 7. 12 οὐδεὶς πέτρος (i.e., none of the λίθοι mentioned in § 10) ἀνωθεν ἤνέχθη.

273 ε. οἷα, adv.,=ὡς, cp. 293, O. T. 751: φωτὶ δυσμόρῳ, as for some poor wretch, some beggar, for whom their least gifts were good enough. Cp. Ar. Ach. 424 ἀλλ' ἢ Φιλοκτήτου τὰ τοῦ πτωχοῦ λέγεις; (sc. ράκη). Not, ‘rags such as my wretched state required’ (i.e. for dressing his wound, cp. 39).—καί τι καί: cp. 308: fr. 304 καί δὴ τι καί παρῆκα τῶν ἀρτυμάτων: Thuc. 1. 107 καί τι (adv.) καί τοῦ δήμου καταλύσεως ὑποψία: id. 2. 17 καί τι καί Πυθικοῦ μαντείου ἀκροτελεύτιον: *Pind. 276 f. σὺ δὴ (which has been needlessly altered, see cr. n.) suits the earnest appeal: 'try to imagine for yourself what I felt.'—ἀνάστασιν, cogn. acc. with στήναι as = ἀναστήναι (cp. O. T. 50 στάντες τ' ἐς ὀρθόν).

278 ποῖ' ἐκδακρῦσαι (δάκρυα): cp. Eur. Ph. 1344 ὥστ' ἐκδακρῦσαι γ' (burst into tears).—ποῖ' ἀποιμῶξαι κακά, 'what woes I lamented.' This version is recommended (a) by the fact that the following verses develop a picture of the κακά: (b) by the ordinary use of ἀποιμῶξαι with an acc. of the object deplored, as Ani. 1224: Eur. Med. 31: Alc. 635, 768: Aesch. fr. 134. But another version is also possible: 'shrieked out reproaches.' Here, however, he is speaking rather of his misery than of his resentment.

279 f. ὀρώντα ναῦς μὲν βεβώσας, ἄνδρα δὲ κ.τ.λ.: cp. 1136 ὀρών μὲν ἀσχροῦς ἀπάτας, στυγνὸν δὲ φῶτ' ἐχθροδοκόν. In both passages the irregular place of μὲν is due to the writer having begun as if he intended to repeat the partic. of ὀράω: as here, ὀρώντα μὲν ναῦς... ὀρώντα δὲ ἄνδρα. Cp. O. T. 25 φθίνουσα μὲν... φθίνουσα δ', n.

281 f. οὐχ ὅστις ἀρκέσειεν. The direct question is, τίς ἀρκέσει; (deliberative, or 'interrogative,' subjunct.). The indirect question is, (a) after a primary tense, οὐχ ὅρῃ ὅστις ἀρκέσει; (b) after a secondary, οὐχ ἑώρα ὅστις ἀρκέσειε. And here ὀρώντα (279) = ὅτε ἐώρων. In Attic practice, however, this optative is rare, except when the principal verb is an optative with ἄν: as Ar. Ran. 96 γόνιμον δὲ ποιήτην ἄν οὐχ εὐροῖς ἐτι | ζητῶν ἄν, ὅστις ῥῆμα γενναῖον λάβοι. The ordinary construction was with the fut. indic., which was usually retained (instead of becoming fut. optat.) even after a secondary tense; as if here we had ἀρκέσει, συλλήψεται. Cp., however, O. T. 72 (ῥυσάμεν), 1257 (κίχοι): Ani. 272 (πράξαμεν).

νόσον κάμνοντι συλλάβοιτο, put a helping hand to the disease, i.e., help to lighten its burden, for me in my suffering. As λαμβάνομαι τινος = to lay hold on a thing, so συλλαμβάνομαι τινός τινι = to lay hold on it along with another person; i.e., to help him with it. Eur. Med. 946 συλλήψομαι δὲ τοῦδε σοι κἀγὼ πόνου. Thuc. 4. 47 ξυνελάβοντο δὲ τοῦ τοιοῦτου οὐχ ἥκιστα, they mainly contributed to such a result. Cp. id. 4. 10 οἱ ξυναράμενοι τοῦδε τοῦ κινδύνου.—πάντα δὲ σκοπῶν: δὲ here = ἀλλά: Ani. 85 n.

283 f. πλὴν ἀνιᾶσθαι: for the absence of the art., cp. O. C. 608 n.: Antiphanes fr. incert. 51 καταλείπεθ' οὐδὲν ἕτερον ἢ τεθνηκέναι. παρόν: cp. El. 959 παρέσσι

Think now, my son, think what a waking was mine, when they had gone, and I rose from sleep that day! What bitter tears started from mine eyes,—what miseries were those that I bewailed when I saw that the ships with which I had sailed were all gone, and that there was no man in the place,—not one to help, not one to ease the burden of the sickness that vexed me,—when, looking all around, I could find no provision, save for anguish—but of that a plenteous store, my son!

So time went on for me, season by season; and, alone in this narrow house, I was fain to meet each want by mine own service. For hunger's needs χρόνου] Nauck conj. διὰ πόνου. Blaydes writes, ὁ μὲν χρόνου ποὺς δὴ βραδὺς προῦβαινε μοι. 286 κἄδει τι] Wecklein gives ἔδει τε (ed. 1881). In his Ars Soph. emend. (1869) he proposed κεί δὴ τι βαίῃ τῇδ' ὑπὸ στέγῃ μ' ἔδει (omitting μόνον). —βαίῃ r: βαίῃ L. 287 σύμφορα] I. G. Patakis conj. ξύμμετρα: Nauck, πρόσμὲν στένευ | ... | πάρεστι δ' ἀλγείν. Musgrave cp. Hor. Sat. 2. 5. 68 invenietque Nil sibi legatum praefer plorare suisque. —εὐμάρειαν, ease (704), hence, abundance. Cp. Aesch. fr. 237 κοῦπω τις 'Ἀκταίων' ἀθῆρος ἡμέρα | κενόν, πόνου πλουτοῦντ', ἐπεμψεν οἴκαδε. The author of the 'Letters of Phalaris' had this passage in mind, Ep. 33 (Schaefer) ἐδήλωσεν ὅτι πάντων ἐνδεεῖς ἔστέ πλὴν λιμοῦ καὶ φόβου· τούτων δὲ [cp. τούτου δὲ here] ὑμᾶς καὶ λαν εὐμοιρεῖν [v. l. εὐπορεῖν].

285 ὁ μὲν χρόνος διὰ χρόνον κ.τ.λ. The text has been boldly altered by some editors (see cr. n.), in order to get rid of διὰ χρόνον: but the iteration is itself a proof of soundness. Such iteration is constantly employed in expressing a succession of seasons or periods; 'day by day', etos eis etos (Ant. 340), παρ' ἡμῶν ἡμέρα (Ai. 475), Mod. Gr. χρόνο σὲ χρόνο ('year after year'), truditur dies die (Hor. Carm. 2. 18. 15), etc. The phrase διὰ χρόνον regularly means, 'after an interval of time': cp. 758: Lys. or. 1 § 12 ἀσμένῃ με ἑωρακῖα ἤκοντα διὰ χρόνον: Xen. Cyn. 1. 4. 28 ἤκω διὰ χρόνον. So, here, ὁ χρόνος προῦβαινε μοι, time was ever moving on for me, διὰ χρόνον, as (each) space of time was left behind. (The 'each' is implied in the imperfect προῦβαινε, which denotes not a single advance, but a series of advances.) Suppose that the interval denoted by διὰ χρόνον is a month. 'One month having elapsed' (διὰ χρόνον—as each month came to an end), 'time kept moving on' διακονεῖσθαι, midd.: schol. ἐμὰντῷ ἐξυπηρετῆσθαι. That the midd. would suggest, to an Attic ear, 'serving oneself,' may be inferred from Plat. Legg. 763 A διακονοῦντές τε καὶ διακονούμενοι ἑαυτοῖς, 'serving (the State), and serving themselves' (cp. Ar. Ach. 1017 αὐτῷ διακονεῖται). In later Greek, however, the midd. is sometimes no more than the act.; e.g.

(i.e. a new month began). Render, then, 'Time went on for me, season by season.' Cp. Tennyson, Enoch Arden: 'Thus over Enoch's early-silvering head | The sunny and rainy seasons came and went | Year after year.'—Ellendt, rightly starting from the sense of διὰ χρόνον as 'after an interval,' wrongly explains it here as simply tarde, 'pausenweise': i.e. 'time went on with many a pause': as if, to Philoctetes, time seemed, at moments, to stand still. The error here consists in excepting the intervals denoted by διὰ χρόνον from the whole progress described by προῦβαινε.—Not: 'time kept moving on through time': as if ὁ χρόνος were the moving point, while διὰ χρόνον denoted its course.—For προῦβαινε, cp. Her. 3. 53 τοῦ χρόνον προβαίνοντος: Lys. or. 1 § 11 προϊόντος δὲ τοῦ χρόνον.

286 ε. κἄδει τι. The sense of τι here is nearly εκάστων τι, just as τις sometimes = ἐκαστός τις (Thuc. 1. 40 τοὺς ξυμμάχους αὐτὸν τινα κολάζειν); a sense which the impf. ἔδει brings out, by implying successive needs at successive moments.—βαίῃ, of size, as Aesch. Pers. 447 νῆσος... βαίῃ.

φορα. 288 ἐξεύρισκε r: εἵρισκε L. 290 The schol. on 702 substitutes ποσὶν for τάλας in quoting this verse; but he also omits αὐτὸς, thus showing how carelessly he quoted. 291 δύστηνον MSS. (so, too, the schol. on 702, and Suidas s. v. ἄτρακτος): δύστηνον Canter. 292 πρὸς τοῦτ' ἂν· εἴ τ' ἔδει] L has a point after πόδα in 291, but none after πρὸς τοῦτ' ἂν. And so Wakefield would write, πόδα. | πρὸς τοῦτ' ἂν εἴ μ' [for εἴ τ'] ἔδει. Blaydes gives, πρὸς τοῦτ' ἂν. εἴτ' ἔδει κ.τ.λ., with νευροσπαδῆς, 'with drawn string,' i.e., 'drawn back along with the string.' The epithet pictures the moment of taking aim, and thus suggests, though it does not literally express, the idea, 'sped from the string.' Not, 'drawing the string back' (by the pressure of the notch). Cp. Ani. 1216 ἄρμυν... λιθοσπαδῆ, an opening made by dragging stones away; where the adj. implies λίθων ἐσπασμένων, as here the adj. implies ἀπὸ νευρᾶς ἐσπασμένης.

288 ὑποπτέρος is perh. meant here to suggest 'shy' (and therefore hard to shoot); for the word often implies 'taking wing': cp. Eur. Helen. 1236 μεθίημι νείκος τὸ σόν, ἴτω δ' ὑπόπτερον: id. fr. 424 ὑπόπτερος δ' ὁ πλούτος. So Αἰ. 139 πεφύβημαι, | πτηνῆς ὡς θύμα πελείας.

289 f. ὁ μοι βάλοι: for the optat. referring to an indefinite number of acts in past time, cp. Lys. or. 23 § 3 οὓς τε ἐξευρίσκοιμι Δεκελίων, ἐπυνθανόμην: Xen. Cyr. 5. 3. 55 οὓς μὲν ἴδοι, ... ἠρώτα.

ἄτρακτος. If the ἄ be for ἀμφ (as Curtius suggests, comparing ἄ-βολος, cloak), the word meant, 'what turns (τρεπ) round'; hence (1) spindle; then (2) shaft, arrow: Tr. 714: Thuc. 4. 40, where a Laconian uses it, and Thuc. explains it by τὸν οἰστόν. Aesch. adds the qualifying epithet τοξικῶ (fr. 135).—αὐτός, having no dog to fetch it.

291 f. εἰλνύομην (cp. 702), 'crawl'; cp. Plat. Tim. 92 A ἄποδα... καὶ ἰλυσώμενα ἐπὶ γῆς. The word suggests that each step with the sound foot is followed by a slight halt, while the other foot is dragged after it. Thus the notion is different from that of εἰλνυόμενος (βοῦς), where a 'rolling' gait is meant. Cp. on 163. A cornelian intaglio in the Berlin collection shows Philoctetes thus εἰλνόμενος, with the help of a stick in his left hand, while the right holds his bow and quiver; the left foot is the wounded one. (Milani, Mito di Filottete p. 78: see Introd.) It is clear from 215 (παλῶν) and 894 (ὀρθώσει) that the poet imagines him as striving to walk erect, and not as creeping prone, with the knee of the sound leg against the ground.—ἂν with the iterative impf. in apodosis, after optat. in protasis, as oft.: cp. Isocr. or. 6 § 52 τὸν παρελθόντα χρόνον, εἰ... εἰς μόνος Λακεδαιμονίων βοηθήσειεν, ὑπὸ πάντων ἂν ὠμολογεῖτο ('it used to be allowed') παρὰ τούτων γενέσθαι τὴν σωτηρίαν αὐτοῖς. Cp. 294 f.—δύστηνον, as this bow provided, bringing down the winged doves; and, whatever my string-spied shaft might strike, I, hapless one, would crawl to it myself, trailing my wretched foot just so far; or if, again, water had to be fetched,—or if (when the frost was out, perchance, as oft in winter) a bit of fire-wood had to be broken,—I would creep forth, poor wretch, and manage it. Then fire would be lacking; but by rubbing stone on stone I would at last draw forth the hidden spark; and this it is that keeps life in me from day to day. Indeed, a roof over my head, and fire therewith, gives all that I want—save release from my disease.

Come now, my son, thou must learn what manner of isle this is.

a point (and not merely a comma) after θραύσαι in 294. 293 Nauck would delete this v., and read ξύλον τε for ξύλον τι in 294. 296 ἐκτρίβων A: ἐκθλίβων L, with τρι written over θλι by the first corrector (S). A few of the later MSS. (L², Vat. b, K) have ἐκθλίβων, but most of them agree with A. Blaydes conj. ἐντρίβων, or ἄν τριβων. 299 ἐμέ] Nauck conj. ἐτι: Gernhard, τινά: Blaydes, μονον: Burges, (for νοσεῖν ἐμέ) νόσω πονεῖν. 300 τὸ τῆς νήσου] Linwood conj. τὰ τῆς νήσου.—μάθης L, with A and most of the others. μάθε (R, V²) may have been a mere conjecture; T and a few more have μάθοις. Burges, Nauck, Wecklein and Cavallin 1377 δυστήνῃ ποδί.—ἔλκων: cp. Eur. Phoen. 303 γῆρα τρομερὰν ἔλκω ποδὸς βάσιν.—πρὸς τοῦτ' ἄν: for the repetition of ἄν, cp. 223 n.: that of πρὸς τοῦτο emphasises the limit of the painful effort.

293 ἐ πάγον χυθέντος: cp. Tr. 853 κέχυται νόσος, 'hath spread abroad' (through his frame). Attius, Prometheus fr. 1 profusus gelus. Psalm cxlvii. 16: 'He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoar-frost like ashes. He casteth forth his ice like morsels.'—οἷα: 273 n.—Nauck would delete this verse, because it is unreasonable that the hero should delay providing himself with firewood until the frost has set in.—ξύλον τι. Lemnos is now almost devoid of wood, save for a few plane-trees in the water-courses, and a little undergrowth.—For ἄν with iterative impf., cp. on 291 f.

296 ἐν πέτροισι πέτρον. For the change of quantity, cp. 827 (ὕπνε): O. C. 442 οἱ τοῦ πατρὸς τῷ πατρὶ: ib. 883 ἄρ' οὐχ ὕβρις τὰδ;—ὕβρις: Ant. 1310 f. δελαιός...—δειλαία: El. 148 ἃ Ἴτυν, ἀλὲν Ἴτυν δλοφύρεται.—ἐκτρίβων, rubbing hard (ἐκ='thoroughly,' i.e. till the spark comes). The v. ἐκθλίβων would mean, 'pressing' or 'squeezing,' and is unsuitable. Cp. Xen. Cyr. 2. 2. 15 ἐκ γε σοῦ πῦρ...ῥᾶον ἂν τις ἐκτρίψειεν ἢ γέλωτα ἐξαγάγοιτο. The use of two stones would suggest concussion rather than friction. The Eskimos kindle fire by striking a piece of iron pyrites with a piece of quartz (instead of flint); the Alaskans of North America, and the Aleutian islanders (in the North Pacific), use two pieces of quartz, smeared with native sulphur. (M. Elie Reclus, in Encycl. Brit., art. 'Fire.') ἐκτρίβων might, however, cover the case of a slanting or scraping blow. In Lucian Ver. Hist. 1. 32 τὰ πυρεῖα συντρίψαντες refers to rubbing sticks together.—ἔφην' ἄφαντον φῶς, made the invisible light visible, i.e. drew the spark forth from its hiding place in the stone. Cp. Ai. 647 (Time) φύει τ' ἄδηλα καὶ φανέντα κρύπτεται. Blaydes compares Synesius Ep. 138 σπινθήρα κεκρυμμένον καὶ ἀγαπῶντα λαμβάνειν. Verg. G. 1. 135 Ut silicis venis abstrusus excuderet ignem.—ἄφαντον could hardly be, 'barely seen,' as if the sense were that the feeble spark instantly vanished again.

298 ἐ οἰκουμένη γὰρ οὖν, 'for indeed...': cp. Ant. 489 n. Remark οὖν in the thesis of the 3rd foot; so δὲ (O. C. 23), and even περ (ib. 896).—ἐμέ has been suspected. But it serves to qualify the general sentiment by a reference to his special circumstances:—'shelter and fire give all that a man needs—except, in my case, health.'

ταύτῃ πελάζει ναυβάτης οὐδείς ἐκὼν.
οὐ γάρ τις ὄρμος ἐστίν, οὐδ' ὅποι πλέων are among those who adopt μάθε. Seyffert gives κἄν...μάθοις. 304 Bergk and Herwerden suspect this v.—σῶφροσιν] σῶφροσι L. 305 τάχ' οὖν] Hermann conj. τάχ' ἂν: Campbell, κατ' οὖν.—τις] τίς L. 306 ἂν, omitted by the 1st hand only in the first person, sing., as 1452, Ar. Nub. 787 φέρ' ἔγω: or plur., as id. Vesp. 1516 φέρει νυν...ξυγχωρήσωμεν. On the other hand, φέρ' εἰπέ occurs eight times in Soph. (433: O. T. 390, 536, 1142: Ani. 534: El. 310, 376: Tr. 890). In Her. 4. 127 φέρετε, τοὺτους ἀνερῶντες συγχέειν πειράσθε αὐτοὺς, the 2nd verb is imperat., not subj. If φέρει...μάθη be retained, it can be defended only as an irregular equivalent for φέρει...φράσω or the like (cp. Her. 2. 14 φέρει δὲ νῦν καὶ αὐτοῖσι Αἰγυπτίοισι ὡς ἔχει φράσω).

Several recent editors (see cr. n.) cut the knot by reading μάθε. It is, however, improbable that, if μάθε had been the genuine reading—giving so plain a construction—it would have been corrupted to the unparalleled μάθη. A more attractive conjecture is Seyffert's κἄν...μάθοις. If κἄν had once become καὶ (a most easy change), then μάθοις might have been altered to μάθη by a post-classical corrector. For the optat. with ἂν in courteous proposal or request, cp. 674: El. 637 κλύοις ἂν ἤδη.

τὸ τῆς νήσου, its case, condition: cp. Thuc. 8. 89 οὐκ ἐδόκει μόνιμον τὸ τῆς διγαρχίας εἶσεσθαι: Plat. Legg. 712 D τὸ γὰρ τῶν ἐφόρων...τυραννικὸν...γέγονε: id. Gorg. 450 C τὸ τῆς τέχνης: Eur. Alc. 785 τὸ τῆς τύχης. Hence τὰ is a needless conjecture.

302 ε. οὐ γὰρ τις ὄρμος ἐστίν. The absence of a safe ὄρμος is compatible with the existence of λιμένες (936 n.); and Philoctetes knows only the coast near his cave. If the Iliad calls Lemnos εὐκτιμένη (21. 40), it also calls it ἀμυχθαλδεσσα (24. 753), which was probably understood in antiquity as 'inhospitable' (μῆλινμι); though a modern view connects it with μυχ-, δμῆχλη, (our mist), as = 'smoky,' i.e., volcanic. In the time of Sophocles, Lemnos possessed two towns,—Hephaestia, on the N. coast, of which the site has lately been identified by Conze (Reise auf den Aeg. Inseln); and Myrina, now Kastro, on the W. coast. There was once an excellent harbour at Hephaestia; there still is one at Kastro, the present seat of trade. Good anchorage is also afforded by a deep bay on the N. coast (now 'Purnia'), and by another on the S. (now 'Mudros').

οὐδ' ὅποι πλέων: nor (is there a place), sailing to which, ἐξεμπολήσει κέρδος, a man shall sell off his wares at a profit. There is no ἐμπορίον. The acc. κέρδος seems to be 'cognate' (= κερδαλέαν ἐξεμπόλησιν), rather than objective (as if ἐξεμπ. meant, 'achieve by trading'): cp. Her. 1. 1 ἐξεμπολημένων (Ion.) σφι σχεδὸν πάντων: cp. Ani. 1036 ἐξεμπόλημαι n. (We cannot compare Tr. 92 τὸ γ' εὖ | πράσσειν...κέρδος ἐμπολᾶ, 'brings in' gain.) The subject to ἐξεμπολήσει is τις, easily supplied from ναυβάτης (301).

No mariner approaches it by choice; there is no anchorage; there is no sea-port where he can find a gainful market or a kindly welcome. This is not a place to which prudent men make voyages. Well, suppose that some one has put in against his will; such things may oft happen in the long course of a man's life. These visitors, when they come, have compassionate words for me; and perchance, moved by pity, they give me a little food, or some raiment: but there is one thing that no one will do, when I speak of it,—take me safe home; no, this is now the tenth year that I am wearing out my wretched days, in hunger and in misery, feeding the plague that is never sated with my flesh.

in L, has been added by S.—ἀνθρώπων] Schubert conj. ἀνθρώποις: Blaydes, ἀνθρώπων. 308 καὶ πού] κάπου L. 318 κακοῖσι] Wecklein conj. κόποισι:

ξενώσεται, pass.: cp. 48 n. In Lycophron 92 this form is fut. midd. There is no class. example of ξενωθήσονται.—For the fut. indic. in a relative clause of purpose, cp. Dem. or. 1 § 2 προσβέλειν πέμπειν ἥτις ταύτ' ἐρεῖ καὶ παρέσται τοῖς πράγμασιν.

304 ἐνθάδ' = δεῦρο: cp. 256 μηδαμοῖ n.—πλοῖ: this nom. pl. occurs also in Xen. An. 5. 7. 7 καλοὶ πλοῖ: the dat. pl. in Antiphon or. 5 § 83 πλοῖς. In L's σώφροσι the omission of the ν ἐφέλκυστικόν is doubtless a mere error; though Soph. sometimes lengthens ι before βρ or βλ in compounds (Ant. 336, O.C. 996 n.).—βροτῶν: cp. O. C. 279 πρὸς τὸν εὐσεβῆ βροτῶν.

305 ε. τάχ' οὖν τις... ἔσχε: 'perhaps, indeed, some one has put in'. οὖν has a concessive force; cp. 1306 ἀλλ' οὖν n. When τάχα stands without ὅν, it usu. = 'quickly': but cp. Plat. Legg. 711 A ὅμεις δὲ τάχα οὐδὲ τεθέσθε τυραννομένην πόλιν (where τάχ' ὅν is impossible). Here the force of τάχα is, 'I grant that visitors have come now and then; let us suppose such a moment.'—ἔσχε = προσέσχε, ἄρρητι: Thuc. 6. 62 ἔσχον ἐς Ἱμέραν. Cp. 221, 236.—πολλὰ γὰρ κ.τ.λ.: 'for such things (viz., such necessities as ἄκων implies) are likely to occur often (πολλὰ predicative adj., here practically equiv. to the adv.) in the long course of human life.' Now and again in the course of his lifetime, a sailor might be driven to seek shelter even on such a coast as that of Lemnos. ὁ μακρὸς ἀνθρώπων χρόνος is the long term of man's normal life; cp. Ant. 461 εἰ δὲ τοῦ χρόνου | πρόσθεν θανοῦμαι, 'before my natural term'. Cp. Her. 1. 32 ἐν γὰρ τῷ μακρῷ χρόνῳ πολλὰ μὲν ἐστὶ ἰδεῖν τὰ μὴ τις ἐθέλει, πολλὰ δὲ καὶ παθεῖν. ἐς γὰρ ἑβδομήκοντα ἔτεα οὖρον τῆς ζῆσης ἀνθρώπων προτίθημι. Id. 5. 9 γένοιτο δ' ἂν πᾶν ἐν τῷ μακρῷ χρόνῳ. A reminiscence of these phrases may have been in the poet's mind.

307 ε. οὗτοι referring to the indefinite τις (305): cp. Ant. 709 οὗτοι referring to δοῖς in 707 (n.).—λόγοις ἔλεοσι... οἰκτίραντες. As a general rule, ἐλεεῖν = 'to show pity or mercy in act'; οἰκτρεῖν, 'to feel pity.' Thus Dem. or. 28 § 20 σώσατε, ἐλεήσατε. [Dem.] or. 57 § 45 ἐλεοῦντ' ἂν... δικαιοτέρον ἢ προσ-απολλύοντο. Lys. or. 31 § 19 οἷς ἕτεροι δίδοναι παρ' ἑαυτῶν τι (i.e. ἐλεεῖν) προηροῦντο, διὰ τὴν ἀπορίαν οἰκτίραντες αὐτοῦς. See Heinrich Schmidt, Synonymik der griechischen Sprache, vol. III. pp. 577 ff.—καὶ τοῦ τι: see on 274.—στολήν: cp. 223 f. n.—ἐκέينو... θέλει sc. ποιῆσαι: cp. 100 n.

311 ε. σώσαι μ' ἐς οἴκους: cp. Aesch. Pers. 737 πρὸς ἥπειρον σεσῶσθαι: Ant. 189 n.—ἐν λιμῷ τε καὶ κακοῖσι. Some critics suspect κακοῖσι as not distinctive enough (see cr. n.); but it can surely denote those 'hardships' of his life which were superadded to the λιμός and the νόσος. For καὶ at the end of the v., cp. O. T. 267, 1234.—βόσκων: cp. 1167.—ἀδηφάγον: so 7 διαβόρω: 745 βρύκομαι. The νόσος is personified, as in 759 by ἐξεπλήσθη.

Nauck, πόντοις: Mekler, κηκίσι. 315 f. οἳ Porson: οἷς MSS. Wecklein (Arx p. 17), keeping οἷς, would change αὐτοῖς in 316 to αἰθῖς: Tournier, to ἀλγους.—ἀντίποιν' r: ἀντάποιν' L. 318 ἐποικτίρειν MSS.: Nauck gives ἐποικτιρεῖν. 319 ἐν λόγοις MSS. In L the 1st hand has written ωι over οισ. Gernhard conj. ὦν λόγοις. 320 f. ἀληθεῖς altered from ἀληθῆς by 1st hand in L.—συντυχῶν] Meineke conj. προστυχῶν. The v. l. γὰρ τυχῶν is cited by Camp. from Vat. (cod. Pal. 287, 14th cent.), and by Blaydes from Ven. (=Campb.'s V², cod. Marc. 616, prob. of 14th cent.): adopting which, Blaydes writes:—τοῖσδε μαρτυρῶ λόγοις | ὥς

314 π. βία: cp. 321: Tr. 38 Ἰφίτου βίαν.—οἳ, Porson's correction of οἷς, is certain. The sufferer prays that their sufferings may be like his own: cp. 275 n.: Ant. 927. With οἷς, both αὐτοῖς (as = 'themselves') and ἀντίποιν' become comparatively tame.—ἐμοῦ: cp. El. 592 ὡς τῆς θυγατρὸς ἀντίποινα λαμβάνεις.

317 f. ἴσα could imply either (1) 'as fully as they pitied you in their hearts,'—the sense in which the speaker means Ph. to take it: or (2) 'only as much as they showed you pity in their deeds': cp. Ant. 516 n. on ἐξ ἴσου.—ἐποικτίρειν is much better than Nauck's ἐποικτιρεῖν, which, as expressing a presentiment, would call too much attention to the ambiguity of ἴσα.

319 f. ἐν λόγοις. If ἐν is sound, the phrase must mean 'a witness present at (the utterance of) these words.' Cp. Plat. Phaedo 115 E μηδὲ λέγει ἐν τῇ ταφῇ, 'at the funeral,' i.e., while it is taking place.

The expression is unusual; but I hesitate to receive Gernhard's conject. ὦν.

συντυχῶν, 'having found them bad men in my intercourse with them (σύν-).' The force of the simple τυχῶν here prevails over that of the prep., and so a gen. replaces the regular dat. Since in O. C. 1483 σοῦ τύχοιμι must be read for συντύχοιμι, there is no other extant example of συντυχᾶν with gen. But there are analogies for the exception: in 1333 ἐντυχῶν Ἀσκληπιδῶν is the only instance of a gen. (instead of dat.) with ἐντυχᾶν, except Her. 4. 140 λελυμένης τῆς γεφύρης ἐντυχόντες. Again, 552 προστυχόντι τῶν ἰσων and El. 1463 ἐμοῦ κολαστοῦ προστυχῶν are isolated examples of a gen., instead of dat., with that compound. In 719 παῖδς ὑπαντήσας (instead of παῖδι) is also unique. It may be added that here, where συντυχῶν expresses, not merely a meeting with the men, but an experience of their character,

Thus have the Atreidae and the proud Odysseus dealt with me, my son: may the Olympian gods some day give them the like sufferings, in requital for mine!

CH. Methinks I too pity thee, son of Poeas, in like measure with thy former visitors.

NE. And I am myself a witness to thy words,—I know that they are true; for I have felt the villainy of the Atreidae and the proud Odysseus.

PH. What, hast thou, too, a grief against the accursed sons of Atreus,—a cause to resent ill-usage?

NE. Oh that it might be mine one day to wreak my hatred with my hand, that so Mycenae might learn, and Sparta, that Scyros also is a mother of brave men!

PH. Well said, my son! Now wherefore hast thou come in this fierce wrath which thou denouncest against them?

NE. Son of Poeas, I will speak out—and yet 'tis hard to speak—concerning the outrage that I suffered from them at my coming.

εἰς ἀληθείς. οἶδα γὰρ τυχὼν κ.τ.λ.—κακῶν | ἀνδρῶν Ἀτρειδῶν] Toup (keeping συν-τυχῶν) conj. κακοῖν | ἀνδρῶν Ἀτρειδῶν τῇ τ' Ὀδ. βλξ: so, too, Erfurdt, but with ἐκείνοι for Ἀτρειδῶν. The 1st hand seems to have written καὐτῶν: then κατ' was written above the line, but again erased, when κατ' was substituted for κ in the text.—ἐγκαλῶν] Blaydes conj. (inter alia) τόνδ' ἔχων:

the gen. has a special excuse.—We cannot make συντυχῶν mean, = 'having found them bad men, as you have done' (i.e., σύν σοι).

322 ε. ἡ γὰρ 248 n.—τοῖς πανώλεθροις: cp. Eur. El. 86 χῆ πανώλεθρος | μήτηρ.—παθῶν, and not merely κλύων.

324 ε. The corruption in the MSS., θυμῷ... χεῖρα is of the same nature as that in O. T. 376 (με... σοῦ for σε ἐμοῦ). Cp. Plat. Rep. 465 A εἰ ποῦ τις τῷ θυμοῖτο, ἐν τῷ τοιούτῳ πληρῶν τὸν θυμὸν (sating his wrath) ἤττον ἐπὶ μείζους ἂν τοι στάσεις.—Μυκῆναι, as the city of Agamemnon: Σπάρτη, as that of Menelaus. γνοίην, after the optative γένοιτο: cp. Aesch. Eum. 297 ἔλθοι ('may she come!')... | ὅπως γένοιτο τῶνδ' ἐμοὶ λυτήριος: and O. T. 506 n.

327 ε. εὖ γ', euge: Ar. Ecc. 213 εὖ γ', εὖ γε νῆ Δί', εὖ γε λέγε, λέγ', ὡγαθέ. There is no other example in Tragedy of this colloquial εὖ γε without a verb.—τίνος γὰρ: lit., 'Now (γὰρ, 249 n.), on account of what have you come thus charging them with (having provoked) the great anger (which you show)?' τίνος, causal gen., not with τὸν... χόλον alone, but with the whole sentence: cp. 751, 1308: O. T. 698 δίδαξον κἄμ', ἀναξ, ὅτου ποτὲ | μῆνιν τοσσηνδε πράγματος στήσας ἔχεις.—ὦδε, 'thus' (not 'hither,' as in O. T. 7).—χόλον ἐγκαλεῖν κατὰ τινος = to make one's anger a subject of accusation against a person, i.e. to charge him with having provoked it. The causal τίνος helps to explain the pregnant sense. Cp. O. T. 702 λέγ', εἰ σαφῶς τὸ νείκος ἐγκαλῶν ἔρεῖς, 'speak, if you can make a clear statement in imputing (the blame of) the feud.'

329 ε. ἔφεω, μόλις δ' ἐρώ. In such phrases μόλις usu. stands in the first clause, with μὲν: Anl. 1105 μόλις μὲν, καρδίας δ' ἐξίσταμαι, n. For ἐξερῶ—ἐρώ, cp. 249 f. The feeling is like that of Odysseus when asked by Alcinous to tell his story: Od. 9. 12 σοι δ' ἐμὰ κήδεα θυμὸς ἐπετράπετο στονόεντα | εἰρεσθ', ὅφρ' ἐτι μᾶλλον ὀδυρόμενος στεναχίζω.—μολῶν: to Troy, 353.

 332 φράσῃς...μὴ πέρα: for the place of μὴ, cp. 67 n.

335 τοξευτός...δαμείς=τόξοις δαμείς. The adj. here defines the instrument, as oft. elsewhere the place (O. T. 1411 θαλάσσιον | ἐκρίψατ'), or the manner (O. C. 1637 κατήνεσεν τάδ' ὀρκίως).

ὡς λέγουσιν implies that there was something mysterious in the death; Paris might seem to have inflicted it, but, in men's belief, the true slayer was Apollo. ἐκ, however, does not here denote ulterior, as dist. from immediate, agency ('by doom of Phoebus'; O. T. 1453); it is here no more than ὑπό.—According to one account, Paris shot Achilles, but with the aid of Apollo (as Athena had helped Achilles against Hector): so Il. 19. 416 (the immortal steed Xanthos to Achilles) ἀλλὰ σοὶ αὐτῶ | μῶρσιμόν ἐστι θεῶ τε καὶ ἀνέρι ἴφι δαμῆναι: and Hector's prophecy

336 ἀλλ' εὐγενὴς μὲν: ἀλλά= 'well' (said as if with a sigh); μὲν has a reflective tone, 'certainly,'—'it must be granted.' Cp. Plat. Gorg. 460 A ἀλλ' ἐγὼ μὲν οἶμαι,

When fate decreed that Achilles should die—

PH. Ah me! Tell me no more, until I first know this—say'st thou that the son of Peleus is dead?

NE. Dead,—by no mortal hand, but by a god's; laid low, as men say, by the arrow of Phoebus.

PH. Well, noble alike are the slayer and the slain! I scarce know, my son, which I should do first,—inquire into thy wrong, or mourn the dead.

NE. Methinks thine own sorrows, unhappy man, are enough for thee, without mourning for the woes of thy neighbour.

PH. Thou sayest truly.—Resume thy story, then, and tell me wherein they did thee a despite.

NE. They came for me in a ship with gaily decked prow,—princely Odysseus, and he who watched over my father's youth,— 341 εἰ τοιγαροῦν ('so, then') occurs also in O. T. 1519, Αἰ. 490, El. 1257.—αἰθῆς πάλιν (O. C. 1418 n.) refers to 329—331. He had there intimated that, on reaching Troy, he had suffered some grievous wrong. Yet it has been proposed to reject v. 342 on the ground that Ph. could not ask for the repetition of a story which he had not yet heard.—ὅτῳ, 'wherein,' dat. of respect: cp. Thuc. 2. 65 σφαλέντες...ἄλλη τε παρασκευὴ καὶ τοῦ ναυτικοῦ τῷ πλεόνι μορῶ: id. 4. 73 τῷ βελτίστῳ τοῦ ὁπλιτικοῦ βλαφθῆναι. The dat. ὅτῳ has not been influenced by the ἐν in the compound. For the acc. with ἐνυβρίζω, cp. Kaibel Epigr. Gr. 195 ἰ μή μου ἐνυβρίξης ἀγνὸν τάφον. The ἐν has the same force as in ἐγγελαῖν: cp. Eur. El. 68 ἐν τοῖς ἐμοῖς γὰρ οὐκ ἐνύβρισας κακοῖς.

prow': not simply 'gaily drest' (like λευκόστολος, etc.). Cp. Aesch. Pers. 408 εὐθὺς δὲ ναὺς ἐν νηὶ χαλκῇρὶ στόλον | ἐπαισεν, where στόλος poetically = ἐμβολον, the beak or ram, which was attached to the ship below the prow. The term ἀκροστόλιον was sometimes applied to the 'figure-head' (such as the head and neck of a swan). Here, ποικιλοστόλῳ seems to denote some special adornment, intended to mark the solemnity of the mission. These envoys came, not only to announce the death of Achilles, but to salute his heir. Cp. Pind. P. 2. 62 εὐανθέα δ' ἀναβάσομαι στόλον: where (whether στόλον be taken as 'prow,' or, more tamely, as 'voyage') the epithet refers to the adorning of the ship with garlands on a festival occasion. So, too, when the Salaminia was about to leave Athens on the annual θεωρία to Delos, the priest of Apollo crowned the stern with garlands (Plat. Phaed. 58 c).—Others regard ποικιλοστόλῳ as merely a constant epithet, equiv. to the Homeric μυλτοπάργος (now explained by some as referring 'to a literal painting of a face upon the bows'; Leaf, Il. 2. 637). The v. l. ποικιλοστόμῳ is merely a prosaic corruption.

344 δῖός τ' 'Ὀδυσσεύς: this is the Homeric πολύτλας δῖος Ὀδυσσεύς. The epithet δῖος ('*brigh*t') may be rendered 'princely,' or 'noble,' when applied to a chief (the idea of personal comeliness

χῶ τροφῆς: Phoenix, who, having been driven from the house of his father Amyntor, was received by Peleus, and entrusted with the care of the infant Achilles: to whom he says in Il. 9. 485 καὶ σε τοσοῦτον ἔθηκα (reared thee up to manhood), θεοῖς ἐπιείκελ' Ἀχιλλεῦ, | ἐκ θυμοῦ φιλέων. Another legend represents Achilles as brought up by Cheiron (Il. 11. 832).

T.* 90, and n. 1049.—ἀληθὲς does not occur as ἀληθῶς, though τὸ (or τό γε) ἀληθές is so used, like re vera. Here it has, indeed, an adverbial force, but is properly the acc. governed by λέγοντες. So in Eur. Ion 275 we may point thus: τί θαλ τὸδ'; ἄρ' ἀληθές; ἢ μάτην λόγος; For μάτην, false, cp. also Soph. El. 63, 1298.—γίγνοιτ': they said, οὐ θέμις γίγνεται, it becomes unlawful (by the fact that Achilles is now dead): cp. 116 n.

347 ἄλλον ἢ μ'. If there had been any previous indication of Neoptolemus, the reading ἄλλον ἢ μ' would have been tenable (see on 47 ἔλοιτό μ'): as there is none, we surely require ἢ μ'. Cp. Ant.

348 ε. οὐ πολὺν κ.τ.λ.: 'they did not cause me to make any long delay, or to refrain from sailing at once': another way of saying, 'they filled me with burning eagerness to sail at once.' He speaks with a certain bitterness, meaning, 'they well knew how to act their part, when they put the matter in that light.' For ἐπέχω τινά as 'to cause one to pause,' see Thuc. 4. 5 καὶ τι καὶ αὐτοὺς ὁ στρατὸς ἐτι ἐν ταῖς Ἀθήναις ὧν ἐπέσχε, 'partly, too, the fact that their army was in Attica caused them to delay' (instead of marching out at once). Id. 1. 129 καὶ σε μήτε νύξ μήτε ἡμέρα ἐπισχέτω (pres. imper.) ὥστε ἀνεῖναι πράσσειν τι. This sense of the trans. ἐπέχω and ἐπίσχω is not precisely the same as that in El. 517 ὅς σ' ἐπέιχ' ἀεὶ | μήτοι θυραλαὶ οὖσαν ἀσχύ- νειν φίλους, 'restrained thee' (by compulsory detention): i.e., οὐ πολὺν χρόνον μ' ἐπέσχον is not, 'they did not succeed in restraining me long' (as if they had been trying to do so); but rather, 'they gave me no cause for delaying long';—not, 'non diu me cohibuerunt,' but 'effecerunt ne diu morarer.'

Instead of μὴ με ναυστολεῖν, we might well prefer, with Blaydes, μὴ οὐχὶ ναυστολεῖν, were it not that palaeographically it is so improbable. And for μὴ where μὴ οὐ might be expected, cp. O. T. 1387 οὐκ ἂν ἐσχύμην | τὸ μὴ ποκλῆσαι, n. The repetition of με, as subject to ναυστολεῖν, may seem slightly saying, (whether truly or falsely, I know not,) that since my father had perished, fate now forbade that the towers of Troy should be taken by any hand but mine.

Saying that these things stood thus, my friend, they made me pause not long ere I set forth in haste,—chiefly through my yearning towards the dead, that I might see him before burial,—for I had never seen him; then, besides, there was a charm in their promise, if, when I went, I should sack the towers of Troy.

It was now the second day of my voyage, conj. μή οὐ με: Blaydes writes μή οὐχί. 351 οὐ γὰρ εἰδόμην] Seyffert writes οὐδ' ἄρ' εἰδόμην. Meineke suggests ὅπως ἴδοιμι· ζῶν γὰρ οὐ νυν εἰδόμην· but would rather inelegant; but it is not grammatically objectionable.—See Appendix.

351 οὐ γὰρ εἰδόμην, 'for I had (never) seen him.' The comment ζῶντα, written after εἰδόμην in the margin of L, represents the simplest and best interpretation. Neoptolemus was born in Scyros, and remained there, under the care of his maternal grandfather, Lycomedes (243), until he went to Troy (see n. on 239 f.). Soon after the birth of Neoptolemus, his father Achilles had returned to Phthia; whence, some eight or ten years later, he went to Troy, without revisiting Scyros. Hence Neoptolemus can say that he had never seen his father. In this conception Sophocles is following the Iliad. From Il. 11. 765—782 it appears that Phthia, not Scyros, was the place from which Achilles went to Troy. And in Il. 19. 331 f. Achilles speaks of his son as having never seen Phthia; for, apostrophising the dead Patroclus, he says, 'my soul had hoped that thou should'st return to Phthia,'—ὡς ἂν μοι τὸν παῖδα θοῇ ἐνὶ νηὶ μελαίνῃ | Σκυρόθεν ἐξαγάγοις, καὶ οἱ δέϊξας ἕκαστα, | κτήσῃ ἐμὴν δμῶδας τε καὶ ὑπερεφές μέγα δῶμα.—Apolodorus (3. 13. 8) follows a different version, according to which Achilles had remained in Scyros till he was brought thence to Troy by Odysseus.—For the midd. εἰδόμην in dial., cp. El. 977 ἴδεσθε, ib. 892 κατειδόμην, Tr. 151 εἰσίδουτο: in lyrics, below, 1113, Al. 351; and in anapaests, Tr. 1004. Cp. ὀρωμένη (midd.) in dial., Tr. 306.—See Appendix.

θαυμάσαι μὲν ἄξια, | σπουδῆς γε μέντοι κ.τ.λ. In Eur. Med. 1145 ff. πρὶν μὲν...εἴτα μέντοι is not strictly similar, since εἴτα is there temporal.—χῶ λόγος καλὸς προσήν, 'there was a further charm' (καλὸς predicate) 'in the reason suggested,—if indeed I was to take,' etc.: ὁ λόγος is the reason for going, suggested by the envoys, (as distinguished from the natural ἔμερος in the son's mind,) and is explained by εἰ...αἰρήσοιμ'. Not, 'the fama, too, was attractive.' For προσήν cp. Xen. H. 3. 1. 28 μισθὸς μὲν ἡμῖν...ἐργασται..., ἣν δέ τι προσεργασώμεθα, καὶ ταῦτα προσέσται. For a different use, cp. 129 n.—εἰ...αἰρήσοιμ': he said to himself, εἰ αἰρήσω. For the fut. opt., cp. Xen. Cyr. 3. 1. 3 εἴ τινα φεύγοντα λήψοιτο, προηγόρευεν ὅτι ὡς πολέμῳ χρῆσοιτο (he said, εἰ λήψομαι...χρῆσομαι). For εἰ with optat., where one's own former thought is indicated in dependence on a past tense, cp. Lys. or. 3 § 3 αἰσχυρόμενος, εἰ μέλλοιεν πολλοὶ μοι συνεῖσεσθαι, ἡνεσχόμεν (his thought had been, αἰσχύνομαι, εἰ μέλλουσι). —τὰ πὶ Τροίᾳ πύργῳ (cp. 611), the citadel which crowns the city of Troy, the Πύργος ἀκρὴ of Homer (Il. 5. 460, 6. 512),—who uses only the sing. Hence Ilios is called αἰπεινὴ, ὀφρυόεσσα (Il. 22. 411): cp. Introd. to Homer, p. 148. For the prep. ἐπὶ, cp. Ἀθηναίους. The distance from Scyros to Sigeum is about 125 miles.—κὰγὼ: for καὶ in temporal parataxis (instead of ὅτε), cp. O. T. 718 n.—πικρὸν Σίγειον. Sigeum, the n.w. promontory of the Troad (now Yeni Shehr), is fitly named, as being the point for which he, coming from Scyros in the s.w., would make; and also because the tumulus, traditionally known as the 'tomb of Achilles,' is near Sigeum. It is 'bitter' or 'cruel' to him, not only on account of his father's death, but through the memory of his wrongs. The epithet is here a fine dramatic touch: while the conjecture κὰγὼ π' ἄκρον, which many recent edd. adopt, is tamely prosaic. Cp. Od. 17. 448 μὴ τάχα πικρὴν Αἰγυπτον καὶ Κύπρον ἴκηαι.—οὐρίῳ πλάτῃ, instrum. dat.; sped by oars, while a s.w. wind also filled his sails. Cp. 'velis remisque,' 'ventis remis,' etc.—κατηγόμην, was coming into harbour at, with acc., instead of the usual acc. with εἰς: cp. 244 προσέσχεσ...γῆν (n.). Poetry is bold in its use of the simple acc. after verbs of motion; cp. 1175: O. C. 643 δόμους στείλχειν.

357 f. ὁμνύντες after στρατὸς: so Il. 17. 755 τῶν δ' ὥστε ψαρῶν νέφος ἔρχεται ἢ κολοίων, | οὐλον κεκλήγοντες: cp. Ani. 1021 f. n.—ζῶντ' Ἀχ. πάλιν: legend naturally revived the image of the father in his son; Nauck cites trag. fr. adesp. 295 οὐ παῖς Ἀχιλλέως, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνος αὐτὸς εἶ.

369 f. ἔκειτ', 'lay low in death,' a poet. equiv. for 'had died' (not=προέκειτο, 'lay on the bier,' ready for the ἐκφορά). Cp. El. 1134 ὅπως θανῶν ἔκεισο τῇ τόθ' ἡμέρᾳ, | τύμβου πατρός σου κοινὸν εἰληχῶς μέρος. Ani. 1174 καὶ τίς φονεῖ; τίς δ' ὁ κείμενος; Simonides fr. 60 κείσαι ζῶν ἐτι μάλλον τῶν ὑπὸ γᾶς ἐκείνων. It is natural to suppose that the son's wish to arrive before the burial (351) was fulfilled; for the tidings of the death would have been sent at once, and he would have reached Troy not later, perhaps, than five days after it (cp. 354). In Hector's case the funeral took place only on the tenth day after his remains had been brought home (Il. 24. 785). The conciseness of the narrative here, which does not refer to the obsequies (unless in δάκ-

He, then, lay dead; and I, hapless one, when I had wept for him, presently went to the Atreidae,—to friends, as I well might deem,—and claimed my father's arms, with all else that had been his. O, 'twas a shameless answer that they made! 'Seed of Achilles, thou canst take all else that was thy sire's; but of those arms another man now is lord,—the son of Laertes.' The tears came into my eyes,—I sprang up in passionate anger, and said in my bitterness,—'Wretch! What, have ye dared to give my arms 361 ε. ὡς ἐκός ἦν goes closely with φίλους,—'friends, as it was reasonable to suppose them.' The only peculiarity is that ὡς ἐκός ἦν here refers to a just hope felt at a past moment, and not to the fitness of a past fact (as if the sense was, 'friends, as they naturally were,'—or, 'having gone, as I naturally did'). Cp. Plat. Menex. 247 B φίλοι παρὰ φίλους ἡμῶς ἀφίξεσθε.—τά τ' ἄλλ' ὅσ' ἦν: Homer describes the κλισία of Achilles as handsomely furnished (cp., e.g., Il. 24. 597), and it now contained the treasures which Priam had brought as the Ἐκτορέης κεφαλῆς ἀπερείσι' ἀποινα (ib. 228—236: 579).

363 τλημονέστατον λόγον, here = ἀναιδέστατον, most audacious, shameless (in Eur. Hec. 562 the same phrase = 'most couragious speech'): El. 439 εἰ μὴ τλημονεστάτη γυνὴ | πασῶν ἐβλαστε: Aesch. Cho. 383 τλάμονι καὶ πανούργῳ | χειρὶ.

364 ε. πᾶσι σοι, 'it is open to thee,' 'thou hast free leave': cp. Ant. 213 n.—Δαίτρον: cp. n. on 86 f.

367 ε. δακρύσας, the tears of pain and anger started into his eyes. (For the aor. part., cp. Plat. Phaed. 116 D καὶ ἄμα δακρύσας, μεταστρεφόμενος ἀπ' αὐτοῦ.) Many recent editors change this to ἀκούσας, or a compound of it (see cr. n.). But the traditional reading is incomparably more forcible; it is also thoroughly Homeric in spirit; Il. 23. 385 (Diomedes, when Apollo strikes the whip from his hand in the chariot-race) τοῖο δ' ἀπ' ὀφθαλμῶν χυτο δάκρυα χωμένοιο. Cp. Iuv. 1. 168 Inde irae et lacrimae.—ἐξανίσταμαι: he had been seated, as in converse with friends.—ὄργῃ: modal dat., O. T. 405 n.: βαρεῖα, vehement: cp. μῆνιν βαρεῖαν (O. C. 1328, Ai. 656).—καταλήγσας: cp. Ant. 767 νοῦς δ' ἐστὶ τηλικούτος ἀλγῆσας βαρύς. This compound (in which κατὰ is intensive) occurs elsewhere only in later Greek.

369 ε. ὦ σχέτλι' is said to Agamemnon: ἢ 'τολμήσατ' (cp. 360 δάκρυσα) refers to him and Menelaus: so O. C. 1104 προσέλθετ', ὦ παῖ (said to Antigone, entering with Ismene).—πρὶν μαθεῖν ἐμοῦ, before ye had heard from me (that ye might do so). The phrase is so far unusual that, when μαρθάνω takes a gen. (of the person) only, it usually = 'to understand,' as Plat. Gorg. 463 D ἄρ' οὖν ἂν μάθοις ἀποκρυναμένον; Id. Phileb. 51 C εἰ μου μαρθάνεις. Similar is O. T. 545 μαρθάνειν...σοῦ, to comprehend thy teachings. Cp., however, 541 ὦν μαρθάντες, = 'having made inquiries of them.' So here μαθεῖν is little more than ἀκούσαι or πυνθέσθαι.

371 f. ὁ δ' εἶπ' Ὀδυσσεύς. Here ὁ is a substantival pronoun, and the proper name is added as by an after-thought: a Homeric use, as Il. 2. 402 αὐτὰρ ὁ βοῦν ἱέρευσεν, ἀναξ ἀνδρῶν Ἀγαμέμνων (cp. Monro Hom. Gram. § 258). Similarly Plat. Phaed. 70 B ἡ δ' ὅς, ὁ Σωκράτης.—ὦν κυρεῖ. Hermann objected to the historic pres., as unsuitable to a parenthetic remark; but without cause. Cp. Ant. 253 f., with n.: Eur. Hee. 963 ff. σχέες· τυγχάνω γὰρ ἐν μέσοις Θρηκῆς ὁροῖς | ἀπῶν, ὅτ' ἡλθεσ δεῦρ'· ἐπεὶ δ' ἀφικόμεν, ... | ἐς ταῦτόν ἤδε συμπίτνει. Brunck's ἦν κυρῶν (cp. 544) is smoother, indeed, but could hardly have generated the MS. reading.—τάδε does not imply that the arms are present (one of Nauck's grounds for preferring δεδράκας'), but only that they are the subject of conversation.

373 παρών, not merely, 'being here at Troy' (while Neoptolemus was absent, 379), but, 'being present at the critical moment': cp. 1405: Ar. Lys. 283 τασδί δέ... | ἐγὼ οὐκ ἄρα σχίσω παρὼν πολήματος τοσούτου; Eur. Hipp. 1242 τίς ἀνδρ' ἀριστον βούλεται σῶσαι παρών; (i.e., to go and save).—Acc. to Arctinus in the Aethiopis, it was Ajax who carried the body of Achilles out of the fray, while Odysseus kept the Trojans off (Proclus p. 479). In Od. 5. 309 f. Odysseus speaks of the day, ὅτε μοι πλείστοι χαλκῆρεα δοῦρα | Τρῶες ἐπέρριψαν περὶ Πηλεΐωνι θανόντι. In Ov. Met. 13. 284 he says: his... humeris ego corpus Achillis | Et simul arma tuli.

374 f. ἤρασσον: cp. Ai. 725 οὐείδουσιν | ἤρασσον ἐνθεν κῶθεν: for the lit. sense, *O. For this use of the midd. ποιούμενος, cp. O. C. 1144 οὐ γὰρ λόγοισι τὸν βίον to another man, without my leave?' Then said Odysseus,—for he chanced to be near,—'Yea, boy, this award of theirs is just; I saved the arms and their master at his need.' Then straightway, in my fury, I began to hurl all manner of taunts at him, and spared not one, if I was indeed to be robbed of my arms by him. At this point,—stung by the abuse, though not prone to wrath,—he answered,—'Thou wast not here with us, but absent from thy duty. And since thou must talk so saucily, thou shalt never carry those arms back to Scyros.'

Thus upbraided, thus insulted, I sail for home, despoiled of mine own by that worst offspring of an evil breed, Odysseus. And yet he, I think, is less to blame than the rulers. For an army, like a city, hangs wholly on its leaders; and when men do lawless deeds, 'tis the counsel of their teachers that corrupts them.

377 ε ἐνθάδ' ἦκων, brought to that point,—provoked so strongly: cp. O. T. 687 ὅρῳς ἐν' ἦκει: ib. 1158 ἀλλ' εἰς τὸδ' ἦξει.—οὐ δύσσοργος: as his mother speaks of his ἀγανοφροσύνη (Od. 11. 203).—πρὸς δέξικουσεν with δηχθεῖς, not with ἡμέψατο. πρὸς with acc., as='in view of,' can always represent the cause of a feeling; cp. Tr. 1211 ἀλλ' εἰ φοβεί πρὸς τοῦτο.—δ' ἐξήκουσεν, the taunts which had been addressed to him (382): here ἐξ merely strengthens the notion of 'being reviled,' as in ἐξονειδίζω: cp. 676.

380 ε ἐπειδὴ καὶ λέγεις, 'since thou must speak thus,'—καὶ emphasising λέγεις: cp. *O. 382 ε. The words ἀκούσας κάξονειδισθεῖς form a rhetorical climax,—'having been addressed, yes, insulted, with such taunts': κακά is object to ἀκούσας, and also 'cognate' acc. with ἐξονειδισθεῖς. Wecklein's ingenious κάξονειδίσας seems unlikely, since N. is dwelling on his wrongs rather than on his own heat in resenting them.—πρὸς οἰκου: the plur. implies, 'the home country,' as 60 ἐξ οἰκῶν μολεῖν. The sing. (suggesting rather the private home) occurs in 58, 240, 488, 548.—τητώμενος: O. C. 1200 n.—κακὰ κακῶν, as the reputed son of Sisyphus, 417 n. Cp. O. T. 1397 κακὸς τ' ὢν κακὰ κακῶν.

385 ε. τοὺς ἐν τέλει, the Atreidae: cp. Ant. 67 n.—πάσα and σύμπασι have here an adverbial force,—'wholly': cp. At. 275 κείνός τε λύπη πᾶς ἐλήλαται κακῇ. ἐστι...τῶν ἡγουμένων: is under their influence: cp. O. T. 917 ἐστὶ τοῦ λέγοντος, n. (But in Ant. 738 οὐ γὰρ κρατούντος ἡ πόλις νομίζεται; 'is deemed his property.')—στρατός, 'army' (with reference to the Greek army at Troy): not=δῆμος,—a sense which occurs in Aesch. and elsewhere (Ant. 8 n.), but which is nowhere requisite in Soph., and which would be weak here, just after πόλις.—οἱ δ' ἀκοσμοῦντες βροτῶν (the gen. as in 304), the unruly; those who violate the rights of others, as Odysseus has done: cp. Ant. 730 and 660.

summer of 411 B.C., was emphatically a case in which οἱ ἡγοούμενοι—Peisander and his fellow oligarchs—had corrupted or intimidated a πόλις. The Army at Samos had illustrated the same process in the case of a στρατός,—the oligarchic officers, in correspondence with Alcibiades, having been the first agents of mischief. (Thuc. 8. 47 and 75: Grote VIII. pp. 9 and 63.) Thus, to the ears of an Athenian audience, the poet's verses might well suggest a lightly-hinted apology for those citizens who, against their will, had been compromised by the conspirators.—Cp. O. C. 1537 n.

389 f. λόγος λέλεκται πᾶς: cp. 241 n. —Ἀτρεΐδας. We notice the art with which, all through his story, Neoptolemus has contrived to throw the chief odium on the Atreidae. Thus, after calling their speech τλημονέστατος (363), he remarks incidentally that Odysseus was a good-tempered man (377); and though he calls him, indeed, κάκιστος (384), he hastens to add that the higher powers were more to blame (385). And now, at the close, he names the Atreidae alone. Thus he acts in the spirit of his mentor's advice (64 f.), but refines upon it.—φίλος: cp. 585 f.

391—402 Mindful of their young chief's precept—πειρώ τὸ παρὸν θεραπεύειν (149)—the Chorus seize this moment in order to deepen the impression left on the mind of Philoctetes. It was in the land of the Trojans—often called 'Phrygians'—that Neoptolemus was wronged by the Atreidae. 'Then and there—say the Chorus—'we invoked the most awful deity of the land, the great Earth Mother, the Phrygian Cybele—to punish our prince's wrong.' The interposition of the Chorus is admirably effective for the purpose of making their master's indignation appear genuine.

This strophe, to which vv. 507—518 form the antistrophe, is a ὑπόρχημα, or 'dance-song' (O. T. 1086 n.). The dochmiacs of which it is mainly composed (see Metrical Analysis) are accompanied by animated movement, expressive of the lively resentment which these memories suggest.

From a mythological point of view the verses are of singular interest. The attributes given to the goddess belong to three groups. (1) παμβῶτι Γᾶ recognises her in the primary character of an Elemental power. (2) μήτερ...Διός identifies her with Rhea. (3) ὄρεστέρα, λεόντων ἔφεδρε, and the mention of the Pactolus, present her as the specially Phrygian Cybele. But these three characters are completely fused in the unity of the μάτηρ πότνια.

391 f. ὄρεστέρα: cp. Eur. Helen. 1301, where the ὄρελα... | μάτηρ θεῶν is identified with Demeter. In order to appreciate the large significance of this epithet in relation to the 'Phrygian Mother,' we must remember that 'Phrygia' originally denoted the whole interior highlands of Asia Minor west of the Halys (Kiepert, Anc. Geo. § 64). παμβῶτι: cp. the epithets βιόδωρος (1162), φερέσβιος, πουλοβότειρα, φυσίζοος, κουροτρόφος, etc.

My tale is told; and may the foe of the Atreidae have the favour of Heaven, as he hath mine!

CH. Goddess of the hills, all-fostering Earth, mother of Strophe. Zeus most high, thou through whose realm the great Pactolus rolls golden sands,—there also, dread Mother, I called upon thy name, when all the insults of the Atreidae were being heaped upon this man,—when they were giving his sire's armour, that peerless marvel, to the son of Lartius—hear it, thou immortal one, who ridest on bull-slaughtering lions!

δοσαν 1: παραδίδοσαν L. 401 λαρτίου Γ: λαερτίου L.—Bergk conj. λέοντων ἐφεδρ', ἰὼ τάργ' ἰδοῦ. 402 σέβας] Nauck conj. γέρας or κλέος.

Athens was sacred to Rhea Cybele: see on Ant. 1070 ff. The name Rhea (probably connected with ἔρα, earth) was doubtless older than Cybele (see Welcker Götterl. 1. 221), and in Crete the ancient cult of Rhea seems never to have passed into that of Cybele, while in Asia Minor Rhea and Cybele came to be identified. Hence Demetrius of Scepsis (in the Troad) could say that Rhea was not worshipped in Crete, because, by Rhea, he understood Cybele (Strabo p. 472). The legends of the Cretan Ida were easily transferred to the Mysian: there was a Δίκη in the Troad (Strabo l.c.) as well as in Crete. Cp. Apoll. Rh. 1. 1139 ῥόμβῳ καὶ τυπάνῳ Πείην Φρύγες ἰλάσκοντο. Propertius 3. 1. 27 Idaeum Simoenta (the river at Troy), Iovis cunabula parvi.

392 Πакτωλόν: mentioned here as the river on which Sardis was situated,—that city being a famous seat of Cybele's worship. Her. 5. 102 Σάρδιες μὲν ἐνεπρήσθησαν (during the Ionian revolt in 502 B.C.), ἐν δὲ αὐτῇσι καὶ ἱρὸν ἐπιχωρήσας θεοῦ Κυβήβης τὸ σκηπτόμενον οἱ Πέρσαι ὕστερον ἀντενεπίμψαν τὰ ἐν Ἑλλήσιν ἱρά. Hence an Athenian poet might well think of Sardis in speaking of Cybele. Lydia was included in the older and larger meaning of Phrygia (cp. Ant. 825 n.).—εὗχρυσον holds the place of a predicate, but is clearly not intended as such ('rulest so as to make it rich in gold'): it is merely a second epithet, added as if by an after-thought, or as if Πакτωλόν-εὗχρυσον formed one notion: see on O. T. 1199. The Pactolus brought down gold dust from Mount Tmolus, the range just south of Sardis (Verg. Aen. 10. 142: Hor. Epid. 15. 19, etc.).

395 π. κἀκεῖ, at Troy also (as now in Lemnos).—ἐπηγδοίμαν=ἐπεκαλούμην: the only classical example of this compound.—'Ατρειδᾶν ὕβρις πᾶσ', 'all' their insolence,—referring to the full account of it which N. has just given (363 ff.). Others understand: (1) 'the complete' or 'consummate' ὕβρις: cp. 142 πᾶν κράτος (n.). Or (2), making πᾶσ' predicative, 'went with all its force' (cp. 385 n.).

398 τὰ πάτρια, which had belonged to his father, Achilles: a rare poetical use of πάτριος as=πατρώος: cp. Pind. O. 6. 62 πατρία δοσα, the voice of his father (Apollo). In O. T. 1394 τὰ πάτρια... δώματ'='the house of my fathers,' πάτριος having its usual sense. But that sense is impossible here, since Achilles had been the first possessor of the arms wrought by Hephaestus.—παρεδίδοσαν: cp. 64 n.

400 ε. ἰὼ calls on the goddess to note the wrong: μάκαιρα, i.e. θεά, as Sappho fr. 1. 13 τὸ δ', ὦ μάκαιρα, | μειδιάσαις ἀθανάτῳ προσώπῳ.—ταυροκτόνων, a general epithet, marking the fierceness of the creatures whom the goddess subdues: cp. Il. 18. 579 σμερδαλέω δὲ λέοντε δὴ ἐν πρώτῃσι βόεσσιν | ταύρον ἐρύγμῃλον ἐχέτην.—λέοντων ἐφεδρε is best taken literally, of riding on lions. Cybele riding sideways on a lion was often represented in works of art (statues, reliefs, coins). Pliny 35. 109 says that Nicomachus painted deum...matrem in leone sedentem. This painter belonged to the Thebano-Attic school, and flourished c. 360 B.C.: we may well suppose, then, that the lion-riding Cybele was familiar in the time of Sophocles. Cp. Eur. Ion 202 πτεροῦντος ἐφεδρον ἵππου (Bellero-phon).—But, as the Homeric ἵππων

ἐπιβάς (Il. 5. 328) refers to chariot-driving, so here λεόντων ἐφεδρε might also mean, in a car drawn by lions. An altar-relief of the Roman age, reproduced by Baumeister (Denkm. p. 801), from Zoega's Bassiril. (i. 13), shows her thus: two lions draw her car; she wears a short-sleeved chiton, while the long veil attached to the back of her mural crown flows down like a mantle; in her right hand is a laurel branch; her left rests on the rim of the tympanon, holding it upright on her left knee.—It is less likely that λεόντων ἐφεδρε means, 'seated above lions'; i.e., on a throne with lions crouching below at each side. Arrian (Periplus 9) mentions such a representation, which, like the other two, seems to have been frequent.

402 σέβας must be acc. in appos. with τεύχεα: it cannot be (as the first schol. suggests) a vocative addressed to the goddess. The armour of Achilles, made by the god Hephaestus, is a σέβας, an object on which men gaze with reverent wonder. So Thetis describes these arms as καλὰ μάλ', οἳ οὐπω τις ἀνὴρ ὥμοισι φόρησεν (Il. 19. 11). Cp. El. 685 (Orestes) εἰσῆλθε λαμπρός, πᾶσι τοῖς ἐκεῖ σέβας. The dat. τῷ Δαρτίου must be taken with παρεδίδωσαν, which requires it. And it seems best not to take that dat. with σέβας also. If we did so, the phrase would mean, 'an object of reverence' to Odysseus; not, an 'honour' or 'glory' to him. But, though τῷ Δαρτίου is not construed with σέβας, their juxtaposition is forcible; 'to him—those peerless arms.' The long separation of the verb from its dative is excused by the fact that the interposed ὡ μάκαρα... ἐφεδρε prepares the indignant emphasis on τῷ Δαρτίου.

We should not, then, change σέβας to γέρας. As Nauck remarks, the two words are confused in the schol. on Eur. Or. 383 (vol. 2, p. 122, 18 Dind.). L affords an instance of γ corrupted to σ in 571 (ἔσω for ἐγώ). In uncials σέβας might have originated from B for P. But the sense given by γέρας would be tamer.

403 ε. σύμβολον...λύπης, 'a grief-token'; i.e. a token consisting in your grief (defining gen.; cp. 159 οἶκον...κόιτης, n.). σύμβολα were tallies, sometimes consisting of dice (λίσπαι, Plat. Symp. 193 A) or knuckle-bones (ἀστροφάλοι) sawn in two. A message or request, purporting to come from a friend at a distance, could thus be tested. The bearer was asked to produce the other half of the divided token. See Her. 6. 86. 2 ἀποδεικνύντες τὰ σύμβολα, ἀπαίτεον τὰ χρήματα: Eur. Med. 613 ξένοις...πέμπειν σύμβολ', = to give one credentials to friends abroad. When two persons established such signs between them, they were said σέμβολα ποιεῖσθαι: C. I. G. 87 ποιησάσθω δὲ καὶ σύμβολα ἢ βουλή πρὸς τὸν βασιλέα τὸν Σιδωνίων, ὅπως ἂν ὁ δῆμος ὁ Ἀθηναίων εἰδῇ ἂν τι πέμπη...δεόμενος τῆς πόλεως. As each half was called σύμβολον, the word can mean 'counterpart': Plat. Symp. 191 D ζητεῖ δὴ αἰὲ τὸ αὐτοῦ ἕκαστος ξύμ-

PH. It seems that ye have come to me, friends, well commended by a common grief; and your story is of a like strain with mine, so that I can recognise the work of the Atreidae and of Odysseus. For well I know that he would lend his tongue to any base pretext, to any villainy, if thereby he could hope to compass some dishonest end. No, 'tis not at this that I wonder, but rather that the elder Ajax, if he was there, could endure to see it.

NE. Ah, friend, he was no more; I should never have been thus plundered while he lived.

405 ε. προσάδει, ye are in accord with me, i.e. your complaint strikes a note which finds an echo in my own mind. Cp. O. T. 1113 ξυνάδει τῷδε τάνδρῃ σύμμετρος (in respect of age). ξυνάδειν is properly said of two or more voices which harmonise; προσάδειν of a vocal accompaniment which harmonises with music. Cp. Eur. Ion 359 προσφῶδός ἡ τύχη τῷμῳ πάθει.—ταῦτ'...ἔργα=ταῦτα τὰ ἔργα (O. C. 471 n.).

407 ε. ἀν...θιγόντα=δτι θίγοι ἄν: cp. Thuc. 7. 42 ὁρῶν...εἰ ἐπικρατήσεί τις...ῥαδίως ἂν αὐτὸ ληφθέν (=δτι ῥαδίως ἂν ληφθείη). O. C. 761 κάπῳ παντὸς ἂν φέρων | λόγου δικαίου μηχανήματα ποικίλων, n.—With πανουργίας, despite its derivation, πάσης must be supplied: so in Ant. 300 f. πανουργίας is followed by παντὸς ἔργου.

ἀφ' ἧς μηδὲν...ποεῖν: from (=as a result of) which he would be likely, in the end, to effect anything not just. His objects have always something unjust in them; and he is unscrupulous in the choice of means. When the optat. with ἄν (as here the implied θίγοι ἄν) stands in the antecedent clause, the optat. (without ἄν) often stands in the relative clause: cp. n. on O. C. 560 δευῆν γὰρ τιν' ἄν πρᾶξιν τύχοις | λέξας ὅποιος ἐξαφιστάμην ἐγώ. This usage confirms L's μέλλοι against μέλλει (though the latter would be tenable: cp. Ant. 375 n.).—μηδὲν here admits of two distinct explanations, though the sense is virtually the same with either. (1) It is 'generic' (170 n.): i.e. μηδὲν δίκαιον=a thing such as to be not just. Cp. 443 ὅπου | μηδεὶς ἐψῆ: Ant. 493 ὁ θυμὸς... | τῶν μηδὲν ὀρθῶς ἐν σκότῳ τεχνωμένων. I prefer this view. (2) It is 'final': i.e. μέλλοι ποεῖν=ποήσει: 'from which he shall not effect anything just.' When the fut. indic. in a relative clause denotes purpose, the negative is μή: cp. O. T. 1412 ἐκρίψατ', ἔνθα μήποτ' εἰσόψεσθ' ἔτι (n.).—ἐς τέλος, ultimately (though his λόγος may be plausible at first sight): cp. Her. 9. 37 οὐ μέντοι ἐς γε τέλος οἱ συνήρκει τὸ ἐχθρὸς ('in the end,'—though for a time he prospered).—ποεῖν: for the spelling, cp. on 120: for the pres. inf. after μέλλοι, O. T. 967 n.

411 ε. ὁ μέλων, the son of Telamon; Ajax the son of Oileus (the leader of the western Locrians) was μέλων, οὗ τι τόσος γε ὅσος Τελαμῶνιος Ἄλας (Il. 2. 528).—οὐκ ἦν ἐτι ζῶν. Soon after the death of Achilles, and either just before or just after the coming of Neoptolemus, the Atreidae had awarded the arms to Odysseus. The suicide of Ajax followed closely on the award. He died, then, either just before, or just after, the arrival of Neoptolemus at Troy. Neoptolemus implies that he left Troy for home just after the award (382). Since his indignation is feigned, it might be supposed that the interval between the award and his sailing (for Lemnos) had really been longer. But, even if that interval had been as brief as he represents it, he might still have known, before leaving Troy, that Ajax was dead.

The χ set against this line in L is understood by the schol. as calling attention to the recurrence of the form λαέρτιος: but it may also have meant that, with the double gen., the construction was found obscure. 421 In L the 1st hand wrote τί δ' ὦ

414 ἀλλ' ἡ...; In this formula ἡ asks the question: ἀλλά marks surprise, as it so often marks remonstrance ('nay, can it be so?' or, 'what, can that be true?'). The fact that ἀλλ' is absent from L (see cr. n.) has led some editors to prefer the conjecture ἡ γάρ. But it may be observed:—(a) ἀλλ' ἡ was a comparatively unfamiliar phrase, and therefore the fact that the other mss. have it is presumptive evidence of its genuineness. (b) The preceding πῶς εἶπας cannot be urged as an objection: cp. Eur. Alc. 58 πῶς εἶπας; ἀλλ' ἡ καὶ σοφὸς λελήθας ὦν; It is true, however, that such a preface to ἀλλ' ἡ is unusual: cp. El. 879: Aesch. Ch. 220: Eur. Alc. 816, Helen. 490, Heracl. 425, Hipp. 932, [Eur.] Rhes. 36.—Remark that in O. C. 26, where ἀλλά and ἡ are separated, the peculiar force of ἀλλ' ἡ is not present.

416 οἶμοι τάλας, 'woe is me' (not, 'alas, poor Ajax'): as O. T. 744 n.—ἀλλ' οὐχ: the negative is repeated, for greater emphasis, in 418: cp. Ant. 5 ὁποῖον οὐ | τῶν σὼν τε κἀμῶν οὐκ ὅπωπ' ἐγὼ κακῶν, n.—ὁ Τυδέως γόνος, Diomedes. Philoctetes had no personal grievance against him, but dislikes him as being a man of the same stamp as Odysseus, with whom the tenth book of the Iliad associates him in stealing the horses of Rhesus. In Il. 6. 230 it is Diomedes who proposes to Glaucus that the latter should exchange 'golden armour for armour of bronze.' Lesches, in the Little Iliad, and Euripides, in his Philoctetes, made Diomedes come to Lemnos to fetch Philoctetes: see Introd. Cp. 592.

417 οὐμπολητὸς Σισύφου Λαερτίῳ, 'the son of Sisyphus, bought by Laertes,'—because Anticleia was said to have been pregnant when Laertes married her. The word ἐμπολητὸς probably means that Laertes gave a large 'bride-price' (ἔδνα) to Anticleia's father, Autolycus. So the scholiast, πολλὰ δοὺς χρήματα ἡγάγετο. This is simpler than to suppose that ἐμπολητὸς is merely 'acquired' (as a bad bargain), like λωβητὸν ἐμπόλημα in Tr. 538.

The legend is not Homeric, but is already known to Aesch. (fr. 169), and is congenial to the spirit in which the dramatists often conceive Odysseus; cp. Ai. 190, fr. 143 (ὡς ὁ Σίσυφος πολλὸν | ἐνδῆλος ἐν σοί): Eur. I. A. 524, Cycl. 104: Lycophron 344 (τῆς Σισυφείας δ' ἀγκύλης λαμπουρίδος, 'crafty fox'): Ov. Met. 13. 31 sanguine cretus | Sisyphio, furtisque et fraude simillimus illi.

NE. Think of him as of one who sees the light no more.

PH. Woe is me! But the son of Tydeus, and the offspring of Sisyphus that was bought by Laertes—they will not die; for they ought not to live.

PH. And what of my brave old friend, Nestor of Pylos,—is he not alive? Their mischiefs were often baffled by his wise counsels.

παλαιός, and then changed ω to $\acute{\omega}$, also writing $\acute{\omega}$ above it. The only variants for ω are $\delta\varsigma$ ($\delta\varsigma$ in A), and δ (as in V). Among the conjectures are:—(1) Badham (on Eur. I. T. 517) $\tau\acute{\iota}$ γὰρ δ . (2) Hermann, $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' δ σταδαίος (= $\pi\rho\acute{o}\varsigma$, Hesych.). In his Retractationes (1841), p. 6, he prefers, however, $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' $\delta\varsigma$ παλαιός, ἀγαθός φίλος τ' ἐμός. (3) Schneidewin $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' αὖ. (4) Burges and Meineke, $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' ; οὐ...; (5) Hartung, $\tau\acute{\iota}$ $\delta\eta$ δ . (6) Mekler, $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' ; $\epsilon\theta'$ δ . 422 πύλιος ἔστιν L.—τά γε] τάχα Γ: whence Hartung gives $\tau\acute{\alpha}\chi'$ $\acute{\alpha}\nu$: Blaydes, $\tau\acute{\alpha}\delta'$ $\acute{\alpha}\nu$. 423 κάκ' $\tau\acute{\alpha}\delta'$ $\acute{\alpha}\nu$, which Herm. adopts, writing ἐξήρυξε instead of the MS. ἐξήρυκε, on the strength of the schol. in L, γρ. κάξε-

With regard to the order of words, note:—(1) δ ἐμπολητός Σισύφου = δ ἐμπ. Σισυφίδης, the simple gen. of origin being placed as Σισύφου παῖς would have been; though usually such a simple gen. comes immediately after the art. (as Αἰ. 450 ἡ Διὸς γοργώπις ἀδάματος θεᾷ). (2) Δαερτίῳ merely supplements ἐμπολητός, and hence can be placed as though it were an after-thought; the principle is the same as in O. C. 1514 αἱ πολλὰ βρονταὶ διατελεῖς: cp. n. on O. T. 1245.—The genit. Δαερτίου (see cr. n.) cannot be defended by understanding, (1) 'the son of Laertes, bought from Sisyphus'; or (2) 'the bought son of Laertes-Sisyphus,' i.e., of a father, nominally Laertes, but really Sisyphus.

421 π. $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' ; οὐ κ.τ.λ. The fact that the first hand in L wrote $\acute{\omega}$ (sic) is a good reason for believing that either ω or $\alpha\acute{\upsilon}$ was the original reading. With $\alpha\acute{\upsilon}$, the proper punctuation would be,— $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' $\alpha\acute{\upsilon}$ παλαιός κάγαθός φίλος τ' ἐμός, | Νέστωρ δ Πύλιος, ἔστιν; 'And then, again, what of Nestor,—is he alive?' Cp. Αἰ. 101 εἰεν, $\tau\acute{\iota}$ γὰρ $\delta\eta$ παῖς δ τοῦ Λαερτίου, | ποῦ σοι τύχης ἔστηκεν; and ib. 983. But the context strongly favours $\acute{\omega}$. Philoctetes is wondering how the Atreidae and Odysseus had been allowed to work their will without hindrance. 'How could Ajax allow it?' 'He was dead.' 'Well, but is not Nestor alive? He used to restrain them.' For $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' , cp. O. T. 941 $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' ; οὐχ δ πρέσβυς Πόλυβος ἐγκρατὴς ἐτι;—With respect to the reading $\tau\acute{\iota}$ δ' $\delta\varsigma$, we observe:—(1) $\delta\varsigma$ might easily have been generated by the unmetrical conjecture δ which has been written in L above $\acute{\omega}$: (2) the ellipse of $\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\iota$ after $\delta\varsigma$ would be peculiarly awkward here, where the principal verb is $\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\iota$.—παλαιός, simply 'old': not, (as some take it), 'one of the good old school.' For καὶ...τε, cp. 581, 656.

τά γε κείνων κακά, their misdeeds, at least: cp. Tr. 773 τοῦ σοῦ κακοῦ, thy crime. The γε means that, if Nestor could not ward off all troubles from the army, at any rate he was able to prevent acts of flagrant wrong on the part of such men as Odysseus and Diomedes. Placed thus between $\tau\acute{\alpha}$ and κείνων κακά, γε must emphasise that phrase only; it cannot here be taken with the whole sentence ('restrained, at least,...'), as in O. C. 1278 (n.). Philoctetes alludes either to what he had seen on the voyage to Troy, or to what his occasional visitors had reported.—For the place of the art., cp. Ant. 67 τὸ γὰρ | περισσὰ πράσσειν, n.—ἐξήρυκε: the compound occurs only here. For ἐρύκειν as = arcere, cp. Theocr. 7. 127 τὰ μὴ καλά νόσφιν ἐρύκοι.

κῆρυξεν. 425 ὅσπερ ἦν γόνος MSS. The schol. in L notes μόνος as a v. l. for γόνος. See comment. and Appendix. 426 δὴ αὐ τῷσ' (from αὐτῷσ') δελν' : ἔλεξας L, with an erasure of two letters after δελν', to which the apostrophe has been added by S. The other MSS. have either δὴ αὐτῷσ' δελν' ἔλεξας (as A), or the same with αὐτῷσ'. Schol. in margin of L: γρ. δὴ αὐτῷ δ' ἐξέδειξας, δυνικῶς. Hence Porson, δὴ αὐ τῷδ' ἐξέδειξας. In Journ. Phil. 11. 72 (1869) I proposed δὴ αὐ τῷδ' ἄνδρ' ἔλεξας, which Blaydes 425 Ἀντίλοχος. Pindar is our earliest authority for the story of Antilochus saving his father Nestor's life: he brings it in à propos of a son who had driven his father's chariot in the Pythian games, and won the race (Pyth. 6. 38 ff.). Memnon was pressing Nestor hard, and one of the horses in Nestor's chariot had been wounded by Paris. Nestor called for help to Antilochus, who diverted Memnon's attack from his father to himself, and was killed; thus winning the fame, ὕπατος ἀμφὶ τοκεῦσιν ἔμμεν πρὸς ἀρετάν. The Odyssey notices that Antilochus was slain by Memnon, but does not say that he fell in saving his father (4. 188). At the end of the Iliad Antilochus is still living (23. 785 ff.); in Il. 8. 90 it is Diomedes who rescues Nestor (from Hector). Pindar's source was the Aethiopsis of Arctinus, in which Achilles avenged Antilochus by slaying Memnon.

ὅς παρῆν γόνος, the son who was at his side:—not (I think) with direct reference to the saving of Nestor's life by Antilochus,—this is more than παρῆν could suggest, without further explanation (cp. 373),—but rather in the general sense that the son was the stay and comfort of his father's old age.—The MS. reading, ὅσπερ ἦν γόνος, would clearly imply that Antilochus was Nestor's only (or last surviving) son. The Iliad describes Nestor as having two sons at Troy, Thrasymedes and Antilochus (17. 378); and according to the Odyssey (3. 413 ff.) six sons were left to Nestor after the death of Antilochus, one of these being Thrasymedes. If it be suggested that the Aethiopsis may have represented Antilochus as the last surviving son, we may reply that this is extremely improbable, when it is remembered that several Ionian colonies claimed to have been founded by the Neleidae, descendants of Nestor who emigrated from Pylus (Introd. to Homer, p. 167). The same consideration condemns Seyffert's ὅς γ' ἔτ' ἦν. Cavallin's ὅς ποτ' ἦν is free from this objection, but is somewhat weak.—See Appendix.

426 ε. δὴ αὐ τῷδ' ἄνδρ' ἔλεξας, a correction which I published in 1869 (see cr. n.), still appears to me the most probable. Porson's δὴ αὐ τῷδ' ἐξέδειξας is founded on the schol. in L, γρ. δὴ αὐτῷ δ' ἐξέδειξας, and may be deemed certain so far as the words δὴ αὐ τῷδ' are concerned. But no one has justified the use of ἐξέδειξας. We see the proper uses of the word in O. C. 1021 ἵν' αὐτὸς ἐκδείξῃς ἐμολ (point them out, discover them, to me): El. 348 τὸ τούτων μῖσος ἐκδείξας ἀν ('manifest'). Eur. Hipp. 1208 παιδὸς ἐκδείξει φρένα | τοῦ σοῦ δικαίαν. But here the word is strangely inappropriate, 'thou hast pointed out,' instead of, 'thou hast named.' And ἔλεξας, the most natural word, is in all the MSS. It seems very rash, then, to assume, on the strength of the schol., that ἔλεξας is spurious, and ἐξέδειξας genuine, especially when we remember the quality of some of the variants which rest on the same authority; e.g., in v. 423, the schol. on κῆρ ἐξήρκε gives γρ. κῆρ ἐκῆρυξεν.

NE. Aye, he has trouble now ; death has taken Antilochus, the son that was at his side.

PH. Ah me ! These two, again, whom thou hast named, are men of whose death I had least wished to hear. Alas ! What are we to look for, when these have died, and, here again, Odysseus lives,—when he, in their place, should have been numbered with the dead ?

NE. A clever wrestler he ; but even clever schemes, Philoctetes, are often tripped up.

L's reading, δὲ αὐτῷ δέιν' ἔλεξας, with an erasure of two letters after δέιν', may well have arisen from δὲ αὐτῷ δὲν [δρ] ἔλεξας. The word ΔΕΙΝ would easily have been suggested by ΔΑΝ if the ΔΡ had from any cause been obscured: or, again, a misreading of ΔΑΝ as ΔΕΙΝ may have led to the omission of ΔΡ. In minuscule writing the process would have been hardly less easy.

As to the reading δὲ αὐτῷ δέιν' ἔλεξας, two things seem clear. (1) αὐτῷ, or, as it is better written, αὐτῷ, yields no fitting sense here. It could not mean, 'in those few words.' It would rather mean, 'just as in the former cases.' Cp. O. T. 931 n. (2) δύο... δέιν' ἔλεξας, οὐν, would be most awkward, whether rendered (a) 'thou hast told dreadful news about two persons' (δύο masc.), or (b) 'thou hast told two calamities concerning persons,' etc. (δύο neut., with τοῦτον understood from οὐν).

δὲ... ἀνδρε: Ajax (415) and Antilochus. Prof. Campbell says that v. 415 is 'too remote to allow of this': but vv. 416—420 form merely a parenthetic contrast suggested by the death of Ajax, and with v. 421 we come to the father of Antilochus. If δὲ ἀνδρε are to be Nestor and Antilochus (as Campbell holds), δλωλότοιον has to mean 'desolate' in the case of the living father, and 'dead' only in the case of the son. But surely οἷδε in 428 must include both the men mentioned in 426.

428 σκοπεῖν here = προσδοκᾶν, a rare use. More often σκοπεῖν = 'look for' in the sense of ζητεῖν: Xen. An. 5. 7. 32 σκοπεῖτε παῦλάν τινα.—οἷδε, Ajax and Antilochus; perh. he thinks of Achilles (331) too.

429 'Οδυσσεὺς δ' ἔστιν αὐὸ κἀνταῦθ' : 'while Odysseus survives in this case also,'—outliving Ajax and Antilochus (οἷδε, 428), as he had already outlived Achilles (371). Once more, death has spared the worse man (436). According to other views, (1) κἀνταῦθα = 'and' [not 'also'] 'in a case where'; i.e., 'not only does he live, but he has survived men so much his betters.' (2) κἀνταῦθα = 'and in such a crisis as this,'—i.e., when, Achilles being dead, the Greeks at Troy could ill spare true men. (3) The schol. explains κἀνταῦθ' by ἐν τοῖς ζῶσιν: but this ignores καί, and makes ἐνταῦθα weak.—Some think that the phrase used by Philoctetes was intended to have a second meaning ('here in Lemnos') for the spectator; but this is improbable.

430 αὐτόν, illum, not ipsum: the latter would be fitting only if Odysseus had been responsible for the deaths of the others. αὐδᾶσθαι: cp. El. 1478 ζῶντας θανούσιν οὐνεκ' ἀνταυδᾶς ἴσα, speakest of the living as if they were dead.

431 ε. παλαιστής: cp. Ar. Ran. 877 δταν εἰς ἔριν δξυμερίμοις | ἔλθωσι στρεβλοῖσι παλαίσμασιν ἀντιλογούντες ('when they enter the strife, contending with subtle, tortuous tricks'). Aeschin. or. 3 § 205 πάλασμα τοῦτ' ἐστὶ δικαστηρίου, a trick of the law-courts.—ἐμποδίζονται: the word seems to have been suggested by παλαιστής,—alluding to a wrestler tripping up his adversary: cp. Ar. Eq. 262 (with ref. to the tricks by which Cleon outwits his simple victims), διαλαβών, ἀγκυρίσας, | εἴτ' ἀποστρέψας τὸν ὦμον αὐτὸν ἐνεκολήβασας ('you put one of your legs between his,—hook it round

πόλεμος κ.τ.λ.: the γνώμη stands as an independent sentence, unconnected with the prefatory τοῦτ' ἐκδιδάξω: cp. Ant. 612 ἐπαρκέσει νόμος δδ' οὐδὲν ἔρπει κ.τ.λ.—ἐκὼν, 'by choice': i.e., war has a marked preference for killing good men, though, of course, it kills some bad men too. The word ἐκὼν does not involve a definite personification of πόλεμος (like that in Ar. Pax): we can say, ἡ φύσις βούλεται ποιεῖν τι (Arist. An. Gen. 4), without writing φύσις. Cp. fr. 652 τοὺς εὐγενεῖς γὰρ ἀγαθοὺς, ὧ καὶ, φιλεῖ | Ἄρης ἐναίρειν· οἱ δὲ τῇ γλώσσῃ θρασεῖς | φεύγοντες ἅτας ἐκτός εἰσι τῶν κακῶν | Ἄρης γὰρ οὐδὲν τῶν κακῶν λωπίζειται. Anacreon

fr. 101 Ἄρης δ' οὐκ ἀγαθῶν φείδεται, ἀλλὰ κακῶν. The same thought is implied in the phrase of Andoc., or. 3 § 30 πολλοὺς μὲν Ἀθηναίων ἀπολέσαντες ἀριστίνδην,—as if the ἀριστοὶ had been selected.

438 κατ' αὐτὸ τοῦτό γε, in accordance with this very thing, = 'on this very ground': cp. Isocr. or. 18 § 34 οὐκ ἄξιον οὔτε κατὰ χάριν οὔτε κατ' ἐπιείκειαν οὔτε κατ' ἄλλο οὐδὲν ἢ κατὰ τοὺς ὅρκους περὶ αὐτῶν ψηφίσασθαι.

Here κυρεῖ seems to be intrans., while τί is virtually adverbial: cp. O. C. 1704 ἐπαρξεν οἶον ἤθελεν (= ὅπως ἤθελεν), 'he has fared as he would.'

Γ, Vat. b: ποίου τε L, with A and most of the others; ποίου γε T, B, Vat.—τούτου] Brunck conj. τούτο.—ἐρείς] λέγεις V², which Nauck prefers. Wecklein gives ποίου γε τούτου πλὴν [instead of πλὴν γ'] 'Οδ. ἐρείς, ascribing it to Nauck: who, however, in his 8th ed. (1882) has δὲ...πλὴν γ'. Blaydes gives, on his own conject., ποῖον σὺ τόνδ' αὖ πλὴν γ' 'Οδ. ἐρείς; 443 εἴλετ' εἰσάπαξ] Blaydes gives ἡδεῖτ' εἰς ἅπαντ'. In L εἰσάπαξ is written as one word. 444 ἔφη r (including A): ἔων L, with γρ. ἔω (sic) in marg.

κακοῖς κακά. ΘΗ. ἦ τὴν παλαιὰν ξυμφορὰν γένους ἐρείς;

Brunck's conjecture, τούτο for τούτου, has been preferred by some; because, where a verb of speaking or asking thus takes a simple gen., the object of the verb is usu. represented, either (a) by an acc., as in Ἐλ. 317 τοῦ κασιγνήτου τί φῆς; or (b) by a relative clause, as above in 440 by τί νῦν κυρεῖ; But in O. C. 307 κλύων σοῦ ('hearing about thee') is an exception to the supposed rule. Further, ἐρείς is here merely a short expression for ἐξερήσει τί νῦν κυρεῖ.

442 Θερσίτης = 'the bold one,' θέρσος being the Aeolic form of θάρσος (Bekker Anecd. p. 1190. 2), as κρέτος of κράτος: cp. Ἀλιθέρης, Θέρσανδρος. Here he survives Achilles. But, according to the commoner legend, he died before him. Achilles had slain the leader of the Amazons, Penthesilea. Thersites thrust his spear into the eyes of the corpse, and taunted Achilles with his love for her; when the hero killed him. This was the version given by Arctinus in the Aethiopis (Proclus, Chrestom. p. 478). It was the subject of a play (prob. a satyric drama) by Chaeremon, called Ἀχιλλεύς Θερσιτοκτόνος (Suidas, s.v. ὑπάρχων, calls it simply Θερσίτης). See Nauck, Frag. Trag. p. 607.

'never used to choose.' Xen. Cyr. 7. 1. 10 ὅποτε προσβλέψειε τινας...εἶπεν ἄν. In this use the aor. differs from the impf. by marking a moment; as εἴλετο expresses the making of the choice, while ἡρείτο would express the sentiment of preference. (2) δπου μηδεὶς ἔφη, 'in a case where no one was for allowing him to speak': the optat. denotes indefinite frequency (as 289 δ μοι βάλοι). Cp. προσβλέψειε in the example just cited. μηδεὶς is 'generic,' i.e. marks the occasion as being one of a class: cp. 170 n. And since οὐκ ἔω = 'dissuade,' 'remonstrate,' δπου μηδεὶς ἔφη = δπου πάντες μὴ-ἔφην, 'where all were protesting.' Cp. Αἰ. 1184 τάφου μεληθεὶς τῷδε, κἂν μηδεὶς ἔᾶ, = κἂν πάντες μὴ-ἔωσω, 'though all the world forbid.' (3) 'He would never choose to speak (only) once' = 'he would always choose to speak often';—a μείωσις of the same order as οὐχ ἦκιστα for μάλιστα. Thus the whole sense is—αἰεὶ ἂν εἴλετο πολλάκις λέγειν, δπου πάντες σιγᾶν κελεύοιεν. Remark that, in the negative form actually used, the aor. inf. (εἴπειν) suits εἰσάπαξ better than a pres. inf. (λέγειν) would have done.

Sophocles here reproduces the two salient traits of the Homeric Thersites: (1) he is irrepressible: Ιλ. 2. 212 Θερσίτης δ' ἔτι μῶνος ἀμετροεπῆς ἐκολλᾶ, | δς ῥ' ἔπεια φρεσὶν ἦσαν ἀκοσμά τε πολλὰ τε ᾗδῃ: (2) he disgusts those whom his bluster was intended to amuse or flatter;

This τηλόθεν εἰσορᾶν is a poetical counterpart of πόρρωθεν ἀσπάζεσθαι,—familiar in Attic as meaning 'to give a wide berth' to an objectionable person or thing: *Plat. δειλός is rightly restored by Brunck for δεινός of the MSS. It alludes to Odysseus as a trickster (407) and a coward (1025). Cp. Ant. 326 τὰ δειλὰ κέρδη, where, again, L has the false reading δεινὰ. δεινός, by itself, would mean simply 'able.' As Arist. says, δεινότης is the faculty of finding means to an end; ἂν οὖν ὁ σκοπὸς ᾗ καλός, ἐπαινετὴ ἐστίν· ἂν δὲ φαῖλος, πανουργία (Eth. N. 6. 13). So, in v. 440, the bad sense of δεινός is hinted by γλώσση. Campbell quotes Isocr. or. 12 § 48 to show that δεινός could, by itself, mean 'a clever rogue': there, however, δεινήν (said of Sparta) means 'formidable' (=φοβεράν just before), and the sense of δεινὴν...νομίξειν is presently repeated in φοβεῖσθαι...καὶ δεδιέναι.

459 ε. Σκύρος: see on 240.—ἔαρκούσά μοι...ὥστε (με) τέρπεσθαι δόμῳ, sufficient to make me content with my abode (and resigned to seeing no more of the army).

465 εἴκη] ἦκη (sic) L. A mark written over ἦ merely calls attention to a scholium in the left marg. (which has the same mark prefixed to it), διδῶ συγχωρήση. Γ has ἦκει, and the Harleian ἦκοι. A has εἴκη, but the εἰ seems to have been made from η.—Cavallin conjectures ἰῆ, not observing that the ι of ἡμι is always short in the pres. subjunct.; see comment. on O. C. 1279. 466 στέλλεσθε] στέλεσθε L, with the second λ added above the line by the 1st hand. 468 ε. πρὸς

462 ε. χαῖρε is repeated, as Ar. Pax 582 χαῖρε χαῖρ', ib. 1363 χαίρετε χαίρετ', etc. ὥς μέγιστα: cp. μέγα χαῖρε (Hom. hym. 1. 466, etc.).—μεταστήσειαν: Eur. Helen. 1442 βλέψον πρὸς ἡμᾶς καὶ μετάστησον κακῶν.—ὥς αὐτὸς θέλεις: Hom. hym. 3. 417 ρεῖα μάλ' ἐπρήνυν ἐκηβόλον, ὥς ἐθελ' αὐτός.

465 πλοῦν ἡμῖν εἴκη: a very rare instance of εἴκω τῶι τι as = concedo aliquid alicui. We cannot compare O. C. 172 εἰκοντας ἃ δεῖ, or Ai. 1243, εἴκειν ἃ τοῖς πολλοῖσιν ἤρεσκεν κριταῖς, where the acc. merely denotes the things in regard to which one is to yield. Still, Il. 23. 337 εἰξαί τέ οἱ ἦνλα ('to give the horse rein') seems to confirm εἴκη here. The analogy of παρείκω suggests to me that the constr. here would be somewhat softened if, instead of πλοῦν, we might read πλεῖν: cp. Plat. Legg. 934 c ὅπως ἂν ἡμῖν παρείκωσι θεοὶ... νομοθετεῖν. But the change, though tempting, is not necessary.

Lucian (Demionactis vita 65) quotes, as a familiar stage 'tag,' καιρὸς δὲ καλεῖ μηκέτι μέλλειν.

467 πλοῦν...σκοπεῖν, to watch for (428 n.) favourable weather: cp. Antiphon or. 5 § 24 (the speaker had been detained in port by adverse winds) πλοῦς ἡμῖν ἐγγίγνεται, καὶ ἀνήγεται πλοῖα ἅπαντα. Thuc. 1. 137 μέχρι πλοῦς γένηται.—μὴ ἔξ ἀπόπτου, not at a distance (from the ship); strictly, so that the quarter in which their ship lies shall not be ἀποπτος, i.e., 'seen (only) at a distance.' Cp. Galen 3. 222 ἐξ ἀπόπτου θεασάμενος, and append. on O. T. 762 (p. 230, 2nd ed.). At the cave they are close to the sea, and can judge of the weather as well as at another point on the coast. Now to my ship! And thou, son of Poeas, farewell,—heartily farewell; and the gods deliver thee from thy sickness, even as thou wouldst! But we must be going, so that we may set forth whenever the god permits our voyage.

PH. Do ye start now, my son? NE. Aye, prudence bids us watch the weather near our ship, rather than from afar.

PH. Now by thy father and by thy mother, my son—by all that is dear to thee in thy home—solemnly I implore thee, leave me not thus forlorn, helpless amid these miseries in which I live,—such as thou seest, and many as thou hast heard! Nay, spare a passing thought to me.—Great is the discomfort, I well know, of such a freight;—yet bear with it: to noble minds baseness is hateful, and a good deed is glorious.

470 ικέτης strengthens ἰκνούμαι much as in O. T. 760, ἐξικέτευσσε τῆς ἐμῆς χειρὸς θιγών, the verb is strengthened by the added phrase, which serves to mark the attitude of formal supplication. Cp. below, 930. For ἰκνεῖσθαι=ικετεύειν, cp. 932, O. C. 275 and 1011: Ai. 588: El. 136.

471 οἷοις ὁρᾷς... ἐνναλόντα,—the disease, and the wretched dwelling: δοιοῖσι τ' ἐξήκουσας,—the painful provision of food, water, fuel, and fire (285—299). Cp. 174 f.

473 ἐν παρέργῳ θεοῦ με, lit., regard me (451 n.) as a secondary task: i.e., 'give me a place, however lowly, in thy care.' The thought is: 'I should not have asked you to alter your course for me; but since you are going home at any rate, let this good deed be an accident of your voyage.' Cp. Eur. El. 509 ἦλθον γὰρ αὐτοῦ πρὸς τάφον, πάρεργ' ὁδοῦ (as an incident of the journey). Thuc. 1. 142 (with ref. to naval skill) οὐκ ἐνδέχεται... ἐκ παρέργου μελετᾶσθαι.—ἐν παρέργῳ=ἐν παρέργου μέρει (Plat. Rep. 370 C).—δυσ-χέρεια: cp. 900.

474 ξοῖδα, by the bitter experience to which he alludes in 1031 f.—φορήματος, freight, as φορέω is said of ships (Od. 2. 390).

476 τό τ' αἰσχρόν κ.τ.λ. The objections which have been made to this verse seem idle. Philoctetes is appealing to the generous instincts of the young man. 'To noble natures, what is (morally) shameful is hateful, and what is worthy appears glorious.' εὐκλέες implies, 'even if there is no applause to be gained, the γενναῖος is rewarded by the sense that he has merited true εὐκλεια,—i.e., that his deed is, in itself, honourable.' Then, in vv. 477—479, Philoctetes passes to a different and a lower argument,—viz., that Neoptolemus will incur reproach if he refuse to do this act of mercy, and that, in the other case, he will have men's praises. All the difficulties which have been raised have come from failing to see

Tournier, εὐπετές. 477 ε. τοῦτ'] Blaydes writes τόνδ', and in 478 changes δράσαντι to σώσαντι. Nauck adopts the latter conjecture, though not the former; but he should have received both, or neither. 480 ἴθι' Triclinius.—τοι] Burges conj. σοι. 481 ἐμβαλοῦ γ, ἐκβαλοῦ L. (1) that the subjective sense of εὐκλείας is justified by the fact that τοῖσι γενναίοις is an ethic dat.,—‘in the sight of the generous,’—not a dat. of interest: and (2) that the considerations urged in 475—479 are of two distinct orders.

477 ἐκλιπόντι τοῦτ' = εἴαν ἐκλίπησιν τοῦτο, if thou forsake, abandon, this deed (which is a duty laid on thee): cp. Eur. I. T. 750 εἰ δ', ἐκλιπὼν τὸν ὄρκον, ἀδικοῖσθαι ἐμέ.—ὄνειδος is strengthened by οὐ καλόν, as in 842 by αἰσχρόν, in O. C. 753 by ἄθλιον, in O. T. 1035 by δευνόν. Ellendt, indeed, is with those who trace here an original ‘middle’ sense of ὄνειδος as=‘a thing said of one’ (good or evil). It would be equally reasonable to infer a neutral meaning for κῆρ from Tr. 454 κῆρ πρόσσεν οὐ καλῇ.

480 ἴθι', in entreaty; cp. 750, O. T. 1468 n.—ἡμέρας...μιᾶς. The distance from Lemnos to Scyros is about 75 miles; and, acc. to v. 354, the voyage from Scyros to Sigeum (about 125 miles) took less than two whole days.

reading, is here not less good than ὅποι: it goes with ἐμβαλοῦ only. ἄγων is added as in 488, O. C. 910, 1342: here it expresses how passive he is content to be in the hands of Neoptolemus.

482 ε. ἀντλίαν, the hold of the ship, where he could be stowed away beneath the rowers. Cp. Athen. p. 37 D καταβαλὼν ἐμαυτὸν ὑπὸ τοὺς θαλάμους (the places of the θαλαμίται, or lowest rank of rowers) ὡς ἐνὶ μάλιστα κατωτάτῳ ἐκείμην. Dionysius comicus (350 B.C.) Θεσμοφόρος fr. 1. 40 describes a seaman as ἐξ ἀντλίας ἦκοντα, i.e., the man was one of the θαλαμίται. Cp. Her. 8. 118: Xerxes is making a long voyage in stormy weather; but he and the numerous Persian nobles with him are all on the deck (ἐπὶ τοῦ καταστρώματος), while only the Phoenician sailors occupy the part below (κοιλὴν νέα). So, too, in [Dem.] or. 32 § 5, during a voyage of many days, all the passengers live on deck, the κοιλὴ ναῦς being used by the rowers only.

πρῶραν...πρύμνην. Lucian (Navig. 5), speaking of a large vessel, mentions αἱ κατὰ πρύμναν οἰκήσεις, but ordinarily only the κυβερνήτης would be located at the stern, as the πρωρεύς at the prow. πρύμνα was the later Attic form; but πρύμνη is used by Attic poets for metre's sake, Forsake this task, and thy fair name is sullied ; perform it, my son, and a rich meed of glory will be thine, if I return alive to Oeta's land. Come, the trouble lasts not one whole day :—make the effort—take and thrust me where thou wilt, in hold, in prow, in stern,—wherever I shall least annoy my ship-mates.

O consent, by the great Zeus of suppliants, my son,—be persuaded ! I supplicate thee on my knees, infirm as I am, poor wretch, and maimed ! Nay, leave me not thus desolate, far from the steps of men ! Nay, bring me safely to thine own home, or to Euboea, Chalcodon's seat ; and thence it will be no long journey for me to Oeta,

The corruption of υ to ι is one of the commonest.—μέλλω...ἀλγυνεῖν, instead of ἀλγυνῶ (the relative clause, with the fut. indic., expressing purpose): cp. 409. For the fut. inf. after μέλλω, cp. O. T. 967 n.

484 ἱκεσίῳ: cp. 1181: Aesch. Suppl. 616 Ζηνὸς ἱκεσίῳ κῶτον | μέγαν προφωνῶν: Od. 13. 213 Ζεὺς σφέας τίσαιθ' ἱκετῆσιος (see Introd. to Homer, p. 54).—γόννασι: cp. Eur. Phoen. 193 γονυπετεῖς ἔδρας προσπίτνω σ': and n. on O. T. 2.

486 ἀκράτωρ. As O. C. 1236 is the only extant Attic example of ἀκρατής as = 'weak,' so is this the only example of ἀκράτωρ in that sense. Plato uses ἀκράτωρ in the regular Attic sense of ἀκρατής as = impotens sui (Rep. 579 c ἐαυτοῦ...ἀκράτωρ). The scholium here (if it be not rather a fusion of two distinct scholia) recognises both meanings: ἀσθενής, ἐαυτοῦ κρατεῖν μὴ δυνάμενος.

488 ἢ πρὸς οἶκον τὸν σὸν κ.τ.λ. He asks N. to convey him, either merely to the youth's own home (Scyros), or, better still, a little further, viz., to Euboea (cp. n. on 240); whence it will be easy to reach Malis (492).

τὰ Χαλκιδόντος Εὐβοίας σταθμά, the Euboean abode of Chalcodon, i.e. Euboea, his realm. Cp. Tr. 1191 τὸν Ὀϊτῆς Ζηνὸς θυσιῶν πάγον. In Il. 2. 536 ff. Elephenor, son of Chalcodon, figures as the leader of all the Euboeans in the Greek army, who are called Ἀβαντες, and represent six towns, including Carystus at the extreme south of the island, Chalcis at the middle point of its west coast, and Histiaea in the extreme north.

Schneidewin remarks that Philoctetes, the former comrade of Heracles, might naturally name Chalcodon, who had been the companion of Heracles in an expedition against the Eleans (Paus. 8. 15. 6). But that was merely a local Arcadian myth; and Pausanias finds it inconsistent with the better-known Theban tradition, according to which Chalcodon was slain by Amphitryon in a war between the Euboeans and Thebans (9. 19. 3). At any rate the Attic poet might think of the Attic legend, according to which Theseus had sent his sons for protection to Chalcodon's son Elephenor, before retiring from Athens to Scyros (Plut. Thes. 35).

490 εἰς Ὀϊτῆν. The three names here—Oeta—Trachis—the Spercheius—mark the great features of the region. Typhrestus, at the southern end of Pindus, throws off two ranges towards the eastern sea. One runs nearly due east, and skirts the s. borders of Thessaly: this is Othrys, the lofty 'brow' which looks down from the north on the plain of Malis. The other—Oeta, the 'sheep-land'—runs s. of Othrys, and parallel with it at first; then, turning s. and E., it throws out cliffs which enclose the plain of Malis on s. and w. Trachis—‘the rugged’—stood below those cliffs; they themselves were called ‘the Trachinian Rocks.’ (Her. 7. 198 ὄρεα θύληά καὶ ἄβατα περικλήει πᾶσαν τὴν Μηλῖδα γῆν, Τρηχίνια πέτραι καλούμεναι.) The Spercheus—‘the vehement’—rises at the base of Typhrestus. As it runs eastward, its broad valley separates the ranges of Othrys and Oeta. It passes through the plain of Malis, and enters the Malian Gulf. Its old mouth was about five miles N. of Trachis: the present mouths are more to the south.

491 Τραχινίαν...δειράδα, the chain of heights which bounds the plain of Malis on s. and w.,—the Τρηχίνια πέτραι of Herod. (see last n.), the ὄρεα Μηλίδος αἰῆς of Callimachus (Hymn. Del. 287). Acc. to Thuc. 3. 92 the dwellers in Malis were classed as Τραχῖνιοι (highlanders, like the Attic Ἵππεράκριοι), Παράλιοι (by the Malian Gulf), and Ἰερῆς (a doubtful name).

All MSS. have δειράδα καὶ τὸν, making an anapaest in the 4th place. Toup proposed δειράδα. As δέρη was the Attic form of δειρή, an Attic poet might possibly have ventured on δερὰς. But there is no trace of such a form, while δειράς is frequent. Further, Δειράδες was the name of an Attic deme of the Leontis tribe (Bekker Anecd. p. 240, 26), and δερὰς would thus be familiar to Attic ears in ordinary life. Thus Toup's remedy, though attractive by its simplicity, is really a very bold one.

I am more disposed to think that δει- ράδα is sound, and that the corruption lies in the words καὶ τὸν. I conjecture, Τραχινίαν τε δειράδ' ἦδ' ἐς εὐροον. Soph., like Aesch. and Eur., admitted ἦδ' ἐς in iambics (see n. on Ant. 673). The corruption might arise from the fact that Δ was the second letter of two successive syllables. A scribe, copying ΔΕΙΡΑΔΕΑ (or, after 403 B.C., ΔΕΙΡΑΔΗΔ), might accidentally omit ΕΔ (or ΗΔ). The verse would then stand, ΤΡΑΧΙΝΙΑΝΤΕΔΕΙΡΑΔΕΣΕΥΡΟΟΝ. A subsequent transcriber might easily suppose that ΔΕΙΡΑΔΕΣ (taken for δειράδες, not δειράδ' ἐς) was a mere blunder for δειράδα. And, ΔΕΙΡΑΔΑ having been replaced, the copula would next be supplied, and the verse patched up, by inserting ΚΑΙΤΟΝ.—For other conjectures, see Appendix.

εὐροον. Tragic iambs sometimes admit uncontracted forms in -οος: e.g. Aesch. fr. 37 διπλόδοι: id. fr. 275 χειμάρροον: id. Theb. 493 πυρπνόν: on the other hand, id. fr. 293 ἐπτάρους: P. V. 852 πλατύρρους: id. 917 πύρπνον.

Like the Homeric εὐρροος, εὐρρείτης, the epithet refers simply to the beauty of the river, not to that swiftness (σπέρχομαι) from which it takes its name (II. 16. 176 Σπερχεῖψ ἀκάμαντι: Lucan 6. 366 Ferit amne citato | Maliacas Spercheus aquas). Rising at the foot of Typhrestus, and fed by affluents from Othrys and Oeta, the Spercheus has a considerable volume of water even in the hot season (Tozer, Geo. of Greece, p. 81).

493 παλαῖον=παλαῖον (ἐστίν) ἐξ ὅτου, a parenthetic clause equiv. to a simple adverb (πάλαι) going with δέδοικα. Cp. Isocr. or. 5 § 47 οὗτοι γὰρ ἄρχοντες τῶν Ἑλλήνων οὐ πολλὸς χρόνος (sc. ἐστίν) ἐξ

οὐ καὶ κατὰ γῆν καὶ κατὰ θάλατταν εἰς τοσαύτην μεταβολὴν ἦλθον. Αἰ. 600 ἐγὼ δ' ὁ τλάμων παλαιὸς ἀφ' οὗ χρόνος | ...εὐ- νῶμαι.—In L παλαιὸς is manifestly a mere blunder for παλαῖον. Those who read παλαιὸς ἄν explain it in one of two ways. (1) εἴη is to be supplied with it, —βεβήκη, or βέβηκε, being read in 494. Such an ellipsis of εἴη is impossible. (2) The ἄν is to go with βεβήκοι in 494. Cp. Tr. 630 δέδοικα γὰρ | μὴ πρῶ λέγοις ἄν: Thuc. 2. 93 προσδοκία οὐδεμία (ἦν) μὴ ἂν ποτε οἱ πολέμοι...ἐπιπλεύσειαν. But in this constr. the ἄν which belongs to the optative verb could not precede the μὴ. In Eur. Med. 941 οὐκ οἶδ' ἂν εἰ πείσομαι, the place of ἄν has a special excuse, viz., the analogy of sentences with the inf. (such as οὐκ ἂν οἶμαι πείσαι).

494 ε. μὴ μοι βεβήκη. μοι is ethic dat. (Ant. 50 n.) The subjunct. is right here: cp. 30 κυρῆ, n. The indic. βέβηκε would also be correct (Dem. or. 19 § 96 δέδοικα μὴ λελήθαμεν), but would express conviction rather than anxious fear.—For βέβηκα as = ὄχομαι, of death, cp. Eur. Andr. 1026 βέβακε δ' Ἀτρεΐδας ἀλόχον παλάμαις.—τοῖς ἰγμένοις, instr. dat.: for ἱστολλόν, cp. 60 n.—The partic. ιγμένος occurs only here. In Tr. 229 we have ἱγμεθα.

496 αὐτόστολον πέμψαντα, having sent with his own στόλος, i.e., having sent a ship of his own. Cp. Ant. hol. 7. 585 (on a fisherman who died by the burning of his boat at sea), αὐτόστολος ἦλθεν | εἰς Ἀἴδην, νεκῶν πορθμῖδος οὐ χατέων, 'he went to Hades in his own ship' [because it perished along with him],—not needing to use Charon's bark. Musaeus Leandr. 255 αὐτὸς ἐὼν ἐρέτης, αὐτόστολος, αὐτόμα-τος νῆυς, where, similarly, αὐτόστολος = 'providing his own στόλος', i.e. 'self-wafted,'—answering to the word vector in Ovid's parallel v., Idem navigium, navita, vector ero (Ep. 18. 147).—If αὐτόστολον were understood as 'setting forth in person' (cp. μονόστολος, ὁμόστολος), then πέμψαντα would be best taken as 'having escorted me' (cp. 913, 1465), and would go closely with ἐκσῶσαι. Nauck, interpreting αὐτόστολον in this second way, substitutes πλεύσαντα (the conj. of Blaydes) for πέμψαντα. This would certainly make the v. easier; but it is not necessary.

δόμους is a clearly true correction of δόμοις. The latter could not mean, 'to my home,' but only, 'for the joy of the house' (dat. of interest). On the other hand cp. Ant. 810 ἀλλὰ μ' Ἀϊδας...ἔγει | τὰν Ἀχέροντος ἄκταν: O. C. 1769 Θήβας δ' ἡμᾶς | ...πέμψον.

497 ε. After τὰ τῶν διακόνων we might have expected ἡμελεῖτο or the like ('the messengers' part was neglected'), but ποιούμενοι follows, as if he had written οἱ διάκονοι. This is one of the irregularities which often arise from a change in the form of the writer's thought; it is not merely a case of constr. κατὰ σύνεσιν (like τὰ...μεϊράκια...διαλεγόμενοι, Plat. Lach. p. 180 ε). Hence it is no objection to this view that τὰ τῶν διακόνων, for οἱ διάκονοι, would be unexampled.—Others take τὰ τῶν διακόνων as an adverbial parenthesis: 'or (as is the way with messengers) they forgot me,' etc. The objection to this is that, in such phrases, the sing. τὸ is used, never the plur. τὰ: e.g. Plat. Phaed. 77 D δοκεῖς σύ τε καὶ Σιμμάς...δεδιέναι, τὸ τῶν παίδων, μὴ...δ' ἄνεμος αὐτὴν...διαφυσᾷ: id. Soph. 261 B σχολῇ πον, τὸ κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν λεγόμενον, ὃ γε τοιοῦτος ἂν ποτε ἔλοι πόλιν.

ὡς εἰκός expresses that such neglect might have been expected, while οἶμαι conveys the belief that it was actually committed; tautology cannot be pleaded, then, as a ground for conjecturing οἶμοι.—ἐν σμικρῷ: cp. 875: Her. 3. 154 ἐν ἐλαφρῷ ποιησάμενος (Tac. Ann. 3. 54 in levi habendum).—μέρος. The reading μέρει would be tenable: cp. Dem. or. 2 § 18 ἐν οὐδενὸς εἶναι μέρει. And it is true that τοῦμόν μέρος is usu. adverbial (quantum in me est, or quantum ad me attinet: cp. Ant. 1062 n.). But here μέρος gives a much finer verse.—ἤπειγον, trans. (cp. 1451). When the act. ἐπέλω seems intrans., it is so because the acc., like στόλον here (e.g., δρόμον, ὁδόν) is understood: El. 1435 ἢ νοεῖς, ἐπειγε νῦν.

'had himself brought the first news,' i.e., no ἄγγελια had preceded him. See n. on O. C. 1511 (αὐτοὶ θεοὶ κήρυκες).—ἤκω: after vainly appealing to others. The word is tinged with the fig. sense, 'I have been brought by my fortune to thee,' etc.: cp. 377 ὁ δ' ἐνθάδ' ἤκων. [Dem.] or. 45 § 85 τούτῳ μὲν χαίρειν λέγω, οὗς δ' ὁ πατήρ μοι παρέδωκε βοηθούς, εἰς τούτους ἤκω.

502 ζ. δεινὰ κάπικινδύνως...κείται, are so ordained (by the gods) as to be full of fear and peril: (for the combination of adj. and adv., cp. 345.) The infin. παθεῖν follows this phrase as it might follow κινδυνὸς ἔστιν or the like (Plat. Crat. 436 B οὐ σμικρὸς κινδυνὸς ἔστιν ἐξαπατηθῆναι). The general sense is:—'There is always a danger for men that, after they have been prosperous, they may be unfortunate.' Not: 'It is always doubtful whether men are to fare well or ill,'—like Plat. Prot. 313 A ἐν ᾧ πάντ' ἐστὶ τὰ σά, ἢ εὖ ἢ κακῶς πράττειν. Of the two co-ordinated clauses, παθεῖν μὲν εὖ, παθεῖν δὲ θάτερα, the second is that on which the emphasis falls; the first serves for contrast with it:—'that, as they have fared well, so they may fare ill.' Cp. Ant. 616 πολλοῖς μὲν θνασις

Now, however—since in thee I have found one who can carry at once my message and myself—do thou save me, do thou show me mercy,—seeing how all human destiny is full of the fear and the peril that good fortune may be followed by evil. He who stands clear of trouble should beware of dangers; and when a man lives at ease, then it is that he should look most closely to his life, lest ruin come on it by stealth.

CH. Have pity, O king; he hath told of a struggle with sufferings manifold and grievous; may the like befall no friend of mine! And if, my prince, thou hatest the hateful Atreidae, then, turning their misdeed to this man's gain, I would waft him Anti-strophe.

| ἐπ' εὐπόρου—| νεῶς—| δόμους—| νέμεσιν ἐκφυγών. 507 ἔλεξεν] ἔλεξε L. 509 οἶα] δοσσα L, with A and almost all others: R (14th cent.) and Harl. (15th) have δοσα.—οἶα, Porson's conj. (Adv. p. 200), has been generally received: but he himself afterwards gave the preference to δοσσα (Adv. p. 237). Dobree conj. δοθλους, & ('qualia . ds pro olos').—τύχοι] Seyffert gives λάχοι. Herwerden made the same conj., which is received by Blaydes, Cavallin, Nauck, Wecklein. 510 πικρούς] Nauck conj. πικρός: Blaydes, διπλοῦς. 511 ἐγὼ μὲν] B. Todt conj. ἐγὼ νῦν. 515 μετατιθέμενος] μέγα τιθέμενος L, A, and most others: μετατιθέμενος r and schol.—ἔνθα περ] ἐνθά περ L.—ἐπιμέμονεν r: ἐπεὶ μέμονεν L.

ἀνδρῶν, | πολλοῖς δ' ἀπάτα ('though to many a blessing, yet to many a false lure'): O. C. 1536 εὖ μὲν, ὅψ' δέ, 'though surely, yet late.'—θάτερα: Dem. or. 22 § 12 ἀγαθὰ ἢ θάτερα, ἵνα μηδὲν εἴπω φλαυρόν.

504 ἐκτός ὄντα: 1260: Ant. 619 n.—τὰ δεινὰ ὄραν, to keep one's eye on dangers looming in the distance, as a steersman watches rocks ahead: cp. Il. 23. 323 (the wary charioteer) αἰεὶ τέρμ' ὄρων,—keeping his eye always on the καμπτήρ, as he drives round it. Thus the schol.'s εὐλαβεῖσθαι is true to the sense.

505 εὖ ζῆν, lives prosperously, as κακῶς ζῆν=to live unhappily (El. 354). So Pind. (P. 4. 131) calls festivity εὐφάας ἄωτον. But in O. C. 1535 εὖ...οἰκῆ='lives aright'.—τὸν βίον, the fortunes of one's life: the subject to λάθῃ is ὁ βίος. Cp. El. 207 (χείρες) αἱ τὸν ἐμὸν εἶλον βίον | πρόδοτον.

507—518: antistrophe to 391—402. The pity expressed by the Chorus may well be sincere; but, in this utterance of it, their first aim is to aid their master's design. Verse 510 shows this.

ἀγώνων. The plur. ἀθλα can thus be used in the sense of ἀθλοι: but the sing. ἀθλον does not occur as = ἀθλος. In Aesch. Suppl. 1034 τὸδ' ἀθλον='this prize'.—οἶα, Porson's correction of δοσσα, is probably right. It is the more natural word in such a wish: cp. 275, 315. And δοσσα may have been suggested by πολλῶν. An iambic trimeter set in lyrics might, indeed, tolerate δοσος,—as the corresponding trimeter (392) has the Doric ᾄ for ῆ. But δοσσα in Aesch. Pers. 864, τόσσων in Ag. 140, and τόσσον in Soph. AI. 185, seem to be the only instances of these forms in Tragedy. οἶα is clearly better than δοσσα (= ἀπῖνα): for which cp. O. T. 425 n.—For the acc. οἶα with τύχοι, cp. O. T. 1298 n. The conjunct. λάχοι is unnecessary.

510 πικρούς, odious; cp. 254 n. This sense seems more suitable here than 'bitter against thee,' when πικρούς... ἐχθεὺς would be like μισοῦντ' ἐμίσει (AI. 1134).

512 εὖ μὲν (cp. 453)...πορεύεσθαι ἄν is a respectful suggestion,—'I, for my part, would convey him,'—i.e., 'If I were you, I would do so.'—τὸ καίων κακόν, the evil done by them: cp. 422.—μετα- τιθέμενος. This compound regularly takes one acc. only, meaning to 'transpose,' 'shift,' a thing; and hence, either to 'adopt' or to 'discard.' Here the compound is used like the simple verb, and the force of the prep. is adverbial. τιθέμενος τὸ κένων κακὸν τῷδε κέρδος = 'counting their misdeed as his gain': cp. Od. 21. 333 τί δ' ἐλέγχεα ταῦτα τίθεσθε; If, after the word 'counting,' we inserted, 'by transference,' this would give the force of μετά. The κακὸν is to be shifted from the reckoning against the Atreidae to the reckoning in favour of Philoctetes. Their demerit is another reason for benefiting him.—ἐπιμέμονεν: the only instance of μέμονα in Soph. (Cp. Aesch. Theb. 686 μέμονας: Eur. I. A. 1495 and I. T. 655 μέμονε.)

517 τὰν θεῶν νέμεσιν. Hermann's deletion of ἐκ after τὰν is necessary, since τὰν θεῶν = Δαρτῖον in 401. Possibly the ἐκ arose from a reminiscence of Her. 1. 34 ἔλαβε ἐκ θεοῦ νέμεσις μεγάλη Κροῖσον.—Cp. 601 f., 1035 ff.

519 νῦν μὲν...ὅταν δέ: i.e., 'beware lest, though now thou art facile, yet,' etc.: cp. n. on 503.—εὐχερής, easy-going (cp. 875): τις gives a slightly contemptuous tone; cp. Aesch. P. V. 696 πρῶ γε στενάξεις καὶ φόβον πλέα τις εἰς. For its position, cp. Ai. 29 καὶ μοί τις ὀπήρ.—παρῆς, as a spectator who is not yet required to make any personal sacrifice. Not from παρήμ, as = 'comply.'

αὐτὸς τοῖς λόγοις τούτοις, the same with (=consistent, in your action, with) these words. Plat. Euthyd. 298 A ἢ σὺ εἰ ὁ αὐτὸς τῷ λόγῳ; If τούτοις were absent, then τοῖς λόγοις could be a dat. of respect, 'the same in regard to your words,' like αὐτὸς εἰμι τῷ βουλευματι (O. T. 557 n.). But τούτοις shows that the other constr. is meant.

in thy good swift ship to the home for which he yearns, that so thou flee the just wrath of Heaven.

NE. Beware lest, though now, as a spectator, thou art pliant, yet, when wearied of his malady by consorting with it, thou be found no longer constant to these words.

CH. No, verily: never shalt thou have cause to utter that reproach against me!

NE. Nay, then, it were shame that the stranger should find me less prompt than thou art to serve him at his need.—Come, if it please you, let us sail: let the man set forth at once; our ship, for her part, will carry him, and will not refuse.—Only may the gods convey us safely out of this land, and hence to our haven, wheresoever it be!

524 σοῦ γέ μ'] σοῦ γ' ἐμ' Brunck. 525 πρὸς τὸ καίριον] Blaydes conj. τῷδε πρὸς καιρὸν. 526 ἀλλ' εἰ] Nauck conj. εἰ δὴ: Hense, εἰ δ' οὖν. 528 ἐκ τε] The 1st hand in L wrote ἐκδε (sic): S then wrote γ over δ. ἐκ γε r: ἐκ τε Gerhard. 529 βουλομένοθα MSS., except B, which has βουλόμεθα, the reading preferred by Brunck and Hartung.

524 ε. ἀλλὰ... μέντοι: cp. Ant. 567. The fact that ἀλλὰ recurs so soon, in v. 526, has caused a corruption to be suspected in the latter place (see crit. n.): but there it has a different tone ('come, now'). This elasticity of meaning in ἀλλὰ is one reason why classical poetry so readily allows it to be repeated at short intervals (cp. e.g., 645, 647, 651: O. C. 238 ff. ἀλλ' ἐπελ... ἀλλ' ἐμέ... ἀλλ' ἔρε). As to the tolerance of such repetition generally, cp. 762: O. C. 554 n.—αἰσχροῖς: for the plur., cp. 1395, O. C. 485 n.—σοῦ γέ μ' is better than σοῦ γ' ἐμ': the latter would imply an ungraceful emphasis on the speaker's personal dignity.—πρὸς τὸ καίριον: cp. As. 38 ἡ... πρὸς καιρὸν πονῶ;—πονεῖν, expegetical of ἐνδεέστερον, 'in respect of toiling': cp. O. C. 335 οἱ δ' αὐθόμαιμοι τοῦ νεανίαι πονεῖν;

526 ε. ὁρμάσθω, let Philoctetes set out with us for the ship at once. ταχύς=ταχέως: cp. 808, 1080.—χὴ ναῦς, the ship, on her part. If the sick man's shipmates make no difficulty, the ship will make none: i.e., it will be easy to find room for him on board (cp. 481). Neoptolemus is on his guard against betraying elation. He speaks as if the granting of Ph.'s prayer was now a simple matter, —and one which did not greatly interest him.

or (2) 'he shall not be refused his wish.' This second version is inadmissible. Classical Greek allows ἀπαρνούμαι δοῦναι τι, but not ἀπαρνούμαι τὸν αἰτούντα. And with either version the change of subject would be harsh. Rather the verb is deponent, with ἡ ναῦς for subject. Prof. Ridgeway, supporting this view (Trans. Camb. Philol. Soc. 1. p. 244), illustrates the personification of the ship from Od. 10. 131 ἀσπασίως δ' ἐς πόντον ἐπηρεφέας φύγε πέτρας, and Arist. Pol. 3. 13 § 16, where the ship Argo—endued by legend with a voice—is described as refusing to carry Heracles (οὐ γὰρ ἐθέλειν αὐτὸν ἀγεῖν τὴν Ἀργώ).—It is true that the classical fut. of ἀρνεόμαι, where it occurs, is ἀρνήσομαι (O. T. 571, etc.). But there is no classical instance of ἀρνηθήσομαι as fut. pass. And since the aor. ἤρνηθην is always deponent, analogy suggests that a deponent use of ἀρνηθήσομαι would have been possible. Cp. διαλέγομαι, aor. διελέχθην (deponent), fut. διαλεχθήσομαι (deponent), as well as διαλέξομαι. In later Greek ἀρνηθήσομαι occurs, indeed, as pass. (St Luke xii. 9, ἀπαρνηθήσεται, 'he will be disowned'), but also as deponent (LXX., Is. xxxi. 7 ἀπαρνηθήσονται, with v. 1. ἀπαρνήσονται).

533 ε. προσκύσαντεῖ L (the dots meaning that σ should be deleted): and so A. But the later MSS. generally give προσκύσαντες. Γ (13th cent.) προσκύσσοντες.—εἰσοίκησιν] The scribe of L intended (I think) εἰς οἶκον, not εἰσοίκησιν. He has written, indeed, εἰσοίκησιν (sic), as in O. C. 739 εἰ σπλείστον, with a disregard for the division of words which he often shows (see O. C., Introd. p. xlv). Further, the smooth breathing is indistinct in form, being an almost round dot; but, in his writing, it often approximates to such a character: thus the breathing on οὐδ' in 536 is hardly different:

530 ε. ὦ φίλτατον μὲν κ.τ.λ.: for the epanaphora, with change from φίλτατος to a synonym, cp. Ani. 898 φίλη μὲν... προσφιλῆς δὲ... φίλη δὲ, n. For the nom. ἥδιστος ἀνὴρ after the voc., cp. 867, 986.—πῶς ἂν... γενοίμην, a wish; cp. 794: O. C. 1457: so ib. 1100 τίς ἂν... δοίη...;

533 ε. ἴωμεν clearly means, 'let us be going' (from Lemnos). Cp. 645 χωρῶμεν. It expresses his joyful impatience to avail himself of N.'s offer here, and naturally follows the preceding verses. If, on the other hand, we take ἴωμεν to mean, 'let us go into the cave,' we shall have no direct expression of Ph.'s eagerness to leave Lemnos: and the invitation to enter the cave will come with an awkward abruptness after the first words of gratitude. But if ἴωμεν means, 'let us be going from Lemnos,' then we must accept εἰσοίκησιν, unless we can substitute for προσκύσαντε some partic. which could go with εἰς οἶκον. For προσκύσαντε εἰς οἶκον could not mean, 'having gone into the dwelling to salute it.' I once suggested τήνδε προσκύσαντ' ἔσω | δοικὸν εἰς οἶκον, i.e., 'after one look' into it; but

I now doubt whether the classical usage of προσκύπτω would bear this. We may rather believe that Soph. hazarded the otherwise unknown word εἰσοίκησις, much as in O. C. 27 he ventured on ἐξοικήσιμος. It implies a verb εἰσοικέω (nowhere found, except as a v. l. for ἐνοικέω in Anihol. 7. 320), capable of being used thus,—ἄντρον εἰσώκησε, 'he entered the cave and made his dwelling there'=ἄντρον εἰσελθὼν ὥκησε. Then εἰσοίκησις would be properly, the act of so making a dwelling, or the dwelling made. (εἰσοικίζω, to bring in as a settler, is irrelevant.) See Appendix.—προσκύσαντε, a farewell salutation (as by kissing the soil), because the cave had so long given him shelter: see below on 1408.—ὥς...καί: cp. 13.

535 ἀφ' ὧν: Her. 1. 216 ἀπὸ κτηνέων ζῶουσι καὶ ἰχθύων.—διέζων, sustained life (under difficulties), as Her. 3. 25 ποιηφάγεοντες διέζων: so διατρέφομαι, διαγιγνομαι.

536 ε. οἶμαι γὰρ κ.τ.λ.: for I think that even the bare sight would have deterred anyone but myself from enduring these things: οὐδεὶς ἄλλος ἂν ἐτλη τάδε, εἰ θέαν μόνην ἔλαβε. The first glance at such a dwelling would have made any

Let us be going, my son, when thou and I have made a solemn farewell to the homeless home within,—that thou mayest e'en learn by what means I sustained life, and how stout a heart hath been mine. For I believe that the bare sight would have deterred any other man from enduring such a lot; but I have been slowly schooled by necessity to patience.

other man renounce the attempt to live in it. Instead of καὶ θυμασιν μόνην θέαν λαβόντα, οὐκ ἂν τλήναι, we have οὐδ' ὁμ-μασιν...τλήναι,—οὐδ' thus serving to weld the sentence into a more compact whole.—μόνην need not be changed to μόνον, though the latter would be more usual: cp. O. T. 388 ἐν ταῖς κέρδεσιν | μόνον δέ-δορκε: Ant. 361 Ἄϊδα μόνον φεύξω οὐκ ἐπάξεταί.—Some govern τάδε by θέαν λα-βόντα as = θεασάμενον (cp. O. C. 223 n.), and take τλήναι with the partic.: 'endure to have looked upon.' This is forced. For τλήναι with simple acc., cp. Tr. 71, O. C. 1077, etc.

539 π. ἐπίσχετον is said to N. and Ph., who are moving towards the cave. μάθωμεν, absol., let us learn,—viz., what tidings the new comers are bringing. The conjecture μένωμεν (or μείνωμεν) would merely repeat the sense of ἐπίσχε-τον.—This hortative subjunct. occurs even in the 1st pers. sing., as Eur. Hipp. 567 ἐπίσχετ', αὐδὴν τῶν ἔσθων ἐκμάθω: id. H. F. 1058 σίγα, πνοὰς μάθω.—ἀλλόθρους, prop., speaking a foreign tongue: here, simply = ἀλλότριος, just as in Tr. 844 ἀλ-

λόθρου | γνώμας = merely ἀλλοτρίας γνώ-μας.—ἂν μαθόντες, i.e., having learned (their news) from them: cp. 370 n.—αὐ-θῆς = 'at a later moment,' as Al. 1283.—ἔσσιτον (imperat., not indic.): for the dual, after μαθόντες, cp. Plat. Laches p. 187 Α αὐτοὶ εὐρεταὶ γεγονότε: and n. on O. C. 343.

542 Odysseus said that he would send back the σκοπός, disguised as a merchant captain, if N. seemed to be tarrying too long (126 ff.). The actor who now comes on as ἐμπορος would not, however, be the same who played the σκοπός (a mute person), but the tritagonist, who played Odysseus. The sailor who accompanies him is a mute person; and that part may have been taken by the former representative of the σκοπός.

As N. has already ensnared Ph., and is on the point of starting with him, there is no actual need for the intervention of the ἐμπορος. But Odysseus, at the ship, could not know this; and we are to suppose that he had become impatient. The scene which follows heightens the dramatic interest by bringing out the horror with which Ph. regards the idea of returning to Troy.

547 οὐ πολλῶ στόλῳ, with no large company (i.e., with one ship, and only a small crew to handle it): as Tr. 496 σὺν πολλῶ στόλῳ = 'with a numerous train.' If στόλῳ were taken as 'fleet,' the phrase could hardly be a mere equivalent for μὴ νηί, but would suggest at least a plurality of vessels.

549 ε. Πεπάρηθον (now called Σκόπελος), a small island near the Thessalian coast, about 12 miles E. of the south end of Magnesia. The island of Sciathus lies between it and the mainland; Euboea is only 20 miles distant to the S.W., and Scyros about 40 to the S.E. The name is well-chosen, then, to make Philoctetes feel that he is listening to a neighbour of his old home. Peparethus, though not more than some 12 miles in length, with a greatest width of 5 or 6, contained three towns. Its famous wine is ranked by Aristophanes with those of Pramnus, Chios and Thasos (fr. 301). The author of [Dem.] or. 35 § 35 names Peparethus, along with Cos, Thasos and Mendè, as a seat of the wine-trade with the Euxine. An Alexandrian physician, Apollodorus, recommended the wine of Peparethus before all others, adding that its repute would be still higher, did it not require six years to attain perfection (Plin. H. N. 14. 9). The epithet εὐβοτρυν here is peculiarly fitting, since Pliny speaks of the island as quondam Euboeum dictam (ib. 4. 23). And so Heracleides Ponticus fr. 13 says of it, αὕτη ἡ νῆσος εὐβοῖός ἐστι καὶ εὐδενδρος.

MERCHANT.

Son of Achilles, I asked my companion here,—who, with two others, was guarding thy ship,—to tell me where thou mightest be,—since I have fallen in with thee, when I did not expect it, by the chance of coming to anchor off the same coast. Sailing, in trader's wise, with no great company, homeward bound from Ilium to Peparethus with its cluster-laden vines,—when I heard that the sailors were all of thy crew, I resolved not to go on my voyage in silence, without first giving thee my news, and reaping guerdon due. Thou knowest nothing, I suspect, of thine own affairs—the new designs that the Greeks have regarding thee,—nay, not designs merely, but deeds in progress, and no longer tarrying.

my knowledge,—one of the facts which thou, perchance, knowest not'). Musgrave approved this, only keeping προστυχόντι as = 'since I have chanced upon thee.'—τῶν ἰσων) In L. made from τὸν ἰσων by S. 554 σου νέα Auratus: ἀμφὶ σ' οὐνεκα L., and so (or ἀμφὶ σου 'νεκα) most other MSS.: ἀμφὶς ἐνεκα Γ, with γρ. ἀμφὶς δν [i.e. ἀμφὶ σου] ἀντὶ τοῦ περὶ σου. The fact that ἀμφὶ σου ἐνεκα (or οὐνεκα) could thus pass muster as a pleonasm deserves notice. 555 ἐστὶ] ἐστι L., and so Blaydes.

It also produced good olives (Ov. Met. 7. 470).—In the Iliad the Greeks at Troy import wine from Lemnos (7. 467) and from Thrace (9. 72).

ἤκουσα τοὺς ναῦτας ὅτι: cp. Αἰ. 1141 σὺ δ' ἀντακούσει τοῦτον ὡς τεθάψεται: Xen. M. 4. 2. 23 τὸν Δαίδαλον οὐκ ἀκήκοας, ὅτι ἡραγκάζετο δουλεύειν;—πάντες: and therefore he could not have been anticipated in bringing the news.—Dobree's conjecture, συννεναυστοληκότες, has been generally accepted by recent edd. If the MS. οἱ νενναυστοληκότες is retained, then σοι is possess. pron.: 'that all those who had made the voyage were thy men.' The objection to this is the want of point in the participle.

551 ε. ἔδοξέ μοι κ.τ.λ. The constr. of προστυχόντι is made somewhat awkward by the negative before ποιέσθαι. 'I decided to sail, not in silence, or before I had told thee, (but only when, having told thee,) I had received a due reward.' It would have been clearer to have written either: (1) ἔδοξέ μοι φράσαντι τὸν πλοῦν ποιεῖσθαι, προστυχόντι τῶν ἰσων: or (2) ἔδοξέ μοι μὴ σίγα τὸν πλοῦν ποιεῖσθαι, πρὶν φράσαιμι καὶ προστύχοιμι τῶν ἰσων. The justification of the actual form is that μὴ σίγα, πρὶν φράσαιμι, is felt as a more emphatic equivalent for a simple φράσαντι. For the dat. προστυχόντι (instead of an acc.) with the inf., cp.

Xen. An. 2. 1. § 2 ἔδοξεν οὖν αὐτοῖς συσκευασαμένοις...προῖεναι. The acc. is, however, more usual, as ib. 3. 2. 1 ἔδοξεν αὐτοῖς προφυλακὰς καταστήσαντας συγκαλεῖν τοὺς στρατιώτας, since it excludes a possible ambiguity: cp. An. 838 n.—The use of προστυχόντι ('having obtained, met with') is like that in El. 1463 ἐμοῦ κολαστοῦ προστυχόν.—τῶν ἰσων: by τὰ ἴσα is meant a reasonable recompense for his trouble. This sense of ἴσος (aequis) is virtually the same as in such phrases as ἐπὶ τοῖς ἴσοις καὶ ὁμοίοις (Thuc. 5. 79), etc. Similarly the messengers in O. T. 1005 and Tr. 190 expressly say that they have come in the hope of being rewarded.—Others join προστυχόντι with σοι, 'when thou shouldst have received (the information) due.' Nauck understands, 'since I have met with the same fortune as thine'—i.e., have put in at the same coast. (Cp. El. 1168 ξὺν σοι μετεῖχον τῶν ἰσων.)

554 δ τοῖσιν κ.τ.λ. The antecedent to δ is not τῶν σαντοῦ in 553: rather the relative clause is epexegetic. 'Thou knowest nothing of thine own affairs,—i.e., of those new counsels (sc. περὶ τούτων) which,' etc.—νέα, in addition to the former wrong (60).

After the βουλευματα had become ἐργα, by the taking of the first steps, the action might still have been sluggish. But these ἐργα are δρώμενα,—advancing towards completion. So Plut. Mor. 2 E γῆ... ἐξαργηθεῖσα, land which has been allowed to lie fallow. Arist. uses the pf. act. ἐξηρηγκέναι as = 'to have become torpid' (Eth. N. 1. 8: Pol. 5. 10). Cp. *O. 559 ἅπερ γ'. It is not surprising that γε should have been suspected here, since L has ἅπερ ἔλεξας. But the emendations which have been suggested (see cr. n.) are improbable. If any were to be made, I should rather suggest ἅπερ κάλεξας.

L seems, however, to have lost γε in some other places (cp. 105 n.): and here the particle appears defensible, if regard is had to the tone of the passage. Neoptolemus, mindful of his part, receives the (supposed) stranger's announcement with politeness, but without manifesting much concern. 'I am really very much obliged to you for the trouble which you have taken. But perhaps you would kindly say what, precisely, it is to which you allude.' So ἅπερ γ' = 'just those things which,'—the γε merely adding a slight emphasis to ἅπερ.

560 νεώτερον, not simply νέον (554), but 'startling,'—ominous of some new wrong: cp. Thuc. 4. 51 μηδὲν περὶ σφᾶς νεώτερον βουλευσέν.—ἀπ' Ἀργείων with βούλευμα, not with ἔχεις,—a plot on their part: for this ἀπό, cp. O. C. 293.—ἔχεις with μοι, 'hast for me,' i.e., announce to me. Cp. Ant. 9 n.

562 Φοῖνιξ: cp. 344.—οἱ τε Θησέως κόροιο: Demophon,—the ruler of Athens who figures in Eur. Heracleidae,—and his brother Acamas, who in the same play is a mute person at his side (v. 119). These Θησεῖδα, δῶν Ἀθηνῶν (Eur. Hec. 125), are plausibly represented as foes of Neoptolemus, since their father Theseus was treacherously slain in Scyros by Lycomedes (Paus. 1. 17. 6). Ἰλίου Πέρσις, made Neoptolemus the hero of his epic, and introduced the two sons of Theseus in the episode of the wooden horse. On the Acropolis of Athens Pausanias saw the δούρειος ἵππος commemorated in bronze. 'Menestheus and Teucer,' he adds, 'are peeping out of it,—and the sons of Theseus' (i. 23. 8).—These Theseidae do not appear in Il. or Od.; nor does their father, except where Nestor speaks of having known him (Il. i. 265), and in a doubtful verse of the νέκυια (Od. ii. 631).

563 ἐκ βίας: cp. 945.—λόγοις is changed by Nauck to δόλοις, because the antithesis between force and persuasion is not suitable here; 'since Neoptolemus must assume a hostile intention in the διώκοντες.' But why should he not suppose that the Atreidae, finding him indispensable, wish to entice him back by smooth λόγοι? (Cp. 629 λόγοισι μαλθακοῖς.) In v. 102 τί δ' ἐν δόλῳ δεῖ μάλλον ἢ πεῖσαντ' ἄγειν; the antithesis is between a false story and persuasion by honest argument. But λόγος (whether true or false), as a means of prevailing, can also be contrasted with force, as in 593 f., ἡ λόγῳ | πείσαντες ἀξέει, ἡ πρὸς ἰσχύος κράτος. And that is the antithesis meant here.

567 ὡς ταῦτ' ἐπίστω δρώμεν'. Where ὡς occurs in such phrases with an imperative, it regularly belongs to the partic.: cp. 253 ὡς μηδὲν εἰδὼτ' ἴσθι μ' (n.). But here ὡς ταῦτα...δρώμενα could not strictly stand for ὡς δρώμενα...ταῦτα. The suspicions which the text has excited are, so far, natural. Yet I think that it is sound. The irregularity seems to have arisen from the fact that ὡς, prefixed to an assurance, could either (a) belong to a partic. (as in 253, 415, etc.), or (b) introduce the whole sentence, as 117 ὡς τοῦτό γ' ἔρξας δύο φέρει δωρηματα. Thus the Attic ear had become accustomed to ὡς as the first word of such an assurance in either type. And so ὡς could be given that place in a sentence of type (a), even though the partic. did not immediately follow. That is, I do not suppose that ὡς ταῦτ' ἐπίστω δρώμενα is for ὡς δρώμεν' ἐπίστω ταῦτα: but rather that, instead of saying simply ταῦτ' ἐπίστω δρώμενα, he can prefix ὡς, because the associations of type (b) had blunted the feeling for what was essential in type (a),—viz., that the partic. (or partic. with μὴ) should immediately follow ὡς.

Not 'was sailing again' (with ref. to his former voyage to Scyros, 343). If αὖ is a true correction here (as it has been deemed by almost all recent edd.), the corruption ἂν in the mss. is the reverse of that which has probably occurred in O. C. 1418 (n.).

If ἂν is kept, it must be explained in one of two ways. (1) Taking ἂν with ἔπλει: 'who is this, for whom he would have been sailing?' (= 'presumably sailed'). Cp. Od. 4. 546 ἢ κεν Ὀρέστης | κτεῖνεν, 'or Orestes would have slain him,' = 'or, it may be, O. slew him.' (2) Taking ἂν with ποῖον τόνδε, as if ὅνα were understood: 'Who might this man be, for whom he sailed?' On this view, ἂν does not affect ἔπλει, and πρὸς ποῖον ἂν τόνδε=ποῖος ὅδε ἂν εἴη, πρὸς ὅν ἔπλει. This is possible: though here πρὸς ποῖον ἂν τόνδε would more naturally suggest ποῖος ὅδε ἂν ἦν. He further suggests χρήζει for λέξει. 582 διαβάλλης r: διαβάλλης (sic) L. 584 χρηστά θ' Dobree, and so most recent edd.:

τόνδε in 573 onwards, the pretended ἐμπορος has spoken to N. in lower tones; while N. has taken care to pronounce v. 575 loud enough for Ph. to hear. The object of this by-play is to quicken Ph.'s interest in the coming story (603 ff.), and his anxiety to leave Lemnos. Seyffert's change of τί με into τί δέ is no improvement. It is natural that Ph., the ἀνὴρ ὑπόπτῃς (136), should suspect some design against himself. The ἐμπορος had suddenly assumed an air of mystery; and, on learning Ph.'s name, had urged N. to save himself (σεαυτὸν συλλαβών). The διὰ in διεμπολῶ expresses traffic: cp. fr. 521. 7 (a woman bawling the lot of her sex), ὠθοῦμεθ' ἔξω καὶ διεμπολώμεθα (as by a bargain between suitor and parents).—Cp. 978: Ant. 1036.

581 εἰς φῶς, opp. to κατὰ σκότον (578): cp. 1353: El. 639 οὐδὲ πᾶν ἀναπτύξαι πρέπει | πρὸς φῶς: O. T. 1229 εἰς τὸ φῶς φανεῖ: fr. 832 πάντ' ἐκκαλύπτων ὁ χρόνος εἰς τὸ φῶς ἄγει. Yet Nauck has ejected εἰς φῶς from the text, and con-

jecturally substituted σαφῶς. He wishes also to replace λέξει by χρήζει. But for the fut. cp. O. C. 114 ἕως ἂν ἐκμάθω | τίνος λόγους ἐρούσιν. So here λέξει = μέλλει λέξιν.—For καὶ...τε cp. 421.

582 ε. σπέρμ': cp. 364.—στρατῶ: the dat. as Eur. Hec. 863 Ἀχαιοῖς εἰ διαβληθήσομαι, etc. In prose usu. πρὸς τινα or εἰς τινα: also παρὰ τινι, or ἐν τισι.—ἃ μὴ δέ, quae non oportet (generic μὴ).—δρῶν ἀντιπάσχω: the emphasis is here rather on the verb than on the partic.: 'I receive many benefits from them, in return for my services.' The schol. has: ὅτ' ἐκείνων εὐεργετούμενος ἀνευεργετῶ αὐτούς, ὡς δύναται πένης εὐεργετεῖν, δηλονότι ὑπηρετεῖν. This makes δρῶν more prominent than ἀντιπάσχω,—evidently because the schol. thought that οἱ ἀνὴρ πένης referred only to δρῶν,—'so far as a poor man can confer benefits.' But that clause refers to ἀντιπάσχω also: the benefits which he received were important for such as he was. Cp. O. T. 763 δέσος...οἱ ἀνὴρ |

Nauck conj. ἐγωγ'. 587 προσφιλῇ, λόγον] προσφιλῇ λόγον L, etc.: προσφιλεῖ λόγῳ in Harl. (15th cent.), which Burges adopts in his text, is an isolated v. l. For λόγον Burges conj. λόγων, received by Nauck, Wecklein, Mekler. 588 After ἡμᾶς two letters (δέ?) have been erased in L.—μηδέν' MSS.: Linwood conj. μηδέν, and so Blaydes. 590 ποιού]

δούλος ('for a slave'), and ib. 1118 πιστὸς ὡς νομεὺς ἀνὴρ.—χρηστά θ'; πολλά (or πολλά τε) καὶ χρηστά is commoner than πολλά χρηστά τε (though cp. Aesch. Theb. 338 πολλά γάρ, εὔτε πτόλις δαμασθῇ, | ἐγὼ δυστυχῇ τε πρᾶσσει; and on the other hand we find πολλά...καλά (fr. 79), πολλά...σοφά (fr. 99), etc. Still, χρηστά θ' seems more probable here than χρηστά γ'.

585 ε. ἐγὼ εἰμ'. This synizesis is extremely rare, though that of ω and ου is less so (O. T. 332 ἐγὼ οὐτ', n.). Indeed there is no other certain instance in Tragedy; for in Eur. El. 1332 οὐδ' ἐγὼ εἰς σὸν βλέφαρον πελάσω ought not to be compared. There οὐδ' ἐγὼ is a dactyl, by epic hiatus, as in Il. 1. 29 τὴν δ' ἐγὼ οὐ λύσω. In Comedy we have Ar. Vesp. 1224 ἐγὼ εἰσομαι, where Burges reads ταχ' εἰσομαι.—φίλος μέγιστος: cp. As. 1331 φίλον σ' ἐγὼ μέγιστον Ἀργείων νέμω.

able to the MS. λόγον here: and either would have been written ΔΟΡΟΝ in the poet's time. ὦν is most simply taken as = τούτων οὗς: though, if λόγον were retained, it might also represent (περὶ) τούτων δ.

589 ὄρα κ.τ.λ. Some take this verse as an exchange of veiled hints between the accomplices. But why should the ἔμπορος fear that N. was likely to trip in his part? Rather it is merely a piece of acting, like the feigned 'aside' in 573, and with the same object—viz., to impress Philoctetes.—πάλαι, referring back merely to the moment at which he began to press his question,—i.e., to 580: cp. O. T. 1161 n.—For the ἀντιλαβή, marking excitement, cp. 54, 466.

590 ποιού, instead of τίθου. Cp. O. T. 54 ὡς εἴπερ ἄρξεις τῆσδε γῆς, ὥσπερ κρατεῖς, n.—λέγων: cp. O. C. 1038 (n.) χωρὼν ἀπειλεῖ νῦν, threaten (if you will)—but set out. So here, 'hold me responsible if thou wilt—but answer.'

NE. And wherefore, after so long a time, did the Atreidae turn their thoughts towards this man, Wecklein (Ars p. 62) conj. θοῖ τοι: Reiske, πείθου or πιθού. 591 ὥπερ L: ὡπερ γ. 592 Herwerden would delete this v., because the names have been given already (570). 593 ἢ ἢ L. Burges conj. πείσαντ' ἀπάξειν. 598 ε οὕτω L 1st hand, but the ι has been erased.—Nauck would reject the words from 'Ατρεΐδαι τοσφ'δ' inclusive.

591 λέγω. So in Ant. 245 (where the reluctant speaker is at last brought to the point) καὶ δὴ λέγω σοι.—πὶ τοῦτον. Such aphaeresis after a stop is rare: but cp. Eur. I. A. 719 μέλλω· πὶ ταύτῃ καὶ καθέσταμεν τύχη: [Eur.] Rhes. 157 ἤξω· πὶ τοῦτοις τόνδ' ὑφίσταμαι πόνον: Ar. Nub. 1354 ἐγὼ φράσω, πειθεὶ γὰρ κ.τ.λ.—τοῦτον, this man here, (=τόνδε,) Philoctetes.

592 Although Odysseus and Diomedes had been named in 570, it is obviously natural that their names should be repeated in this more explicit statement.

593 δῶμοτοι. The adj., not found elsewhere, answers to διόμνυμι (Tr. 255) or διόμνυμαι (ib. 378, Ai. 1233) as='to swear solemnly.'—ἢ μὴν, prefacing an oath, as Tr. 256 (διώμοσεν) ἢ μὴν... δουλώσειν: ib. 1185 ὁμνυ... ἢ μὴν τί δράσειν; The formula occurs first in Il. 1. 76 ὁμοσσαν] ἢ μὲν (Ion. for μὴν) μοι... ἀρῆξειν. It is used also in threats, O. C. 816 ἢ μὴν... λυπηθεὶς ἔσει (n.).

594 πείσαντες κ.τ.λ.: cp. 102.—πρὸς ἰσχύος κράτος. ἰσχύς is the physical strength at the disposal of the captors; κράτος, the mastery which this strength will give them. Thus the gen. defines the source of the κράτος. Cp. Aesch.

P. V. 212 ὡς οὐ κατ' ἰσχὺν οὐδὲ πρὸς τὸ καρτερόν | χρεῖν, δόλῳ δὲ τοὺς ὑπερσχόντας κρατεῖν: where κατ' ἰσχὺν expresses the available strength, and πρὸς τὸ καρτερόν the triumphant exertion of it. (As to πρὸς ἰσχύος χάριν in Eur. Med. 538, see on Ant. 30.) For πρὸς cp. 90 n.

596 ε πλέον, predicate: cp. 352, 601.—θατέρου=ἢ ὁ ἑτερος: cp. O. C. 568 πλέον... σοῦ=πλέον ἢ σοί (n.).

598 ε τίνος...πράγματος χάριν; cp. O. T. 698 ὅτου ποτὲ | ...πράγματος.—χρόνῳ τοσφ'δε=διὰ χρόνου τοσούτου, after so long a time: cp. 722: El. 1273 ἰὼ χρόνῳ μακρῷ φιλάταν | ὁδὸν ἐπαξιώσας... φανῆναι.—ἐπιστρέφοντο, bethought them (impf.) of caring for: Dem. or. 10 § 9 οὐδὲν ἐφροντίσατε οὐδ' ἐπιστράφητε οὐδὲν τούτων. Cp. O. T. 134 πρὸ τοῦ θανάτου τήνδ' ἔθεσθ' ἐπιστροφήν.—ἀγαν οὕτω: El. 884 ὧδε πιστεύεις ἀγαν.

The order of the words is remarkable, not only because τίνος is so far from πρᾶγματος, but also because it is closely followed by τοῦδ', so that, when the ear caught the first words, the sense expected might naturally be, 'Who was for this man for whom' etc. (cp. 441). The motive has been the wish to emphasise the pron. referring to Philoctetes (τοῦδ').

606 Ἐλενος,—distinguished as Πρια-μίδης from Helenus son of Oenops, a Greek hero slain by Hector (Il. 5.
 707),—figures in the Iliad as at once a seer and a warrior. He gives counsel at critical moments to his brother Hector (Il. 6. 76, 7. 44); with his brother Deiphobus, he leads a third of the Trojan host in the attack on the Greek camp (Il. 12. 94).
 The story of his capture by Odysseus does not belong to the Iliad, but was probably included in the Ἰλιάς Μικρά of Lesches (c. 700 B.C.),—the epic which contained the return of Philoctetes to Troy (see Introd.). Ovid associates this exploit with two other similar feats of Odysseus,—the capture of the horses of Rhesus, when their master, and the Trojan spy Dolon, were slain, (Il. 10)— and the theft of the Palladium: Met.
 13. 99 *Conferat his Ithacus Rhesum
 imbellemque Dolona, | Priamidemque Helenum raptum cum Pallade captum.* In Verg. Aen. 3. 346 ff., Helenus, then settled in Epeirus, prophesies to Aeneas.

The statement of the ξυμπος is only part of the truth. Helenus had indeed whom long since they had cast forth? What was the yearning that came to them,—what compulsion, or what vengeance, from gods who requite evil deeds?

ME. I can expound all that to thee,—since it seems that thou hast not heard it. There was a seer of noble birth, a son of Priam,—by name Helenus; whom this man, going forth by night,—this guileful Odysseus, of whom all shameful and dishonouring words are spoken,—made his prisoner; and, leading him in bonds, showed him publicly to the Achaeans, a goodly prize: who then prophesied to them whatso else they asked, and that they should never sack the towers of Troy, unless by winning words they should bring this man from the island whereon he now dwells.

μέσοις (cp. 630). 610 ἐθέσπισεν Triclinius: ἐθέσπισε L, A, etc. 611 εἰ ὥς οὐ μὴ] ὥς οὐ δὴ Harl.—πέρσειεν L and most MSS.: πέρσειεν r.—Elmsley conj. ὥς οὐ μὴποτε πέρσειαν: Blaydes, ὥς οὐκ ἂν ποτε | πέρσειεν. Nauck would prefer to read (taking δὴ from the Harleian MS.) ὥς οὐ δὴ ποτε | πέρσειεν.—Mekler conj. ὥς οὐ μὴ ποτε | ἔλοιεν. 612 ἀγοιγτο MSS. Blaydes reads ἀγάγουγτο: he also conj. ἀξοιγτο.

been captured, and had said that Troy could not be taken without Philoctetes. But he had also said that Troy was destined to be taken that summer,—as if he knew that fate had decreed the return of Philoctetes,—who was then to be healed by the Asclepiadae, and to share with Neoptolemus the glory of the victory (1329—1342). Odysseus, however, believed that Philoctetes would not listen to persuasion, but must be brought back by a stratagem (103). And so the object of the ἔμπορος in referring to Helenus is merely to convince Philoctetes that Odysseus is coming, in order that the sufferer may become still more anxious to depart with Neoptolemus for Greece, as he supposes.

609 ἐς μέσον with ἔθει, rather than with δέσμον...ἄγων: cp. Pind. fr. 42 καλῶν μὲν ὦν μοῖραν τε τερπνῶν ἐς μέσον χρὴ παντὶ λαῶ | δεικνύναι.

610 τά τ' ἄλλα...πάντα, including the command to bring Neopt. from Scyros (cp. 346). This phrase serves to emphasise the statement introduced by καί: cp. Ant. 506 ἀλλ' ἡ τυραννὶς πολλὰ τ' ἄλλ' εὐδαιμονεῖ | κἀστὴν αὐτῇ κ.τ.λ.

611 εἰ τὰκί Τροίᾳ πέργαμ': cp.

353 n.—οὐ μὴ ποτε πέρσειεν. Helenus said, οὐ μὴ πέρσετε. It is certain that οὐ μὴ was used with the 1st or 3rd pers. of the fut. indic. in strong denial,—having then the same force as οὐ μὴ with the subjunctive, which was the commoner construction. There is no need, then, for changing οὐ μὴ πέρσειεν into οὐ μὴ πέρσειαν (as though he had said οὐ μὴ πέρσητε). In oratio obliqua after a secondary tense this fut. indic. with οὐ μὴ could be retained (as if here we had πέρσουσι): or it could be represented by a fut. inf. (as if we had ἔφη αὐτοὺς οὐ μὴποτε πέρσειεν). See the examples in n. on O. C. 177.—οὐ δὴποτε πέρσειεν would be a weaker reading.

612 ἀγοιγτο: he said, ἐὰν μὴ ἀγησθε, if ye shall not bring. Blaydes places his conjecture ἀγάγουγτο in the text, and also suggests ἀξοιγτο. Either would serve; but ἀγοιγτο is right also. In a conditional sentence, the pres. subj. can have either of two meanings: (1) ἐὰν ἀγησθε, καλῶς ἐξει,—‘if ye shall bring, it will be well’—a particular supposition referring to the future: or (2) ἐὰν ἀγησθε, καλῶς ἔχει,—‘if ye (ever) bring, it is (always) well,’—a general supposition referring to the present. Here, of course, ἀγοιγτο represents (1). Cp. Xen. Cyr. 3. 2. 13 ἦν μὲν πόλεμον αἰρῆσθε, μηκέτι ἤκετε δεῦρο ἀνευ ὀπλων...ἦν δὲ εἰρήνης δοκῆτε δέισθαι, ἀνευ ὀπλων ἤκετε: ἰδ.

And the son of Laertes, when he heard the seer speak thus, straightway promised that he would bring this man and show him to the Achaeans,—most likely, he thought, as a willing captive,—but, if reluctant, then by force; adding that, should he fail in this, whoso wished might have his head.—Thou hast heard all, my son; and I commend speed to thee, and to any man for whom thou carest.

PH. Hapless that I am! Hath he, that utter pest, sworn to bring me by persuasion to the Achaeans? As soon shall I be persuaded, when I am dead, to come up from Hades to the light, as his father came!

PH. Now is not this wondrous, my son, that the offspring of Laertes should have hoped, by means of soft words, to lead me forth from his ship and show me amidst the Greeks? No! sooner would I hearken to that deadliest of my foes,

630 ἄγοντ' from ἄγονθ' L. 631 οὐ'] οὐ' 1st hand in L: S added the accent, but in front of the breathing. Seyffert, from the margin of Turnebus, gives οὐ with κήδομαι: as a general rule, however, verbs of 'caring' can take either the simple gen. or gen. with prep. (as φροντίζω, μέλει, etc.).

622 ἦ πᾶσα βλάβη, that utter pest. In this phrase πᾶσα is justified by the figurative application; i.e., when a man is called a βλάβη, instead of saying ὁ πᾶς βλάβη ὢν, he who is altogether a bane, we can say ἦ πᾶσα βλάβη, the bane which is altogether such. The tendency is the same which appears, e.g., in λέγει...εἶναι ταύτην (instead of τοῦτο) ὁρθότητα ὀνόματος (Plat. Crat. 433 E: O. C. 88 n.).—So Aegisthus is ὁ πάντ' ἀναλκίς οὗτος, ἦ πᾶσα βλάβη, El. 301. Cp. 927 πᾶν δέμα.

624 ε. πεισθήσομαι. No entreaties can recall the dead to the upper world; and no entreaties will recall him to Troy. We need not object to πεισθήσομαι that a Greek would think of the departed as glad to revisit the sunlight. The point is that the dead are deaf to the voice that would bring them back.—γάρ implies the suppressed thought, οὗτοι στελεῖ.—ᾧδε='at this rate' (= 'if I go to Troy'); so oft. οὕτω.—πρὸς φῶς ἀνελθεῖν. Nauck writes ἀν ἐλθεῖν, taking the sense to be: 'I shall be made to believe that I could return,'=οὕτω ἔλθοιμι ἀν. But (a) ἀνελ-θεῖν is confirmed by the context: cp. Ar. Pax 445 εἰς φῶς ἀνελθεῖν, etc.: and (b) it gives a more direct and forcible sense.—οὐκείνου πατήρ, Sisyphus. The scholiast gives the story as it was told (probably) by the logographer Pherecydes (Flor. 470 B.C.), who is quoted in ref. to Sisyphus by the schol. on Il. 6. 153. Sisyphus had directed his wife to leave him unburied. On reaching the shades, he denounced her impiety to Pluto, and obtained leave to go back and punish her. Having thus returned to earth, he stayed there,—ὥς (adds the scholiast) μετ' ἀνάγκης κατήλθεν. Theognis (v. 702) is the earliest witness:—Σισύφου Αἰολίδεω, | ὅς τε καὶ ἐξ Ἀΐδεω πολυῖδρήσιν ἀνῆλθεν, | πείσας Περσεφόνην αἰμυλίοισι λόγοισιν.

627 συμφέροι, be your helper: a sense derived from the idea of sharing a burden: El. 946 ξυνοίσω πᾶν δοῦπον ἀν σθένω. Not, 'be in accord with you' (vobiscum conspiret, Herm.: Ar. Lys. 166 ἀνήρ, ἐὰν μὴ τῇ γυναικὶ συμφέρῃ).

635 ε. ὡς...ὀρίξῃ. The ms. ὀρίζει cannot be defended here, either with ὡς as='since,' or with the conjecture ἔως as='while yet.' The words clearly express the eagerness of Ph. to put a space of sea between himself and his pursuer. And he has no reason to believe that his pursuer is still distant.

642 οὐκ, ἀλλὰ, κ.τ.λ. The tone of this idiomatic phrase would be nearly rendered (here, at least) by 'nay, but.' The οὐκ refers to αἰὲ καλὸς πλοῦς κ.τ.λ.: 'This is not a case of flight from imminent peril; but (on the contrary) our pursuers also are being delayed.' Cp. Plat. Euthyd. 277 A ἄρα σὺ οὐ μανθάνεις;...οὐκ, ἀλλ', ἡ δ' ὅς, μανθάνω.—I do not think, then, that any alteration is necessary. Of the conjectures (see cr. n.) Doederlein's οἷδ' is perhaps the best. O. Heine's ἀλλ' οὐχί...; is also possible.

the viper which made me the cripple that I am! But there is nothing that he would not say, or dare; and now I know that he will be here. Come, my son, let us be moving, that a wide sea may part us from the ship of Odysseus. Let us go: good speed in good season brings sleep and rest, when toil is o'er.

NE. We will sail, then, as soon as the head-wind falls; at present it is adverse.

PH. 'Tis ever fair sailing, when thou fleest from evil.

NE. Nay, but this weather is against them also.

PH. No wind comes amiss to pirates, when there is a chance to steal, or to rob by force.

NE. Well, let us be going, if thou wilt,—when thou hast taken from within whatever thou needest or desirest most.

PH. Aye, there are some things that I need,—though the choice is not large.

NE. What is there that will not be found on board my ship?

PH. I keep by me a certain herb, wherewith I can always best assuage this wound, till it is wholly soothed.

Dem. or. 14 § 15 ἀπεβλέψατε πρὸς ἀλλήλους, ὡς αὐτὸς μὲν ἕκαστος οὐ ποιήσων.—Dobree's conjecture, λαβόνθ', was suggested by O. C. 1164, where the MSS. give μολόντ' at the end of the v.: but that should prob. be μόνον.

647 καίπερ οὐ πολλῶν ἀπο: and so it will not take long to choose them out. For the use of the prep., cp. Thuc. 1. 110 ὀλίγοι ἀπὸ πολλῶν.

648 νεὺς γε τῆς ἡμῆς ἐπι. The correction of the MS. ἐνι to ἐπι is necessary and certain. Of ἐνι (= ἐνεστι) only three explanations are possible. (1) Some hold that the gen. νεὺς depends on the idea of ἐσω or ἐνδον implied in ἐνι: 'is contained in my ship.' Cp. Al. 1274 ἐρκέων... ἐγκεκλημένους: Eur. Ph. 451 τόνδ' εἰσεδέξω τευχέων. But there the notion 'within' is implied far more clearly than by ἐνι here. (2) Or νεὺς is an absolute local gen., 'in the ship'; cp. El. 900 ἐσχάτης δ' ὀρῶ πυρᾶς... βόστρυχον. (3) Others take ἐνι with λαβεῖν supplied from λαβών in 645: 'what is there which it is not possible to obtain from my ship.' No one of these views is tenable.

650 πάνυ is fitting enough, where he is dwelling on the value of the herb to him; and it certainly is not weaker than the substitutes which have been proposed for it (see cr. n.). Meineke (Analecta Soph. p. 317) makes the arbitrary assumption that πάνυ was not used by Soph. in dialogue; though it is certainly used by him in anapaests (O. C. 144).

655 ταῦτ' οὐ γὰρ ἄλλ' (sic, not ἄλλ') ἔσθ' ἃ βαστάζω χεροῖν L. Two modes of completing the v. appear in other MSS.: (1) A, οὐ γὰρ ἄλλα γ' ἔσθ'; (2) Γ, ἄλλ' ἔσθ' ἄλλ'.—Hartung conj. ταῦτ', οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν ἄλλ': Hense, ταῦτ', οὐ γὰρ ἄλλ' ἔτ' ἔσθ': Mekler, ταῦτ', οὐ γὰρ ἄλλ', ἐξισθ'.

651 τί γὰρ ἔτ': 'Now what else...?' —γὰρ introduces the question, as oft., when a speaker turns to a new point: cp. 1405: Ai. 101 εἰεν· τί γὰρ δὴ παῖς ὁ τοῦ Δαερτίου, | ποῦ σοι τύχης ἔσσηκεν;

652 εἴ μοι τι τόξων ('I fain would fetch) any of these arrows that may have been overlooked and may have slipped away from me.' The vaguer interpretation, 'any appurtenance of this bow,' is not the best here. Philoctetes, who has been afield in quest of game, carries his bow and his quiver (cp. 291 n.); but he is afraid that one or more of the arrows may have been accidentally left behind in the cave. τόξα, in poetry, can mean either (1) bow, (2) bow and arrows, or (3) arrows. For sense (2), cp. Il. 21. 502: Leto picks up the arrows which had dropped from the quiver of Artemis (492 ταχέες δ' ἐκπιπτον δίστολ):—συναλ- νυτο καμπύλα τόξα, | πεπτῶτ' ἄλλυδις ἄλλα μετὰ στροφάλιγγι κονίης (where καμπύλα is the epithet of the bow only). For (3), Eur. Ion 524 εἰσω τόξα πνευμόνων λαβεῖν. —ἀπημελημένον, a rare compound, of which this perf. partic. occurs in Her. 3. 129.—παρερρήκεν, 'has slipped aside (as by dropping from the quiver); not, 'has slipped from my memory.' Cp. Xen. An. 4. 4 ἀλειυνόν ἢν ἡ χιῶν ἐπιπεπτωκυῖα, ὅτω μὴ παραρρηγῇ (slip off). Plato has the word in a fig. sense, Legg. 781 A πολλά ὑμῖν παρέρρει, πολλὰ ἀμεινον αὐ ἐχοντα εἰ νόμων ἐτυχεν ἢ τὰ νῦν (escaped your care).—ὥς λίπω μὴ=ὥς μὴ λ.: cp. 67 n.: λαβεῖν: cp. 81.

655 οὐ γὰρ ἄλλ' ἔστ', ἄλλ' ἃ κ.τ.λ. L's reading, οὐ γὰρ ἄλλ' (sic) ἔσθ' ἃ clearly points to the reading in the text, since ἄλλ' might easily have been omitted by a scribe who mistook it for a repetition of ἄλλ'. And Γ confirms this. For ἄλλος closely followed by ἄλλα, Seyffert cp. Od. 8. 311 ἀτὰρ οὐ τί μοι αἴτιος ἄλλος, | ἀλλὰ τοκῆς δῶν (cp. ib. 11. 558). Remark that this reading is further corroborated by the form of the statement. It is peculiarly Sophoclean to have three clauses, in which the second is opposed to the first, and the third repeats the sense of the first,—as here ἃ βαστάζω=ταῦτ': see on Ani. 465.—A's reading ἄλλα γ' ἔσθ' ἃ is weaker, and also less likely to have generated L's.

NE. Fetch it, then. Now, what else would'st thou take?

PH. Any of these arrows that may have been forgotten, and may have slipped away from me,—lest I leave it to be another's prize.

NE. Is that indeed the famous bow which thou art holding?

PH. This, and no other, that I carry in my hand.

NE. Is it lawful for me to have a nearer view of it,—to handle it and to salute it as a god?

PH. To thee, my son, this shall be granted, and anything else in my power that is for thy good.

NE. I certainly long to touch it,—but my longing is on this wise;—if it be lawful, I should be glad; if not, think no more of it.

PH. Thy words are reverent, and thy wish, my son, is lawful; for thou alone hast given to mine eyes the light of life,—the hope to see the Oetean land,—to see mine aged father and my friends,—thou who, when I lay beneath the feet of my foes, hast lifted me beyond their reach.

after δυνατόν, ἐθέλω, δέομαι, πείθω, etc.: cp. O. C. 969 n.—θεόν. So the Arcadian Parthenopaeus swears by his spear-head (αἰχμή), ἣν ἔχει μᾶλλον θεοῦ | σέβειν πεποιθώς (Aesch. Theb. 529). Idas, one of the Argonauts, says, οὐδ' ἐμ' ὀφέλλει | Ζεὺς τόσον, δσσάτιόν περ ἐμὸν δόρυ (Apoll. Rhod. i. 468). Mezentius: Dextra mihi deus et telum, quod missile libro, | Nunc adsint (Verg. Aen. 10. 773). Capaneus: Ades O mihi dextera tantum: | Tu praesens bellis et inevitable numen; | Te voco, te solam, superum contemptor, adoro (Statius 9. 548). Here, however, Neoptolemus regards the bow as a 'god,' not so much because it is invincible, as because it had belonged to Heracles.—For the fig. use of θεός, cp. O. T. 27 n.

660 ε. καὶ μὴν...γε: Ant. 221 n.—πάρες, 'let it go,' 'think no more about it.' There is no real ground for thinking this word corrupt. παρῆναι can mean omittere no less than concedere. Cp.

Ant. 1193 κούδεν παρήσω.. ἔπος. Plat. Legg. 754 A μὴ τοίνυν γινώσκοντές γε παρώμεν αὐτὸ ἀρρητον. Pind. P. i. 86 μὴ παρίει καλὰ.

663 ε. ὅς γ', as 1215, O. T. 35, etc. The relative, with this causal force, refers to an antecedent (σοί) which is understood: O. C. 263 n.—φάος, life, in place of imminent death.—δέδωκας, followed by an aor. (666): cp. 928 f.—χθόν' Οἰ-τάλαν: 490 n.—The repetition of the pron. ὅς has much the same rhetorical effect as the repetition of the verb (δέδω-κας) would have with us.

666 ἀνέστησας πέρα. If πέρα is genuine, the sense is:—'When I was under the feet of my foes, thou hast lifted me up, (placing me) beyond their reach.' πέρα could be either prep. with ἐχθρῶν, or adv.: the former is best for contrast with ἐνερθεν. While suffering in Lemnos, Ph. was ἐνερθεν τῶν ἐχθρῶν. If he is restored to his home in Greece (and he assumes that this is certain), then they can touch him no more. Thus πέρα blends the thought of conveyance across the sea with the image of 'uplifting' which is expressed by ἀνέστησας. The

671—673 οὐκ ἄχθομαι... φίλος. The MSS. give these three vv. to Philoctetes. Doederlein first restored them to Neoptolemus. They are rejected as spurious by Dindorf and Wunder, whom Nauck and Campbell follow. 674 1. L rightly gives χωροῖς ἂν εἴσω to Neoptolemus (the words forming a line by themselves), and very fact of such a blending seems in favour of πέρα. Sophocles not seldom admits a partial fusion of the figurative with the literal: see on O. T. 886, 1300 ff., Ant. 117.—No emendation is satisfactory. If we read ἐχθρῶν ἐνερθεν δντ' ἀνέστησάς μ' ὕπερ, we should have to suppose that the loss of the letters μ' ὕ had led to the expansion of περ into πέρα (πέραι in L). But such a loss is not very likely. In Ant. 1301, where πέριξ prob. arose from περὶ ξίφει, the lost letters were the last of the verse. I had thought of ἀναστήσας πάρει: but prefer to retain πέρα.—Cp. El. 1090 ζῆψις μοι καθύπερθεν | χειρὶ καὶ πλούτῳ τοςόνδ' ἐχθρῶν, δσον | νῦν ὑπὲρχειρ ναίεις.

668 καὶ δόντι δοῦναι. These words are not only genuine, but mark a delicate turn of phrase. Instead of saying, 'You shall be allowed to handle the bow, on condition of returning it,' he says, 'You shall be allowed to handle the bow and to return it.' The clause καὶ δόντι δοῦναι coheres closely with θιγγάνειν. The condition which qualifies the boon is thus lightly and courteously hinted,— being inserted between the words (θιγγάνειν, κάξεπεύξασθαι) which express the privileges conceded. Cp. 774 οὐ δοθήσεται | πλὴν σοὶ τε κάμοι.—The aorist δοῦναι expresses the moment of giving, and ἐπεύξασθαι the moment of vaunting; while the pres. θιγγάνειν denotes the continuing act of touching. Cp. Dem. or. 2 § 26 πολλὸν γὰρ ῥᾶον ἔχοντας φυλάττειν ἢ κτήσασθαι πάντα πέφυκεν.

669 The acc. μόνον is correct; it represents the nom. of the direct form, εὐχεὶ ἐπιπαῦσαι μόνος. Here, however, after δόντι, it is slightly awkward. Nauck wishes to read μόνω. I should prefer to keep μόνον and insert σ' after ἀρετῆς. The direct form implied would then be, εὐχεὶ σὲ ἐπιπαῦσαι μόνον. Cp. Plat. Gorg. 474 B ἐγὼ γὰρ δὴ οἶμαι καὶ ἐμὲ καὶ σέ... ἡγεῖσθαι.

670 εὐεργετῶν, by kindling the pyre for Heracles: cp. 801 ff.

671—673 These three verses, called 'manifesto spuri' by Dindorf, are clearly genuine. If they are rejected, then Neoptolemus deigns no reply beyond χωροῖς ἂν εἴσω to the gracious and cordial speech of Philoctetes. In proof that the verses are pointless, Dindorf says:—'Neque enim quidquam beneficii a Philocteta accepit Neoptolemus, ut εὖ παθὼν dici

Be of good cheer; the bow shall be thine, to handle, and to return to the hand that gave it; thou shalt be able to vaunt that, in reward of thy kindness, thou, alone of mortals, hast touched it; for 'twas by a good deed that I myself won it.

NE. I rejoice to have found thee, and to have gained thy friendship; for whosoever knows how to render benefit for benefit must prove a friend above price.—Go in, I pray thee. PH. Yes, and I will lead thee in; for my sick estate craves the comfort of thy presence. [They enter the cave.] καὶ σέ γ' εἰσάξω to Philoctetes. Bergk reverses this attribution. Cavallin gives the whole two vv. to Philoctetes. Hermann, following L as to the persons, places vv. 674 f. before vv. 671—673.—καὶ σέ γ' εἰσάξω] Tournier conj. καὶ σ' ἐπεισάξω.

CH. I have heard in story, but seen not with mine eyes, ^{1st} strophe.

possit.' Blaydes, though he does not bracket the verses, assents to this argument:—'Certainly εὖ παθὼν cannot well apply to Neoptolemus.' But εὖ παθὼν refers, of course, to Philoctetes. Neoptolemus means:—'I am not sorry that chance drove me to Lemnos, and thus enabled me to gain your friendship. One who is ready to requite a benefit (viz., conveyance to Greece) by such a kindness as this (the promised loan of the bow), must indeed prove to be a priceless friend.'

672 ε. εὖ δρᾶν εὖ παθὼν: O. C. 1202 (οὐ καλὸν) αὐτὸν μὲν εὖ | πάσχειν, παθόντα δ' οὐκ ἐπίστασθαι τίνειν. Thuc. 2. 40 οὐ γὰρ πάσχοντες εὖ ἀλλὰ δρῶντες κτώμεθα τοὺς φίλους.—So, of injury, O. C. 271 παθὼν μὲν ἀντέδρων.—κτῆματος: cp. An. 701 ἐμοὶ δὲ σοὶ πρᾶσσοντος εὐτυχῶς, πάτερ, | οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδὲν κτῆμα τιμωτέρων.

674 ε. χωροῖς ἄν εἰσω: Tr. 624 στείχοις ἄν ἤδη. Cavallin gives these words, as well as the following, to Philoctetes, because the invitation to enter the cave ought to come from him, whose home it is. But then the words καὶ σέ γ' εἰσάξω lose their proper force; for we have to understand Ph. as saying, —'Pray enter:—or rather—I will lead you in.' But γε can only emphasize σέ: and therefore χωροῖς ἄν εἰσω must be said to Philoctetes. In these words Neoptolemus reverts to the wish which he had already expressed (645, 651) that Ph. should have freed from the cave anything that he needed for the voyage.—τὸ γὰρ | νοσοῦν: for the art. as penult. word of the v., cp. O. T. 231; O. C. 265, 351: An. 67, 78. τὸ...νοσοῦν my sick estate: cp. Thuc. 1. 36 τὸ μὲν δεδῶς αὐτοῦ...τὸ δὲ θαρσοῦν (his mood of fear or courage).

676—729 The only proper στάσιμον of the play. 1st strophe (676—690) = 1st antistrophe (691—705): 2nd str. (706—717) = 2nd antistr. (718—729). For the metres see Metrical Analysis.

We have already had two short choral songs,—strophe and antistrophe,—in which the Chorus sought to aid Neoptolemus by confirming the story of his quarrel with the Atreidae (391—402), and by affecting to believe that Greece is indeed the goal of his voyage (507—518). We need not suppose that the pity which they expressed in vv. 507 ff. was wholly feigned; still, that particular expression of it belonged to the part which they were acting.

It is otherwise now. The Chorus are alone. Down to the end of the 2nd strophe (717) they are simply uttering what they feel. Then at v. 718 Philoctetes and Neoptolemus reappear from the cave; and in the 2nd antistrophe the Chorus once more seek to help their master's design.

676 ἐξήκουσ', as if by rumour from a far-off place: cp. Aesch. Eum. 397 πρόσωθεν ἐξήκουσα κληδόνοσ βοήν. Above, in 378 and 472, this compound was merely a strengthened ἀκούω.—δῶπαπα

678 ποτὲ τῶν Διὸς] ποτὲ διὸς MSS.: Triclinius inserted τοῦ (and so Buttman): Porson (on Eur. Phoen. 145), τῶν. 679 ε. Ἰξίονα κατ' ἄμπυκα δὴ | δρομάδα δέσμιον ὡς | ἔλαβ' ὁ παγκρατῆς κρόνου παῖς L. So the other MSS., except that, for κατ' ἄμπυκα, Harl. has κάμπυκα: for ἔλαβ', Vat. has ἔβαλεν: and T (with Triclinius) omits δὴ. For the conjectures see comment. and Appendix. 682 ἐσίδων] The 1st hand in L wrote ἐσίδων: the corrector has made ἐσίδον by erasing the second limb of ω.—μοίραι made from μοῖραι in L, with gl. τύχη above. 684 ὃς οὐτ' ἔρξας τιν'

δ' οὐ μᾶλα. Cp. Xen. Hieron 1. 12 οἱ δὲ τύραννοι οὐ μᾶλα (nequaquam) ἀμφὶ θεωρίας ἔχουσιν. The emphasis contrasts the sufferings known only by hearsay with those which have just been so vividly placed before their eyes.

677 ε. τὸν πελάταν. Ixion treacherously murdered his father-in-law, Δηιονεύς, and, when no mortal would minister the rites of purification to him, was cleansed of his crime by Zeus. He requited this grace by attempting the bed of Hera; and Zeus then commanded Hermes to bind him on a wheel of fire in the lower world.

The comparison with Ixion is the more forcible here, since reference has just been made to the gratitude shown by Philoctetes (672). Ixion was the great example of ingratitude. Cp. Pind. P. 2. 21 θεῶν δ' ἐφετμαῖς Ἰξίονα φαντὶ ταῦτα βροτοῖς | λέγειν ἐν περὶνεντι τροχῷ | παντὰ κυλινδόμενον | τὸν εὐεργέταν ἀγαναῖς ἀμοιβαῖς ἐποικομένους τίνεσθαι.

λέκτρων...τῶν Διὸς: cp. 1406 βέλεσι τοῖς Ἡρακλέους. Buttman preferred the Triclinian τοῦ Διὸς,—which is admissible (cp. Ani. 10 n.),—as emphasising the proper name; but τῶν is clearly right.

679 ε. κατὰ δρομάδ' ἄμπυκα...Κρόνου παῖς. As given in the MSS. (see cr. n.), these verses are longer than the corresponding vv. of the antistrophe, 603 f., παρ' ᾧ στόνον...αἰματηρόν. If both Ἰξίονα and δέσμιον are to be kept here, the antistrophic verses must be expanded. But those verses appear to be sound as they stand. The question is, then, whether Ἰξίονα or δέσμιον should be omitted here. I prefer to omit Ἰξίονα, for two reasons.

(1) The text of Sophocles presents at least one other instance in which a proper name, originally a marginal explanation, has crept into a lyric passage where the metre did not obviously exclude it: viz. Tr. 839, where the νέσου (L) or νέσσου of the MSS. was a gloss on μελαγχολία (gen. sing.) just before,—alluding to Nessus. The poet's tendency to omit the proper name in mythical allusion, when the context made his meaning clear, might be further illustrated from Ani. 133, where Capaneus is described, yet not named; and from 966—987 of the same play, where Cleopatra—whose fate is being compared with Antigone's—is only indicated as the mother of the Phineidae (980) and the daughter of Boreas (985).

(2) δέσμιον is not, indeed, necessary to the sense. As in prose we have ἀναβιβάζειν ἐπὶ τὸν τροχόν (Andoc. or. 1 § 43), so, here, the sense would be adequately given by κατ' ἄμπυκα...ἔβαλεν. And it might fairly be suggested that δέσμιον had crept into the text from the schol., κατ' ἄμπυκα δὴ] κατὰ τὸν τροχόν (which should be τροχόν, see Ani. 1065 n.) δεδεμένον. Then, omitting δέσμιον, we might keep the order of the MS. words, merely changing κατ' to ἀν':—Ἰξίον' ἀν' ἄμπυκα δὴ δρομάδ' ὡς ἔβαλεν (where δὴ= 'as men say'). But, on the other hand, poetical considerations seem in favour of δέσμιον. It adds force to the picture of a terrible doom imposed by an irresistible power.—Other views are discussed in the Appendix.

how he who once came near the bed of Zeus was bound upon a swift wheel by the almighty son of Cronus; but of no other mortal know I, by hearsay or by sight, that hath encountered a doom so dreadful as this man's; who, though he had wronged none by force or fraud, but lived at peace with his fellow-men, ἄμπυκα, here, the rim of the wheel; elsewhere always 'head-band.' But its etymology (ἀμπι = ἀμφι) might easily suggest this poet. use, esp. as δρομάδα (perh. suggested by τροχός) helps it out. The schol. seems to have read ἀμπυκα.

MSS. (ἐρξας Harl.): Musgrave conj. ὅς οὐτιν' ἐρξας: Erfurd, ὅς οὐ φθίσας τιν': Cavallin (after Blaydes), ὅς οὐτε κλέψας: Bergk, ὅς οὐ τι ρέξας.—οὐ τι νοσφίσας] Schneidewin conj. Bergk would insert οὐτιν' before οὐτε νοσφίσας, and in 699 read ἢ ἐλ τις ὄρεσι instead of ἐλ τις. 685 ἴσος ὦν ἴσοις] ἴσῳ (sic) ἐν ἴσοις L: ἴσος ἐν ἴσοις r. Bothe conj. ἴσος ἐν ἴσοις: F. Schultz and Lachmann, ἴσος ὦν ἴσους: Hermann, ἴσος ἐν γ' ἴσοις: Burges, ἴσος, ἐλ τις, ὦν ἀνῆρ (and so Blaydes in text).

Cp. Hesych., ἄμπυκες, τροχοί: οὐτιν' Σοφοκλῆς ἐν Φιλοκτῆτι. Musgrave's ἀντιγα is certainly tempting, and may be right; but it does not seem necessary. 682 τοῦδ' = ἢ τόνδ': cp. 597 θατέρον, n.

684 οὐτ' ἐρξας τιν', οὐ τι νοσφίσας. A partial reminiscence of Od. 4. 690 οὐτε τινα ρέξας ἐξαίσιον οὐτε τι εἰπών, as Eustathius saw (p. 763, 2): Ὀμηρικὸν δέ τι καὶ παρὰ Σοφοκλεῖ ἐν Φιλοκτῆτι τὸ οὐτε τι ρέξας, κακὸν δηλαδὴ: οὐτιν' γὰρ νοεῖται, ἐλ καὶ παντελῶς ἐκεῖ σιωπᾶται τὸ ρεχθέν. Here the last three words prove two things,—viz., that Eustath. read οὐτε νοσφίσας, and that οὐτε τι ρέξας in his citation of Sophocles was a mere slip for οὐτ' ἐρξας τιν': since, if his text of our verse had really contained τι, he could not have said, σιωπᾶται τὸ ρεχθέν. (He has other such slips: see Appendix on Ani. 292.) Schneidewin's emendation, οὐ τι for οὐτε, appears certain. ἔρδειν τινα τι can mean, 'to do a wrong to a man': ἔρδειν τινα, without τι, could not possibly mean it. Ought we, then, to write οὐκ (for οὐτ') ἐρξας? Probably not. Cp. Ani. 249 οὐτε τοῦ γενῆδος ἦν | πλῆγμ', οὐ δικέλλης ἐκβολή, and O. C. 972 n.—νοσφίσας, robbed, defrauded. We find not only νοσφίζειν τινα τινος, but also νοσφίζειν τινα τι (as Pind. N. 6. 64 σέ τ' ἐνόσφισε... | κλᾶρος... ᾤνεθ' Ὀλυμπιάδος); and this is the constr. here. The antithesis is between βία (ἐρξας) and δόλος (νοσφίσας): Ixion had murdered his father-in-law, and had sought to steal the love of Hera.

685 ἴσος ὦν ἴσοις, lit. 'equitable towards the equitable' (ἴσοις dat. of relation),—respecting the rights of others, as they respected his. In describing a man of peaceful and estimable character, the Greek tendency is to say, 'he neither did nor suffered wrong'; i.e., he was not aggressive, nor was he forced into unpleasant relations with his fellow-men by their action,—since he provoked no enmities. See, e.g., Lysias or. 12 § 4 οὐδενὶ πώποτε οὐτε ἡμεῖς οὐτε ἐκείνος δίκην οὐτε ἐδικασάμεθα οὐτε ἐφύγομεν, ἀλλ' οὕτως ψοκοῦμεν δημοκρατούμενοι ὥστε μῆτε εἰς τοὺς ἄλλους ἐξαμαρτάνειν μῆτε ὑπὸ τῶν ἄλλων ἀδικεῖσθαι. This is the Athenian ideal of the χρηστός, ἐπιεικής, ἀπράγμων. And this is what ἴσος ὦν ἴσοις expresses here. It does not imply that he dealt with ἴσοι in one way, and with ἀδικοι in another, but merely denotes that reciprocity of fair dealing which his fairness caused. Hence the version, 'living at peace with his fellow-men,' is truer to the sense than (e.g.), 'just among the just.' Cp. Ai. 267 κοινὸς ἐν κοινοῖσι λυπεῖσθαι, to share the grief of friends who grieve. For ἴσος as = aequus, said of persons, cp. O. T. 677 n.

L has ἴσῳ (sic) ἐν ἴσοις. The objection to reading ἐν γ' is twofold. (1) The idea suggested would then be the same as in Eur. fr. 693 (quoted by Schneidewin), τοῖς μὲν δίκαιοις ἐνδικοις, τοῖς δ' αὖ κακοῖς | ... πολέμοις. Here, however, the point is the generally inoffensive life of Ph.,—not the distinction between his conduct towards just and unjust men respectively. (2) The participle ὦν, though not indispensable, is very desirable. It is possi-

The MS. text here is ὦλλονθ' ὦδ' ἀναξίως· τόδε θαυμ' ἔχει με. A comparison with the antistrophe (701 f.) strongly confirms Erfurdt's transposition, θαυμά μ' ἔχει, and Dindorf's insertion of τοι after τόδε, since τόδε τοι θαυμά μ' ἔχει then corresponds with the certainly genuine words in 702, τότ' ἄν εἰλυμένος. The next question is how ὦλλονθ' ὦδ' ἀναξίως should be reconciled with the MS. words ἔρπει γὰρ ἄλλοτ' ἄλλα in v. 701. Hermann's change of εἶρπε γὰρ to εἶρπε δ' has been generally received; it is gentler than that of ὦλλονθ' to ὠλέκεθ' (Dindorf), or to ὦλλοντο τῇδ' (Campbell). It is less easy to decide whether ἀναξίως or ἄλλα should be altered. Keeping ἄλλα, Dindorf changes ἀναξίως to ἀτίμως, and Wecklein to ἀεικῶς: Linwood proposed ἀνοίκτως. We must then suppose that ἀναξίως was a gloss, since such a corruption of the letters would be difficult. But it seems better to keep ἀναξίως, and to suppose, with Campbell, that ἄλλα has come from ἄλλ(α)χῆ.—See Appendix.

688 ἀμφιπλάκτων: the Doric form is clearly required in a strophe which contains πελάταν, μοῖρα, θνατῶν, βιοτὰν. Cp. Ai. 597 ἀλίπλακτος, El. 484 χαλκόπλακτος. For the active sense, cp. O. T. 969 n. The ἀμφιπλάκτα ῥόθια are those which beat around the rocky promontory near his cave (1455). Hesych. defines ῥόθιον as κύμα μετὰ ψόφον γινόμενον: cp. Ant. 259 n.—The corrupt κλύων in L (for κλύων), which violates both sense and metre, was taken by the schol. as = κλυζόμενος. (Buttmann strangely accepted this, comparing, for the gen., the Homeric λούεσθαι... ποταμοῖο.)

690 βιοτὰν κατέσχευ, obtinuit, 'kept his hold upon' the life which might well have slipped from him. This is a common sense of κατέσχευ, though a bold application of it. Not, sustinuit, 'endured,' as Dindorf renders.

691 ἵν' αὐτὸς ἦν πρόσουρος, 'where he was his own sole neighbour.' So when a man sends no ἀγγεῖλια before him, he is said to arrive as his own ἀγγελος: when no herald precedes him, he is αὐτὸς κῆρυξ (n. on 500). Cp. Aesch. Cho. 866 μόνος ὦν ἐφεδρος | δισοῖς, 'his own sole supporter against two foes,' i.e., there is no ἐφεδρος at his back, to fight the man who vanquishes him. Lucian Timon 43 θεοῖς θυέτω καὶ εὐχαλίσθω, μόνος ἑαυτῷ γελῶν καὶ ὁμορος (where ὁμορος strongly suggests that Lucian was thinking of our passage). Martial 5. 24. 8 Hermes (the gladiator) suppositicius sibi ipse, 'his own substitute,' i.e., never requiring one, because never defeated. Seneca Herc. Fur. act 1 sc. 1 Quaeris Alcidae parem? | Nemo est nisi ipse. Massinger, Duke of Milan act 4 sc. 3, 'And, but herself, admits no parallel.'—Remark that ἑαυτῷ (which Meineke sought to represent by changing ἦν to οἱ) is not needed, since πρόσουρος = 'near the borders,' i.e., 'neighbour

Verily I marvel how, as he listened in his solitude to the surges that beat around him, he kept his hold upon a life so full of woe;

where he was neighbour to himself alone,—powerless to walk,—^{1st anti-} with no one in the land to be near him while he suffered, in ^{strophe.} whose ear he could pour forth the lament, awaking response, for the plague that gnawed his flesh and drained his blood;

to the place' (in which Ph. was), and thus represents, not γείτων simply, but γείτων τῇ χώρᾳ. For the Ionic form cp. δμυρος, ξύνουρος, τηλουρός (O. T. 194 n.).—οὐκ ἔχων βάσιν, without the power to walk; cp. 632 ἄπου.—Bothe's πρόσσυρον οὐκ ἔχων βάσιν ('hearing no footstep of neighbour') is plausible at first sight. Then αὐτὸς ἦν='he was alone' (O. C. 1650 n.). But the vulgate is far more forcible. By his πρόσδουλον...βάσιν Seyffert meant, 'having no foot to serve him.'—The conjecture, οὐκ ἔχων βάσιν | οὗτις ἐς ἐγγύρων ('having access to no neighbour') is very weak. Those who adopt it (cp. cr. n.) join κακογείτονα with στόνον: see next n.

692 κακογείτονα=κακῶν (or κακοῖς) γείτονα, 'a neighbour to his sufferings': i.e., one to be near him while he suffers. The word does not imply (as some have objected), 'a neighbour in (i.e., sharing in) his sufferings.' Nor is there any ground for saying that κακογείτων could mean only κακὸς γείτων.

Compounds to which κακὸς gives the first part are of two classes, according as the κακο- element is (1) adj. or (2) subst. In class (1) there are again two types. (a) The commonest is that of κακόβιος, = κακὸν βίον ἔχων: i.e., the compound denotes 'possessing' the subst. as qualified by κακός. (b) A rarer, chiefly poet., type is that of Κακοῖλιος as simply=κακῇ ἴλιος. In class (2) (a) the κακο- is most often equiv. to the subst. κακόν or κακά in the acc., governed by a verb: as κακοποιός=κακά ποιῶν. (b) But sometimes this κακο- represents a gen. or dat., depending on another noun: thus κακομαντις, 'prophet of evil' (Aesch. Pers. 10 etc.)=κακῶν μάντις. Cratinus used κακόδουλος as=κακὸς δούλοις ('cruel to slaves'), Θράτται fr. 7. And so κακογείτων could belong either to (1) b, =κακὸς γείτων: or, as it actually does here, to (2) b, κακῶν γείτων. Cp. ἀλιγείτων, ἀστρογείτων, ἀστυγείτων.

The schol. joined κακογείτονα as epithet with στόνον: παρ' ᾧ δὴ τὸν κακὸν γείτονα, τὸν αἱματηρόν στόνον, ἀποκλαύσειε. And so Cavallin. Bugge, again, takes κακογείτονα as a subst., 'his evil neighbour' (i.e. 'his disease'),—governed by στόνον...ἀποκλαύσειε: comparing Él. 123 τάκει...οἰμωγὰν | ...Ἀγαμέμνονα.

693 ε. παρ' ᾧ: in the negative statement παρ' ὅτῳ would be more usu.: cp. Ant. 220 n.—ἀντίτυπον: Lucian De domo 3 τῆς φωνῆς ἐπανιούσης κατὰ τὸ ἀντίτυπον καὶ πρὸς αὐτὴν ἀναστρεφούσης. The force of the epithet here is proleptic,—'so as to excite a responsive lament.' It reminds us that the cries of Ph. were answered by Echo alone (cp. 1459).

βαρυβρῶτα...αἱματηρόν: the epithets of the νόσος are given to the στόνος prompted by it: 'a lament for a plague that gnawed his flesh and drained his blood.' This is not too bold for the style of tragic lyrics; and the boldness was perhaps somewhat softened to a Greek ear by the fact that στόνον was in the acc. For, though this acc. is really 'cognate' to ἀποκλαύσειε, yet the case itself might help to suggest that βαρυβρώτα and αἱματηρόν described the object of the κλαυθμός. With βαρυβρώς cp. διαβόρος (v. 7, n.). Cp. 208 αὐδὰ | τρυσάνωρ. Schneidewin cites also Aesch. Theb. 348 βλαχαὶ δ' αἱματοέσσαι | τῶν ἐπιμαστιδίῳ | ἀρτιτρεφέϊς βρέμονται. It seems possible that this may have been in Soph.'s mind: but it is less bold, since βλαχαὶ αἱματοέσσαι τῶν ἐπιμ. merely = βλαχαὶ τῶν αἱματοέντων ἐπιμ. (like νεῖκος ἀνδρῶν ξύναιμον, etc.). A truer parallel is [Eur.] Rhes. 260 κακόγαμβρον | ... γόν, = γόνον περὶ κακοῦ γαμβροῦ. We might add Eur. El. 752 φόνιον ὀμωγὴν κλύω. The conjectural insertions which have been made in these vv. are noticed in the Appendix on vv. 678 f.

695 II. ὃς τὰν. The MS. text has οὐδ' ὃς τὰν,—a syllable too much. οὐδ' may have been conjecturally added, to link this clause to the last; while τὰν is not so likely to have been inserted. And ὃς τὰν is intrinsically better here than οὐδ' ὃς.—αἰμάδα: schol. τὴν τοῦ αἵματος ῥόσιν. The word is found only here.—κηκιομέναν is usu. called passive. But it is surely rather a poet. middle form. A transitive κηκίω occurs first in post-class. Greek (Ap. Rh. 4. 600 βαρὺν ἀνακηκίει ἀτμόν), while Plat. Phaedr. 251 B suffices to show that the intrans. κηκίω was familiar in Attic. There is no other example of κηκίωμαi. Cp. 784 κηκίον. The ι is short in Homer (Il. 7. 262 ἀνακῆκίον, Od. 5. 455 κῆκίε).—ἐλκέων, a disyll. by synizesis.—ἐνθήρου refers to the angry appearance of the ulcer, which has not been assuaged (ἡμερώθη) by proper treatment; cp. Aesch. Ag. 562 ἐνθήρον τρήχα: Dioscorides 3. 11. 1 τεθνηρωμένον ἔλκος. Plin. H. N. 26. 14 effrantia se ulcera.

εἴ τις ἐμπέσοι, sc. αἰμάς. This, the MS. reading, is plainly right. The verb ἐμπέτω was regularly used with regard to an attack of disease: cp. Tr. 1253 πρὶν ἐμπεσεῖν σπαραγμόν: Thuc. 2. 48 (ὁ λοιμὸς) ἐς τὴν Ἀθηναίων πόλιν ἐξαιπάλως ἐνέπεσε: id. 49 λύγῃ τοῖς πλεοσιν ἐνέπιπτε κενή. Cp. below, 808 (the disease) ὄξεια φοιτᾷ καὶ ταχεῖ ἀπέρχεται. In the next v. Schneidewin rightly gave ἐλόν for the MS. ἐλεῖν. For the constr. κατευνάσειεν φύλλοις, ἐλόν (αὐτὰ), cp. O. C. 475 (ἔρεπον) νεοπτόκω μαλλὶφ λαβών (n.).

Some read εἴ τιν' ἐμπέσοι, or εἴ τι

—no one to assuage the burning flux, oozing from the ulcers of his envenomed foot, with healing herbs gathered from the bounteous earth, so often as the torment came upon him.

Then would he creep this way or that, with painful steps, like a child without kindly nurse, to any place whence his need might be supplied, whenever the devouring anguish abated ;

L: ὑπάρχει r. 704 πόρον L: πόρων A, with most of the later MSS.: πόρου Wakefield. Gleditsch conj. πόνον: Seyffert, κόπον.—ἐξανέη Hermann: ἐξάνη L (sic), with space for two or three letters in the erasure. Dübner thinks that the 1st hand had written ἐξανέη, ἡσι, with perh. λ after ει. But I rather suspect that it was ἐξανί[στ]ῆσι, for the ι does not seem to have been touched. There is a marg. gl., ἐνδίδωσιν. A and most of the later MSS. have ἐξανίῃσι: the only variants seem to be ἐξανίει (V), ἐξανίη (T, i.e. ἐξανίῃ), ἐξανίης (R). 705 δακέθυμος] Seyffert writes δακόθυμος (ferae mordacis animos habens). 706—717 L divides the vv. thus:—οὐ φορβάν—| γὰρ—| αἰρων—| νεμόμε[σθ]—| πλῆν—| πτανῶν—| ὦ με—| λέα—| ὅς—| ἡ| σθη—| λεύσσων δ'—| αἶψα προσενώμα. 707 σπόρον r: πόρον from σπόρον L, with gl. σίτον above.

συμπέσοι, keeping ἐλεῖν: 'if any leaf should fall in his way, to pluck,' or, 'if it should be his fortune to pluck any leaf.' But ἐμπίπτειν ought to be said of the wanderer, not of a stationary object which he finds. And συμπέσοι is too suggestive of a 'coincidence' to be a fitting word here.—Campbell, reading φορβάδος ἐκ τε γὰρ ἐλεῖν, takes the const. to be (οὐκ ἦν) ὅστις κατενύσσειν ἐλεῖν τε (instead of ἐλοι τε). This is as if one said, οὐκ εἶχεν ὅστις ἐλθοι καὶ βοηθεῖν.—φορβάδος: cp. 391 παμβῶτι: fr. 279 ἐξ Ὀλένου γῆς φορβάδος κοιμίζομαι.

701 εἰ εἴρπε κ.τ.λ. Join ἀν with εἴρπε: cp. 290 n.: for εἰλυόμενος, ἰδ. As to the reading in these verses, see on 686 f. The phrase ἄλλοτε ἄλλαχῇ occurs in Xen. Mem. 1. 4. 12.

703 παῖς...ὥς: like a child that cannot yet walk firmly without the help of its nurse. Cp. Aesch. Eum. 38, where the aged priestess, tottering with fear, is said to be ἀντίπαις.

704 εἰ ὄθεν=ἐκεῖσε ὄθεν: cp. Xen. An. 1. 3 § 17 μη ἡμᾶς ἀγάγῃ ὄθεν οὐχ οἶον τε ἔσται ἐξελεθῆν. ὄθεν ὑπάρχοι, after εἴρπε ἀν, answers to ὄθεν ἀν ὑπάρχῃ after a primary tense: cp. 289 n.—εὐμάρεα... πόρον, 'facility of resource,' i.e., the means of supplying his needs. For εὐμάρεα cp. 284; for πόρον, Eur. Alc. 213 τίς ἀν πόρος κακῶν γένοιτο...; He had to find food, water, fuel, and the medicinal herb (285 ff., 649).—Not, 'ease on his path' (ease in movement), as if the search for the herb alone were meant. Some read πόρων as= 'resources': but, in this sense, the associations of the plur. would have been too prosaic for an Attic poet. For the theory that πόρον should be read, and taken with εἴρπε, see Appendix on 695 f.—ἐξανέη, remit its violence: 639 n.—δακέθυμος, like δηξίθυμος, θυμοδακῆς, θυμοβόρος, etc.

706 εἰ ἱεῖας: cp. 391.—αἰρων denotes the simple act of lifting, and is thus more picturesque than αἰρόμενος. Cp. Ar. Ran. 1339 κάλπισί τ' ἐκ ποταμῶν δρόσον ἀρατε.—ἄλλων, such as fruits, milk, etc.: from αἰρων we supply a word of more general sense. The gen. is partitive (Xen. Cyr. 1. 4. 20 λαβὼν τῶν... ἵππων τε καὶ ἀνδρῶν). This is better than to repeat φορβάν with it ('food consisting in other things'). Such a constr. would be awkward when φορβάν is in apposition with σπόρον. τῶν, relat. (14)= τούτων ἂ.

ἀλφησταί. The popular deriv., from ἀλφι and ἐδ ('meal-eating'), may possibly have been in the poet's mind here; though this inference would be stronger if he had placed the word in closer connection with σπόρον. Curtius, on the other hand, can fairly cite Aesch. Th. 771 ἀνδρῶν ἀλφηστᾶν δλβος ἀγαν παχυνθείς, in support of the sense 'workers,' 711 πτανῶν ἀνύσειε πτανοῖς γαστρὶ φορβάν. L. The other mss. have either this, or (as A) πτανῶν πτανοῖς ἀνύσειε γαστρὶ φορβάν. (ἀνύσει Γ.) Brunck restored πτανοῖς λοῖς. Wecklein (Ars p. 80) suggests πτανῶν λοῖς ἀνύσειε...φορβάν ('food from birds,' as opposed to φορβάν...γᾶς σπόρον in 706). L has ὀρνέοις as a gl. on πτανοῖς.—For ἀνύσειε Blaydes conj. πορῶσειε. 715 πώματος L, with ω above ὁ from 1st hand.—δεκέτει L. The acute accent is from the 1st hand; the circumflex, from S. There was a special cause for this confusion of accents, which I may notice. Adjectives in -ετης were paroxytone in Attic (as δεκέτης), but oxytone in the common dialect (as δεκετής): see Chandler § 703 (2nd ed.).

'earners,' men who eat their bread in the sweat of their brow (rt ἀλφ, Lat. lab-os).—ἀνέρες, with epic α, as Tr. 1010, O. Tr. 869 ἀνέρων. There is a reminiscence of Od. 13. 261 ἀνέρας ἀλφηστὰς, as well as of ib. 9. 89 οἷτινες ἀνέρες εἰεν ἐπὶ χθονὶ σίτον ἔδοντες.

711 πτανοῖς is a purely poetical image for speed, while the Homeric πτερόεντες δῖοι more readily suggests the actual feathers on the arrow (Tr. 567 κομήτην λόν: Aesch. fr. 135 μῆχανῃ πτερώματος: Eur. Or. 274 τόξων πτερωτὰς γλυφίδας).—λοῖς (restored by Brunck) was evidently lost through the likeness of ending in πτανοῖς. Then the gap was filled by inserting πτανῶν (to agree with τόξων), and πτανοῖς was explained as, 'with birds' (Ai. 168 πτηνῶν ἀγέλαι).

δεκέτει χρόνῳ. The simple dat. here denotes the time within which a thing has not happened (cp. 769). For this sense ἐν is usu. added. But, as ἐν χρόνῳ μακρῷ (235), and χρόνῳ μακρῷ simply (598 n.), can alike mean 'after a time,' so the use of the simple dat. is extended to that sense for which ἐν is more specially needed,—'within a time.' The acc., δεκέτη χρόνον, which Blaydes reads, is less suitable here. The point is that, for ten years, Ph. has not once tasted wine. A prose-writer would usu. express this by δέκα ἐτών: cp. Plat. Gorg. 448 Α οὐδεὶς μέ πω ἠρώτηκε καὶνὸν οὐδὲν πολλῶν ἐτών. In our v., the acc. would rather suggest that Ph. had not had ten years' continuous enjoyment of wine. Cp. Lys. or. 19 § 60 ὀλίγον μὲν χρόνον δύναίτ' ἂν τις πλάσασθαι τὸν τρόπον τὸν αὐτοῦ (the dissimulation being continuous): ἐν ἑβδομήκοντα δὲ ἔτεσιν οὐδ' ἂν εἰς λάθοι πονηρὸς ὢν (i.e., at some moment or other within the 70 years he will be found out).

716f. λεύσσων, absol., looking about him, ὅπου γνοίῃ (to see) where he could perceive (stagnant water), προσενώμα, he used to bend his way towards it. εἰς στατὸν ὕδωρ is joined with προσενώμα, instead of standing (without εἰς) as object to γνοίῃ. The latter is oblique for ὅπου γνῶ (delib. subjunct.). Cp. Ai. 890 ἀνδρα μὴ λεύσσειν ὅπου: O. C. 135 δὲ ἐγὼ save when haply he found wherewith to stay his hunger by winged shafts from his swift-smiting bow. Ah, joyless was his life, who for ten years never knew the gladness of the wine-cup, but still bent his way towards any stagnant pool that he could descry as he gazed around him.

But now, after those troubles, he shall be happy and mighty at the last; for he hath met with the son of a noble race, who in the fulness of many months bears him on sea-cleaving ship to his home, haunt of Malian nymphs,

Her. 2. 108 πλατυτέροις ἐχρέωντο τοῖσι πόμασι, ἐκ φρεάτων χρεώμενοι ('somewhat brackish'). Odysseus remembered a spring near the cave (21), and Ph. speaks of κρῆναι (1461): but the imagination of the Chorus ἐπὶ τὸ μείζον πάντα δεινοί.

718 f. ἀνδρῶν ἀγ., Peleus and Achilles; cp. 384.—ὑπαντήσας in prose would mean, 'having come to meet,' and would take a dat. A poet might feel that the gen. was sufficiently warranted by the Homeric ἀντήσω γὰρ ἐγὼ τοῦδ' ἀνέρος (Il. 16. 423), etc.: indeed, the gen. differs from the dat. only by its more vivid suggestion of the idea, 'face to face' (ἀντίον τινός). Cp. 320 n. Here the phrase, 'having come face to face' with him, suggests not merely the good fortune of the meeting, but the intercourse,—frank on the side of Philoctetes,—which had followed it.—As Ph. and Neoptolemus are now seen to be leaving the cave, the Chorus once more speaks language designed to support N.'s plan.

720 f. ἀνύσει εὐδαίμων (sc. ὦν, cp. Ant. 177), will finish his course in happiness: = τελευτῶν εὐδαιμονήσει. (Not, I think, 'will succeed in becoming happy,' sc. γενέσθαι.)—ἐκ κείνων (neut.) after those troubles: cp. 271.

722 γοντοπόρφ: epith. of νατ in Ai. 250.—δούρατι: the only example of this epic form in Soph. (for δορε and δδρε cp. O. C. 1304). Aesch. has δουρικλυτος, δουρικληκτος, and Eur. δούρατα. Cp. Pind. P. 4. 27 εἰνάλιον δόρυ (trabs), Aesch. Pers. 411 ἐπ' ἄλλην (sc. ναῦν) ἄλλος ἠὲ θυνεν δόρυ.—πλήθει...μηνῶν, after the ten years at Lemnos: 598 n.

724 f. πατρίαν is prob. a true correction of πατρίαν. There is no other instance in Soph. of πατρίως with the 2nd syll. short (though he often shortens αι before a vowel, Ant. 1310). In Eur. there are a few such instances, but in all of them πατρίως should be restored, as by Porson in Hec. 78 (= 82 Dind.). As to the sense, either word would serve here: properly, πατρίαν = ancestral; πατρίαν, belonging to one's father: but Tragedy does not always observe the distinction (cp. 398 n.: conversely, O. C. 756 θεῶν πατρίων = πατρίων).

Μαλιάδων: the Ionic form (cp. 4 n.), which the MSS. give, can hardly be kept here: cp. 688 ἀμφιπλάκτων. Μαλ. νυμφᾶν is more naturally joined with αἰλᾶν than

(as Cavallin prefers) with ὄχθας: 'his ancestral abode, haunt of the Malian nymphs,' is a phrase which suggests the hills, woods and streams of Malis. So the nymphs of Helicon (O. T. 1109), Parnassus (Ant. 1128), and Lemnos (below, 1454) are associated with the rural scenery of those places. For αὐλή in the general sense, 'abode,' cp. Ant. 786 ἀγρονόμοις αὐλαῖς: Eur. Alc. 259 νεκῶν ἐς αὐλάν.—παρ' ὄχθας. Unless, with Blaydes, we change Σπερχειοῦ τε to Σπερχειοῖο, the acc. is necessary here. The mss. give ὄχθαις. For other instances in which the case of the noun after παρὰ has prob. been corrupted, cp. nn. on Ant. 966, 1123 f. As to the topography, cp. 490 n.

727 ὁ χάλκασπις ἀνὴρ, Heracles. The epithet has an archaeological interest. In the Homeric poems, when reference is made to the exploits of Heracles, his weapon is the bow (Il. 5. 395: Od. 8. 224, 11. 607). Some ancient writers, however, expressly say that the equipment of Heracles with bow, club, and lion's skin was a comparatively late invention of the poets, and that in the oldest works of art he was represented with the armour of the ordinary Homeric warrior. According to Strabo (15. 688), the innovation could be traced back to the epic Ἡράκλεια, ascribed to Peisander (circa 650 B.C.): καὶ ἡ τοῦ Ἡρακλέους δὲ στολὴ τοιαύτη πολλὴ νεωτέρα τῆς Τρωικῆς μνήμης ἐστὶ, πλάσμα τῶν τῇν Ἡράκλειαν ποιησάντων, εἴτε Πεισανδρὸς ἦν, εἴτ' ἄλλος τις· τὰ δ' ἀρχαῖα ξόανα οὐχ οὕτω διεσκεύασται (implying that he had seen old images or statues in which Heracles had armour). Athenaeus (12. 512 F) quotes Megacleides (who wrote περὶ Ὀμήρου, prob. in the 5th cent. B.C.), as referring the invention to Stesichorus (c. 620 B.C.), and adding that Xanthus, an earlier lyric poet, had clad Heracles in the Homeric armour:—ταῦτα πλάσαι πρῶτον Στρεσίχορον τὸν Ἱμεραῖον. καὶ Ξάνθος δ' ὁ μελοποιός, πρεσβύτερος ὢν Στρεσίχορου, ... οὐ ταύτην αὐτῷ περιτίθει τὴν στολὴν, ἀλλὰ τὴν Ὀμηρικὴν. Strabo and Megacleides, then, agree thus far;—that the invention was not older than the 7th cent. B.C.

In this play Heracles figures especially as the former possessor of the invincible bow. Why, then, has Soph. here chosen an epithet, χάλκασπις, which suggests the hoplite type of Heracles? The answer seems to turn on two points. (1) A compromise between the hoplite and the archer type of Heracles can sometimes be traced in ancient art. Thus a statue belonging to the east pediment of the Aeginetan temple gives Heracles a helmet (or bonnet) of lion's skin, a bow, and a θώραξ (Baumeister, Denkm. p. 335: cp. ib. p. 652 a). Sophocles himself makes a similar compromise when in Tr. 510 ff. he arms Heracles with bow, club, and two spears. (2) The Heracles of this play is associated with the legends of Oeta and Trachis. In them, as in those of Boeotia, Heracles was pre-eminently the warrior, who sacked Oechalia 'with the spear' (Tr. 478), and for whom Hephaestus had wrought the ἀσπίς described in the Hesiodic poem.

728 πλάθει. The aor. ἐπλάθην is used by Aesch. and Eur.; and πλάθη (Bergk) is tempting here: but the historic pres. seems confirmed by such examples as O. T. 113 (συμπιπτει), ib. 560 (ἔρρει). Heracles was burned alive, by his own command, on the top of Mount Oeta. As the flames rose, a storm broke forth; and, amid thunder and lightning, the hero was taken up to heaven. Apollod. 2. 7. 14 καιομένης δὲ τῆς πυρᾶς λέγεται

θεοῖς | πλάθει βάσω, and so Cavallin: Bergk, θεοῖς | πλάθῃ [= ἐπλάθῃ], bracketing πᾶσιν, as he brackets γνῶν in the corresponding v. of the strophe (716). Wecklein (Ars p. 78) suggests πλάθῃ, δέμας κ.τ.λ.; δέ might have dropped out after θῆ, and μᾶς have become πᾶσιν. 729 δχθων] δχθας Γ: cp. 726. 730 εἰ θέλεις] Lond. ed. of 1747 conj. εἰ σθένεις. 731 ἔχει] ἔχη L.

νέφος ὑποστὰν μετὰ βροντῆς αὐτὸν εἰς οὐρανὸν ἀναπέμψαι. Diod. 4. 38. 4 κεραυνῶν ἐκ τοῦ περιέχοντος πεσόντων ἢ πυρὰ πᾶσα κατεφλέχθη. By θέω πυρὶ παμφαῆς the poet probably meant to suggest both the flaming pyre and the splendour of the lightnings.

*πατρός is my emendation of the corrupt πᾶσι. In the antistr., 716, δπου is clearly sound; and a long syllable is metrically impossible here. Nor can we save πᾶσι by transposition: both πλάθει and θέω are plainly genuine. Hermann's conjecture, θεοῖς | πλάθει θεός, presupposes that πᾶσι was either a gloss, or an arbitrary substitute for a lost word; but it was more probably a corruption of the true word. Now we might certainly expect here some reference to Zeus. Oeta was sacred to him; his were the lightnings (cp. Tr. 436 τοῦ κατ' ἄκρον Οἰταῖον πάγον | Ζητὸς καταστράπτοντος); and it was as his son that Heracles entered Olympus. At this moment, above all others, there is a poetical fitness in some allusion to the hero's divine parentage, which is elsewhere made so prominent in the play (802, 943, 1415). πατρός supplies this touch.

The burning of Heracles, and his apotheosis, are combined in some vase paintings. (1) A bowl (κρατήρ) of the 4th cent. B.C., now in the Collegio Rainerone at S. Agata dei Goti: Milani, Mito di Filottete p. 65: Baumeister, Denkm., p. 307, fig. 322. In the lower part of the picture is the still burning pyre, which a Nymph on the left is trying to quench by pouring water from a jug. The trunk of the hero's mortal body lies on the pyre. On the right, a bearded figure in a peaked cap is hastily receding.

θεοὺς ἀναστένων καλεῖς; L. A has οὕτως after θεοὺς, thus completing the trimeter. The other later MSS. are divided between these two types. Modern edd. have usu. given one of four readings. (1) A's, without change: as Herm., Schneidewin. (Bergk, however, who follows A, alters ἰὼ to ὦ.) (2) L's, with ὦ θεοί instead of ἰὼ θεοί, thus making only one v.: so Dind., Campb. (3) ὦ θεοί. N. τί τοὺς θεοὺς <ὧδ'> ἀναστένων καλεῖς;—the conjct. of a writer in Lond. Class. Journ., vol. 1. p. 337, and of Seidler on I. T. 762 (=780 Dind.). So Blaydes, 733 τί δ' ἔστιν; cp. 753, 917, O. T. 319. It does not seem likely that Soph. would have preferred to write τί ἔστιν (with hiatus), though several recent editors give this: cp. 100 n.

734 τῆς παρεστῶσης, not, 'which is upon thee at this moment' (765 τὸ πῆμα...τὸ νῦν παρόν), but rather, 'which is habitual to thee': hence the word is not superfluous. Often, however, παρεστῶς is nearly synonymous with παρών: cp. 1340, O. T. 633.

735 The intrans. κουφίζειν is rare in Attic: in Eur. Helen. 1555 κουφίζοντα, 'treading lightly,' seems (as Paley says) to imply an ellipse of πόδας. But in this application (to illness) the phrase may have been familiar, as Hippocr. Epid.

2. 10 (quoted by Musgrave) has ἐκούφισεν ὀλίγω, 'he became a little better.'

736 f. I follow A here (see cr. n.), for a reason which was felt by Hermann, but which has not been sufficiently considered by some other editors,—viz., that ἰὼ θεοί (scanned as a bacchius, ---) does not receive sufficient emphasis or prominence unless it stands extra metrum. Cp. 750 ἴθ' ὦ παῖ, and 219. Eur. I. T. 780 has been compared: OP. ὦ θεοί. IF. τί τοὺς θεοὺς ἀνακαλεῖς ἐν τοῖς ἐμοῖς; But there, as Herm. says, the ὦ θεοί is quite unlike the ἰὼ θεοί here: it is the rapid utterance of one who fears to betray himself, not a cry of anguish extorted by physical torment. For the absence of caesura, cp. 101. Cavallin

NE. What is the matter? PH. Nothing serious:—go on, my son.

NE. Art thou in pain from the disease that vexes thee?

PH. No indeed,—no, I think I am better just now.—Ye gods!

NE. Why groanest thou thus, and callest on the gods?

PH. That they may come to us with power to save and soothe.—Ah me!—ah me!

NE. What ails thee? Speak,—persist not in this silence:—'tis plain that something is amiss with thee.

PH. I am lost, my son—I can never hide my trouble from you:—ah, it pierces me, it pierces! O misery,—O wretched that I am! I am undone, my son,—it devours me.—Oh, for the gods' love, if thou hast a sword ready to thy hand, strike at my heel,—shear it off straightway—heed not my life! Quick, quick, my son!

NE. And what new thing hath come on thee so suddenly, that thou bewailest thyself with such loud laments?

Seyffert, Wecklein: and Nauck approves, though he prints A's reading, with οὕτως in brackets. (4) Cavallin: ὦ θεοί. N. τί θεοὺς ἀναστένων καλεῖς; (omitting τοὺς).

743 ε. διόρχεται. In 758 the disease is personified as αὐτή, in 807 as ἡδε: here the subject might be simply κακόν from 742.—βρύκομαι: cp. 7: Tr. 987 ἡ δ' αὖ μαρὰ βρύκει (the νόσος).

746 Written as above, the exclamations represent three successive cries of pain, each longer than the last, as the agony becomes sharper; they seem to suggest the convulsive movement of the lips from which the sounds are wrung.

747 ε. εἰ τί σοι ξίφος πρόχειρον (=πάρεστι) χερσίν, if you have any sword ready in your hands. πρόχειρος can be combined with χερσίν (as in Eur. El. 696 πρόχειρον ἔγχος χειρὶ βαστάζονσ' ἐμῇ) without seeming pleonastic, since the derived sense of the compound adj. (promptus) is prominent. Cp. 407 n.:

πάταξον εἰς ἄκρον πόδα. The ulcerated foot is to be severed from the leg. ἄκρος ποὺς seems to mean simply, 'the end of the foot,' i.e. the heel (πτέρνα), the seat of the ulcer. Cp. 824. The phrase could also mean, 'the foot at the end of the leg,' as in Il. 16. 640 ἐκ κεφαλῆς εἰλυτο διαμπερὲς ἐς πόδας ἄκρους (=simply 'from head to foot'): but this is less fitting here.

753 L τί δ' ἔστω; Γ: τί ἔστω; L.—L distributes the persons thus: NE. τί σοί. ΦΙ. οὐκ οἶδα | N. πῶς οὐκ οἶσθα | Φ. πάπα κ.τ.λ. The distribution in the text is Bothe's.—πάπα πάπαπαῖ L. (The accent on the 3rd α is crossed out. The π in both places is cramped, as if made from π.) 755 τοῦπίσαγμα L. Dindorf (on the authority of Dübner's collation) says, 'τοῦπίσαγμα, sed ex τοῦπίσαγμα factum, quod librarius scribere coeperat.' I cannot perceive any ground for this belief. The letters εἰ after π are here written in the compendious form ϗ. The curve at the bottom should be noted as distinguishing this part of the character from the simple ι, which, when it follows π, is usually in L a straight stroke. There is no trace of erasure or re-touching. ἐπίσαγμα phrasis for ἀθύρειν, but = 'making play-things' in the sand,—houses, dykes, etc. Nor can δεινὰ ποιῶ be cited, which is not an equiv. for δεινὸν ποιούμεαι, but means 'to do dreadful things,' referring to the outward display of horror or grief by gestures or cries. (Cp. my n. on Andoc. or. i § 41.) In Al. 75 where ἀρεῖ (midd.) is now read by most edd., L has ἀρηις.

753 τί σοί; These words clearly belong to Neopt., and mean, 'What is the matter with thee?' The phrase is not an usual one; but it is clear enough here, esp. as ἔστιν can easily be carried on. Hermann, giving τί σοί to Philoctetes, took it as meaning 'What is that to thee?' (quid tua refert?)—a protest against closer questioning.

755 τοῦπίσαγμα. ἐπισάττειν is classical as = 'to put a load on' a baggage-animal, or 'to saddle' a horse (Her., Xen., etc.): and ἐπίσαγμα was a common word, at least in later Greek, as may be inferred from the schol. on Ar. Nub. 450 (ἐπίσαγμα τῶν δυνων), and from its use by the LXX. (Lev. xv. 9). In the marg. of L the gl. is, ἡ ἐπεισοδος· ἡ προσθήκη. The second word suits τοῦπίσαγμα: the first refers to the v. l. τοῦπέισαγμα, in the sense of 'access.' But such a word is neither extant nor conceivable. Bergk's τοῦπίσαγμα (ἐπισίλω), 'hounding on,' would mean here, 'exasperation,'—as if some Fury were stimulating the νόσημα. The word was used by Soph. in his Athamas, acc. to an amended gloss in Hesychius (Soph. fr. 8).

758 L ἦκει...ἐξεπλήσθη. Ph. fears that the sight of his horrible sufferings may deter Neopt. from taking him on board. He says,—'Do not be scared into abandoning me. For this tormentor (αὕτη, the personified νόσος) comes only now and then (διὰ χρόνου),—when she has been sated, haply, with her roamings.' And so—since the voyage to Greece will take less than one whole day (480)—he is not likely to have an attack while at sea. Three points deserve notice. (1) ἦκει = 'is wont to come,'—a sense which is as fitting for it as for a regular perfect tense used in the 'gnomic' manner (ὅπως, Ant. 1126). So in Plat. Symp. 188 A ἦκει is joined to the gnomic aor. ἠδίκησεν: and in Xen. Oec. 21. 3 ἐκβαλίνουσιν...ἡκουσι denotes a repeated occurrence. (2) διὰ χρόνου, 'after an interval of time,' implies here, as it usually does, that the interval is a considerable one: cp. 285 n., where Lys. or. i § 12 is cited. (3) πλάνοις is con-is also in A, B, Γ: while Harl. has ἐπίσαγμα. Bergk conj. τοῦπίσιγμα. 758 εἴ η̄κει γὰρ αὕτη διὰ χρόνου πλάνοις ἴσω | ὥς ἐξεπλήσθη L (the σ of ὥς added by S). Instead of πλάνοις, Γ and Harl. give πλάνης. For η̄κει, Heimsoeth conj. εἴκει. F. W. Schmidt, λήγει γὰρ αὕτη διὰ χρόνου πλάνοις νόσος ὥς ἐξεπλήσθη. Following the MSS. in the rest, Bothe conj. ἴσοις for ἴσω: Arndt adds φλέψ after ἐξεπλήσθη, deleting the first ἴω. Nauck would write, πλανωμένη, | ταχέως δ' ἐπλήσθη, or νῦν δ' ἐξεπλήσθη. 760 ὥς ἐξεπλήσθη. NE. ἴω ἴω, δύστηνε σύ] Triclinius wrote ὥς ἐξεπλήσθη. φεῦ. NE. ἴω δύστηνε σύ. Hermann, ὥς ἐξεπλήσθη. NE. φεῦ. ἴω δύστηνε σύ. 760 πόνων] Blaydes reads βροτῶν.—πάντων φανέλς] Wakefield conj. πολλῶν φθαρεῖς.

trasted with η̄κει. The word was suggested by the fact that intermittent fevers (etc.) were called πλάνητες (Hippocr. Epid. i. 944). The term implied that the intervals were irregular: cp. Erotian Gloss. p. 306 (quoted by Arndt) πλάνητες πυρετοὶ λέγονται οἱ μὴ κατὰ τάξιν φοιτῶντες. This may be illustrated by the use of πλανᾶσθαι in Her. 6. 52, ἣν δὲ πλανᾶται...ἐναλλάξ ποιεῖσα ('if she is capricious, varying the order'—opp. to κατὰ ταῦτα αἰεὶ ποιεῖσα). So id. 7. 16. 2 ἐνύπνια...τὰ ἐς ἀνθρώπους πεπλανημένα ('the dreams which are wont at times to visit men'). It was easy, then, for the poet to imagine the fitful νόσος as a personified wanderer, who, when sated with wandering, comes back to her abode:—much as Aesch. (P. V. 275) speaks of calamity 'roaming' among men: πλανωμένη | πρὸς ἄλλοτ' ἄλλον πημονὴ προσίῳναι. Cp. below, 808 ὀξεία φοιτᾷ καὶ ταχεῖ' ἀπέρχεται. So the schol., who explains πλάνοις by ὁδοιπορίας:—ἦκει ἡ νόσος, ἴσω δτε ἐκορέσθη πλανωμένη' ὥς ἐπὶ θηρὸς δὲ ποιεῖται τὸν λόγον. This is clearly better than to understand,—'When it has once been sated, it returns only after a long interval,—in wandering fashion, seemingly' (πλάνοις being then a modal dat.).—For conjectures, see Appendix.

ἐξεπλήσθη.—ἴω. There is no other example of such an hiatus in a tragic trimeter. (As to lyrics, cp. 832, 851.) Probably, however, the text is sound. The verse is divided between two speakers, there is a full stop after ἐξεπλήσθη, and the second speaker begins with an interjection. Thus the hiatus has an exceptional excuse. On the other hand no emendation is probable. φεῦ (instead of the first ἴω) is certainly not so, whether it be given to Ph. or to Neoptolemus. Gaisford says, 'ἐξέπλησ', ut videtur, conj. Elmsleius.' This would require us to read πλάνους, or (keeping πλάνοις) to understand αὐτοῦς. But the context strongly confirms ἐξεπλήσθη.

760 δῆτα. Cp. El. 1163 ὥς μ' ἀπώλεσας, | ἀπώλεσας δῆτ'. —δύστηνε...φανέλς: the predicative adj. is assimilated to the vocative partic. Cp. 828 n.: Aesch. Pers. 674 ὦ πολὺκλαυτε φίλοισι θανῶν. 761 λάβωμαι δῆτα] In L δῆτα was omitted by the 1st hand, but has been inserted by S. It is in A and the other later mss. Mollweide conj. λάβω τὰ τόξα. 767 ἐξίῃ. L: ἐξήη A: ἐξίκη Γ: ἐξήκη B, and so Brunck. Schneidewin formerly conj. ἐξανῆ.

761 βούλει λάβωμαι...; El. 80 θέλεις | μείνωμεν...; In this idiom the subjunct. is properly deliberative, and βούλει parenthetic, as its position sometimes indicates: e.g. Dem. or. 14 § 27 θῶ βούλεσθε δωδεκάτην ἡμᾶς εἰσίοισιν...; δῆτα has been suspected here, because it occurs in 757, 760, 763. Nauck would remove it by re-writing the passage thus:—βούλει λάβωμαι καὶ θίγω; ΦΙΛ. μὴ τοῦτό γε, | ἀλλ' ὥσπερ ἦτον μ' ἀρτίως, τὰ τόξ' ἐλὼν, | ἕως ἀνῆ τὸ πῆμα τοῦτο τῆς νόσου, | σῶζ' αὐτὰ καὶ φύλασσε. But here, as in 757, it is interrogative, while in 760 and 763 it is otherwise used; and this difference of usage palliates the iteration. Cp. the threefold ἀλλά in 645, 647, 651: also O. T. 517 φέρον, 519 φέροντι, 520 φέρε, where the excuse is the same as here, viz. that, in the 1st and 3rd places the word means 'tend,' but in the 2nd, 'bear.' No weight attaches to the fact that the 1st hand in L accidentally omitted δῆτα, which the reviser added. In 772 L lacks ταῦτα altogether; and yet that word is certainly sound.

768 λῆξαι. The subject to the inf. is τὸ κακόν. When the pain is subsiding (ἐξίῃ), the patient falls asleep; and it is only by sleep that the pain can be wholly allayed (λῆξαι). The schol. explains λῆξαι by τῆς δόδνης παύσασθαι, as if the subject were με: but where λήγω is so used the gen. is commonly added, as in Ai. 274 ἐληξε...τῆς νόσου.

769 ε. ἔκηλον εὐδειν. με is easily supplied from 767; the omission is thus less bold than that in 801 (ἐμπρησον).—τῶδε τῷ χρόνῳ, within it: cp. 715 δεκέτει χρόνῳ, n.—ἐκεῖνοι: Odysseus and Diomedes (570).

This is, of course, admissible. When a single οὐδέ (or μῆδέ) connects two words, the negative force is more often, indeed, confined to the second, as in 756 δεινὸν γὰρ οὐδέ ρητόν. But there are also many examples in which οὐδέ negatives the pre-

Where, however, οὐδέ is thus retrospective, another negative (such as οὐδέν) is usu. joined to the verb: Her. 1. 215 σιδήρῳ δὲ οὐδ' ἀργύρῳ χρέωνται οὐδέν: Thuc. 6. 55 Θεσσαλοῦ μὲν οὐδ' Ἰππάρχου οὐδεὶς παῖς γέγραπται (add id. 5. 47 cited below): Dem. or. 22 § 4 ἀπλοῦν μὲν οὐδὲ δίκαιον οὐδὲν ἂν εἰπεῖν ἔχοι.—μήτε τω τέχνῃ. Here again Dindorf writes μηδέ. Note that, whether ἤτε or μηδέ be read, it does not here balance the preceding ἤτε (or μηδέ), since ἐκ. μήτ' ἄκ.=(μήθ') ἐκ. μήτ' ἄκ.: hence we might read μήτ' ἄκοντα, and yet μηδέ τω τέχνῃ. Cp. Plat. 774 εἰ προνομίας οὔνεκ'. One ms. (B) adds γ' to προνομίας. Where οὔνεκα or ἐνεκα has this sense ('so far as' a thing 'is concerned'), γ' is certainly frequent: cp.

O. T. 857 f. μαρτίαις γ'...οὔνεκ': El. 387 and 605 τοῦδ' γ' οὔνεκ'. In O. C. 22 χρόνου μὲν οὔνεκ', the μὲν is equiv. to γ'. On the other hand in El. 787 τῶν τῆσδ' ἀπειλῶν οὔνεκ', no ms. has ἀπειλῶν γ'. And here the emphasis of γ' is not required.—πλὴν σοὶ τε κἀμοί: i.e., as I receive them from thee, so to thee alone will I give them up. They shall pass between no hands save thine and mine. Cp. 668 καὶ δόντι δοῦναι, n.—ξὺν τύχῃ, a poet. equiv. for the familiar τύχῃ ἀγαθῇ (quod bene vertat): Plat. Symp. 177 E τύχῃ ἀγαθῇ καταρχέτω Φαῖδρος. Cp. Aesch. Ph. speaks as if his own sufferings in Lemnos, and the various trials of Heracles, were due to the bow, once Apollo's: i. e., as if its mortal owners had been punished by jealous gods for the excessive good-fortune of possessing it.—μηδ' ὅπως, sc. ἐγένετο, in the sense of συνήνεγκε, turn out as they did for me. ἀλλὰ δέδοικ', ὦ παῖ, μὴ μ' ἀτέλῃς εὐχῇ. Camerarius conjectured, ἀλλ' οὐν δέδοικα μὴ μάτην εὐχῇ, τέκνον, which Cavallin prints. Wecklein gives δέδοικα δ', ὦ παῖ, μὴ μάτην εὐχῇ τάδε,... in which τάδε is his own, and δέδοικα δ' (instead of ἀλλὰ δέδοικ') is Neue's. The conjecture in the text is my own. I differ from Camerarius in holding that the traditional ὦ παῖ is genuine, and from Neue in holding that the ἀλλὰ is genuine also. The spurious word is δέδοικ', a gloss upon some rarer expression in the same sense, as Hermann saw; who wrote, ἀλλ' οὐ τί σοι, παῖ, μὴ 'τέλῃς εὐχῇ πέλῃ. First, as to metre. The words ἀλλὰ δέδοικ', ὦ παῖ, μὴ μ' ἀτέλῃς εὐχῇ can be read as a dochmiac dimeter, though of an unusual type (cp. J. H. Heinrich Schmidt, Rhythmic and Metric, p. 77). But they cannot be construed: μ' can be only me: and, though we read εὐχῇ, μὴ μ' ἀτέλῃς (or ἀτελῶς) εὐχῇ could not mean, 'lest thou pray vainly on my behalf.' An iambic tri-it may not bring thee troubles, such as it brought to me and to him who was its lord before me.

NE. Ye gods, grant this to us twain! Grant us a voyage prosperous and swift, whithersoever the god approves and our purpose tends!

PH. Nay, my son, I fear that thy prayers are vain; for lo, once more the dark blood oozes drop by drop from the depths, and I look for worse to come. Ah me, oh, oh! Thou hapless foot, what torment wilt thou work for me! It creeps on me,—it is drawing near! Woe, woe is me! Ye know it now:—flee not, I pray you!

O Cephallenian friend, would that this anguish might cleave to thee, and transfix thy breast! Ah me! Ah me! O ye chieftains twain, Agamemnon, Menelaus, would that ye, instead of me, meter is required here. On this point recent edd. and critics are practically unanimous. In the whole passage from 730 to 826 the series of trimeters is otherwise unbroken, save by those brief cries of Ph. which occur 'extra metrum' (785, 787, 790, 796, 804). A solitary dochmiac dimeter is here inconceivable. The corruption of the trimeter began with the loss of the last word, as in Ant. 1301 the MS. πέριξ came from περὶ ξίφει. Among the words suggested are πέλην, τύχη, κυρή, μένη, τάδ' ἦ, τάδε, τέκνον. Of these, τύχη alone has any resemblance to εὐχή: but ἔχει might easily have dropped out after εὐχη. For the phrase cp. O. C. 652 τοῦ μάλιστα ὄκνος σ' ἔχει; Next, as to ἀτέλει. An ellipse of ἦ with μὴ ἀτελὲς εὐχή would be too harsh: we must read εὐχη. Again, μὴ ἀτελὲς εὐχη could not mean, 'lest thou pray in vain.' In Pind. Pyth. 5. 83 ἀτελὲς ... μαντεύμασιν is said of the god. On the other hand cp. Od. 8. 570 τὰ δέ κεν θεὸς ἦ τελέσειεν | ἦ κ' ἀτέλει σ' εἴη. And when ΕΥΧΗ had become εὐχή, ΑΤΕΛΕΣΤ would easily become ἀτελὲς, the τ' being taken for an intruded τε.—See Appendix.

κεῖν: Eur. Tro. 981 μὴ ἀμαθεὶς ποιεὶ θεός. Most edd. now write μὴ ἀδικεῖν, etc., assuming synizesis, rather than μάδικεῖν (crasis), or μὴ δ'ικεῖν.

784 κηκίων: cp. 696 κηκιομένην, n.—νέον with a sinister sense: cp. 554 νέα, 560 νεώτερον, 751 νεοχμόν.

788 f. τάλας, nom.; cp. O. C. 753 ὦ τάλασέ γ' (n.).—ἔχετε, 'know,' as Ant. 9 ἔχεις τι κελσῆκουσας;—μῆδαμῆ is supported by L here, and is not less fitting than μῆδαμῶς, which Blaydes desires. Cp. O. C. 1104 n.

791 Κεφαλλήν: cp. 263 f., n.—σοῦ with ἔχου, cleave to thee, διαμπερὲς στέρνων, piercing thy breast (and not merely thy foot). σοῦ, not σου, is needed here, where there is a contrast between the actual sufferer and the man to whom he wishes the plague transferred. If we read σου, the chief emphasis would fall on διαμπερὲς στέρνων.

793 f. μάλ' αἰθις: cp. O. T. 1316 οἰμοι, | οἰμοι μάλ' αἰθις.—ὦ διπλοὶ στρ.: cp. 264.—Ἀγάμεμνον, ὦ Μενέλαε. A proper name excuses an anapaest in any foot except the 6th (cp. O. C. 1).

The fact that this licence has been used in the 1st foot is no reason why it should not recur in the same v., if, as here, a second proper name requires it. We need not assume, then, with Hermann, that the second anapaest marks a laxity peculiar to the later period of tragedy. Blaydes conjectures, and Nauck adopts, Μενελάε τ' Ἀγάμεινόν τε—to the detriment, surely, of the verse.—πῶς ἄν...τρέφουτε: cp. 531 n.

τὸν ἴσον χρόνον. Here, again, the anapaest has been impugned, on the ground that it ought to be contained in a single word. But, as a prep. and its case are excepted from this rule (Eur. Or. 898 ἐπὶ τῷδε δ' ἡγόρευε Διομήδης ἀναξ), so also are an art. and its noun.

797 ε. ὦ Θάνατε. So Aeschylus, too, made Philoctetes invoke Death: fr. 250 ὦ Θάνατε παιάν, μή μ' ἀτιμᾶσθαι μολεῖν | μόνος γὰρ εἰ σὺ τῶν ἀνηκέστων κακῶν | ἱατρός. Cp. O. C. 1220 (Death as the last ἐπικούρος), and At. 854.—ἀλλ'...κατ' ἡμαρ: cp. O. C. 681 θάλλει...κατ' ἡμαρ αἰ | νάρκισσος.—δύνα, admitted in Attic verse as an equiv. for δύνασαι (Porson Hec. 253): in prose it is post-classical. Cp. 849.

799 ὦ τέκνον, ὦ γενναῖον. Cp. Il. 6. 55 ὦ πέπον ὦ Μενέλαε: Ar. Av. 1271 ὦ Πεισθέταιρ', ὦ μακάρι', ὦ σοφώτατε.

Eur. Cycl. 266 ὦ κάλλιστον ὦ Κυκλώπιον.—ἀλλὰ, hortative: cp. 230, 950.

800 τῷ Λ. τῷδ' ἀνακ. πυρὶ: yon fire, fanned as Lemnian; πῦρ δ' Λήμνιον ἀνακαλοῦσι:—the volcano Mosychlus, which was always associated with Lemnos, and which had given rise to the proverb Λήμνιον πῦρ. One meaning of ἀνακαλεῖν is 'to call to' a person by his name: Thuc. 7. 70 § 8 ἀνακαλοῦντες ὀνομαστί τὸν τριηραρχον. Hence the verb is sometimes joined with appellatives, as Thuc. 1. 3 Δαναοὺς...ἐν τοῖς ἔπεσι...ἀνακαλεῖ (Homer designates the Greeks as Danai): Soph. El. 693 Ἀργεῖος μὲν ἀνακαλούμενος.—Not: 'Yon Lemnian fire, which is so famous' (as if ἀνακαλουμένῳ, by itself, could mean 'celebrated'): nor, 'yon Lemnian fire which is invoked by me.' There is thus no difficulty in ἀνακαλουμένῳ when rightly understood, while the proposed substitutes (cr. n.) are all unsatisfactory.

The volcanic mountain called Μόσυχλος appears to have been on the east coast of Lemnos, south of the rocky promontory (Ἐρμαῖον ὄρος, v. 1459) to which the cave of Philoctetes was adjacent. No volcanic crater can now be traced in Lemnos; and it is probable that the ancient Mosychlus has been submerged. See Appendix. Λήμνιον πῦρ was proverbial for 'a fierce

O my son, generous youth, come, seize me, burn me up, true-hearted friend, in yonder fire, famed as Lemnian:—I, too, once deemed it lawful to do the same unto the son of Zeus, for the meed of these same arms, which are now in thy keeping. What sayest thou, boy,—what sayest thou? Why art thou silent? Where are thy thoughts, my son?

fire' (Ar. Lys. 299). Lycophron (227) has τεφρώσας γυνία Διμναίῳ πυρὶ in this sense, and calls Ajax ὁ Δήμιος | πρηστήρ 'Ενν-οῦς (462), 'Lemnian thunderbolt of war.' Cp. Hesych. Δήμιον βλέπειν 'ἐπειδὴ τὸ πῦρ Δήμιον'. The legendary association of Lemnos with fierce crime (Λήμνια κακά) may have helped to suggest such phrases.

801 ἐμπρησον: the omission of με is somewhat bold here: cp. 769, 1368. If we read πυρὶ μ', the ἐπισυναλοφῆ might be defended by the elision of δ', τ', and once ταῦτ' (O. T. 332) at the end of a verse (O. T. 29 n.). But the fact seems to be that συλλαβὸν in 799, which at once suggests με, excuses the absence of the pron. here.

802 τὸν τοῦ Διὸς παῖδ', Heracles: cp. 727 f. n.—σώζεις, as their temporary guardian: cp. 766.—τοῦτ': i.e. ἐμπρήσαι, cp. 670. Heracles was conveyed to the summit of Oeta by his son Hyllus, who helped to make the pyre, but refused to kindle it (Tr. 1214). It was kindled, acc. to one account, by Philoctetes; acc. to another, by his father Poeas. The former version was naturally preferred where the aim of the legend was to honour Philoctetes, since thus he inherited the bow directly from Heracles: and, since Philoctetes was a more important figure than Poeas, this was the prevailing account. The other version, which made Poeas the kindler, had a recommendation of a different kind in the eyes of mythologists who aimed at a strict chronology,—viz., that the episode was thus confined to the generation before the Trojan war. Tzetzes, in his scholia on Lycophron, gives the first version in one place (on vv. 914 ff.), and the second in another (on v. 50).—Cp. Ov. Met. 9. 229 At tu, Iovis inclytia proles, | Arboribus caesis quas ardua gesserat Oete | Inque pyram structis, arcus pharetramque capacem | Regnaque visuras iterum Troiana sagittas | Ferre tubas Poeante satum; quo flamma ministro | Subdita.

804 τὶ φῆς, παῖ; Neopt. has no answer for the prayer, ἐμπρησον. A genuine pity for the sufferer is beginning to move him; and he knows that, if the plot succeeds, this wretched man will be carried to the place which he most dreads. He remains silent.—ποῦ ποτ' ὦν, mentally: cp. Ant. 42 ποῦ γνώμης ποτ' εἰ; (n.)

806 πάλαι δὴ: cp. 589.—τάπιδι σοῦ... κακά, the ills which lie on thee: cp. Tr. 981 ἀλλ' ἐπὶ μοι μέλεω | βάρος ἀπλετον 'ἐμμένονεν φρήν'. Not, 'the ills which have come upon thee,' as though ἦκοντα could be understood (O. C. 1472 ἦκει τῷδ' ἐπ' ἀνδρὶ...τελευτή). Nor, 'the ills in thy case.'

807 τὸ καὶ θάρσος ἴσχε, have good hope also (as well as δῆλος): for, as the access of the malady is sharp, so it will also be transient.—Nauck enfeebles the sense by changing καὶ to μοι.—φοιτᾶ, of periodical visitations: Hes. Op. 103 νοῦσοι... | αὐτόματοι φοιτῶσι: Arist. *An. 818 ἐμβαλλε κ.τ.λ. Here Philoctetes receives this pledge in place of an oath.

When belligerents had taken oaths to a treaty, the hand-pledge followed, as the seal of mutual confidence: it was the moral sanction added to the religious. A third is now beginning; and he begs Neopt. to take him ἐκέισε, i.e., up to the cave, where he will at least have the couch of leaves (33) to rest upon. Neopt. does not understand that ἐκέισε means, to the cave: so Ph. adds, ἄνω. Neopt. has meanwhile taken hold of Ph., fearing that he may fall, or throw himself, from 823 ἰδρῶς γέ τοί νιν MSS. (ἰδρῶς γέ τοι νιν, sic, L); except that K has δέ for γέ. Buttmann conj. ἰδρῶς τε: Dind. ἰδρῶς δέ, or ἰδρῶ ῥέον τε. 826 ὥς] Wecklein conj. ἔως. 827—838 L divides the vv. thus:—Ὑπν'—| ἡμῖν ἔλθοις· εὐαίων ὦναξ·| ὄμμασιν—| τάνδ' (sic)—| ἰθι ἰθι—| ὦ τέκνον—| ποῖ δέ—| τάντεῦθεν—| ἤδη—| πρὸς σεν—| γνῶμαν—| πολὺ—| ἀρνυται. 827 ἀλγέων] Hermann conj. Ἀλγεος. 828 εὐαῆς] εὐαῆς L, with gl. εὐπνοῦς: the only v. l. is εὐμένης (Γ). Cp. Hesych.

823 γέ τοί, as O. C. 1324, Tr. 1212: γέ τοι δή, O. T. 1171. Here γέ τοι is like γοῦν, i.e., it gives a reason for their belief. (Cp. 767.) 'He seems likely to fall asleep soon, since (γάρ) his head is sinking back; at any rate, a sweat is certainly breaking out,' etc.

824 ἔ ἀκρου...ποδός: cp. 748.—φλέψι, not a vein of the body, but the thin stream in which the blood issues: cp. Polyb. 34. 9 (the removal of an obstruction) ἔλευθεροῖ τὰς φλέβας τῆς πηγῆς, ὥστ' ἀναβλύειν εὐπόρως. So Martial 10. 30. 10 Lucrina vena.

827—864 The place of a second stasimon is taken by this κομμός. The strophe (827—838) is divided from the antistr. (843—854) by a μεσῳδός, consisting of four hexameters for Neoptolemus. The antistr. is followed by an ἐπῳδός (855—864). For the metres, see Metrical Analysis.

A κομμός was properly a lyric lamentation (θρήνος) in which one of the actors took part with the Chorus. But the name can be used in a larger sense to describe any lyric dialogue between actor and Chorus, even when the character of a lamentation is not present.

The strophe here was sung by one half of the Chorus, and the antistrophe by the other. Sophocles had raised the number of the tragic Chorus from 12 to 15 by adding a coryphaeus (whose part had hitherto been taken by one of the ordinary choreutae), and two leaders of ἡμυχόρια,—called παραστάται, because, when the Chorus was drawn up facing the actors, they stood on either side of the coryphaeus. The Ajax affords another certain instance of ἡμυχόρια (866 ff.).

The Chorus urge Neoptolemus to seize the moment while Philoctetes sleeps, and to sail away with the bow. He replies that it would be as useless as it would be base to take the bow without its master, whom the oracle has declared to be indispensable. They are still pressing their counsel when the youth perceives that Philoctetes is about to awake.

827 ἔ. The first Ὑπνε has ὕ, but the second, ὕ: cp. 296 n.—ὀδύνας alludes to the sharp physical anguish of Ph.: ἀλγέων is the more general word,—pain, whether of body or of mind.—Ὑπνε δ': the δέ stands here as it would stand after the repeated adj., Ὑπνε, ἀδαῆς (μεν) ὀδ., ἀδαῆς δέ ἀλγέων: cp. 633.

εὐαῆς instead of εὐαῆς, the predicative adj. being assimilated to the subject (Ὑπνε) in the voc.: cp. 760: Theocr. 17. 66 ὀλβιε κῶρε γένοιο: Callimachus fr. 213 ἀντὶ γὰρ ἐκλήθης Ἰμβρασε Παρθενίου (the river Imbrasus in Samos): Tibullus 1. 7. 53 venias hodierno.—εὐαῆς must certainly be a dactyl (see Metr. Anal.), and in 844 the words ὦν δ' ἂν ἀμείβῃ appear sound.

see, his head sinks backward; yes, a sweat is bathing his whole body, and a thin stream of dark blood hath broken forth from his heel.

Come, friends, let us leave him in quietness, that he may fall on slumber.

CH. Sleep, stranger to anguish, painless Sleep, come, at our Strophe. prayer, with gentle breath, come with benison, O king, and keep before his eyes such light as is spread before them now;

εὐαδές, εὐπνουν. εὐαδής, εὐήρεμος· οἱ δὲ εὐαῆς. Hence Schneider inferred a variant εὐαδές here, and Buttmann thought that this could come from εὐω, comparing νευρο-σπαδής from σπάω. Dindorf would prefer εὐαδές, but would derive it from ἀνδάνω. Hermann altered εὐαῆς to εὐαές (a dactyl, = 844 ὦν δ' ἂν ἀμ-). Seyffert, accepting εὐαές, makes the α long, and in 844 reads ὦν ἂν δ' ἀμειβῃ. 829 The second εὐαίων was added by Triclinius, and first printed by Turnebus. 830 ἀντίσχοις Musgrave and Brunnck: ἀντέχοις MSS. Burges conj. ἀμπίσχοις. 831 τάνδ' τάνδ' L.—ἀγλαν] Reiske conj. ἀχλὺν.—τανὺν] τὰ νῦν L.

But the short α in εὐαές has caused perplexity. Certainly elsewhere we find ᾱ (Hes. Op. 597 χώρῃ ἐν εὐαεί, Od. 12. 289 Ζεφύροιο δυσαέος). But on the other hand ᾱ occurs in other Homeric forms from the same root,—ἀη, ἀητον, ἀητο, ἀῆναι, ἀῆμεναι, ἀῆμενος, ἀῆται. Thus, even though ᾱ was usual in εὐαῆς, general epic associations would have made it easy for Sophocles to use εὐαῆς where metrical convenience required it.

εὐαίων, happy, and giving happiness. At Sicyon Pausanias (2. 10. 2) saw a statue of Ἵπνος, with the surname of ἐπιδότης,—i.e. the giver of ever fresh gifts to men,—the renewer of life. The epithet is explained by Paus. 8. 9. 1 where a Mantinean hieron of Ζεὺς Ἐπιδότης is mentioned,—ἐπιδιδόναι γὰρ δὴ ἀγαθὰ αὐτὸν ἀνθρώποις. The word παιών in 832 recalls the fact that this Sicyonian Ἵπνος stood near the Ἀσκληπιεῖον.

These beautiful verses, which seem to breathe the very spirit of rest, are illustrated by a bronze statue of Ἵπνος now at Vienna. (Baumeister, p. 707.) The Sleep-god is advancing softly; his head is bent; a kindly smile is on his face; his eyes are half-closed; and in his out-stretched right hand he holds the horn from which the poppy-juice (μηκῶνον) is to be shed on weary mortals. The right hand (as replicas show) once held a poppy-stalk,—answering to the ῥάβδος with which Hermes seals the eyes of men. Cp. Callim. Hym. Del. 134 οὐδ' ὅτε οἱ ληθαῖον ἐπὶ πτερόν Ἵπνος ἐπέλσει. Statius Silv. 5. 4. 16 (invoking Somnus):—Nec te totas infundere pennas | Luminibus compello meis : hoc turba precetur | Ladior ; extremo me tange cacumine virgae. Silius 10. 354 (Somnus) Per tenebras portat medicata papavera cornu...quatit inde soporas | Devexo capiti pennas, oculisque quietem | Irrorat, tangens Lethaea tempora virga.

830 ε̄ δμμασι δ' ἀντίσχοις, 'and keep before his eyes, τάνδ' ἀγλαν ε̄ τέταται τανῖν,' this light which is spread before them now.' By 'this light' I do not understand 'a light which is no light,' i.e., 'darkness,'—as if this were an oxymoron like βλέπειν σκότον (O. T. 419), ἐν σκότῳ ὄραν (ib. 1273), for τυφλὸς εἶναι. Rather τάνδ' ἀγλαν is 'dream-light,'—such as illuminates the visions that come in sleep. Cp. Eur. Alc. 354 ἐν δ' ὀνειρασι | φοιτῶσά μ' εὐφραίνουσ' ἄν' ἥδ' γὰρ φίλος | κἀν νυκτὶ λείσσειν, δν-τιν' ἂν παρῇ χρόνον. The pron. τάνδε marks that ἀγλαν has this poetical sense,—the dream, not the sleep, of light. Cp. Aesch. Ag. 942 ἧ καὶ σὺ νικῆν τήνδε δῆριος τίεις; i.e., a νίκη which consists in yielding.—For τέταται, referring to light, cp. Ani. 600 δ τέτατο φάος (n.).

The words could not mean, 'keep off this sunlight from his eyes.' δμμασι might, indeed, be a dat. of interest; but ἀντίσχοις could not mean, defendas. In O. C. 1651 χεῖρ' ἀντέχοντα κρατὸς certainly refers to shading the eyes; but the object of the verb is that which is held before them, not that which is warded off.—

832 ἴθι ἴθι μοι παιών MSS. For ἴθι ἴθι Hermann conj. ἐλθ', ἴθ', ἴθι: also ἴθι μόλε, and ἴθι δ' ἴθι. Dindorf gives ἴθ' ἴθι μοι παιών (so that in 848 the 2nd syll. of αὔπνοιο should be long). Hesych. has αἰγλή· χλιδών. Σοφοκλῆς Τηρεῖ. χιτῶν· καὶ πέδιλα παρὰ Ἐπιχάρμῳ ἐν Βάκχαις. The word χλιδών (χλιδή) meant an 'ornament,' esp. an armlet (ψέλιον). If αἰγλή was used for χλιδών, it was so because αἰγλή could mean 'a gleaming object' (cp. τροφή=θρέμμα). The same explanation applies to χιτῶν and πέδιλα,—'a glistening tunic,' 'a bright chain.' Cp. the Homeric γλήνεα, prop. 'bright objects,' then 'trinkets' or the like (Il. 24. 192). The meanings of αἰγλή given in Bekker Anecd. p. 354 add nothing, for our purpose, to Hesychius. We cannot, then, accept Welcker's version of αἰγλάν here:—'keep upon his eyes this bandage (fasciam) that is bound upon them now' (Rhein. Mus. p. 125, 1828).—No alteration, either of ἀντίσχοις or of τάνδ' αἰγλάν, seems probable.

832 ἴθι ἴθι. The hiatus is defensible because the words are virtually interjections; i.e., there is a slight pause after the first ἴθι. Cp. Ant. 1276 φεῦ φεῦ, ὦ πόνοι: ib. 1328 ἴτω ἴτω.

833 ποῦ στάσει, in a fig. sense, combined with ποῦ...βάσει ('what your attitude is to be,'—'what steps you are to take'), as oft. in expressions of perplexity; cp. Eur. Her. 1079 πᾶ βῶ, πᾶ σῶ, πᾶ κάμψω; Alc. 864 ποῖ βῶ; πᾶ σῶ; τί λέγω; τί δέ μή;

sponding v. of the antistrophe (850), κείνῳ μοι, κείνῳ λάθρᾳ. The want of a verb for πῶς δέ μοι τάντεῦθεν suggests some corruption: we cannot well take βάσει with both clauses by changing πῶς δέ (as Hermann proposed) to πῶς τε. Nor, again, is it satisfactory to expand v. 850 by adding τοῦτου or τάνδρῳ after λάθρᾳ, or by repeating λάθρᾳ itself. Wecklein, leaving κείνῳ μοι κείνῳ λάθρᾳ untouched, writes here ποῖ δέ τάνθενδε βάσει (omitting πῶς δέ μοι τάντεῦθεν). But then,—granting that a dittographia was the cause of error,—it is hard to see how μοι could have crept in between πῶς δέ and τάντεῦθεν. I prefer to read ποῖ δέ μοι τάνθενδε βάσει here, and to insert δὴ (this with Hermann) after the first κείνῳ in 850. The MS. reading may have arisen thus. A transcriber, whose eye chanced to pass over μοι τάνθενδε, wrote ποῖ δέ βάσει. Then, perceiving that he had missed two words, he preferred to begin anew, and wrote the whole verse right, but either forgot, or failed to mark clearly, that his original ποῖ δέ βάσει should be deleted. (A similar case occurs in L's text of the metrical Ἰππόθεος to this play: see p. 3.) A successor, finding ποῖ δέ βάσει ποῖ δέ μοι τάνθενδε βάσει, deemed it obvious that the second βάσει should be omitted. The verse thus became, ποῖ δέ βάσει ποῖ δέ μοι τάνθενδε. But the metrical context showed that a long final syllable was needed; and nothing seemed easier than to correct τάνθενδε into τάντεῦθεν. Lastly, as a verb such as πράξεις seemed to be understood with τάντεῦθεν φροντίδος, the second ποῖ was altered to πῶς.—Join ποῖ with φροντίδος (partit. gen.): cp. O. C. 170 ποῖ τις φροντίδος ἔλθῃ;—τάνθενδε, adverbial: cp. 895.

come, I pray thee, come with power to heal!

O son, bethink thee where thou wilt stand, and to what counsels thou wilt next turn our course. Thou seest how 'tis now! Why should we delay to act? Opportunity, arbiter of all action, oft wins a great victory by one swift stroke.

NE. Nay, though he hears nothing, I see that in vain have we made this bow our prize, if we sail without him. His must be the crown; 'tis he that the god bade us bring.

835 ὁρᾷς ἦδη, 'thou seest now' (how matters stand),—said with a glance or gesture towards the sleeping Philoctetes. There is a certain awkwardness in these words, since, coming so soon after ὅρα ποῦ στάσει, they might naturally mean, 'thou art already taking heed.' Herwerden and Wecklein conjecture ὁρᾷς, εἶδει. This may be right. But the cautious vagueness of ὁρᾷς ἦδη is perhaps a little in its favour.

837 εἰ καιρός, occasion, πάντων γνώμαν ἰσχυῶν=πάντα γινώσκων, taking cognisance of all things,—discerning, in every case, whether the circumstances warrant prompt action. For γνώμην ἔχων as=γινώσκων, cp. El. 214 οὐ γνώμαν ἰσχυῖς, ἐξ ὧν, κ.τ.λ. The general sense is the same as in El. 75 f., νῶ δ' ἔξιμεν καιρὸς γάρ, ὅσπερ ἀνδράσιν | μέγιστος ἔργου παντός ἐστ' ἐπιστάτης. Though we need not write καιρός, still καιρός is virtually personified both by γνώμαν ἰσχυῶν and by ἀρνυται. Pausanias (5. 14. 7) saw two altars at the entrance to the Olympian stadium; one was to Hermes Ἐναγώνιος,—the other to καιρός, who enabled athletes to seize the critical moment in a struggle. Cp. Anthol. 10. 52 εἰ γε λέγων τὸν καιρὸν ἔφησ' θεὸν, εἰ γε Μένανδρε.—Blaydes takes καιρὸς γνώμαν ἰσχυῶν as='opportunity combined with judgment,' and joins πάντων with κράτος ('superiority in all cases'). The order of the words seems against this.—<πολὺ τι> πολλί. No curtailment of v. 854 (μάλα τοι ἄπορα πυκνοῖς ἐνιδεῖν πάθη) is probable. The addition of πολὺ τι makes v. 838 equal to v. 854: and the remedy, however uncertain, is at least not violent. See Appendix on vv. 853 f.—παρὰ πόδα, 'then and there,' extemplo,—by a prompt stroke of action. Cp. Plat. Soph. 242 A μή ποτε διὰ ταῦτά σοι μανικὸς εἶναι δόξω, παρὰ πόδα μεταβαλὼν ἐμαυτὸν ἄνω καὶ κάτω.

839 εἰ ἀλλ' ὅδε μὲν κ.τ.λ.: i.e., 'It is true that he would be unconscious of our flight; but I know that it would be useless to sail without him.' The stately hexameters—in contrast with the lighter rhythms of the Chorus—suit the authoritative tone in which Neoptolemus declares the purport of the oracle. As vv. 844 ff. show, he speaks in a louder voice than the Chorus deem safe.—θήραν...ἔχομεν: cp. Al. 564 δυσμενῶν θήραν ἔχων: O. T. 566 ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔρευναν τοῦ θανόντος ἔσχετε;

842 κομπεῖν δ' κ.τ.λ. It will be a disgrace to them, when they go back to Troy, to boast of their task as accomplished, when it will be, in fact, only half done, if they bring the bow without its master. And the discredit of such a result will be aggravated by the deception used towards Philoctetes. The words ἀτελῇ σὺν ψεύδεσιν are closely connected; 'an incomplete result, combined with falsehood, i.e. not only incomplete, but obtained by falsehood. This seems better than to take σὺν ψεύδεσιν as merely = ψευδῶς, 'to boast falsely.'—Cp. El. 641 σὺν φθόνῳ, Ai. 933 οὐλίῳ σὺν πάθει, O. T. 585 ξὺν φόβῳ.

The Chorus are unmoved by what N. has said (841). They repeat that the bow should be taken, and Ph. left behind. As to the conjectural insertion of δῆ, see on 834.—μοι, ethic (763).—δτι δ. μάκιστον (Doric for μήκιστον) ἐξιδού, lit., 'look forth to the furthest possible point,' i.e., 'use all possible precaution,'—a fresh warning not to disturb the sleeper by the slightest noise, but to depart while there is yet time. Cp. II. 20. 342 μέγ' ἐξιδεν ὀφθαλμοῖσιν, he strained his sight (in eager search): id. 23. 477 οὔτε τοι δέυρατον κεφαλῆς ἐκδέρκεται ὄσσε.—δτι is preferable to ὅπως where the particular mode of effecting the object is in question; and it is supported by the corrector of L (cr. n.).

852 ἄ. ὁσθα γὰρ ἄν...πάθῃ. I read ἄν (=ἦν), with Hermann, for the ὦν or ὄν of the MSS. 'If thou holdest this purpose,—thou knowest what purpose I speak of—in relation to this man (Philoctetes), truly there are desperate troubles (ἄπορα πάθῃ, sc. ἔσονται) for shrewd men to foresee' (lit., 'to see in' such a deed). The γνώμαν is the purpose of Neoptolemus to take Philoctetes on board the ship—ostensibly for conveyance to Greece—and then carry him to Troy. The allusive phrase, ὁσθα γὰρ ἄν αὐδῶμαι, is used, because they are afraid of breathing a word which might betray the secret to the sick man, if he should awake while they were speaking. ταῦταν emphatically opposes this plan to κείνο—the course which they themselves recommend. τούτῳ is a dat. of relation, nearly=περὶ τούτου: cp. Plat. Rep. 598 D ὑπολαμβάνειν δεῖ τῷ τοιοῦτῳ δτι εὐθὺς τις ἀνθρωπος ('in the case of such a person'). πυκνοῖς: cp. Critias Σισ. fr. 1. 12 πυκνὸς τις καὶ σοφὸς γνώμην ἀνὴρ ἐνιδεῖν, oft. used of 'seeing a difficulty or danger in a proposed course of action': Her. 1. 89 εἰρετο Κροίσον δτι οἱ ἐνορώη ἐν τοῖσι ποιουμένοισι (what harm he foresaw for him in what was being done). Id. 1. 120 εἰ φοβερὸν τι ἐνωρώμεν, πᾶν ἄν σοὶ προεφράζομεν. The ἄπορα πάθῃ are the horrors of the disease,—the fury which would burst forth in Philoctetes when he learned that they were taking him to Troy,—and the curses which he would invoke from Ζεὺς Ἰκέσιος on his betrayers.—For other views of this passage, see Appendix.

The fact that this licence has been used in the 1st foot is no reason why it should not recur in the same v., if, as here, a second proper name requires it. We need not assume, then, with Hermann, that the second anapaest marks a laxity peculiar to the later period of tragedy. Blaydes conjectures, and Nauck adopts, Μενελάε τ' Ἀγάμεμνόν τε—to the detriment, surely, of the verse.—πῶς ἄν...τρέφοιτε: cp. 531 n.

τὸν ἴσον χρόνον. Here, again, the anapaest has been impugned, on the ground that it ought to be contained in a single word. But, as a prep. and its case are excepted from this rule (Eur. Or. 898 ἐπὶ τῷδε δ' ἡγήρενε Διομήδης ἀναξ), so also are an art. and its noun.

797 ε. ὦ Θάνατε. So Aeschylus, too, made Philoctetes invoke Death: fr. 250 ὦ Θάνατε παιῶν, μὴ μ' ἀτιμώσης μολεῖν | μόνος γὰρ εἰ σὺ τῶν ἀνηκέστων κακῶν | λατρός. Cp. O. C. 1220 (Death as the last ἐπικούρος), and Ai. 854.—δε...κατ' ἡμάρ: cp. O. C. 681 θάλλει...κατ' ἡμάρ δεῖ | νάρκισσος.—δύνῃ, admitted in Attic verse as an equiv. for δύνασαι (Porson Hec. 253): in prose it is post-classical. Cp. 849.

799 ὦ τέκνον, ὦ γενναῖον. Cp. Il. 6. 55 ὦ πέπον ὦ Μενέλαε: Ag. Av. 1271 ὦ Πεισθέταιρ', ὦ μακάρι', ὦ σοφώτατε.

Eur. Cycl. 266 ὦ κάλλιστον ὦ Κυκλώπιον.—ἀλλὰ, hortative: cp. 230, 950.

800 τῷ Δ. τῷδ' ἀνακ. πυρὶ: yon fire, famed as Lemnian; πῦρ δ' Ἀήμνιον ἀνακαλοῦσι:—the volcano Mosychlus, which was always associated with Lemnos, and which had given rise to the proverb Λήμνιον πῦρ. One meaning of ἀνακαλεῖν is 'to call to' a person by his name: Thuc. 7. 70 § 8 ἀνακαλοῦντες ὀνομαστὶ τὸν τριήραρχον. Hence the verb is sometimes joined with appellatives, as Thuc. 1. 3 Δαναοὺς...ἐν τοῖς ἑπεσι...ἀνακαλεῖ (Homer designates the Greeks as Danai): Soph. El. 693 Ἀργεῖος μὲν ἀνακαλούμενος.—Not: 'Yon Lemnian fire, which is so famous' (as if ἀνακαλουμένῳ, by itself, could mean 'celebrated'): nor, 'yon Lemnian fire which is invoked by me.' There is thus no difficulty in ἀνακαλουμένῳ when rightly understood, while the proposed substitutes (cr. n.) are all unsatisfactory.

The volcanic mountain called Μόσυχλος appears to have been on the east coast of Lemnos, south of the rocky promontory (Ἐρμαῖον ὄρος, v. 1459) to which the cave of Philoctetes was adjacent. No volcanic crater can now be traced in Lemnos; and it is probable that the ancient Mosychlus has been submerged. See Appendix. Λήμνιον πῦρ was proverbial for 'a fierce

What sayest thou, boy,—what sayest thou? Why art thou silent? Where are thy thoughts, my son?

Hesych. Λήμνιον βλέπειν· ἐπειδὴ τὸ πῦρ Λήμνιον. The legendary association of Lemnos with fierce crime (Λήμνια κακὰ) may have helped to suggest such phrases.

801 ἐμπρησον: the omission of με is somewhat bold here: cp. 769, 1368. If we read πυρὶ μ', the ἐπισυναλοκή might be defended by the elision of δ', τ', and once ταῦτ' (O. T. 332) at the end of a verse (O. T. 29 n.). But the fact seems to be that συλλαβὸν in 799, which at once suggests με, excuses the absence of the pron. here.

802 τὸν τοῦ Διὸς παῖδ', Heracles: cp. 727 f. n.—σῶξαι, as their temporary guardian: cp. 766.—τοῦτ'; i.e. ἐμπρῆσαι, cp. 670. Heracles was conveyed to the summit of Oeta by his son Hyllus, who helped to make the pyre, but refused to kindle it (Tr. 1214). It was kindled, acc. to one account, by Philoctetes; acc. to another, by his father Poeas. The former version was naturally preferred where the aim of the legend was to honour Philoctetes, since thus he inherited the bow directly from Heracles; and, since Philoctetes was a more important figure than Poeas, this was the prevailing account. The other version, which made Poeas the kindler, had a recommendation of a different kind in the eyes of mythologists who aimed at a strict chronology,—viz., that the episode was thus confined to the generation before the Trojan war. Tzetzes, in his scholia on Lycophron, gives the first version in one place (on vv. 914 ff.), and the second in another (on v. 50).—Cp. Ov. Met. 9. 229 At tu, Iovis inclyta proles, | Arboribus caesis quas ardua gesserat Oete | Inque pyram structis, arcus pharetram-que capax | Regnaque visuras iterum Troiana sagittas | Ferre iubes Poeante satum; quo flamma ministro | Subdita.

804 τί φῆς, παῖ; Neopt. has no answer for the prayer, ἐμπρησον. A genuine pity for the sufferer is beginning to move him; and he knows that, if the plot succeeds, this wretched man will be carried to the place which he most dreads. He remains silent.—ποῦ ποτ' ὦν, mentally: cp. Ant. 42 ποῦ γνώμης ποτ' εἰ; (n.)

806 τάλαι δὴ: cp. 589.—τάπ' σοί... κακὰ, the ills which lie on thee: cp. Tr. 981 ἀλλ' ἐπὶ μοι μελέψ | βάρος ἀπλετον· ἐμμένονεν φρήν. Not, 'the ills which have come upon thee,' as though ἤκοντα could be understood (O. C. 1472 ἦκει τῷδ' ἐπ' ἀνδρῶν...τελευτή). Nor, 'the ills in thy case.'

807 καὶ θάρσος ἴσχε, have good hope also (as well as ἀλγος): for, as the access of the malady is sharp, so it will also be transient.—Nauck enfeebles the sense by changing καὶ to μοι.—φοιτᾷ, of periodical visitations: Hes. Op. 103 νοῦσοι... | αὐτόματοι φοιτῶσι: Arist. *An. 824 ε. ἄκρου...ποδός: cp. 748.—φλέψι, not a vein of the body, but the thin stream in which the blood issues: cp. Polyb. 34. 9 (the removal of an obstruction) ἐλευθεροῖ τὰς φλέβας τῆς πηγῆς, ὥστ' ἀναβλύνει εὐπόρους. So Martial 10. 30. 10 Lucrina vena.

827—864 The place of a second stasimon is taken by this κομμός. The strophe (827—838) is divided from the antistr. (843—854) by a μεσῳδός, consisting of four hexameters for Neoptolemus. The antistr. is followed by an ἐπῳδός (855—864). For the metres, see Metrical Analysis.

A κομμός was properly a lyric lamentation (οἱῆνος) in which one of the actors took part with the Chorus. But the name can be used in a larger sense to describe any lyric dialogue between actor and Chorus, even when the character of a lamentation is not present.

The strophe here was sung by one half of the Chorus, and the antistrophe by the other. Sophocles had raised the number of the tragic Chorus from 12 to 15 by adding a coryphaeus (whose part had hitherto been taken by one of the ordinary choreutae), and two leaders of ἡμυχόρια,—called παραστάται, because, when the Chorus was drawn up facing the actors, they stood on either side of the coryphaeus. The Ajax affords another certain instance of ἡμυχόρια (866 ff.).

The Chorus urge Neoptolemus to seize the moment while Philoctetes sleeps, and to sail away with the bow. He replies that it would be as useless as it would be base to take the bow without its master, whom the oracle has declared to be indispensable. They are still pressing their counsel when the youth perceives that Philoctetes is about to awake.

827 α. The first Ὑπνε has ὕ, but the second, ὕ: cp. 206 n.—ὀδύναις alludes to the sharp physical anguish of Ph.: ἀλγέων is the more general word,—pain, whether of body or of mind.—Ὑπνε δ': the δέ stands here as it would stand after the repeated adj., Ὑπνε, ἀδαῆς (μέν) δέ, ἀδαῆς δέ ἀλγέων: cp. 633.

εὐαῆς instead of εὐαῆς, the predicative adj. being assimilated to the subject (Ὑπνε) in the voc.: cp. 760: Theocr. 17. 66 ὄλβιε κῶρε γένοιο: Callimachus fr. 213 ἀντὶ γὰρ ἐκλήθης Ἴμβρασε Παρθενίου (the river Imbrasmus in Samos): Tibullus 1. 7. 53 venias hodiernae.—εὐαῆς must certainly be a dactyl (see Metr. see, his head sinks backward; yes, a sweat is bathing his whole body, and a thin stream of dark blood hath broken forth from his heel.

Come, friends, let us leave him in quietness, that he may fall on slumber.

CH. Sleep, stranger to anguish, painless Sleep, come, at our Strophe. prayer, with gentle breath, come with benison, O king, and keep before his eyes such light as is spread before them now;

εὐαδές, εὐπνουν. εὐαδής, εὐήμενος· οἱ δὲ εὐαής. Hence Schneider inferred a variant εὐαδές here, and Buttmann thought that this could come from εὐω, comparing νευροσπαδής from σπάω. Dindorf would prefer εὐαδές, but would derive it from ἀνδάνω. Hermann altered εὐαής to εὐαές (a dactyl, = 844 ὦν δ' ἂν ἀμ-). Seyffert, accepting εὐαές, makes the a long, and in 844 reads ὦν ἂν δ' ἀμείβη. 829 The second εὐαίων was added by Triclinius, and first printed by Turnebus. 830 ἀντίσχοις Musgrave and Brunnck: ἀντέχοις MSS. Burges conj. ἀμπλοχοις. 831 τάνδ' τάνδ' L.—αἴγλαν] Reiske conj. ἀχλὺν.—ταρῦν] τὰ νῦν L.

But the short α in εὐαές has caused perplexity. Certainly elsewhere we find ᾱ (Hes. Op. 597 χώρῳ ἐν εὐαεί, Od. 12. 289 Ζεφύροιο δυσαέος). But on the other hand ᾱ occurs in other Homeric forms from the same root,—ἀη, ἀητον, ἀητο, ἀῆναι, ἀήμεναι, ἀήμενος, ἀῆται. Thus, even though ᾱ was usual in εὐαής, general epic associations would have made it easy for Sophocles to use εὐαής where metrical convenience required it.

εὐαίων, happy, and giving happiness. At Sicyon Pausanias (2. 10. 2) saw a statue of Ἔπνος, with the surname of ἐπιδώτης,—i.e. the giver of ever fresh gifts to men,—the renewer of life. The epithet is explained by Paus. 8. 9. 1 where a Mantinean hieron of Ζεὺς Ἐπιδώτης is mentioned,—ἐπιδιδόναι γὰρ δὴ ἀγαθὰ αὐτὸν ἀνθρώποις. The word παιών in 832 recalls the fact that this Sicyonian Ἔπνος stood near the Ἀσκληπιείον.

These beautiful verses, which seem to breathe the very spirit of rest, are illustrated by a bronze statue of Ἔπνος now at Vienna. (Baumeister, p. 707.) The Sleep-god is advancing softly; his head is bent; a kindly smile is on his face; his eyes are half-closed; and in his out-stretched right hand he holds the horn from which the poppy-juice (μηκώριον) is to be shed on weary mortals. The right hand (as replicas show) once held a poppy-stalk,—answering to the ῥάβδος with which Hermes seals the eyes of men. Cp. Callim. Hym. Del. 134 οὐδ' ὅτε οἱ ληθαίων ἐπὶ πτερὸν Ἔπνος

By 'this light' I do not understand 'a light which is no light,' i.e., 'darkness,—as if this were an oxymoron like βλέπειν σκότον (O. T. 419), ἐν σκότῳ ὁρᾶν (ib. 1273), for τυφλὸς εἶναι. Rather τάνδ' αἴγλαν is 'dream-light,'—such as illuminates the visions that come in sleep. Cp. Cp. Aesch. Ag. 942 ἧ καὶ σὺ νίκην τήνδε δῆμος τίεις; i.e., a νίκη which consists in yielding.—For τέταται, referring to light, cp. Ani. 600 δ τέτατο φῶς (n.).

The words could not mean, 'keep off this sunlight from his eyes.' ὄμμασι might, indeed, be a dat. of interest; but ἀντίσχοις could not mean, defendas. In O. C. 1651 χεῖρ' ἀντέχοντα κρατὸς certainly refers to shading the eyes; but the object of the verb is that which is held before them, not that which is warded off.—

Hesych. has αἴγλη· χλιδών. Σοφοκλῆς Τηρεῖ. χιτῶν· καὶ πέδη παρὰ Ἐπιχάρμῳ ἐν Βάκχαις. The word χλιδών (χλιδή) meant an 'ornament,' esp. an armlet (ψέλιον). If αἴγλη was used for χλιδών, it was so because αἴγλη could mean 'a gleaming object' (cp. τροφή=θρέμμα). The same explanation applies to χιτῶν and πέδη,—'a glistening tunic,' 'a bright chain.' Cp. the Homeric γλήνεα, prop. 'bright objects,' then 'trinkets' or the like (Il. 24. 192). The meanings of αἴγλη given in Bekker Anecd. p. 354 add nothing, for our purpose, to Hesychius. We cannot, then, accept Welcker's version of αἴγλαν here:—'keep upon his eyes this bandage (fasciam) that is bound upon them now' (Rhein. Mus. p. 125, 1828).—No alteration, either of ἀντίσχοις or of τάνδ' αἴγλαν, seems probable.

832 ἴθι ἴθι. The hiatus is defensible because the words are virtually interjections; i.e., there is a slight pause after the first ἴθι. Cp. Ant. 1276 φεῦ φεῦ, ὦ πόνοι: ib. 1328 ἴτω ἴτω.

833 ποῦ στάσει, in a fig. sense, combined with ποῦ...βάσει ('what your attitude is to be,'—'what steps you are to take'), as oft. in expressions of perplexity; cp. Eur. Hec. 1079 πᾶ βῶ, πᾶ στῶ, πᾶ κάμψω; Alc. 864 ποῖ βῶ; πᾶ στῶ; τί λέγω; τί δέ μή;

sponding v. of the antistrophe (850), κείνῳ μοι, κείνῳ λάθρα. The want of a verb for πῶς δέ μοι τάντεῦθεν suggests some corruption: we cannot well take βάσει with both clauses by changing πῶς δέ (as Hermann proposed) to πῶς γε. Nor, again, is it satisfactory to expand v. 850 by adding τοῦτου or τάνδρος after λάθρα, or by repeating λάθρα itself. Wecklein, leaving κείνῳ μοι κείνῳ λάθρα untouched, writes here ποῖ δέ τάνθ' ἐνδε βάσει (omitting πῶς δέ μοι τάντεῦθεν). But then,—granting that a dittographia was the cause of error,—it is hard to see how μοι could have crept in between πῶς δέ and τάντεῦθεν. I prefer to read ποῖ δέ μοι τάνθ' ἐνδε βάσει here, and to insert δῆ (this with Hermann) after the first κείνῳ in 850. The MS. reading may have arisen thus. A transcriber, whose eye chanced to pass over μοι τάνθ' ἐνδε, wrote ποῖ δέ βάσει. Then, perceiving that he had missed two words, he preferred to begin anew, and wrote the whole verse right, but either forgot, or failed to mark clearly, that his original ποῖ δέ βάσει should be deleted. (A similar case occurs in L's text of the metrical Ἰππόθεσις to this play: see p. 3.) A successor, finding ποῖ δέ βάσει ποῖ δέ μοι τάνθ' ἐνδε βάσει, deemed it obvious that the second βάσει should be omitted. The verse thus became, ποῖ δέ βάσει ποῖ δέ μοι τάνθ' ἐνδε. But the metrical context showed that a long final syllable was needed; and nothing seemed easier than to correct τάνθενδε into τάντευθεν. Lastly, as a verb such as πράξεις seemed to be understood with τάντευθεν φροντίδος, the second ποῖ was altered to πῶς.—Join ποῖ with φροντίδος (partit. gen.): cp. O. C. 170 ποῖ τις φροντίδος ἐλθῇ;—τάνθενδε, adverbial: cp. 895.

come, I pray thee, come with power to heal!

O son, bethink thee where thou wilt stand, and to what counsels thou wilt next turn our course. Thou seest how 'tis now! Why should we delay to act? Opportunity, arbiter of all action, oft wins a great victory by one swift stroke.

835 ὁρᾷς ἦδη, 'thou seest now' (how matters stand),—said with a glance or gesture towards the sleeping Philoctetes. There is a certain awkwardness in these words, since, coming so soon after ὅρα ποῦ στάσει, they might naturally mean, 'thou art already taking heed.' Herwerden and Wecklein conjecture ὁρᾷς, εἶδει. This may be right. But the cautious vagueness of ὁρᾷς ἦδη is perhaps a little in its favour.

837 ε. καιρός, occasion, πάντων γνώμαν ἰσχυῶν=πάντα γιγνώσκων, taking cognisance of all things,—discerning, in every case, whether the circumstances warrant prompt action. For γνώμην ἔχειν as=γιγνώσκειν, cp. El. 214 οὐ γνώμαν ἰσχυῖς, ἐξ ὧν, κ.τ.λ. The general sense is the same as in El. 75 f., νῶ δ' ἔξιμεν καιρὸς γάρ, ὅσπερ ἀνδράσιν | μέγιστος ἔργου παντός ἐστ' ἐπιστάτης. Though we need not write καιρός, still καιρός is virtually personified both by γνώμαν ἰσχυῶν and by ἀρνυται. Pausanias (5. 14. 7) saw two altars at the entrance to the Olympian stadium; one was to Hermes Ἐναγώνιος,—the other to Καιρός, who enabled athletes to seize the critical moment in a struggle. Cp. Anthol. 10. 52 εἴ γε λέγων τὸν Καίρον ἔφησθαι θεὸν, εἴ γε Μένανδρε.—Blaydes takes καιρὸς γνώμαν ἰσχυῶν as='opportunity combined with judgment,' and joins πάντων with κράτος ('superiority in all cases'). The order of the words seems against this.—<πολύ τι> πολί'. No curtailment of v. 854 (μάλα τοι ἄπορα πυκνοῖς ἐνιδεῖν πάθῃ) is probable. The addition of πολὺ τι makes v. 838 equal to v. 854: and the remedy, however uncertain, is at least not violent. See Appendix on vv. 853 f.—παρὰ πόδα, 'then and there,' extemplo,—by a prompt stroke of action. Cp. Plat. Soph. 242 A μή ποτε διὰ ταῦτά σοι μανικὸς εἶναι δοξῶ, παρὰ πόδα μεταβαλὼν ἐμαυτὸν ἄνω καὶ κάτω.

839 ε. ἀλλ' ὁδε μὲν κ.τ.λ.: i.e., 'It is true that he would be unconscious of our flight; but I know that it would be useless to sail without him.' The stately hexameters—in contrast with the lighter rhythms of the Chorus—suit the authoritative tone in which Neoptolemus declares the purport of the oracle. As vv. 844 ff. show, he speaks in a louder voice than the Chorus deem safe.—θήραν...ἔχομεν: cp. Al. 564 δυσμενῶν θήραν ἔχων: O. T. 566 ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔρευναν τοῦ θανόντος ἔσχετε;

842 κομπεῖν δ' κ.τ.λ. It will be a disgrace to them, when they go back to Troy, to boast of their task as accomplished, when it will be, in fact, only half done, if they bring the bow without its master. And the discredit of such a result will be aggravated by the deception used towards Philoctetes. The words ἀτελῇ σὺν ψεύδεσιν are closely connected; 'an incomplete result, combined with falsehood,' i.e. not only incomplete, but obtained by falsehood. This seems better than to take σὺν ψεύδεσιν as merely = ψευδῶς, 'to boast falsely.'—Cp. El. 641 σὺν φθόνῳ, Ai. 933 οὐλίῳ σὺν πάθει, O. T. 585 ξὺν φόβῳ.

The Chorus are unmoved by what N. has said (841). They repeat that the bow should be taken, and Ph. left behind. As to the conjectural insertion of δῆ, see on 834.—μοι, ethic (763).—ὅτι δ. μάκιστον (Doric for μήκιστον) ἐξιδού, lit., 'look forth to the furthest possible point,' i.e., 'use all possible precaution,'—a fresh warning not to disturb the sleeper by the slightest noise, but to depart while there is yet time. Cp. II. 20. 342 μέγ' ἐξιδεν ὀφθαλμοῖσιν, he strained his sight (in eager search): id. 23. 477 οὔτε τοι δξύτατον κεφαλῆς ἐκδέρκεται ὕσσε.—ὅπως is preferable to ὅπως where the particular mode of effecting the object is in question; and it is supported by the corrector of L (cr. n.).

852 π. οἶσθα γὰρ ἄν...πάθῃ. I read ἄν (=ἦν), with Hermann, for the ὦν or ὄν of the MSS. 'If thou holdest this purpose—thou knowest what purpose I speak of—in relation to this man (Philoctetes), truly there are desperate troubles (ἄπορα πάθῃ, sc. ἔστι) for shrewd men to foresee' (lit., 'to see in' such a deed). The γνώμαν is the purpose of Neoptolemus to take Philoctetes on board the ship—ostensibly for conveyance to Greece—and then carry him to Troy. The allusive phrase, οἶσθα γὰρ ἄν αὐδῶμαι, is used, because they are afraid of breathing a word which might betray the secret to the sick man, if he should awake while they were speaking. ταῦταν emphatically opposes this plan to κείνο—the course which they themselves recommend. τούτῳ is a dat. of relation, nearly=περὶ τούτου: cp. Plat. Rep. 508 D ὑπολαμβάνειν δεῖ τῷ τοιοῦτῳ ὅτι εὐθὺς τις ἀνθρωπος ('in the case of such a person'). πυκνοῖς: cp. Critias Σισ. fr. 1. 12 πυκνὸς τις καὶ σοφὸς γνώμῃν ἀνὴρ. ἐνιδεῖν, oft. used of 'seeing a difficulty or danger in a proposed course of action': Her. 1. 89 εἰρετο Κροίσον δ τι οἱ ἐνορώῃ ἐν τοῖσι ποιευμένοισι (what harm he foresaw for him in what was being done). Id. 1. 120 εἰ φοβερὸν τι ἐνωρῶμεν, πᾶν ἄν σοὶ προσφράζομεν. The ἄπορα πάθῃ are the horrors of the disease,—the fury which would burst forth in Philoctetes when he learned that they were taking him to Troy,—and the curses which he would invoke from Ζεὺς Ἰκέτιος on his betrayers.—For other views of this passage, see Appendix.

Dobree thought that these words were corrupted from ἀδεῆς πόνος ἐσθλός, and that the latter should be substituted for πόνος ὁ μὴ φοβῶν κράτιστος in 864. So Wecklein reads. 860 οὐ τινος MSS.: Todt and Oberdick conj. οὐ φρενός. 861 τις 855 οὐρος, a fair wind, meaning here an opportune moment: schol. καὶρός ἐπιτήδειος. The metaphor is a fitting one for sailors. When οὐρος is fig., it more oft. = 'a prosperous course' (Tz. 815).—This is better than to take the word literally, as if the wind, which had been adverse (840), had just changed.

856 ε. οὐδ' ἔχων ἀρωγὰν, because his bow is in N.'s hands (cp. 931). νύχιος = σκότιος, in the darkness of sleep.

859 ἀλεῆς ὕπνος ἐσθλός. If these words are right, they can mean only, 'sleep in the heat is sound,'—a parenthetical comment on the preceding ἐκτέταται νύχιος. In the excitement of the Chorus, it is perhaps not strange that they should use a phrase scarcely consistent with their own ὕπνος αἰπνός (848). Cp. Theocr. 7. 21 μεσαμέριον .. | ἀνίκα δὴ καὶ σαῦρος ἐφ' αἵμασιν αἰσι καθεύδει. We certainly cannot render (with Cavallin), 'a warm sleep (i.e. a sound one, in which a gentle warmth pervades the body) is favourable to our plan.' ἀλεῆς occurs only here, though Hesych. has ἀλεός = ἀλεεινός. It is, however, a correct formation from ἀλέα: and ἀλέας (gen.) is not a probable correction. The easy emendation ἀδεῆς (Δ for Λ) would give the sense, 'tis a secure (i.e. tranquil), sound sleep.' This may be right; but I have preferred to keep the ms. reading. The addition of δ' after ἀλεῆς might seem desirable in such a parenthesis: cp. Dem. or. 18 § 308 ἢ ἄλλο τι δύσκολον γέγονε, (πολλὰ δὲ τὰ ἀνθρώπινα,) εἰτ' ἐπὶ τούτῳ τῷ καιρῷ κ.τ.λ.

Some reject ἀλεῆς ὕπνος ἐσθλός as a mere gloss. But a marginal commentator might have been expected to use more prosaic language,—e.g., ὁ μεσημβρινός ὕπνος βαθός. Dobree, reading ἀδεῆς, supposed the following process. (1) In v. 864 Soph. wrote ἀδεῆς πόνος ἐσθλός. This was supplanted by a gloss, πόνος ὁ μὴ φοβῶν κράτιστος, which now stands there. (2) Then the displaced ἀδεῆς πόνος ἐσθλός was corrupted into ἀλεῆς ὕπνος ἐσθλός, and inserted in the text after νύχιος. This hypothesis is very ingenious, but it seems much too complex to be probable.

860 οὐ τινος. The conjecture, οὐ φρενός, has found much favour; but, in a picture of utter helplessness, is not the

Now, my son, now the wind is fair for thee:—sightless and helpless, the man lies stretched in darkness,—sleep in the heat is sound,—with no command of hand or foot, but reft of all his powers, like unto one who rests with Hades.

Take heed, look if thy counsels be seasonable: so far as my thoughts can seize the truth, my son, the best strategy is that which gives no alarm.

861 Ἄττα πάρα κείμενος. Cp. O. T. 972 κείται παρ' Ἀἰδῇ Πόλυβος. This mode of writing is preferable to παρακείμενος because παρακίεσθαι τινι= 'to lie beside one,' or 'before one,' with ref. to things which are ready to one's hand, or at one's disposal. But when the sense is, 'to be lodged or deposited with one,' κίεσθαι παρά τινι is used.

862 ὄρα, βλέπ'. For the double imperat. in excited utterance, cp. 981, O. C. 121 προσδέρκων, λεύσσε δὴ. Seyffert's ὄρα is much better here than the ms. ὁρᾷ, 'he sees as the dead see,' i.e., not at all. After ἀνόμματος and νύχιος, this would be weak.—εἰ καίρια φθέγγει. 'See whether thy words are seasonable' means here, 'We fear that thy counsel (839 ff.) is unseasonable.' We miss our καιρός, if we stay here with Philoctetes, instead of escaping with the bow.

863 π. τὸ δ' ἀλώσιμον ἐμᾷ φρ., as far as my thought can grasp the question, = καθ' ὅσον ἐγὼ κατανοῶ τὸ πρᾶγμα. Cp. Plat. Tim. 29 A τὸ λόγῳ καὶ φρονήσει περιληπτόν. The acc. is one of 'respect' (like τούτων μέρος, etc.).—πόνος ὁ μὴ φοβῶν κράτιστος, 'the enterprise not fraught with fear is best' (Whitelaw): a sententious utterance, like βράχιστα γὰρ κράτιστα τὰν ποσὶν κακὰ (Apl. 1327). They mean that it is best to depart noiselessly with the bow, and so avoid the risks involved in taking Philoctetes. ὁ μὴ φοβῶν is left vague by the proverb-like brevity of the phrase: it means, 'which does not disturb the sleeping Philoctetes.' The word πόνος is also in keeping with the gnomic form,—implying that there will be least πόνος in such a course; as if it were, πόνος ἐλάχιστος κράτιστος. Cp. σιγῆς ἀκινδυνον γέρας (meaning that σιγή, though it wins no positive γέρας, risks nothing): 'Discretion is the better part of valour,' etc.

865—1080 Third ἐπεισόδιον. Neoptolemus, overcome by remorse, confesses that Troy is their destination. Philoctetes demands the restoration of the bow; and Neoptolemus is on the point of restoring it, when Odysseus enters. As Ph. refuses to accompany them, Odysseus decides to leave him behind, and departs for the ship, ordering N. to follow him. Meanwhile, by N.'s command, the Chorus remain with Ph., in the hope that he may alter his resolve.

865 μὴδ' ἀφιστάναι φρενῶν: Eur. Or. 1021 ἐξέστην φρενῶν. For ἀφιστάναι, cp. Ar. Vespr. 1457 τὸ γὰρ ἀποστήναι χαλεπὸν | φύσεος. The words convey a hurried refusal and warning,—'do not lose your wits' (through fear). All their presence of mind is needed, since Philoctetes is awaking.

867 τό τ' ἐλπίδων | ἄπιστον οἰκούρημα. Nauck conj. γέγηθ' ἰδὼν ἀελπτον ἐπικούρημα (ἀελπτον with F. W. Schmidt, ἐπικούρημα with Blaydes). 871 μεῖναι] Cavallin conj. ἰδεῖν. 872 οὐκουν] Blaydes writes οὐ τὰν [i.e., οὐ τὰν].—εὐφώρας MSS. (εὐφόνως L², 14th cent.): εὐφώρας Brunck, who (like Meineke and F. W. Schmidt) also proposed εὐπετῶς. Blaydes gives εὐχερῶς. Eldik conj. εὐλόφως: Wakefield, εὐκόλως. 873 ἀγαθοὶ] αγαθοὶ L. 876 γέμων] Nauck conj. γέμειν. 878 Tournier

867 ε. ὦ φέγγος...τό τ' κ.τ.λ. For a voc. thus combined with a nom. (and art.), cp. 986: Αἰ. 861 (ὦ) κλειναὶ τ' Ἀθῆναι καὶ τὸ σύντροφον γένος.—Ἐλπίδων ἄπιστον, not credited by my hopes,—such that my hopes could not have believed it possible.² Cp. 1067: Ant. 847 φίλων ἀκλυτος (=οὐ κλειομένη ὑπὸ φίλων), and n.: El. 1214 ἄτιμος...τοῦ τεθνηκότος (=οὐ τιμωμένη ὑπὸ τοῦ τ.). So ἐλπίδων ἄπιστον=οὐ πιστευόμενον ὑπὸ τῶν ἐλπίδων. This is better than to take it as=ἐλπίδων πίστιν οὐκ ἔχον, in the sense, 'not having the pledge, assurance, given by hopes,' 'not warranted' by them (like ἀνήμεος χειμώνων, O. C. 677 n.).—οἰκούρημα, as having guarded the place while he slept. So a watch-dog is called οἰκούρος in Ar. Vesp. 970: cp. below, 1328. For the periphrasis cp. Eur. Alc. 606 ἀνδρῶν Φεραίων εὐμενῆς παρουσία.

869 ε. τοῦτ' is governed by ἐξηύχης', not by τλήναι, which interprets it. ἂν might go with τλήναι (=εἴ τι τλῆις ἂν), but is better taken, as its position suggests, with ἐξηύχης'. The sense of ἂν ἐξηύχης' warrants the use of τλήναι, without ἂν, instead of τλήσεσθαι. See Appendix.—μεῖναι (depending on τλήναι) governs τὰμὰ πῆματα, to 'wait for' them, i.e., to wait till they were better: cp. Aesch. fr. 35 ἄγων γὰρ ἄνδρας οὐ μένει λελειμμένους.—ξυνωφελούντά μοι, helping to do me good, with dat. instead of the usual acc.; cp. Ant. 560 τοῖς θανοῦσιν ωφελεῖν (n.). It is possible, but less simple, to supply αὐτά (sc. τὰ πῆματα) with ξυνωφ., 'helping me to assuage them.'

872 οὐκουν: 'the Atreidae, at any rate (οὐν), did not thus.' Here οὐν (like γοῦν) justifies his wonder at the youth's constancy. Cp. 907: 1389: Ant. 321 (n.).—εὐφώρας is the best correction of the ms. εὐφόνως (see cr. n.). Cp. Hippocr. Aph. 1242 εὐφωρώτατα φέρειν: Id. 1244 δυσφώρας φέρειν (as Soph. O. T. 783 δυσφώρας | τοῦνιδος ἥγον).

874 ε. καὶ εὐγενῶν: cp. 384: 719.—ἐν εὐχερεῖ ἔθου: cp. 498 ἐν σμικρῷ ποιούμενοι (n.); and for this use of τίθεσθαι, 451, 473.—γέμων: cp. Dem. or. 18 § 308 φυλάττει πηνίκα ἔσεσθε μεστωτοὶ τοῦ συνεχῶς λέγοντος.

PH. Ah, sunlight following on sleep,—ah, ye friendly watchers, undreamed of by my hopes! Never, my son, could I have dared to look for this,—that thou shouldest have patience to wait so tenderly upon my sufferings, staying beside me, and helping to relieve me. The Atreidae, certainly, those valiant chieftains, had no heart to bear this burden so lightly. But thy nature, my son, is noble, and of noble breed; and so thou hast made little of all this, though loud cries and noisome odours vexed thy senses.

And now, since the plague seems to allow me a space of forgetfulness and peace at last, raise me thyself, my son, set me on my feet, so that, when the faintness shall at length release me, we may set forth to the ship, and delay not to sail.

conj. λώφῃσι (this with F. W. Schmidt) κἀνάπανλά τις, τέκνον. 879 f. A. Zippmann (Aetheseon Sophoclearum Specimen, pp. 36 ff., 1864) places 879 immediately before 890, and deletes the v. which stands in the MSS. as 889 (αἰνῶ τὰδ'). He also deletes v. 880 (ἴν' ἥνικ' ἄν). Nauck and Cavallin so print the text. Wecklein thinks that 879 and 880 are both interpolations.—σύ με κατάρσῃσιν] Blaydes conj. σύ δέ μ' ἀνάρσῃσιν. 880 ποτέ] Meineke conj. τότε (to go with δρῶμ' αὐτοῦ). Vauvilliers, πόδε: Blaydes, πόδα.

879 f. σύ μ' αὐτὸς... ποτέ. Philoctetes has awakened to find that the acute pains have ceased (768); but, after the violent attack of the disease, a sense of faintness (κόπος) remains. He has been lying on his back (822). He now asks Neoptolemus to assist him in rising to his feet: σύ μ' αὐτὸς ἄρον, σύ με κατάρσῃσιν: where αὐτὸς means that he does not wish the Chorus to approach him at present. He is afraid that disgust might render them unwilling to take him on board (890). In his crippled state,—now aggravated by exhaustion,—the mere act of rising was a serious exertion. At v. 886 Neoptolemus gives the aid of his hands to the recumbent sufferer, at the same time asking him to make an effort,—νῦν δ' ἄρ' αὖτε σάντον: which is not, of course, contrasted with σύ μ' αὐτὸς ἄρον, as if N. meant that Ph. must rise without help: that would be, σύ δ' αὐτὸς ἄρ' αὖτε σάντον. At the same time, N. says that, if Ph. prefers it, the sailors will lift him up and carry him. Ph. replies, 'No, thank you—help me to rise, as you propose' (889). N. assents (893), saying, 'Stand up, and take hold of me yourself' (as I am holding you).

And v. 894 marks the moment at which Ph. slowly rises, leaning on N. Then there is naturally a pause, in order that Ph. may rest after this effort, and may feel whether he is yet strong enough to attempt walking. It is this pause which is foreshadowed by the words, ἴν' ἥνικ' ἄν κόπος μ' ἀπαλλάξῃ ποτέ (880). And it is in this pause that the remorse of Neoptolemus gains the mastery.

A. Zippmann, whom Nauck and Cavallin follow in their texts, deletes both v. 880 and v. 889 as spurious, and transposes 879 to a place between 888 and 890. His two main objections to the traditional text are:—Why should Ph., formerly so eager to start, now wish to wait till his κόπος has passed off? (880). And why should he desire to rise before that moment, instead of resting on the ground? The view of the whole situation which I have given above will show why I believe the traditional text to be sound.

881 ἐπίσχωμεν, intrans. (the use of this verb in 349 is a different one); τὸ πλεῖν defines the act in regard to which delay is forbidden. Cp. Xen. M. 3. 6. 10 περὶ πολέμου συμβουλεύειν τὴν γε πρώτην ἐπισχόμεν. For the art. prefixed to the inf., cp. 118: 1241 ὅς σε κωλύσει τὸ δρᾶν.

882 f. ἀλλ' ἡδομαι μὲν: here μὲν slightly emphasises the verb, but does not oppose it to any other thought: the νῦν δ' in 886 should not be regarded as answering to it. Cp. 1278: O. T. 82 ἀλλ' εἰκάσαι μὲν, ἡδύς: ib. 769 ἀλλ' ἔξεταί μὲν.—ἀνῶδυνον masc., to be taken adverbially with both participles ('living and breathing, free from pain'): not neut., with βλέποντα only, as if the sense were, 'showing the absence of pain by thy looks.'—βλέποντα=ζῶντα (though here with special reference to his recent slumber, cp. 856 ἀνόμματος): As. 962 καὶ βλέποντα μὴ πόθου, | θανόντ' ἀν οἰμώξειαν.—κάμπνεοντ': Aesch. Ag. 671 ἐκείνων εἰ τις ἐστὶν ἐμπνέων.

884 f. ὡς οὐκέτ' ὄντος. Here συμβόλαια are the signs observable by one who watched Ph. sleeping after the attack of the disease, when he seemed like one Ἰδὼν πᾶρα κείμενος (861). The chief of such signs would be, a deathly pallor, and the absence (as a spectator might think) of respiration.—By τὰς παρούσας ξυμφορὰς are meant the agonies of disease to which he is subject, and which he had endured just before his sleep. τὰς παρούσας might be the part. of the imperf., αἰ παρήσαν (cp. Ani. 1192 n.), but is more forcible if taken as pres.,=αἰ πάρεσιν: cp. 734 τῆς παρεστῶσης νόσου. Thus the meaning is:—'Thy symptoms (in sleep), judged in the light of (πρὸς) the sufferings which afflict thee, seemed like those of a dead man.' Such a sleep, following on such paroxysms, might well have been mistaken for death. For πρὸς as 'in view of,' cp. Thuc. 7. 47 ἐβουλεύοντο πρὸς τὴν γεγενημένην ξυμφορὰν καὶ πρὸς τὴν παρούσαν ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ κατὰ πάντα ὁρῶστίαν.—Not: 'In view of thy plight just now (i.e., while sleeping), thy symptoms seemed like those of a dead man.' τὰς παρ. ξυμφορὰς would then mean merely the condition of the sleeper, as distinguished from the συμβόλαια or outward signs thereof. But, since the inference was drawn wholly from the outward signs, the words πρὸς τὰς παρ. ξυμφορὰς would lose their natural force, and mean no more than τὰ παρόντα συμβόλαια σκοποῦντι.—συμβόλαια=σύμβολα: the only Attic example of this sense; which occurs, however, in Her. 5. 92 § 7, πιστόν γάρ οἱ ἦν τὸ συμβόλαιον (the token, or proof, μαρτύριον). In Eur. Ion 411 ἃ τε νῦν συμβόλαια πρόσθεν ἦν, the meaning is 'dealings,' 'intercourse' (the regular Attic sense of συμβόλαια being that of 'covenants').

886 f. νῦν δ' αἶρε σαντόν. The reflexive pron. is not necessarily emphatic when thus used with an active verb: cp.

NE. Right glad am I to see thee, beyond my hope, living and breathing, free from pain; for, judged by the sufferings that afflict thee, thy symptoms seemed to speak of death.—But now lift thyself; or, if thou prefer it, these men will carry thee; the trouble will not be grudged, since thou and I are of one mind.

PH. Thanks, my son,—and help me to rise, as thou sayest:—but do not trouble these men, that they may not suffer from the noisome smell before the time. It will be trial enough for them to live on board with me.

NE. So be it.—Now stand up, and take hold of me thyself.

PH. Fear not, the old habit will help me to my feet.

NE. Alack! What am I to do next?

No MS. has ἀν. Schaefer restored τί δῆτ' ἀν δρῶμ'. Brunck conj. τί δῆτα δρῶμ' ἀν ἐκ τούτων ἐγώ;—τούνθενδε γε A: τούνθενδε λέγε L, r: τούνθαδε λέγε B. Erfurdt conj. τούνθενδ' ἔτι; and so Blaydes.

Aesch. P. V. 747 τί δῆτ' ἐμοὶ ζῆν κέρδος, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐν τάχει | ἔρμψ' ἐμαντήν τῆσδ' ἀπὸ στύφλου πέτρας...; At v. 879 Ph. asked N. to assist him; and now—after a kindly greeting—N. proceeds to do so. His hands are now stretched forth to Ph., ready to raise him, and the words νῦν δ' αἶρε στανόν prepare Ph. for the effort. —εἰ δέ σοι μᾶλλον φίλον: i.e., he need not make even this effort, but can be lifted from the ground.—τοῦ πόνου γὰρ: since Neoptolemus and Philoctetes are agreed upon the voyage, the sailors will not grudge the trouble of carrying their master's friend.

889 ἀνὼ τὰς, ὃ παῖ. 'Thanks, my son' (lit., 'I commend what you say'). The phrase implies a courteous recognition of the proposal that the sailors should carry him: but, as is shown by καὶ μ' ἔταιρ' ὥσπερ νοεῖς, it is not a direct way of refusing the offer, like 'No, thank you.' The formula ἀνὼ τὰς regularly means, as here, 'I commend your words' (Eur. Or. 786, Med. 908). It is known, indeed, that Soph. used ἀνὼ like ἐπαινώ, as a civil form of refusal, in his Alcmaeon (Hesych. s. v. ἀνὼ): cp. Hes. Op. 641 νῆ' ὀλίγην αἰνεῖν, μεγάλη δ' ἐνὶ φορτίᾳ θέσθαι. But here ἀνὼ τὰς is better taken in its simple and usual sense.

890 ἔ. ἕασον: cp. 1257.—δσμφ: cp. 876, 1032.—συνναλεῖν (epexeg. inf.) can be said of companionship in a brief voyage, as ναλεῖν is oft. no more than 'to be in' a place: O.C. 117 n.

898 ἔσται τὰς: cp. O.C. 1773 δράσω καὶ τὰς.—ἔστω=ἄνιστω: O.T. 143, 147.

—καὶ τὸς ἀντρέχου, sc. ἐμοῦ: i.e., as I am supporting thee, so, on thy part, cling to me. Cp. Her. 2. 121 ἐκείνου τῆς χειρὸς ἀντρέχεσθαι. For the omission of the gen., cp. Ar. Ach. 1120 φέρε, τοῦ δόρατος ἀφελκύσωμαι τοῦλυτρον. | ἔχ', ἀντρέχου, παῖ.

895 τί δῆτ' ἀν δρῶμ'. Schaefer's insertion of ἀν is not grammatically indispensable. The simple optat. could stand, as in Ant. 605 τίς... κατάσχοι; But ἀν is clearly right, because the question here is a practical one; it does not refer merely to abstract possibility. Cp. O.C., Appendix on v. 170. So 1393 τί δῆτ' ἀν ἡμεῖς δρῶμεν;

δρῶμ'. Contracted verbs had two ways of forming the act. optat. pres.: (1) with ι, as δρά-ο-ι-μι, contr. δρῶμι, the mode proper to verbs with a thematic vowel: (2) with η, as δρα-ο-ι-η-ν, contr. δρῶην, where, though the thematic vowel ο is kept, the endings follow the analogy of the verbs which have no such vowel ('verbs in μι'). The only Homeric examples of (2) are Od. 4. 692 φιλοῖη, and ib. 9. 320 φοροῖη. But in the 5th cent. B.C. this second formation was already predominant in Attic. For the sing. number the first formation had become rare, though Attic poets could still use it whenever it was metrically convenient: e.g. 1044 (and O.T. 1470) δοκοῖμ': Tr. 1235 νοσοῖ: Aesch. P. V. 978 νοσοῖμ' ἀν. Some instances of the 3rd sing. occur also in Attic prose: as Thuc. 2. 79 (and 100) τοῦνόνδε γε, adverbial: cp. 834: O. C. 476 τὸ δ' ἐνθεν (n.). γε at the end of the v., as 438, O. C. 265, etc. The emphasis is fitting here. He has reached the furthest point to which the deception can be carried, since it must be revealed by the presence of Odysseus at the ship.

896 ἐξέβης, 'digressed' from the matter in hand: cp. Dem. or. 18 § 211 ἐπανελεῖν οὐν, ὁπότεν ἐνταῦθ' ἐξέβην, βούλομαι. Eur. I. T. 781 (Orestes to Iphigeneia, whom he has interrupted by an unguarded exclamation) οὐδὲν· πέρανε δ' ἐξέβην γὰρ ἄλλοσε ('my thoughts had wandered').—λόγῳ is better here than λόγων. The latter is more suitable in such a phrase as ποῖ λόγων ἀμνηχανῶν | ἔλθω; El. 1174.

897 οὐκ οἶδ' ὅποι χρὴ κ.τ.λ.: he does not know in what words he can break the truth to Ph.,—that they are going to Troy. After an obscure hint in vv. 912 f., he at last speaks bluntly (915). Cp. Plat. Hipp. ma. 297 D οὐκ ἔτι ἔχω, ὦ Ἰππία, ὅποι τράπωμαι, ἀλλ' ἀπορώ· σὺ δὲ ἔχεις τι λέγειν;—Nauck wishes for στρέφειν, which would imply an artful 'twisting' of speech; cp. Ar. Th. 1128 αἰαῖ· τί δράσω; πρὸς τίνας στρεφθῶ λόγους; But τρέπειν better suits the ingenuous perplexity of one who simply doubts what course he ought to take.

898 ἀπορεῖς δὲ τοῦ σύ; Remembering the behaviour of his former visitors when it came to the all-important point (310), Ph. is alarmed at the first trace of embarrassment in Neoptolemus.

899 ἐνθάδε...τοῦδε τοῦ πάθους (partit. gen.)=ἐνθάδε τῆς ἀπορίας: at such an advanced point in it that I do not know what to say next (897).—Not, as Wunder took it, 'at such a point that I must speak' (referring to μὴ λέγειν).

900 ε. οὐ δὴ...; so (with που added) O. T. 1472, Ant. 381.—For ὥστε after ἔπεισεν cp. 656 n.—ναύτην = ναυβάτην (246), voletem: so Aesch. Pers. 719 πεζὺς ἡ ναύτης, Hor. C. 3. 4. 30 navita.

902 ε. ἅπαντα δυσχέρεια: for the neut. plur. as subject, with sing. substat. as predicate, cp. O. C. 883 ἄρ' οὐχ ὕβρις τάδ'; Od. 24. 433 λύβη γὰρ τάδε γ' ἐστί: Stobaeus Flor. 5. 3 φόβος τὰ θεῖα τοῖσι σώφροσιν βροτῶν: Lys. or. 4 § 7 πῶς ταῦτ' ἐστί πρόνοια; Dem. or. 19 § 72 ἔστι δὲ ταῦτα γέλωσ.—τὴν αὐτοῦ φύσιν λιπὼν, whereas τὸ γενναῖον is τὸ μὴ ἐξι-

904 2 οὐδὲν ἔξω τοῦ φντεύσαντος, nothing that deviates from his example. The father (Achilles) is the παράδειγμα which regulates the son's conduct,—as in Arist. Eth. N. 3. 6 the σπουδαῖος is ὥσπερ κανὼν καὶ μέτρον (τῶν καλῶν). Thus the use of ἔξω is justified: it expresses a departure from the lines of the pattern. Cp. Plat. Legg. 876 ε δοῖναι τὰ παραδείγματα τοῖς δικασταῖς τοῦ μήποτε βαλεῖν ἔξω τῆς δίκης. Musgrave quotes Libanius i. 574 τοῦ τῆς πόλεως ἥθους καὶ τῆς ἡμῶν πολιτείας ἔξω τὸ πρᾶγμα εἶναι δοκεῖ. The boldness of the expression ἔξω τοῦ φντεύσαντος finds some analogy in the phrase κατὰ τινα as=κατὰ τρόπον τῶς: Plat. Parm. 126 C κατὰ τὸν πάππον . . πρὸς τῇ ἱππικῇ διατρίβει (following his example). So Alciphron can say ὁ παῖς ἐξεμάξατο τὸν διδασκαλόν (took the stamp of his teacher), instead of τὸν τοῦ διδασκάλου χαρακτήρα (3. 64). I cannot, then, think with Nauck that φντεύσαντος is spurious. προσεκότος would be but a tame substitute. A reference to

ἐσθλόν: Blaydes would take this as= 'of noble birth,' in order that Ph. may not praise himself. A similar feeling has prompted conjectures (cr. n.). But by ἐσθλόν Ph. means that the kindness of N. is not disgraced by its recipient. The situation is one in which he can say this with perfect dignity and propriety. So he refers to himself elsewhere as the comrade (1131) and benefactor (670) of Heracles; as a zealous ally of the Greek chiefs (1027); as one who has shown rare courage under his trials (535), and who will not fail in gratitude to his deliverer (1370). In like manner Oedipus reminds his Attic hosts that he is no unworthy guest (O. C. 287, 625 f.).

907 οὐκ οὖν (872 n.) ἐν οἷς γε δρᾶς (αἰσχρὸς φανεί): in respect of thy deeds (thus far) thou certainly wilt not be found αἰσχρὸς: ἐν οἷς δὲ αὐδᾶς, but in respect of what thou sayest—i.e., in respect of the future conduct which thy words foreshadow,—ὀκνῶ (μὴ αἰσχρὸς φανῇ).—For the emphasis given to δρᾶς

917 ε. τί<δ'>εἶπας; I insert δ', which might easily have dropped out. Such a hiatus as τί εἶπας is not Sophoclean. Cp. 100 n. After a voc., we elsewhere find δέ thus used in a question:

NE. O Zeus, what shall I do? Must I be found twice a villain,—by disloyal silence, as well as by shameful speech?

PH. If my judgment errs not, yon man means to betray me, and forsake me, and go his way!

NE. Forsake thee—no; but take thee, perchance, on a bitter voyage—that is the pain that haunts me.

PH. What meanest thou, my son? I understand not.

NE. I will tell thee all. Thou must sail to Troy, to the Achaeans and the host of the Atreidae.

PH. Oh, what hast thou said? NE. Lament not, till thou learn—

PH. Learn what? What would'st thou do to me?

NE. Save thee, first, from this misery,—then go and ravage Troy's plains with thee.

PH. And this is indeed thy purpose? NE. A stern necessity ordains it; be not wroth to hear it.

PH. I am lost, hapless one,—betrayed! What hast thou done unto me, stranger? Restore my bow at once!

927 εἰ. While Philoctetes makes this appeal, Neoptolemus stands with averted face (935), still holding the bow. Despairing anguish could not be more pathetically expressed than by the transitions from imprecation to entreaty, and from entreaty to the half-soliloquy in which he imagines the future (952).

T. 1522: formerly, on Eur. Med.

927 πῦρ, the symbol of a ruthless destroyer. Neoptolemus is leaving utter desolation behind him. The image is one which Lemnos itself might well suggest (cp. 800 n.). The combination of πῦρ with δαῖμα ('monster') curiously recalls a passage in the Lysistrata (which appeared two years before this play), 1014 f. οὐδὲν ἔστι θηρίον γυναικὸς ἀμαχώτερον, | οὐδὲ πῦρ, οὐδ' ὧδ' ἀναιδὴς οὐδεμία πόρδαλις. Elsewhere πῦρ is a figure for warlike rage, as Il. 20. 371 τῷ δ' ἐγὼ ἄντλος εἰμι, καὶ εἰ πυρὶ χεῖρας ἔοικε: or, generally, for an irresistible bane, as Eur. fr. 432 ἀντὶ πυρὸς γὰρ ἄλλο πῦρ· μείζον ἐβλάστομεν γυναῖκες πολλὸν δυσμαχώτερον. Cp. Hor. C. 4. 4. 42 Dirus per urbes Afer ut Italas, | Ceu flamma per taedas etc. Tennyson: 'The children born of thee are fire and sword.'

πᾶν δαῖμα, 'utter monster?' As ἡ πᾶσα βλάβη (622), said of a man, is equiv. to ὁ πᾶς βλάβη (ἄν), so here πᾶν δαῖμα is equiv. to πᾶς δαῖμα. The latter would describe the man as effaced; the former describes the δαῖμα as perfect; and thus the sense is not affected by the assimilation of the adj. πᾶς to the subst. But we cannot compare Ar. Th. 787 ὡς πᾶν ἔσμεν κακὸν ἀνθρώποις, καὶ ἡμῶν ἔστιν ἅπαντα, | ἐρίδες, νείκη, στάσις, ἀργαλέα κ.τ.λ., since there the sense is, 'every sort of ill,' not, 'utter ill.' For δαῖμα cp. Eur. H. F. 700 πέρας δαίματα θηρῶν.

πανουργίας...τέχνημα, 'a work of art in πανουργία (defining gen.);—i.e., a man in whom πανουργία assumes its subtlest form; not, 'a work of art produced by (personified) Πανουργία' (like Shakespeare's, 'Confusion now hath made his masterpiece,' Macb. 2. 3. 71). τέχνημα could not stand for τεχνίτης, 'contriver' of πανουργία, as Nauck implies by comparing Hor. Epod. 17. 35 (of Canidia) cales venenis officina Colchicis. For the neut. noun, cp. ἄλμα, κρότημα, δάλημα, μίσημα, παιπάλημα, etc. (Ant. 320 n.).

931 τὸν βίον. This verse deserves notice as one of those which indicate the sensitiveness of the Athenian ear to accent. For if βίον could have been mistaken for βῶν, the effect would have been as unhappy as when the actor pronounced γαλήν' too much like γαλήν (Ar. Ran. 304).—Cp. 1282.

PH. Thou fire, thou utter monster, thou hateful masterpiece of subtle villainy,—how hast thou dealt with me,—how hast thou deceived me! And thou art not ashamed to look upon me, thou wretch,—the suppliant who turned to thee for pity? In taking my bow, thou hast despoiled me of my life. Restore it, I beseech thee,—restore it, I implore thee, my son! By the gods of thy fathers, do not rob me of my life! Ah me! No—he speaks to me no more; he looks away,—he will not give it up!

O ye creeks and headlands, O ye wild creatures of the hills with whom I dwell, O ye steep cliffs! to you—for to whom else can I speak?—to you, my wonted listeners, I bewail my treatment by the son of Achilles:

Wecklein conj. ἀνακλαύσσομαι: Blaydes ἀποκλαῖσμαι.—Nauck thinks this v. spurious.

932 A dactyl is here followed by a tribrach, as in 1029 we have two tribrachs. In both verses the rhythm marks agitation.

933 θεῶν πατρῶν, the gods of Achilles and Peleus. Cp. O. C. 756 n.—με μὴ ἀφέλῃ: for μὴ followed by α, cp. on 782 n. Either the act. or the midd. is admissible. But a strong reason for preferring the midd. is that Soph. uses it in three other places; and if in 376 there was a metrical motive for ἀφαιρήσαιο, there was none in 1303 for ἀφείλου, or in Ai. 100 for ἀφαιρείσθων. On the other hand, he nowhere uses the active ἀφαιρεῖν. In O. T. 1522, where L has the true ἔλη, some later MSS. have ἔλῃς: and probably ἀφέλῃς in L here is merely a like error.

934 ε. προσφωνεῖ: for the 3rd pers., cp. 910.—ὡς μὴ μεθήσων, as if he did not intend to give up the bow. (If we had οὐ instead of μὴ, the sense would be, 'showing that he does not intend....') For the omission of the object to μεθήσων, cp. 801 (ἐμπρησον).—δρᾶ πάλιν: cp. Il. 21. 415 πάλιν τρέπεν ὅσσε φαεινῷ. Eur. Hec. 343 πρόσωπον ἐμπάλιν | στρέφοντα.

936 ε. λιμένες, bays or creeks, near the cave,—not necessarily implying anchorage: cp. 302 οὐ γὰρ τις ὁρμος ἐστίν (n.). So in Il. 1. 432 the λιμὴν πολυ-

βενθῆς is merely the bay, while the ὁρμος is the anchorage within it (ib. 435).—προβλήτες here = ἀκραι, promontories: in Homer always an adj. (with ἀκταί, etc.). It is curious to note that, just in that part of his epic for which he would naturally have consulted this play, Quintus Smyrnaeus reproduces this use of προβλήτης (10. 175 οὐδὲ νυ τὸν γε | εἰργουσιν προβλήτες).—ξυνουσίαι θηρῶν: for the periphrasis cp. 868.—καταρρώγες, only here: a poet. substitute for ἀπορρώγες (Xen. An. 4. 6. 3 πέτρα ἀπορρώξ).

ἀνακλαῖσμαι, lament aloud. Antiphon Tetr. A. δ. § 1 τὰς...ἀτυχίας ἀνακλαύσασθαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς.—παροῦσι, present with me as ye are, τοῖς εἰωθόσιν (παρεῖναι), ye, who are wont to be so. In freely rendering these words, 'my wonted companions,' we must remember that παροῦσι is not a subst. (like θεαταῖς or μάρτυσι): i.e., we could not say, οἱ εἰωθότες παρόντες, meaning, 'my wonted companions.' That would be possible only if παρῶν had acquired a definitely substantival use (like ἄρχων). Thus in Thuc. 7. 75 οἱ ζῶντες καταλειπόμενοι is not 'the living remnant,' but 'those who were left behind alive' (ζῶντες κατελείποντο).

942 προσθεῖς L. Dübner thinks that this has been made from προσθεῖς, and Campbell indicates the same view, though doubtfully ('προθεῖς L?'). But προσθεῖς is wholly in the writing of the 1st hand. The supposition that he inserted σ after writing προ θεῖς seems excluded by the length of the space between ο and θ,—even allowing for his occasional eccentricities in this respect (cp. O. C., Introd. p. xlv). If, then, he first intended to write προσθεῖς, the present first σ of προσθεῖς must have been his inchoate θ: but there is no trace of erasure. It appears improbable, therefore, that he ever meant anything else than προσθεῖς.—προθεῖς 1, Ald., Turnebus, Brunck, Herm., Wunder. 944 θέλει] L points thus; and most of the recent edd. give either a colon or a full stop. Seyffert, whom Cavallin follows, gives a comma (connecting φήνασθαι . . ὡς . . ἄγει): Blaydes, taking the same view, prints θέλει without any stop. 945 ἐλὼν...ἐκ βίας μ'] ἐλὼν μ' (sic) . .

941 ε. ὁμόσας, by giving his promise (517), though no formal oath had been exacted (811).—προσθεῖς, having added the pledge of the hand (813) to his word. So fr. 428 ὄρκου δὲ προστεθέντος (added to the ψιλὸς λόγος, cp. O. C. 651 n.) ἐπιμελεστέρα | ψυχὴ κατέστη. The v. l. προσθεῖς is weaker, and strange as a substitute for προτείνας (cp. 1292): it is not adequately defended by Eur. Hec. 66 βραδύπουν | ἡλυσιν ἀρθρων προτιθείσα. Cp. Xen. An. 3. 2. 4 (the Persian king) αὐτὸς ὁμόσας ἡμῖν, αὐτὸς δεξιᾶς δούς, αὐτὸς ἐξαπατήσας συνέλαβε τοὺς στρατηγούς.

943 ἱερὰ sc. δῶτα, sacred as the bow is: because it had been given by Apollo to Heracles, himself now a god (728). Cp. 198 τὰ θεῶν ἀμάχητα βέλη: 657.—τοῦ Ζηνὸς Ἡρακλέους, gen. of ὁ Ζηνὸς Ἡρακλῆς, the bow, once, of Heracles son of Zeus. I do not take ἱερὰ with this gen., because, though the bow may fitly be called 'sacred,' it cannot be called 'sacred to Heracles' without straining the natural sense of ἱερός τιος. Rather τοῦ Ζ. Ἡρ. is an indignant development of ἱερὰ:—'he has stolen my bow,—a sacred one,—the bow of Heracles.'—For τοῦ Ζ. Ἡρακλ., cp. O. C. 623 γὰρ Διὸς Φοῖβος, Aí. 172 ταυροπόλα Διὸς Ἀργεμῖς (without art.).

944 ε. φήνασθαι: the aor. midd. of the simple φαίνω occurs nowhere else; nor is there any other place where any part of the simple midd. φαίνομαι is trans., 'to show.' (ἀπεφηνάμην is frequent.) The poet prob. meant φήνασθαι here to be a little more than φῆναι,—i.e., 'to show for his own glory,' 'to display.' The object to φήνασθαι is τὰ τόξα only. It would be awkward to understand (with Nauck) ἐμὲ καὶ τὰ τόξα: and the display of the captive is implied in the next vv.

Seyffert, placing only a comma after θέλει, and reading κοῦχ ὡς for κοῦκ οἶδ' in 946, understands:—'He wishes to boast (φήνασθαι, gloriare de se praedicare) among the Argives that (ὡς 945) he is bringing me by force, a strong man whom he has taken, and not as it were a dead man whom he is slaying' (κοῦχ ὡς ἐναίρων νεκρὸν). But the awkwardness of this conjectural κοῦχ ὡς is intolerable, when ὡς in 945 is to mean 'that.' Further, it is clearly essential to the force of the passage that there he swore to convey me home,—to Troy he carries me: he clinched his word with the pledge of his right hand,—yet hath he taken my bow,—the sacred bow, once borne by Heracles son of Zeus,—and keeps it, and would fain show it to the Argives as his own.

He drags me away, as if he had captured a strong man, —and sees not that he is slaying a corpse, the shadow of a vapour, a mere phantom. In my strength he would not have taken me,—no, nor as I am, save by guile. But now I have been tricked, unhappy that I am. What shall I do? Nay, give it back,—return, even now, to thy true self!

ἐκ βίας μ' L. Here, as elsewhere, a true accent in L points to the remedy for a false reading; i.e., the first μ' should be deleted. L has not ἐλὼν μ', as has been reported: but the accent on ὦ is little more than a dot,—as it is also on ἰσχυρὸν in this v., and repeatedly elsewhere. A comparison with οἶδ' in v. 946 will show the difference. Cp. 1079. (Autotype facsimile, p. 90 A, two lowest ll.)—ἐλὼν . . ἐκ βίας μ' B, K (as corrected), Suid. (s.v. κακοπνέστατον): ἐλὼν μ' . . ἐκ βίας ἀγει A, with the rest. 946 κούκ οἶδ'] οὐκ οἶδ' Suidas s.v. κακοπνέστατον: but καὶ οὐκ οἶδ' s.vv. καπνοῦ σκιδ.—Seyffert gives κούκ ὡς (see comment.). 948 ἐπεὶ οὐδ'] Triclin. wrote ἐπεὶ γ' οὐδ' (without omitting ἀν). 949 με δρᾶν L, with most MSS.: ποιεῖν A, Harl. 950 ἄλλ' ἀπόδος L, and so the rest, except V², which has ἀπόδος σύ γ'. ἄλλ' was restored by Turnebus. Other conjectures are ἀπόδος, δός (A. Seyffert): ἀπόδος νιν (Blaydes).—ἐν σαυτῷ L: ἐν σαυτοῦ A (which Nauck prefers), and so Brunck.

should be a full stop (or colon) at θελε. Verse 945 is an indignant amplification of 941, ἐς Τροίαν μ' ἀγει. 'He is taking me by force, I say, as if he had captured (ὡς ἐλὼν) a strong man,' etc.

946 ε. κούκ οἶδ'. Neoptolemus knows, of course, that Ph. is feeble. But these words mean that, in taking Ph. to Troy, N. does not realise what he is doing; he will not gain a triumph, but merely extinguish a flickering life. As this speech wavers between curses and prayers, so it vacillates between denunciation of the youth's cruel guile (926 f.), and something like pity for his thoughtless folly. Cp. 1010.—ἐναίρων νεκρόν: cp. Αντ. 1030 τὸν θανόντ' ἐπικταίνει (n.).—καπνοῦ σκιδ: Αντ. 1170 τᾷλλ' ἐγὼ καπνοῦ σκιάς | οὐκ ἀν πριαμῃν (n.).

950 ἄλλ', though only conjectural (cr. n.), is confirmed by the fact that elsewhere also the hortative is combined with the limiting ἀλλά: see 1040 f.: *O. The loss of ἄλλ' before ἀπόδος here may have been due to a reminiscence of 932.—ἄλλὰ νῦν: cp. El. 411 συγγένεσθ' γ' ἄλλὰ νῦν.—ἐν σαυτῷ γενεοῦ: *Xen. So Her. 1. 119 οὐτε ἐξεπλάγη ἐντὸς τε ἑωυτοῦ γίνεται, 'he did not lose his presence of mind, but mastered his feelings.' The simple gen. of the reflex. pron. is similarly used, O. C. 660 (n.): Dem. or. 2 § 30 (which confirms ἐτι here): δεῖ δὴ... ὁμῶν αὐτῶν ἐτι καὶ νῦν γενομένων κ.τ.λ.—The v. l. ἐν σαυτοῦ here has been supported by *Ar. 952 σχῆμα made from χρῆμα in L. 953 εἴσειμι] ἔσειμι Suid., s.v. αἴθις.—πρὸς σέ L. 954 αὖ θανοῦμαι MSS.: schol. in L, γρ. ἀνανοῦμαι, ἀντὶ τοῦ ξηρανθῆσομαι.

956 τοῖσιδ' L (sic, not τοισιδ'), corrected from τοῖσιν by the 1st hand. The rest have τοῖσιδ' (as Harl.), τοισιδ' (A), or τοῖσδε γ' (B). Burges and Wecklein conj. τοῖσδ' ἔτ', should read either ἐθ' αὐτοῦ or ἐν αὐτῷ. In Plat. Charm. 155 D οὐκέτ' ἐν ἑμᾶντοῦ ἦν, other readings are ἐπ' ἑμᾶντοῦ and ἐν ἑμᾶντῷ; the last is prob. right.

951 σιωπᾶς: cp. O. C. 1271 τί σιγᾶς; οὐδέν εἰμ', am as dead: O. C. 393 δτ' οὐκέτ' εἰμὶ, τηνικαὐτ' ἀρ' εἰμ' ἀνὴρ;

952 ὦ σχῆμα πέτρας δίπυλον, not διπύλου, since σχῆμα-πέτρας forms one notion: cp. Ant. 794 νεῖκος ἀνδρῶν ἔξναιμον.—The word σχῆμα, in such a periphrasis, usu. denotes stateliness (as in Eur. Alc. 911 ὦ σχῆμα δόμων, and so Hec. 619 ὦ σχήματ' οἴκων): here it marks the distinctness of the form present to his thoughts (like σῶμα...θηρὸς in O. C. 1568). Alike in bodily and in mental suffering, the outlines of surrounding objects become vividly stamped upon the mind. Cp. Byron, Prisoner of Chillon (stanza x): 'But then by dull degrees came back | My senses to their wonted track; | I saw the dungeon walls and floor | Close slowly round me as before.'

953 The MSS. and edd. give πρὸς σέ here: but πρὸς σε is surely required by the sense. There is no emphasis on the pron. (as if the cave were contrasted with some other abode). The stress is on ψιλός: his former life in the cave, when he had the bow, is contrasted with the life now before him.—ψιλός: cp. O. C. 1029 οὐ ψιλὸν οὐδ' ἄσκειον (n.).

ανῷ βίον. This is one of the rare instances in which a true reading, lost to the text of L, has been preserved by the schol.: cp. Ant. 40, 235.

955 2. πτηνὸν (cp. 288)...ὀρειβάτην (cp. 937): the epithets are not merely ornamental; they suggest the distance of the prey, and so the helplessness of the unarmed man.—τοισιδ', if right, is the only example of this Ionic form in Soph.; nor is there any in Aesch. In Eur. Med. 1295, where the MSS. have τοῖσιν or τοῖσδε γ', Canter gave τοῖσιδ', which Elms. wrote τοισιδ' (comparing τοῖσδε): Wecklein there, as here, conjectures τοῖσδ' ἔτ' (Ars Soph. em. p. 33); though here, in his ed., he keeps τοισιδ'. The question here is,—Does L's τοῖσιδ', corrected by the 1st hand from τοῖσιν, point rather to τοισιδ' or to τοῖσδ' ἔτ'? To the former, I think. If τοῖσδ' ἔτ' had been the original reading, the unusual form τοῖσιδ' would hardly have supplanted it. The accent proves nothing, for the epic τοῖσδεσσι used to be written τοῖσδεσσι.

957 παρέξω δαίτα (τούτοις) ὑφ' ὧν ἔφερβ.: cp. O. T. 1362 ὁμογενῆς δ' ἀφ' ὧν ἔφυν. Xen. M. 1. 2. 6 διαλέγεσθαι παρ' ὧν ἂν λάβοιεν τὸν μισθὸν (i. e. τοῖσις παρ' ὧν).

Wunder proposes ἀφ' ὧν, objecting that ὑφ' ὧν implies active ministrations, 'as by a nurse.' It is true that τρέφομαι

What sayest thou? Silent? Woe is me, I am lost!

Ah, thou cave with twofold entrance, familiar to mine eyes, once more must I return to thee,—but disarmed, and without the means to live. Yes, in yon chamber my lonely life shall fade away; no winged bird, no beast that roams the hills shall I slay with yonder bow; rather I myself, wretched one, shall make a feast for those who fed me, and become a prey to those on whom I preyed; alas, I shall render my life-blood for the blood which I have shed,—the victim of a man who seemed innocent of evil! Perish!—no, not yet, till I see if thou wilt still change thy purpose;—if thou wilt not, mayest thou die accurs'd!

and so Blaydes. 957 ὄφ' ὦν] Wunder conj. ἀφ' ὦν. 958 καί μ'] καμ' Brunck. —πρόσθε made from πρόσθεν in L.—Purgold rejects this v. 961 μάθοιμ' εἰ καί] Blaydes conj. μάθοιμεν (or μάθοιμ' σ', or μάθοιμ' ἐτ') εἰ: C. Walter, μάθοιμ' εἰ μή.

ὀπό τινος properly refers to the nurse, while the source of nourishment is denoted by τινί, ἀπό τινος, or ἐκ τινος (cp. 535). But here Ph. is poetically saying that he had forced the beasts to become his τροφεῖς,—as he will now be theirs; and so ὀπό is right. ἀπό would also be right, but tamer.

958 καί μ', not καμ', because the contrast between ἐθήρων and θηράσονται suffices. Cp. 47 n.

959 εἰ ῥύσιον is what one 'draws to oneself,' as spoil, or by way of security (O. C. 858 n.), or in reprisal. φόνον φόνον... ῥύσιον τέλωσ=I shall pay (to the beasts) my life-blood, taken by them in reprisal for life-blood (φόνου, gen. of the price or equivalent). Cp. Polyb. 4. 53 ῥύσια κατήγγειλαν τοῖς Ῥοδίοις, 'formally threatened them with reprisals' (for bloodshed).—τέλωσ, ἔτεισα, was the Attic spelling in the poet's time, as inscrr. prove: O. T. 810 (2nd ed.).—τοῦ δοκούντος, partic. of the imperf. (ὅς ἐδόκει): cp. O. T. 835 πρὸς τοῦ παρόντος n.: O. C. 1565 n.: Ant. 1192.—οὐδὲν εἰδέναι κακόν, not, 'to have no evil sentiment' (like the epic ἦνια εἰδώς, etc.), but simply, 'to know no evil': cp. Ant. 301 δυσσέβειαν εἰδέναι (n.).

961 εἰ δλοιο—μήπω. The mere fact that δλοιο comes first means that the curse does pass his lips,—though it is instantly qualified by μήπω. Hence the effect of the Greek is not like this—'I say not yet, Mayest thou perish': but rather;—'Perish!—no, not yet,' etc. Just so in Eur. Med. 83 Γλοιο μὲν μή δεσπότης γάρ ἐστ' ἐμός, 'curse him—I may not,' etc. (In Soph. Tr. 383 δλοιοτο μή τι πάντες κ.τ.λ., the context is different.)—πρὶν μάθοιμ': the optat. is due to δλοιο: cp. 325 n.: Tr. 655 μή σταλή... πρὶν ἀνύσειε.

εἰ καὶ πάλιν. Nauck, referring to Porson's note on Eur. Phoen. 1464 (= 1450 Dind.)—as to which, see Appendix—says that καί cannot be right; and on that assumption various emendations have been proposed. The defence of the metre turns on the distinction between two classes of monosyllables: (1) those which count as belonging to the words after them, viz., the article; prepositions; εἰ, ἦ, καί, μή, οὐ, ὥς; and the interrogatives, τίς, πῶς, ποῦ, ποῖ, πῇ: (2) those which count as belonging to the words before them, viz., all enclitics, and such other words as cannot begin a sentence. Since εἰ and καί are both of the first class, εἰ καὶ πάλιν is metrically equivalent to a quadrisyllable like αἰρούμενον, and therefore the rule against a final cretic does not apply. On the other hand such an ending as πρὶν μάθοιμ' οὐν καὶ πάλιν would be wrong, because οὐν is a monosyllable of the second class.—καί closely with πάλιν: cp. Plat. Menex. 249 Εἴνα καὶ ἀδελφί σοι... ἀπαγγέλλω. This seems better than to take it with μετόσεις ('if thou wilt indeed change'). πάλιν μετόσεις is pleonastic, since Ph. does not now suppose that N.'s purpose was ever honest: cp. 1270: Thuc. 2. 13 μή ἐλδῶσιν ἀντικαταστήσαι πάλιν.

969 ε. μήποτ', though it belongs to λιπεῖν, can be prefixed to ὠφελον because the whole phrase is felt as a wish: so Od. 11. 548 ὥς δὲ μὴ ὠφελον νικᾶν. In Tr. 997 the inf. has its due precedence: ἦν μή ποτ' ἐγὼ προσιδεῖν ὁ τάλας | ὠφελον δοῖσιν.—Σκύρον: 240 n.

Other interpretations are: (1) δοῦς=δοῦς σεαυτὸν, 'yielding to others' (than the κακοὶ ἄνδρες),—i.e., to Philoctetes himself. The objection here is the use of δοῦς. Eur. Phoen. 21, ὁ δ' ἤδονῃ δούς, is the only extant example of this usage in the classical period, and there it denotes self-abandonment to impulse; a tone which was apparently associated with it by Alciphron also, when he wrote δρόμῳ δοῦς φέρεσθαι (3. 47), me in pedes coniciens. (2) Reading ἀλλοις σε δοῦς: 'having allowed thyself to be overruled by others' (i. e., by Ph.). But this phrase implies relations of confidence and friendship (cp. 84): it does not suit the stern and cold admonition which these verses convey. (3) With Dindorf's οἷα (which he does not explain) the obvious sense would be, 'having given others their due,'—an anticipation of τάμὰ μοι μεθεῖς δπλα. The objection to this is that ἀλλοις then becomes strange, since Ph. is no longer contrasted with bad advisers, but is merely the recipient of the bow.

974 We are to suppose that Odysseus,—disquieted when he found that the ἔμπορος (627) was not quickly followed by N.,—had set out to inquire into the cause of the delay. From a place of concealment close to the scene he has overheard the last part of the conversation, and now, at the critical moment, he springs forward. The abruptness of his entrance is marked by the divided verse (ἀντιλαβή).

988 Hermann proposed either στείχειν ἄμ' αὐτοῖς, ἥ στελοῦσιν οἷδε σε, or στείχειν ἄμ', ἥ βία στελοῦσιν οἷδε σε. For αὐτοῖς Blaydes conj. αὐτόν: Nauck, στείχονθ' ὁμαρτεῖν.—ἥ made from ἦ in L. 984 τολμήσατε L, with τολμηστάτε written in marg. by S. The other mss. agree with L, except B and T, which have 988 ἄμ' αὐτοῖς, sc. τοῖς τόχοις. So in 1059 τούτων refers to τὰ δῖπλα in 1056.—στελοῦσί σε, sc. the two attendants of Odysseus, who have entered along with him (cp. 985 ἄδε, and 1003). It should be remembered that, to the spectators, there could be nothing obscure in στελοῦσι, since Odysseus would glance or point at the men. There is no need, then, for the conjectures (cr. n.) which have sought either to introduce οἷδε or to remove αὐτοῖς. Greek idiom readily tolerated either change or ellipse of subject: cp. n. on O. C. 1065 ἀλώσεται.—We cannot well refer αὐτοῖς either to the attendants of Od., or to Neoptolemus and the Chorus. Odysseus would rather say, ἡμῖν. If it is objected that the bow cannot be said στείχειν, the answer is that στείχειν ἄμ' αὐτοῖς is merely a way of saying στείχειν ἅμα τοῖς τὰ τόξα φέρουσι.

984 τολμήσατε=τολμηστάτε, superl. of τολμήεις. Odysseus says in Od. 17. 284 τολμήεις μοι θυμός, ἐπεὶ κακὰ πολλὰ πέπονθα. The contracted form has been much suspected here; Nauck pronounces it corrupt, because (1) tragic dialogue nowhere admits adjectives in αἰς, ἧεις, δεις, and (2) the contr. ἦστας from ἡσστατος is unexampled. As to (1), we may observe that in O. T. 1279 it is almost certain that Soph. used αἱματόεις: Porson there conjectured αἱματοῖσος (for αἱματος): Heath, with greater probability, αἱματοῦς. As to (2), it is true that there is no other instance of this contr. in a superlative; but there are epic examples of the same contr. in the positive: Od.

7. 110 τεχνῆσαι, restored by Bekker from τεχνῆσαι (schol. τεχνήεσαι, τεχνιτίδες): Il. 18. 475 καὶ χρυσὸν τιμῆντα καὶ ἀργυρον (where no emend. is probable). I do not add Il. 9. 605 οὐκέθ' ὁμῶς τιμῆς ἔσσαι: for, though we cannot read ὁμῶς τιμῆς, I would suggest that the change of one letter will restore the true reading, viz. ὁμῆς τιμῆς: and C. A. Lobeck, while conceding that Florian Lobeck (Quaest. Ion. p. 8) used 'too great severity' in condemning τολμήστατος, agrees with him in pointing out that such a contraction as τεχνῆς for τεχνήεις cannot be safely inferred from τεχνήσσα for τεχνήεσσα (Pathol. 1. 343). This consideration is a fresh argument against Hermann's conj. χαλαρῆς in O. T. 1279: and it also reminds us that τολμήστατος does not imply τολμῆς. The example of Oppian (Cyneg. 2. 140 ἀργῆντα χαλινά) shows that late poets did not shrink from this contraction. In Pindar we find αἰγλάεντα (P. 2. 10), ἀλκάνεντας (O. 9. 77), ἀργάνεντα (O. 13. 69), φωνάνεντα (O. 2. 93), with synizesis of ae; though recent edd. no longer write αἰγλᾶντα, etc. On the whole, I believe that Soph. would have felt that he had sufficient poetical warrant for τολμήσατε. No emendation seems possible which is at once tolerable in itself, and such as to account for the tradition. τολμῆστατε was a worthless conjecture. Such forms as κλεπτίστατος, φαρμακίστατος always imply a positive in -ης or -ος, and occur only in Comedy or in late prose.

The mss. exhibit three modes of writing: (1) with crasis, μήρπης, as L: (2) with prodelision of ε, μη ῥπης, as A (1st hand): (3) with elision of η, μ' ἔρπης, as Vat.—Brunck wrote μη ῥπης: Hermann, μη ῥπης.—Wecklein adds γ' to ἐρπης (as Blaydes also proposed). 988 O. Hense rejects this v. 989 Ζεὺς ἐσθ' Nauck and Blaydes, rightly: Ζεὺς ἐσθ' L and most edd. 990 Ζεὺς δ' ὦ L (the δ' having been added by S), K.

coalescence of final η with an aspirated ε or α is extremely rare: Ar. Ach. 828 εἰ μὴ ἐτέρωσε (cp. Kan. 64, Lys. 736): Philémon Παρεῖσιων 3 ἡ ἀμάρτυμα τί;—The addition of γ' to ἐρπης is plausible: but the placid answer is perhaps more effective without it: cp. 105.

Antimachus fr. 6 Ἡφαίστου φλογὶ ἐκελον, ἦν ῥα τιτύσκει | δαίμων ἀκροτάτας δρεος κορυφῇσι Μοσύχλου. We need not suppose, with the schol., that the epithet refers directly to Hephaestus working at his forge within the mountain. When hurled by Zeus from Olympus, Hephaestus fell on Lemnos, and was there tended by the Συντίες (Il. 1. 593). The isle was sacred to him,—Ἡφαίστω...γαϊῶν πολὺ φιλότατη (Od. 8. 284): κραναὸν πέδον Ἡφαίστοιο (Dionys. Perieget. 522): Vulcania Lemnos (Valerius Flaccus 4. 440: cp. Ov. Fast. 3. 82). The chief seat of his worship was the town of Hephaestia, situated on the northern inlet (now the bay of Purnia).

The Lemnians had an early repute as workers in iron: Tzetzes on Lycophr. 460 Λήμνιοι, ὡς φησὶν Ἑλλάδικος, εὖρον ὀπλοποιῶν. The local cult and the local industry of Lemnos were both expressed by its name Αἰθάλεια ('sooty'), acc. to Polybius ap. Steph. Byz. s. v. Αἰθάλη. The same name was given to Ilva (Elba), on account of its iron-stone.

988 εἰ...ἀπαξέται: εἰ with fut. ind. is oft. thus used, where indignation is implied: cp. n. on 376: Lys. or. 12 § 15 οὐκ ἐλεοῦντες...τὰ τεῖχη, εἰ πεσείται, οὐδὲ κηδόμενοι τῶν νεῶν, εἰ...παραδοθήσονται.—τῶν σῶν: τὰ σά, the precincts of Lemnos and her ἐγχώριοι θεοί.

989 f. Ζεὺς. Philoctetes has appealed to the local deities of Lemnos. Odysseus retorts that Zeus is above them all, and that Zeus (by his oracle) has given the behest which is now being executed.—ἔν' εἰδῆς, here like 'let me tell thee,'—with a dictatorial tone. Schneidewin cp. Od. 2. 111 σοὶ δ' ὥδε μνηστήρες ὑποκρίνονθ', ἵνα εἰδῆς | αὐτὸς σὺ θυμῷ, εἰδῶσι δὲ πάντες Ἀχαιοί.

991 μῖσος: cf. Ant. 760 ἀγετε τὸ μῖσος—καὶ ἐξανευρίσκες, 'dost indeed invent' (not, 'dost invent besides,' i. e., πρὸς τοῖς ἐργοῖς): cp. 234 φεῦ τὸ καὶ λαβεῖν: and so in a question expressing surprise, O. T. 1120 ποιὸν ἄνδρα καὶ λέγεις;—The compound ἐξανευρίσκω (like ἐξαφορᾶν in O. C. 1648) is otherwise strange to classical Greek, but appears to have been common later: Wyttenbach, in his Index to Plutarch (p. 595), quotes eight instances of it from the Moralia. The inf. λέγειν is epexeg. ('for thyself to say'): we cannot compare O. T. 120 ἐν γὰρ πόλλ' ἂν ἐξεύροι μαθεῖν (n.). Perhaps it should be λέγων.

994 ΦΙ. οὐ φημί. ἐγωγε. ΟΔ. φημί (corrected from φημί) L. And so the later MSS. The reading in the text is Gernhard's. Wakefield had already given ἐγωγε to ΟΔ.—πειστέον 1: πιστέον L. 995 δούλους made from δούλος by 1st hand in L. 997 Nauck conj. ἀριστεύσιν. 999 οὐδέποτε γ' οὐδέποτε δ' Γ.—

χρηῖ χρηῖ L, made from χρῆ by S.—με γε Γ.—παθεῖν L has μ written above π.

992 προτείνων, as in σκῆψιν προτείνω, putting the gods forward as authority for thy deeds: ψευδεῖς τίθης, 'thou makest them false,—i.e., 'responsible for thy fraud? (Not, 'makest them false prophets,' because Ph. will never go to Troy.) For the art. with the repeated word, cp. O. C. 277 καὶ μὴ θεοὺς τιμώντες εἰτα τοὺς θεοὺς | μοῖραις ποιεῖσθε μηδ' αὐτῶν.

993 ἀληθεῖς, because their oracle will be fulfilled: Ph. will be brought to Troy. Thus Od. parries the thrust given by ψευδεῖς τίθης.—ἡ δ' ὁδὸς: cp. El. 1501 πόλλ' ἀντιφωνεῖς, ἡ δ' ὁδὸς βραδύνεται.

994 οὐ φημί.—ἐγὼ δὲ φημί. So Gernhard. The MSS. have οὐ φημί ἐγωγε.—φημί. Now, φημί could stand thus alone, if it were the answer to a question, φῆς ἡ οὐ φῆς; but not here, where two persons are opposed to each other. Cp. O. C. 840 ΧΟ. χαλᾶν λέγω σοι. ΚΡ. σοὶ δ' ἐγωγ' ὁδοῖ πορεύειν.—πειστέον τάδε=δεῖ πείθεσθαι τάδε. Cp. 1252.

995 ε. ἡμᾶς μὲν: cp. 965. These words show the speaker's bitter sense that, while he is not inferior to his enemy in point of birth, he has been superior to him in such deeds as become an ἐλεύθερος. It was Odysseus, not Philoctetes, who had gone to Troy only 'when brought under the yoke' (1025).

997 ε. τοῖς ἀρίστοισιν is far better here than τοῖς ἀριστεύουσιν, in which the idea of rank partly obscures that of personal prowess.—κατασκάψαι: cp. O. C. 1421 πάτραν κατασκάψαντι: ib. 1318 κατασκαφῇ...δηώσιν.

999 ε. οὐδέποτε γ': Ar. Pax 109 μὰ τὸν Διόνυσον οὐδέποτε ζῶντός γ' ἐμοῦ.—πᾶν...κακόν: cp. El. 615 χωρεῖν ἂν εἰς πᾶν ἔργον.—γῆς τόδ' αἰπεινὸν βάθρον=τόδε γῆς αἰπεινῆς βάθρον (952), this pedestal of (=consisting in) a steep land, i.e., the island, with its sheer cliffs, on which he is standing. Cp. Ai. 859 ὦ γῆς ἱρὸν οικίας πέδον | Σαλαμῖνος, ὡ πατρίων ἐστίας βάθρον (cp. ib. 135), where, as here, the whole island is the βάθρον.

Such a use of the simple gen. with πίπτειν would be somewhat harsh, were there nothing in the context to explain it; but here the adv. ἀνωθεν, 'from above,' placed between πέτρας and πεσών, prevents any obscurity. (ἀνωθεν cannot be a prep. governing πέτρας, since it could mean only, 'above the rock.') Cp. Tr. 782 (where Lichas is hurled from the cliff) κρατὸς διασπαρέντος αἵματος θ' ὁμοῦ.

1003 ἐξυλλάβετον αὐτόν is far the best correction of L's ἐξυλλάβετ' αὐτόν. The addition of τε to ἐξυλλάβετε was a feeble makeshift, and cannot be excused by assuming that the attendants had taken the initiative, so that their master merely says, 'Yes, seize him.' The use of the dual—'Seize him, you two men'—is the more natural here, since each grasps one of his arms. Cp. O. C. 1437 μέθεσθε δ' ἤδη, χαίρετον γ' (as here, in 1054, we have the plur.): so in Ar. Plut. 76 the imperat. dual ἀκούετον follows μέθ- εσθε in 75. Other Attic examples of the imperat. dual are Ar. Av. 107 ἐκπατον: Plat. Euthyd. 294 C ἐπιδείξατον. In Homer it is frequent (Il. 1. 322; 7. 279; 8. 186, 191; 20. 115; 23. 443; Od. 4. 60).

1004 εἰ χεῖρες: his arms have been seized by the two attendants, one of whom stands on each side of him: but we are not to infer from 1016 (συνδῆσας) that he was actually bound. Cp. 1054. Heracles in Tr. 1089 uses a similar apostrophe; ὦ χεῖρες, χεῖρες κ.τ.λ.—ἐν χρεῖα: for ἐν, denoting circumstance, cp. 185 n.—συνθηρώμεναι: cp. Ant. 432 σὺν δέ νιν | θηρώμεθ' εὐθύς.

1006 ὃ μηδὲν ὑγιές...φρονών. The phrase οὐδὲν ὑγιές was a common one in Attic, and is often used by Eur., though never by Aesch., and only here by Soph. It is thrice combined with φρονεῖν by Eur.,—twice to denote malevolence; fr. 496 οὐδὲν δοκοῦσιν ὑγιές ἀνδράσιν φρονεῖν: fr. 821 ὡς ὑγιές οὐδὲν φασὶ μητριάς φρονεῖν | νόθοισι παῖσιν: and in Androm. 448 to describe the dishonesty of Spartans,—ἐλικτὰ κούδεν ὑγιές ἀλλὰ πᾶν πέριξ | φρονούντες.—μηδὲν ὑγιές, nothing of a sound kind,—the generic μή: cp. 409 μηδὲν δίκαιον, n. of μηδὲν (instead of οὐδὲν) here would probably sound the more natural, since the same combination oft. occurred in phrases with the inf.: as Eur. Ph. 200 ἡδονὴ δέ τις | γυναιξὶ μηδὲν ὑγιὲς ἀλλήλαις λέγειν: fr. 660 ἄλλω δ' ἀρέσκει μηδὲν ὑγιὲς ἐκ φρενῶν | λέγοντι πείθειν τοὺς πέλας τόλμη κακῇ: Ar. Plut. 50 τὸ μηδὲν ἀσκεῖν ὑγιὲς.

1007 οἷ αὖ μ' ὑπήλθες: Odysseus had 'stolen upon' Ph. before, when he contrived that he should be left on Lemnos: cp. 264, 407 ff. Thus οἷ αὖ μ' is the 'best and simplest correction of L's οἶά μ'. But Nauck is too hasty in saying that ὡς μ' is impossible, because the adv. was always οἶον or οἶα. In Ar. Vesp. 1362 f., certainly, ἐν αὐτὸν τωθάσω νεανικῶς | ὡς ποθ' οἶτος ἐμὲ πρὸ τῶν μυστηρίων, the v. l. οἶος is tenable: but in At. 923 οἶος ὦν ὡς ἔχεις is beyond fair suspicion. And in Apoll. Rhod. 4. 786 ὡς is much more probable than οἶη.—ὑπήλθες: cp. O. T. 386 λάθρα μ' ὑπελθὼν: cp. ὑποτρέχειν. Ovid Ars amat. 1. 742 Si tibi laudanti credidit, ipse subit ('supplants thee').

1008 πρόβλημα, a screen: Plat. Soph. 261 A (a sophist is δυσθήρευτος), φαίνεται γὰρ οὐν προβλημάτων γέμειν (to have a large supply of outworks), ὧν ἐπειδὴν τι προβάλλῃ, τοῦτο πρότερον ἀναγκαῖον διαμάχεσθαι πρὶν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἐκείνον ἀφικέσθαι.

1009 εἰ ἀνάξιον μὲν σοῦ, too good for thee: cp. οὐκ ἴσος as='greater,' οὐχ ὁμοῖος as='more important': O. T. 810 n. Wakefield cp. Ter. Phorm. 2. 2. 28 te indignas seque dignas contumelias | Numquam cessavit dicere hodie. For the emphatic place of σοῦ, cp. 907 δρᾶς (n.).—οὐδὲν ἦδει πλὴν κ.τ.λ., i.e., 'had no ideas' beyond obedience to orders: a freq. phrase in Comedy (Ar. Av. 19, Ran. 740, etc.).

how hast thou once more stolen upon me, how hast thou snared me,—taking this boy for thy screen, a stranger to me,—too good for thy company, but meet for mine,—who had no thought but to perform thy bidding, and who already shows remorse for his own errors and for my wrongs. But thy base soul, ever peering from some ambush, had well trained him,—all unapt and unwilling as he was,—to be cunning in evil.

And now, wretch, thou purposest to bind me hand and foot, and take me from this shore where thou didst fling me forth, friendless, helpless, homeless,—dead among the living!

Alas!

Perdition seize thee! So have I often prayed for thee. But, since the gods grant nothing sweet to me, thou livest and art glad, while life itself is pain to me, steeped in misery as I am,—mocked by thee and by the sons of Atreus, the two chieftains, for whom thou doest this errand.

ἀφνᾶ. When -εα is preceded by ε, the contr. is -εᾶ, as ἐνδεᾶ: when by ι or υ, it is alternatively -ιᾶ or -ιῆ; -υᾶ or -υῆ. Of the alternative forms, those with ᾶ were the standard Attic down to about 350 B.C.: thus Εὐφνᾶ is attested by an Attic inscription of 356 B.C. Afterwards the forms with ῆ prevailed. Cp. Meisterhans, p. 66, who cites Moeris p. 316: ὕγιᾶ Ἀττικῶς, ὕγιῆ Ἑλληνικῶς.—προῦδδαξεν: cp. 538 προδμαθον (n.).

1016 Ξ. συνδήσας with ἄγειν. He anticipates such an indignity from the fact that the two attendants are still holding his arms (1005).—προύβαλον is an exceptional use of the midd. in this sense:

but cp. Her. 6. 101 ἱππους...ἐξεβάλλοντο (put them ashore). The word is much stronger than ἐξέθηκ' (5), or προθέντες (268): like ἐρριψαν (265), it implies ruthless scorn: cp. Al. 830 μυθῶ κυσὶν πρόβλητος.—ἀπολιν: cp. O. C. 1357 κάθηκας ἀπολιν. To have no πόλις was to be an outcast from human society. It is the Homeric ἀφρήτωρ, ἀθέμιστος, ἀνέστιος (Il. 9. 63).

1022 Ξ. Seyffert puts a comma after ζῶ, and takes σὺν κακοῖς πολλοῖς with γελώμενος ('mocked, in addition to my woes'). This punctuation, he argues, is necessary to the sense; for Ph. means that life itself (a joy to others) is a pain to him; whereas, if σὺν κακοῖς πολλοῖς be joined with ζῶ, Ph. will merely say that his pain consists in the misery of his life. Cavallin adopts this view. The answer to Seyffert's dilemma is, I think, that σὺν κακοῖς πολλοῖς is not merely an adverbial qualification of ζῶ ('live miserably'), but is here equivalent to κακοῖς πολλοῖς συνών ('live,—in company with many woes'). There is no objection to a comma after ζῶ, provided that there be one after τάλας also; but it seems unnecessary. For σὺν, cp. 268 n.—τῶν Ἀτρεῶς...στρατηγῶν: cp. 943 n.

Aesch. Ag. 841 μόνος δ' Ὀδυσσεύς, ὅσπερ οὐχ ἐκὼν ἔπλει, | ξενυχθεὶς ἔτοιμος ἦν ἐμοὶ σειραφόρος. Odysseus was in Ithaca when he was called to the war, and feigned madness. Palamedes, the envoy of the Greeks, found him ploughing with an ox and an ass yoked together, and placed the infant Telemachus in front of the plough; when Odysseus betrayed his sanity by stopping. As in the case of Solomon's judgment, the typically shrewd man relied on his conviction that art could be surprised by nature. Cp. Lycophron 815 ff., where Cassandra says to Odysseus, ὦ σχέτλι', ὡς σοι κρεῖσσον ἦν μίμνειν πάτρα (in Ithaca) | βοληματοῦντι, ... | πλασταῖσι λύσσης μηχαναῖς οἰστρομένῃ. Tzetzes ad loc., and Hyginus Fab. 95, tell the story. In Ovid Met. 13. 34 Ajax contrasts himself with Odysseus:—An quod in arma prior nulloque sub indice veni | Arma neganda mihi? Potiorque videbitur ille | Ultima qui cepit, detrectavitque furor | Militiam facto: donec sollertior isto, | Sed sibi inutilior, timidi commenta relexit | Naupliades animi, vitataque traxit in arma? Sophocles wrote an Ὀδυσσεὺς Μαινόμενος on this theme. According to Od. 24.

115 ff. Agamemnon and Menelaus brought Odysseus from Ithaca to Troy by persuasion.

1027 ἐπὶ ναυσὶ, the 'sociative' use of the dat., to denote attendant circumstance: cp. El. 704 ἐκτός ἐξ Αἰτωλίας | ξανθαῖσι πῶλοις. Xen. An. 3. 2. 11 ἐλθόντων...Περσῶν...παμπληθεὶ στόλῳ. The poet follows Il. 2. 718 τῶν δὲ Φιλοκτήτης ἦρχεν, τόξων ἐν εἰδός, | ἐπὶ ρῶν.

1028 ἔβαλον=προῖβαλον: cp. At. 1333 ἄθᾳπτον...βαλεῖν (and ib. 1309).—ὡς σὺ φῆς κ.τ.λ.: Blaydes (who compares Ar. Th. 801 ἡμεῖς μὲν γὰρ φαμεν ὑμᾶς, | ὑμεῖς δ' ἡμᾶς) asks how Philoctetes could know this. We can only suppose that, before he was put on shore at Lemnos, the decision was announced to him by the Atreidae, who laid the responsibility on Odysseus. It was he who actually put Philoctetes ashore; and, when doing so, he may have cast the blame on his superiors,—as he does in v. 6. The occasional visitors to Lemnos (307) cannot well have been Ph.'s informants, since the Atreidae and Odysseus would not court notoriety for their deed (cp. 257).

1029 ε. ἄγετε, take me away,—referring to the use of physical force; ἀπάγεσθε, carry me with you,—referring to their ulterior purpose. For the midd.,

Yet thou sailedst with them only when brought under their yoke by stratagem and constraint; but I—thrice-wretched that I am—joined the fleet of mine own accord, with seven ships, and then was spurned and cast out—by them, as thou sayest, or, as they say, by thee.

And now, why would ye take me? why carry me with you? for what purpose? I am nought; for you, I have long been dead. Wretch abhorred of heaven, how is it that thou no longer findest me lame and noisome? How, if I sail with you, can ye burn sacrifices to the gods, or make drink-offerings any more? That was thy pretext for casting me forth.

(γρ. ὁμοῦ Γ). ὁμοῦ Gernhard, Seyffert, Wecklein. 1033 πλεύσαντος | Nauck conj. παρόντος (and formerly, φεύγοντος): Burges, πελάσαντος: Pierson, κλαύσαντος: Hartung, στένοντος. Mekler gives ἔξεστ' ἐμέ | λεύσσοντά σ' αἰθεῖν.—ιερά | ἰρά Dindorf. 1034 αὐτῇ | αὐτῇ L. Mollweide rejects this verse.

cp. 613, 988.—οὐδέν ἐμῖ: cp. 951.—τέθηγ' ὅμην, dat. of relation, meaning here, 'so far as it rested with you to kill me.' Cp. O. C. 429 ἀνάστατος | αὐτοῖν ἐπέμφορην (n.): Αἰ. 1128 θεὸς γὰρ ἐκψύζει με, τῷδε δ' οἴχομαι.

1031 ε. σοι, 'in thy sight,' ethic dat.: cp. O. T. 40 κράτιστον πᾶσιν: Αντ. 904 n.—δυσώδης. This word might suggest that it was the presence of Ph. in the same ship which the Greeks found insupportable. But the poet cannot have meant that. Chryse was imagined by him as close to Lemnos (fr. 352); and Ph. would have been put on board one of his own ships (1027). δυσώδης must refer, then, to his presence at the sacrifices in Chryse, which his cries interrupted (cp. 8, n.). Sophocles probably took this touch from the Cypria—the epic prelude to the Iliad—in which it was said that Ph. was bitten at Tenedos, where the Greek warriors were feasting, and then διὰ τὴν δυσσομίαν ἐν Δήμῳ κατελείφθη (Proclus Chrest. p. 475).

πῶς...ἔξεσθ', ὁμοῦ κ.τ.λ. The MSS. have πῶς...εὐξεσθ', ἐμοῦ. For εὐξεσθ' only two senses are possible: (1) 'vow' to sacrifice. The pres. inf. could stand: cp. Aesch. Ag. 933 ἠθῶ θεοῖς δέσας ἂν ὧδ' ἔρδειν τάδε. But here the question is of actual sacrificing, not of vowing to do so at a future time. (2) 'How will ye boast that ye sacrifice?'—a way of saying,

'how will ye be able' to do so. But such a phrase would be peculiarly awkward when the other sense of εὐξεσθε would necessarily be suggested by θεοῖς, αἰθεῖν, σπένδειν. Thus the context condemns εὐξεσθ'. With regard to the conjecture ἔξεσθ' it should be noted that its probability is confirmed by that of the further conjecture, ὁμοῦ instead of ἐμοῦ. The traditional εὐξεσθ' ἐμοῦ might, indeed, have arisen from ἔξεστ' ἐμοῦ, but would have been a still easier corruption of ἔξεσθ' ὁμοῦ. Given θ', the proximity of θεοῖς would suggest to a scribe that ἔξεσθ' must be a blunder for εὐξεσθ'. The corruption of ἔξεσθ' into εὐξεσθ' occurred earlier, we may infer, than that of ὁμοῦ into ἐμοῦ. And this inference is supported by the fact that a tradition of ὁμοῦ as a current v. l. is preserved in Γ, while the only trace of ἔξεσθ' appears to be a correction (prob. conjectural) in V.

Against ἔξεσθ' it has been objected that the fut. is required. But Ph. is ironically repeating what the Greek chiefs said long ago, and is supposing that he is once more their comrade. 'When I have once sailed with you, how can ye sacrifice?' With ὁμοῦ πλεύσαντος, ἐμοῦ is easily understood: cp. Plat. Parm. 137 C ἐμέ γὰρ λέγεις τὸν νεώτατον λέγων. ἀλλ' ἐράτα ὡς ἀποκρινομένου (sc. ἐμοῦ).

1037 ε. μέλει γ': γε emphasises the verb, cp. 660.—ἐπεὶ οὐποτ': for this synizesis, cp. 446 n.—Philoctetes has not found the gods kindly: cp. 254, 452, 1020. But the very fact that Odysseus and his comrade have taken the trouble to visit Lemnos shows that at least the gods have some care for justice. Maimed as Ph. is (ἀνδρὸς ἀθλίῳ), he is not one whom those pitiless warriors would have sought, had not the gods driven the sense of need for him like a goad into their souls. The Greeks must be failing at Troy; and their failure is the proof that the gods are just.

1039 For the place of τι, cp. 104 n.—κέντρον...ἐμοῦ, the sting of need for me. The objective gen. is like that after ἐπιθυμία, since κέντρον, like οἶστρος, was constantly associated with that idea. Plat. Rep. 573 E ὥσπερ ὑπὸ κέντρων ἐλαυνόμενος τῶν...ἐπιθυμιῶν...οἶστρον ('rage'). Eur. Hipp. 39 κέντροις ἔρωτος: ib. 1303 δηχθεῖσα κέντροις ('Ἀφροδίτης'). So an objective gen. can follow οἶστρος when it means οἶστροῦ ἐπιθυμία: An. thol. II. 389. 4 μὴ σέ γ' ἀπειρεσίῳ οἶστρον ἔλη κτεάνων.

1040 θεοὶ τ' ἐπόψιοι, gods who look upon the deeds of men, noting the good and the evil. The name ἐπόψιος was specially given to Zeus,—primarily in reference to the fact that, as ὕψιστος, he was so often worshipped on mountain summits,—as on Parnassus, Cithaeron, Parnes, Hymettus, Ida, etc. Hence his epithets ἐπάκριος, ἀκραιός, and in Boeotia καραῖος.

Thus the invocation of πατρώα γῆ, in connection with ἐπόψιοι, is peculiarly ap-

Miserably may ye perish!—and perish ye shall, for the wrong that ye have wrought against me, if the gods regard justice. But I know that they regard it; for ye would never have come on this voyage in quest of one so wretched, unless some heaven-sent yearning for me had goaded you on.

O, my fatherland, and ye watchful gods, bring your vengeance, bring your vengeance on them all,—at last though late,—if in my lot ye see aught to pity! Yes, a piteous life is mine; but, if I saw those men overthrown, I could dream that I was delivered from my plague.

CH. Bitter with his soul's bitterness are the stranger's words, Odysseus; he bends not before his woes.

OD. I could answer him at length, if leisure served; but now I can say one thing only. Such as the time needs, such am I. Where the question is of just men and good, thou wilt find no man more scrupulous. Victory, however, is my aim in every field,—save with regard to thee: to thee, in this case, I will gladly give way.

propriate for Ph., in whose country Zeus was worshipped on Oeta (cp. 728 n.). The secondary sense of ἐπόψιος—'watching over' human life—is associated with the first by Callimachus in his Hymn to Zeus, 82 ff.: δῶκας δὲ πτολιέθρα φυλασσέμεν· ἴζο δ' αὐτὸς | ἀκρῆς ἐν πτολίεσσιν, ἐπόψιος αἱ τε δίκησι | λαὸν ὑπὸ σκολιῆς, αἱ τ' ἐμπαλιν ἰθύνουσιν. Apoll. Rhod. 2. 1125 ἀντόμεθα πρὸς Ζηνὸς ἐποψίου: and ib. 1182 Ζεὺς αὐτὸς τὰ ἔκαστ' ἐπιδέρεται (as Soph. El. 175 Ζεὺς δὲ ἐφορᾷ πάντα καὶ κρατύνει). As the vindicator of right, Zeus was also called δικαιοσύνης, ἀλάστωρ, τιμωρός. Acc. to Hesych. s. v. ἐπόψιος, the epithet was also given to Apollo. But, next to Zeus, the deity whom ἐπόψιος most directly suggests is Helios πανόπτης,—θεῶν σκοπὸς ἡδὲ καὶ ἀνδρῶν (Hom. hym. 5. 62).

1049 εἰ γὰρ, prefacing the statement: 915.—τοιούτων, 'such or such' a man,—'any given kind' of person:—euphemistic for δολίων, or the like. Such a colloquial use of τοιοῦτος seems quite intelligible, since it could be interpreted by an expressive tone of the voice, or by a slight gesture. (Not, 'such as thou hast described.') It would be grievous to change τοιούτων into πανούργων, as Nauck proposes.—κρίσις, lit., trial, competition (Tr. 266 πρὸς τόξῳ κρίσιν): the usual word would be ἀγών, but euphony would not permit it here.—μου: see n. on 47.

1054 ε. ἄφετε γὰρ αὐτόν κ.τ.λ. The γὰρ confirms ἐκστήσομαι. 'I will yield; for (I now say) 'loose him.' Hence we may render, 'Yes, loose him.' Cp. 1004. —οὐδὲ σοῦ. If we wrote οὐδέ σου, then the stress would fall on προσχρήζομεν. '(We shall leave thee here.) Nor do we need thee.' This is possible. But it seems to extort a little too much from the verb; and σοῦ is also recommended by the contrast with τά γ' ὅπλ' in 1056.

1057 ε. Τεῦκρος: Il. 13. 313 Τεῦκρός θ', ὃς ἄριστος Ἀχαιῶν | τοξοσύνη, ἀγαθὸς δὲ καὶ ἐν σταδίῃ ὕσμνῃ. The words τήνδ' ἐπιστήμην express that skill with the bow was not a regular attribute of the Homeric warrior—whose ordinary weapon was the spear—but the special accomplishment of a few, such as Teucer, Meriones, Philoctetes. Cp. Ai. 1120, where Menelaus tauntingly calls Teucer ὁ τοξότης.—παρ' ἡμῖν. The addition of παρὰ, after πάρεστι, is unusual: but cp. Plat. Phaedr. 243 Ε οὗτος παρὰ σοι μάλα πλοῖον δει πάρεστιν: where Thompson rightly rejects Cobet's proposal (Var. Lect. p. 119) to delete πάρεστιν and write παρὰ σοι. It should be noticed that, both there and here, a slightly different shade of meaning is given by the presence of the prep.: i. e., πάρεστι Τεῦκρος ἡμῖν=simply, 'Teucer is with us': but πάρεστι Τεῦκρος παρ' ἡμῖν='Teucer is available, being with us,'—'Teucer is at hand to serve us.'—So in Plato l. c., 'he is at your command,—quite near you.' παρῆναι παρὰ τινι, though rare, is parallel with ἐνεῖναι ἐν τινι (O. C. 115 f.), and similar to πάρος τινος προτῖθεσθαι (ib. 418).

1058 ε. ἐγὼ θ'. After πάρεστι μὲν Τεῦκρος, the regular constr. would have been παρείμι δὲ ἐγώ. But, having omitted to repeat the verb, the poet has written ἐγὼ θ', since ἐγὼ δ' would now have been awkward. Cp. Ani. 1162 σώσας μὲν... | λαβὼν τε (n.).

μῆδ' ἐπιθύνειν. The Ionic and Epic form lθύνω, though unknown to Comedy or classical prose, occurs in our MSS. of Aesch. and Eur.,—and not in lyrics only. Some edd. now always give εὐθύνω in Trag.; unnecessarily, I think.

After a verb of thinking or saying, οὐ is the ordinary negative with the inf.: but μὴ sometimes occurs (O. T. 1455 n., 2nd ed.). Here the question is, why the second inf. should have μῆδ', when οὐδὲν precedes the other. Two answers are possible. I place first that which seems to me right. (1) οὐδὲν belongs to κάκιον only, and not to κρατύνειν. Thus there is no incongruity between οὐδὲν and μῆδ', since only μῆδ' belongs to an inf. This may be seen by supposing an equivalent phrase substituted for σοῦ κάκιον οὐδέν: e.g., οἶμαι ὁμοία σοι τοῦτων ἂν κρατύνειν, μηδὲ χεῖρον ἐπιθύνειν. Schneidewin cp. Plat. Prot. 319 B ὅθεν δὲ αὐτὸ ἡγοῦμαι οὐ διδασκὸν εἶναι, μῆδ' ὑπ' ἀνθρώπων παρασκευαστὸν ἀνθρώποις, δίκαιός εἰμι εἰπεῖν: where, if οὐ belonged to εἶναι, the immediately following μηδέ would be extremely harsh; while there is no such harshness if οὐ belongs to διδασκὸν only, οὐ-διδασκὸν being equivalent to ἀδύνατον διδάσκεισθαι.

Yes, release him, lay no finger upon him more,—let him stay here.—Indeed, we have no further need of thee, now that these arms are ours; for Teucer is there to serve us, well-skilled in this craft, and I, who deem that I can wield this bow no whit worse than thou, and point it with as true a hand. What need, then, of thee? Pace thy Lemnos, and joy be with thee! We must be going. And perchance thy treasure will bring to me the honour which ought to have been thine own.

PH. Ah, unhappy that I am, what shall I do? Shalt thou be seen among the Argives graced with the arms that are mine?

OD. Bandy no more speech with me—I am going.

(2) The less probable view is that οὐδέν belongs to κρατύνειν, and, in using μῆδ' instead of οὐδ' before ἐπιθύνειν, the writer has merely used the other alternative which οἶμαι left to him. Now, idiom is partly governed by association, and can even be influenced by false analogy. The sequence of οὐ and μῆδέ was most familiar to the Attic ear in a constr. which opposed their clauses to each other (οὐ θάσσαν οἴσεις μῆδ' ἀπιστήσεις ἐμοί;). It seems unlikely, then, that an Attic writer would wantonly have used οὐ...μῆδέ instead of οὐ...οὐδέ in a short sentence where the two negatives were simply coordinate.—Eur. Andr. 586 (quoted by Schneidewin) is not apposite: δρᾶν εὖ, κακῶς δ' οὐ, μῆδ' ἀποκτείνειν βίᾳ: where ἔστι is understood with δρᾶν, and again with οὐ: 'they are thine to benefit, (but not to injure),—and not to slay': i.e., μῆδέ contrasts ἀποκτ. with δρᾶν εὖ, and the words κακῶς δ' οὐ form a parenthesis.

1061 γ. γέρας, the bow, which can be fitly so called because Ph. received it as a reward for good service (670).—ἦν σὲ χρῆν. It is possible to write ἦν σ' ἐχρῆν, as though σὲ (not σε) were elided: cp. 339. But ἦν σὲ χρῆν is here much better, and is favoured by the fact that Soph. has χρῆν in nine other places (430, 1363: O. T. 1184, 1185: El. 529, 579, 1505: Tr. 1133: fr. 104. 5), but ἐχρῆν only once, viz. in fr. 104. 6, where metre prompted it. The form ἐχρῆν, though a product of false analogy (since χρῆν = χρῆ ἦν), was, of course, equally correct in Attic: it is attested by metre in Ar. Eq. 11: Pax 135: Av. 364, 1177, 1201: Ran. 152, 935: Th. 598: Eccl. 19: fr. 110 and 304.

1064 Since ἐν must be considered as belonging to Ἀργείοις, this v. has no caesura either in the 3rd or in the 4th foot: cp. 101, 1369. It may seem strange that the poet did not write ὅπλοις ἐν Ἀργείοισι κοσμηθεὶς φανεί, as Mekler proposes. But the halting rhythm of ὅπλοις κοσμηθεὶς, etc., seems to express the anguish with which Ph. dwells on this bitter thought,—that his bow is to win glory for his enemy. A similar effect of rhythm occurs in Ant. 44, ἧ γὰρ νοεῖς θάπτεω σφ', ἀπόρρητον πόλει; for sailing, a prayer was recited, and libations poured. Cp. Thuc. 6. 32 εὐχὰς δὲ τὰς νομιζόμενας πρὸ τῆς ἀναγωγῆς... ἐποιούντο. Od. 2. 430 θησάμενοι δ' ἄρα δπλα θοῆν ἀνὰ νῆα μέλαιναν | στήσαντο κρητῆρας.

1079 δρμῶμεθον: pres. subjunct. Only two other instances of a 1st pers. dual occur in texts of the classical period: (1) Il. 23. 485 ἡ τρίποδος περιδῶμεθον ἡε λέβητος. Here, while the greater MS. authority supports the dual, one MS. gives περιδῶμεθα: and the hiatus can be defended by the 'bucolic diaeresis,' just as in Il. 5. 484 οἶόν κ' ἡε φέροιεν Ἀχαιοὶ ἡ κεν ἄγοιεν. (2) El. 950 λελείμμεθον: where again one of the minor MSS. has λελείμμεθα. Elmsley denied the existence of such a 1st pers. dual, because it is so rare, and is nowhere required by metre. Bieler (De duali numero, p. 18) pushes this unsafe argument further by pointing out how often Homer and the dramatists abstained from this form where they might have used it. Leaf (on Il. 23. 485) thinks that it can be explained only as due to the analogy of the 2nd dual (ἑ. ε., -μεθον :: -μεθα :: -σθον :: -σθε). But even so, analogy might have produced this form before the time of the dramatists: we cannot assume that it was merely a figment of later grammarians. I should therefore keep δρμῶμεθον here and λελείμμεθον in El. 950; though in Il. 23. 485, considering all the facts, I should prefer περιδῶμεθα.

1081—1217 Second κομμός (cp. 827), taking the place of a third stasimon. 1st strophe, 1081—1101 = 1st antistr. 1102—1122: 2nd str. 1123—1145 = 2nd antistr. 1146—1168. From 1169 to 1217 the verses are without strophic correspondence (ἀνομοῖοστροφά). For the metres see Metrical Analysis.

Philoctetes apostrophises the cave which has so long known his miserable life, and must soon witness his death,—since, now that he has lost his bow, he has no means of procuring food. The Chorus remind him that the fault is his own, as he has chosen to stay in Lemnos; and urge him to come with them to the ship. He passionately refuses, and begs for some weapon with which to kill himself.—Then Neoptolemus enters, followed by Odysseus.

The MSS. have συνοίσει. This has been rendered: (1) 'thou wilt be a fit place for me' to die in,—i.e., good enough. Now, the midd. συμφέρομαι does, indeed, mean 'to agree with' one,—in opinions, or tastes: O. C. 641 n.: Her. 4. 114 οὐκ ἂν ὦν δυναλμεθα ἐκείνῃσι συμφέρεσθαι ('live in harmony with them'). But συνοίσει here could not mean simply, conveniet mihi morienti. (2) 'Thou wilt be profitable to me,'—by giving me a grave. So the first schol.: ἀπολλυμένῳ μοι σύμφορον ἔσει καὶ ὠφέλιμον, καὶ δέξει με ἀποθάνοντα. This version confounds συνοίσει with συνοίσεις. (3) 'Thou wilt be with me,'—simply. This last is impossible. συμφέρομαι never means, or could mean, merely σύνειμι or συνδιᾶγω. Dindorf, who quotes a schol. for this, has not perceived that this schol.,—the second, prefaced by ἡ οὕτω,—is explaining, not συνοίσει, but, manifestly, συνείσει:—σὺν ἐμοὶ ἔσει καὶ ὄψει με ἀποθάνοντα.

1087 f. αὐλῖον: cp. 19 n.—λύπας τὰς ἀπ' ἐμοῦ. Ph. addresses the cave as if it were a living companion, long condemned to endure his presence. (With πληρέστατον cp. what he says of Neopt. in v. 876, βοῆς τε καὶ δυσσομάς γέμων.) Hence λύπας τὰς ἀπ' ἐμοῦ (instead of τὰς ἐμὰς) is fitting,—'the anguish on my part,'—so painful for thee to witness. Cp. O. C. 292 τάνθυμματα...τάπδ σου (n.).

1089 f. τίπτ' αὖ (=1105 ἀνδρῶν), Bothe's correction of τί ποτ' αὖ, has been generally received. As Dind. remarks, Aesch. has twice used this epic τίπτε in lyrics (Ag. 975, Pers. 554).—τὸ κατ' ἄμαρ, daily provision. Cp. Isocr. or. 11 § 39 ἀλῆται καὶ τῶν καθ' ἡμέραν ἐνδεεῖς. Eur. uses this phrase as an adv. ('every day,' Ion 123, El. 182), like τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν (Ar. Eq. 1126 etc.).

into $\pi\alpha\sigma$] $\epsilon\lambda\omega\sigma\iota\ \mu'\ \sigma\upsilon\ \gamma\alpha\rho\ \epsilon\tau'\ \iota\sigma\chi\acute{\upsilon}\omega$. The only variant in the MSS. is B's $\epsilon\lambda\omega\sigma\iota\ \mu'$ for $\epsilon\lambda\omega\sigma\iota\ \mu'$. For the conjectures, see comment. and Appendix. 1098 Σ . L has $\sigma\upsilon\ \tau\omicron\iota\ \sigma\upsilon\ \tau\omicron\iota\ \kappa\alpha\tau\eta\zeta\iota\omega\ \sigma\alpha\sigma\ \acute{\omega}\ \beta\alpha\rho\acute{\upsilon}\pi\omicron\tau\omicron\mu\epsilon\ |\ \sigma\upsilon\kappa\ \acute{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\omicron\theta\epsilon\upsilon\ \epsilon\chi\epsilon\iota\ [\eta\iota\ \text{superscr.}]\ \tau\acute{\upsilon}\chi\alpha\iota\ |\ \tau\acute{\alpha}\iota\delta'$ [made from $\tau\acute{\alpha}\delta'$] $\acute{\alpha}\pi\omicron$ (sic) $\mu\epsilon\lambda\iota\zeta\omicron\nu\omicron\sigma$. On $\epsilon\chi\epsilon\iota$ there is a marg. gl., $\sigma\upsilon\nu\acute{\epsilon}\chi\eta\iota$.

1092 Σ . A discussion of this passage, and a notice of conjectures, will be found in the Appendix. Here I briefly give the results.

$\pi\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\iota\alpha\iota\ \delta'\ \acute{\alpha}\nu\omega$ is my emendation of the corrupt $\tau\epsilon\lambda\theta\ \acute{\alpha}\lambda\theta\acute{\epsilon}\rho\omicron\varsigma\ \tau'\ \acute{\alpha}\nu\omega$. The word $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\theta'$ would be possible only if, in 1094, we read $\mu'\ \theta\iota\omicron\iota\epsilon\nu$ for the MS. $\theta\iota\omega\sigma\iota\ \mu'$. But the general sense of the passage forbids this. $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\sigma\iota\nu$ (conjectured by Erfurdt and others, and found in one MS.) is a certain correction of $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\sigma\iota\ \mu'$: as $\iota\sigma\chi\omega$ (Heath) is of $\iota\sigma\chi\acute{\upsilon}\omega$. He is not here praying to be caught up by winds, or slain by birds, but saying—in continuation of $\tau\omicron\upsilon\delta\ \pi\omicron\tau\epsilon\ \tau\epsilon\upsilon\zeta\omicron\mu\omicron\iota\ |\ \sigma\iota\tau\omicron\nu\acute{\omicron}\mu\omicron\nu\ \pi\acute{\omicron}\theta\epsilon\nu\ \acute{\epsilon}\lambda\pi\iota\delta\omicron\varsigma$ —that now the birds will fly unharmed over his head. That $\acute{\alpha}\lambda\theta\acute{\epsilon}\rho\omicron\varsigma$, no less than $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\theta'$, is spurious, is made almost certain by two distinct considerations. (1) The antistrophic v., 1113, $\acute{\iota}\ \delta\omicron\iota\ \mu\acute{\alpha}\nu\ \delta\acute{\epsilon}\ |\ \nu\iota\nu$, is a dochmiac. $\acute{\alpha}\lambda\theta\acute{\epsilon}\rho\omicron\varsigma$ resolves the second long syll. of the bacchius (=the final syll. of $\acute{\iota}\delta\omicron\iota\mu\acute{\alpha}\nu$); not an unexampled licence, but still a most rare one. (2) $\pi\tau\omega\kappa\acute{\alpha}\delta\epsilon\varsigma$ is sound, but could not be used, without art. or subst., to denote 'timid birds.' $\acute{\alpha}\lambda\theta\acute{\epsilon}\rho\omicron\varsigma$ has probably supplanted that subst.

But if so, the corruption has been a deep one; i.e., $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\theta'$ $\acute{\alpha}\lambda\theta\acute{\epsilon}\rho\omicron\varsigma$ was an attempt to supply, from the context, words which had been wholly or partly lost. Now suppose that the words $\Pi\epsilon\alpha\epsilon\iota\alpha\iota\ \Delta\ \acute{\alpha}\nu\omega$ had been partly obliterated, so as to leave only $\acute{\epsilon}\iota\alpha\iota\ \acute{\alpha}\nu\omega$. The words $\acute{\alpha}\nu\omega$ and $\delta\acute{\epsilon}\zeta\upsilon\tau\omicron\nu\acute{\omicron}\nu\ \pi\acute{\nu}\epsilon\upsilon\mu\alpha\tau\omicron\varsigma$ would readily suggest that $\acute{\alpha}\iota$ was a vestige of $\acute{\alpha}\lambda\theta\acute{\epsilon}\rho\omicron\varsigma$. And the very fact that the schol. accepts $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\theta\epsilon\ \acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\sigma\iota\ \mu\epsilon$ as possible shows how, in post-classical times, $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\sigma\iota$ might have elicited $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\theta'$ from the letters $\acute{\epsilon}\iota$. The birds which will now fly harmless over his head are such as those which his bow used to slay,— $\tau\acute{\alpha}\varsigma\ \acute{\upsilon}\pi\omicron\pi\tau\acute{\epsilon}\rho\omicron\upsilon\varsigma\ |\ \beta\acute{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\omicron\nu\ \pi\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\iota\alpha\varsigma$ (288).

$\sigma\upsilon\kappa\acute{\epsilon}\tau'\ \iota\sigma\chi\omega$, I do not restrain them, i.e., do not arrest their career ($\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\sigma\iota\nu$) by my arrows. Cp. 1153 ff. For this sense of $\iota\sigma\chi\omega$ cp. El. 242 $\acute{\epsilon}\kappa\tau\iota\mu\omicron\upsilon\varsigma\ \iota\sigma\chi\omicron\upsilon\sigma\alpha\ \pi\tau\acute{\epsilon}\rho\upsilon\gamma\alpha\varsigma\ |\ \delta\acute{\epsilon}\zeta\upsilon\tau\omicron\nu\acute{\omicron}\nu\ \gamma\acute{\omicron}\omega\nu$,—where L has $\iota\sigma\chi\omicron\upsilon\sigma\alpha$, by the same error as here. The MS. $\sigma\upsilon\ \gamma\alpha\rho\ \epsilon\tau'\ \iota\sigma\chi\acute{\upsilon}\omega$ raises the question whether we should read $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\sigma\ \epsilon\tau'\ \sigma\upsilon\ \gamma\alpha\rho\ \iota\sigma\chi\omega$. For $\epsilon\tau'\ \sigma\upsilon$, cp. 1217: Tr. 161 $\acute{\omega}\varsigma\ \epsilon\tau'\ \sigma\upsilon\kappa\ \acute{\omega}\nu$. But the MS. $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\sigma\iota\ \mu'$ would have arisen from $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\sigma\omega$ more easily than from $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\sigma'\ \epsilon\tau'$. It is more probable that $\gamma\alpha\rho$ was an interpolation here, as it is in L's text of O. C. 1766 and At. 706.

1098 Σ . $\sigma\upsilon\ \tau\omicron\iota\ \dots\ \acute{\alpha}\pi\omicron\ \mu\epsilon\lambda\iota\zeta\omicron\nu\omicron\varsigma$. In this passage I adhere to the MS. text, merely writing, with Wecklein, $\sigma\upsilon\kappa$ for $\sigma\upsilon\kappa$. The words $\acute{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\omicron\theta\epsilon\nu\ \epsilon\chi\epsilon\iota\ \tau\acute{\upsilon}\chi\alpha\ \tau\acute{\alpha}\delta'$ cannot be metrically reconciled with the corresponding words in the antistrophe (1118 f.), $\iota\sigma\chi'\ \acute{\upsilon}\pi\omicron\ \chi\epsilon\iota\rho\acute{\omicron}\varsigma\ \acute{\epsilon}\mu\acute{\alpha}\varsigma$. Dindorf assumes that the latter words are

The later MSS. vary between βαρύποτμε and βαρύποτμ'. For τύχα τᾷδ', Γ has τάχα [with γρ. τύχα] τάδε. The Aldine has τῷδ' for τᾷδ'. For the conjectures, see below. 1099 f. L has εὐτέ γε παρὸν φρονῆσαι | τοῦ λῳονος δαίμονος εἶλου τὸ κάκιον εἰλεῖν. Opposite the words τοῦ λ. δαίμονος is the marg. gl. λείπει ἡ ἀντί: and over τοῦ λῳονος, the gl. τοῦ συμφέροντος. Instead of εὐτέ γε, A and Harl. have εὔτε γάρ.

sound, and that the fault is in the strophe. He therefore writes ἄλλοθεν ἔ τῷχα ἄδ' ἀπὸ μείζονος, and thus obtains a dactylic tetrameter, answering to ἔσχ' ὑπὸ χειρὸς ἐμᾶς· στυγεράν ἔχε. This alteration is, however, extremely bold, since it eliminates ἔχει without attempting to account for it. On Dindorf's view, I should prefer to conjecture κοῦ σ' | ἄλλου ἔχει τύχα ἄδ' ἀπὸ μείζονος. The traditional τύχα τᾷδ' would thus be explained; it would have arisen from the ambiguous ἔχει, after κοῦ σ' had become κούκ. But, on the whole, it appears safer to suppose that the fault is in the antistrophe. A very slight change will bring the words ἔσχ' ὑπὸ χειρὸς ἐμᾶς into agreement with ἄλλοθεν ἔχει τύχα τᾷδ'. We have only to write, with Bergk, ἔσχεν ὑπὸ χειρὸς ἀμᾶς. (Wecklein obtains the same metrical result by conjecturing ἔσχε παλάμαις ἐμαῖσιν.)—See Appendix.

κατηξίωσας, hast thought it right (to have it so). Cp. O. T. 944 ἀξίῳ θανεῖν: Plat. Rer. 337 D τί ἀξίως παθεῖν;—ἔχει τύχα τᾷδ': cp. Ai. 272 οἷον ἔχετ' ἐν κακοῖς.—ἀπὸ μείζονος, explaining ἄλλοθεν: for this ἀπὸ, cp. O. C. 1533 ff. n.

1099 f. παρὸν: cp. fr. 323 ἦν παρὸν θέσθαι καλῶς | αὐτὸς τις αὐτῷ τὴν βλάβην προσθῆναι φέρων.—φρονῆσαι, to come to a sound mind (ingressive aor.). Cp. 1259

τοῦ λῳονος δαίμονος, the MS. reading, is metrically impossible. The words τοῦ λῳονος must represent — — — (= 1121 καὶ γὰρ ἐμοί). But the first syllable of λῳονος is necessarily long. A shortening of ωι before ο cannot be justified by the similar shortening of αι or οι, as in δελταῖος (Ant. 1310 n.) or οἰωνοῦς (El. 1058). Musgrave compares ζῳῆς and δῳῶσας from Eur.; but in Hec. 1108 we must read ζῳῆς, and in Herac. 995 διῳῶσας. In the few places where πατρώος appears to have the 2nd syll. short, πάτριος is a certain correction (cp. 724 n.).

Are we, then, to admit the v. l. τοῦ πλέονος? It occurs in the first schol. on this v.:—πλείονος δὲ δαίμονος λέγει τοῦ λυσিতেστέρου καὶ συμφορόν. Hermann, Dindorf and Wecklein are among those who accept it. In its favour two points may be noticed. (a) δαίμων, when it means μοῖρα, is sometimes quite impersonal; e.g., fr. 587 μη σπείρε πολλοῖς τὸν παρόντα δαίμονα ('spread not thy present trouble abroad'—by speech). (b) τοῦ πλέονος δαίμονος would be suggested by such phrases as πλέον ἔχειν: i.e., it might be possible to say τὸν πλείω δαίμον' ἔχω, or the like, though not ὁ πλείων δαίμων με σφῆξει. And so decreed; this fortune to which thou art captive comes not from without, or from a stronger hand: for, when it was in thy power to show wisdom, thy choice was to reject the better fate, and to accept the worse.

PH. Ah, hapless, hapless then that I am, and broken by suffering; who henceforth must dwell here in my misery, with no man for companion in the days to come, and waste away,— woe, woe is me,—no longer bringing food to my home, no longer gaining it with the winged weapons held in my strong hands.

But the unsuspected

For the conjectures, see below. 1104 f. In order that v. 1104 may end with a long syllable, Herm. proposes ὕστερῶν: Meineke, φωτῶν instead of ἀνδρῶν.

1109 f. Doederlein and Schneidewin would point thus:—προσφέρων, | οὐ, πτανῶν ἀπ' ἐμῶν δ' πλῶν, | κραταιαῖς κ.τ.λ. For οὐ πτανῶν Bergk conj. εὐπτόνων. For ἰσχω Schenkel conj. ἀρχων.—κραταιαῖς MSS.: κραταιαῖσιν Campbell (= τί ποτ' αὖ μοι in 1089).

1111 ἀσκοπα] γρ. δὲ καὶ ἀποφα ἀπὸ τοῦ μὴ ψοφεῖν: schol. in L.

the bold phrase seems just conceivable here, where the idea is, 'Instead of the better portion, thou hast chosen the worse.' Omitting τοῦ, Bothe would read λωϊονος (cp. Simonides Amorg. 7. 30 λωϊων γυνή), and Wunder λωϊτέρου. But, for Soph., neither seems probable.

The gen. τοῦ...δαίμονος depends not on εἶλου alone (as if it were προέκρινας), but on the idea of comparison suggested by the whole phrase εἶλου τὸ κάκιον αἰνεῖν. Cp. Αἰ. 1357 νικᾷ γὰρ ἀρετὴ με τῆς ἔχθρας πολὺ, where πολὺ νικᾷ με = πολὺ κρείσσων παρ' ἐμοί ἐστι. For αἰνεῖν as = στέργειν, cp. Eur. Alc. 2 θῆσαν τράπεζαν αἰνέσαι.

The passage would be simplified if we could read εὐτέ γε παρὸν κυρῆσαι | λῶνονος αὐδ δαίμονος εἶλου τὸ κάκιον αἰνεῖν.

1108 f. ἦδη...ὕστερον...ἐλσπίσω: the redundant diction marks strong feeling, as in Αἰ. 858 πανύστατον δὴ κούποτ' αὖθις ὕστερον. ὕστερον: for the short syll. at the end of the verse, cp. 184 n.

1108 προσφέρων, bringing home. The act. denotes the simple act of 'carrying towards' the cave; the midd. προσφερόμενος would have further expressed that the food was for his own use. Cp. 708 αἶρω: O. C. 6 φέροντα (= φερόμενον).

1109 f. οὐ πτανῶν...ἰσχω. The only food which Ph. could obtain was that which his bow procured (287). And here the loss of the bow is uppermost in his thoughts. Hence the emphatic repetition:—οὐ φορβάν ἐτι προσφέρων, οὐ (προσφέρων) πτανῶν ἀπ' ἐμῶν δ' πλῶν. The general word, προσφέρων, is understood again with the adverbial phrase which specialises it. Thus the rhetorical effect is much as if he had said, οὐκ ἀγρεύων θρῆνθας, οὐ τοξεύων. The object to ἰσχω is αὐτά (i.e. τὰ δ' πλᾶ) understood. Cp. 1058 κάκιον οὐδὲν ἂν | τούτων κρατύνειν μηδ' ἐπιθύνειν χερσὶ. Hartung objects that it is the bow which is held, whereas πτανῶν suits only the arrows: hence he writes, οὐ πτανῶν δ' πλ' ἐμῶν τόξων (for the final spondee cp. 1151 ἀλκάν). The simple answer is that, at the moment of shooting, the archer holds both bow and arrow: and the epithet κραταιαῖς suits precisely that moment, since it suggests the effort of drawing the bow. Brunck was clearly wrong in supplying φορβάν with ἰσχω.

1111 f. ἀσκοπα = ἀπροσδόκητα: cp. El. 1315 ἐλργασαι δέ μ' ἀσκοπα.—The dative with ὑπέδω would not be unusual if the sense were, 'came into my thoughts': Od. 10. 398 πᾶσιν δ' ἱμερβεις ὑπέδω γόος: Tr. 298 ἐμοὶ γὰρ οἶκτος εἰσέβη: cp. O. C. 372 n. But here the sense is, 'beguiled,' for which we should have expected the acc., as after ὑπέρχομαι, ὑποπίπτω. The explanation may be that the sense, 'beguiled,' is here derived from the sense, 'insinuated themselves into my mind.'

1112 ὑπέδν] Hartung reads ἀπέδν (sc. τὰ ὄπλα), 'have stripped me of my arms': a sense which would require ἀπέδισε. 1114 f. Nauck conj. τοὺς τάδε μῆσαμένους... ἐμὰς λαχόντας ἄτας. 1116—1121 L divides the vv. thus:—πότμος—οὐ|δέ—|χειρὸς—|ἔχε—|ἄρὰν ἄρὰν—|καὶ γὰρ—|μὴ—ἀπώσῃ. 1116 The second πότμος was added by Erfurd. Gleditsch follows the MSS. in reading πότμος once only, and deletes the second σύ ται in 1095. 1118 ἔσχεν ὑπὸ χειρὸς ἐμὰς Bergk: ἔσχ' ὑπὸ χειρὸς ἐμὰς MSS. Campbell gives ἔσχεν ὑπὸ χειρὸς ἐμὰς (changing τύχα τᾶδ' to τόχαις in 1097): Wecklein, ἔσχε παλάμαις ἐμαῖσιν. Blaydes reads ἔσχ' ὑπὸ χειρὸς ἐμὰς: but he does not bring strophe and antistrophe into metrical agreement. For ἔσχ' he

1116 f. πότμος...δαιμόνων: Ant. 157 θεῶν...συντυχίαις, n. Two constructions are possible: I prefer the first. (1) τάδε (nom.) σε πότμος...ἔσχεν, 'these things have come upon thee as a doom from heaven.' (2) πότμος σε τάδε (cogn. acc.) ἔσχεν, 'fate hath put this constraint on thee.' We can say βιάζομαι (or ἀναγκάζω) τινά τι: but ἔχω τινά τι would be harsher. There is a like ambiguity in Aesch. Pers. 750 πῶς τὰδ' οὐ νόσος φρενῶν | εἶχε καὶδ' ἐμόν; and there, too, τὰδ' seems best taken as nom. For the sense of ἔσχεν, cp. 331 n.—οὐδὲ σέ γε: for γε with the repeated σε, cp. Ant.

1119 f. στυγεράν, pass., abhorred, dreadful: cp. At. 1214 στυγερῶ δαίμονι. —ἔχε, 'direct,' like a missile: cp. Il. 3. 263 πεδίονδ' ἔχον ὠκείας ἵππους.—ἐπ' ἄλλοις: cp. Il. 1. 295 ἄλλοισιν δὴ ταῦτ' ἐπιτέλλεο, μὴ γὰρ ἐμοὶ γε. There is no reference to Odysseus, whom they presently defend (1143), or to any definite person.

1121 f. καὶ γὰρ ἐμοὶ κ.τ.λ. The sense is:—'Do not blame us: so far from being thy foes, we are sincerely anxious to win thy friendship.' τοῦτο, i.e., μὴ φιλότῃτ' ἀπώσῃ. The constr. of μέλει with μὴ ἀπώσῃ is like that of deceits of a treacherous soul beguiled me. Would that I might see him, the contriver of this plot, doomed to my pangs, and for as long a time!

CH. Fate, heaven-appointed fate hath come upon thee in this,—not any treachery to which my hand was lent. Point not at me thy dread and baneful curse! Fain indeed am I that thou shouldst not reject my friendship.

PH. Ah me, ah me! And sitting, I ween, on the ^{2nd} marge of the white waves, he mocks me, brandishing the ^{strophe} weapon that sustained my hapless life, the weapon which no other living man had borne! Ah, thou well-loved bow, ah, thou that hast been torn from loving hands, surely, if thou canst feel, thou seest with pity that the comrade of Heracles is conj. ἐρξ', which Nauck approves. 1120 ἀράν 1: ἀράν ἀράν L. 1121 φιλόκτητ' made from φιλόκτητι in L. 1123 οἱ μοι μοι L.—που, omitted by the first hand in L, has been added by S. For καὶ που, Blaydes conj. ἢ που. 1124 ἐφήμενος] ἐφ' ἡμενος Cavallin. 1125 γελᾷ μου MSS.: γελᾷ μοι Cavallin. χερὶ Turnebus: χειρὶ L. 1126 εἰ Hermann (Retract. p. 16) would transpose these two vv. 1130 ἦ L has εἰ (ei), but the first hand has added strokes to the stem which indicate η.—ἐλεινὸν Brunck: ἐλεινὸν MSS. 1131 ἔχεις] A letter (σ?) has been erased before this word in L. 1132 ἄρθμον Erfurdt: ἄθλιον MSS. (γρ. ἄθλον L in marg.). Dindorf gives σύνημον: Blaydes, ἡλικά τόνδε σοι: Campbell, ἄθλον ἐμ' ὥδέ σοι.

ὀρῶ and σκοπῶ (meaning, 'to take care') with μή instead of ὅπως μή. Others make μή...ἀπώσῃ imperative: 'do not reject,' etc. Then τοῦτο becomes awkward, since it can hardly refer to the coming deprecation, nor can it well mean 'thy welfare.'

1123 εἰ. πολιάς, not πολιού, since the words πόντον θινός form a single notion: Ani. 794 n. The gen. goes with ἐφήμενος: cp. Pind. N. 4. 67 tās...ἐφεξόμενοι: Ap. Rhod. 3. 1000 f. νηὸς...ἐφεξομένη. Some take the gen. as partitive, after που: but the latter clearly means here, 'I ween': cp. Ai. 382 ἢ που πολλὸν γέλωθ' ὑφ' ἡδονῆς ἄγεις.

1125 ἐγγελά* is my emendation of γελᾷ μου. The antistrophic verse (1148 χωρὸς οὐρεσιβώτας) shows the true metre; and a substitution of --- for --- is impossible here. If, on the other hand, the εγ of ἐγγελά had been accidentally lost, the insertion of μου is just such an expedient as might have occurred to a post-classical corrector. There is no classical example of a gen. after the simple γελᾶν, though Lucian has that construction (Dem. Enc. 16 γελᾶν ἐπεισὶ μοι τοῦ τὰς ὀφρῦς συνάγοντος).

1130 π. ἦ που: cp. 1123 καὶ που n.—ἐλεινὸν ὄρξ, lookest piteously, i.e., with a look expressing sorrow for thyself, and pity for him. Cp. Hes. Scut. 426 δεινὸν ὄρων δόσοισι.—τὸν Ἡράκλειον ἄρθμιον, the ally, friend, of Heracles. ἄρθμιον seems a certain correction of the ms. ἄθλιον. The word ἄρθμος (expressing the bond of alliance or friendship) was a poet. synonym for φίλος: Od. 16. 427 οἱ δ' ἡμῶν ἄρθμοι ἦσαν: Theognis 1312 οἷσπερ νῦν ἄρθμος ἦδὲ φίλος. Cp. Hom. hym. 3. 524 ἐπ' ἄρθμῳ καὶ φιλόκτητι: and the Homeric ἐρήτρης ἐταῖροι. The adj. Ἡράκλειον represents the gen. Ἡρακλέους, since ἄρθμος with the art. can be treated as a subst. (like οἰκείος, ἐπιτήδειος, etc.): cp. O. T. 267 τῷ Λαβδακείῳ παιδί (n.). Prof. Campbell reads ἄθλον <ἐμ> ὥδέ σοι, adopting ἄθλον from the margin of L, and conjecturally adding ἐμ'. He renders: 'me thus destined no more to use thee in the Heraclian exercise,'—taking the Ἡράκλειος ἄθλος to be archery.

1133 μεθύστερον] μεθ' ὕστερον L. 1134 ἀλλ' ἐν μεταλλαγῇ MSS. (μεταλλαγῇ A). A syllable is wanting: cp. 1157 ἐμᾶς σαρκὸς αἰόλας. Dindorf conj. ἔτ', ἀλλ' ἐν μεταλλαγῇ: Hermann, ἄλλου δ' ἐν μεταλλαγῇ: Bergk, ἀλλ' αἰὲν μεταλλαγῇ: Hartung, χερσὶν δ' ἐν μεταλλαγῇ: Cavallin, ἀλλ' αἰὲν μετ' ἀγκάλαις: Wecklein, ἀλλ' ἄλλα μετ' ἀγκάλας: Mekler, ἀλλ' ἐνθεν μετ' ἀγκάλας. 1135 ἐρέσσει] Wecklein conj. ἐλίσσει: Bergk, ἐρύσσει: Seyffert, ἐπέσσει ('wilt be on his shoulders'). Blaydes reads ἀρ' ἔσσει. 1136—39 L divides the vv. thus:—ὁρῶν—| στυγνόν—| μυρὶ'—| ἡμῖν—ὀδυσεύς.

1134 f. ἄλλου δ' ἐν μεταλλαγῇ is Hermann's emendation of ἀλλ' ἐν μεταλλαγῇ, which is shorter by a syllable than the antistrophic v., 1157 ἐμᾶς σαρκὸς αἰόλας. It is the simplest and most probable correction. ἐν here denotes an attendant circumstance (cp. Eur. H. F. 931 ὁ δ' οὐκέθ' αὐτὸς ἦν, | ἀλλ' ἐν στροφαῖσιν ὁμμάτων ἐφθαρμένος): and the gen. after μεταλλαγῇ denotes the ownership to which the change is made: Thuc. 6. 18 ἀπραγμοσύνης μεταβολῇ, a change to inactivity. Thus the phrase is equiv. to μετέλλαξαν ἄλλον πολυμήχανον ἄνδρα, ἐρέσσει (ὑπ' αὐτοῦ): 'having got a new master—a man of many wiles—thou art wielded (by him).' For the idiomatic ἄλλου cp. Aesch. Th. 424 γίγας δδ' ἄλλος. ἐρέσσει means that the new owner's hands can deal with the bow as they will. For ἐρέσσω ('row,' then fig., 'ply'), cp. Ant. 158 n. The word is here a poet. synonym for νωμάω. Cp. Il. 5. 594 ἐγχοῦς ἐνώμα: Tr. 512 τόξα καὶ λόγχας ῥόπαλόν τε τινάσσων.

Cavallin's conjct., ἀλλ' αἰὲν μετ' ἀγκάλαις (which others have modified, see cr. n.), is liable to this primary objection, that μετ' ἀγκάλαις could not here stand for μετὰ χερσίν. Such phrases as ἐν ἀγκάλαις ἔχειν are used only of what is carried 'in the arms.' Odysseus does not hug the bow.

ὦ Ζεῦ is Dindorf's correction of *Ὀδυσεύς, instead of which we require a spondee or trochee (= αἶα 1162). He cites the ὦ Ζεῦ in O. T. 1198; and Ar. Ach. 225 δοτῖς, ὦ Ζεῦ πάτερ καὶ θεοί, τοῖσιν ἐχθροῖσιν ἱσκέασατο. But he might still more fittingly have quoted Dem. or. 19 § 113, where, as here, the indignant invocation closes the sentence:—πολλοὺς ἐφη τοὺς θορυβοῦντας εἶναι, ὀλίγους δὲ τοὺς στρατευομένους, δταν δέη, (μέμνησθε δήπου.) αὐτός, οἶμαι, θανμάσμιος στρατιώτης, ὦ Ζεῦ. At v. 1181 Ph. appeals to ἀράϊος Ζεύς. Reading ὦ Ζεῦ, it is best to adopt Bothe's δς for the ms. δσ', and to make ἀνατέλλονθ' intrans.: 'countless ills, arising from (effected by) shameful arts.'

Next to ὦ Ζεῦ, the most attractive now to use thee nevermore! Thou hast found a new and wily master; by him art thou wielded; foul deceits thou seest, and the face of that abhorred foe by whom countless mischiefs, springing from vile arts, have been contrived against me,—be thou, O Zeus, my witness!

CH. It is the part of a man ever to assert the right; but, when he hath done so, to refrain from stinging with rancorous taunts. Odysseus was but the envoy of the host, and, at their mandate, achieved a public benefit for his friends.

τε in 1137). For δσ' Bothe conj. δs, and so Dindorf. For ἐμήσατ' 'Οδυσσεὺς Dindorf conj. ἐμήσατ', ὦ Ζεῦ: Hermann (Reitract. p. 16) ἐμήσατο Ζεὺς: Campbell, ἐμήσαθ' οὗτος: Arndt, ἐμήσατ' οὐδέis: Ziel, ἐμήσατ' οὐtis: Blaydes, ἐμήσατ' ἔργων. Others suggest ἔργα, ἀνὴρ, αὐτός, ὦ θεοί, or ἄλλῃ. 1140 ἀνδρός τοι τὸ μὲν εὖ δίκαιον εἰπεῖν MSS. See comment. and Appendix. 1143 κείνος δ' MSS.: Brunck omits δ', for the sake of closer correspondence with 1166 (κῆρα). 1144 τοῦδ' ἐφημοσύνη L, with most MSS.: τοῦδ' εὐφημοσύνη Triclinius: τοῦδ' εὐφημοσύνη Turnebus: τοῦδ' ὑφημοσύνη V³, and so Hermann. Most of the recent edd. read τῶνδ' ἐφημοσύνη. All MSS. have τοῦδ': τῶνδ' is due to Gernhard and Thudichum. Blaydes reads τάνδ' ἐφημοσύνη ('charged with this order'). Musgrave conj. ταχθεῖς τοῦτ', εὐφημοσύνη ('by good management'). 1145 ἦνυσεν ἐς φίλους] Blaydes conj. ἦνυσε τοῖς φίλοις: Gleditsch, ἦνυσεν ἐς φίλων ἀρωγάν.

correction of 'Οδυσσεὺς is Arndt's οὐδέis, which would require us to take ἀνατέλλονθ' as acc. sing. masc., with transitive sense, and to keep δσ': 'causing countless ills to spring up...', more than any other man ever contrived against me.' Cp. II. 22. 380 δs κακὰ πόλλ' ἔρρεξεν, δσ' οὐ σύμπαντες οἱ ἄλλοι. But this is far less forcible.

1140 ἀνδρός τοι τὸ μὲν εὖ δίκαιον εἰπεῖν. Arndt thus amends the MS. ἀνδρός τοι τὸ μὲν εὖ δίκαιον εἰπεῖν. The change involved is very slight,—τὸ for τῷ, ν for υ, and ε for ο. The sense is:—'The part of a (true) man is ever to assert what is right, but to do so without adding invectives.' That is, Philoctetes is justified in expressing his sense of the wrong done to him; but not in reviling Odysseus. Odysseus was merely the agent of the Greek army, and acted for the public good. Cp. O. T. 1158 μὴ λέγων γε τοῦνδικον: Eur. Tro. 970 καὶ τῆρδε δέλω μὴ λέγουσαν ἐνδίκᾳ. Nauck objects that with αἰὲν we ought to have the pres. inf. λέγων. But αἰὲν εἰπεῖν = 'to assert on each occasion,'—the aor. inf. marking the moment of the assertion. The combination of αἰὲν with the aor. is therefore no less correct than (e.g.) in II. 21. 263 ὡς αἰεὶ Ἀχιλλῆα κινήσατο κύμα ῥόοιο.

The only sound version of the vulgate, ἀνδρός τοι τὸ μὲν εὖ δίκαιον εἰπεῖν, is Hermann's:—'It is the part of a man to say that what is expedient (quod utile est) is just':—i.e., Philoctetes, if he is a true man, ought to remember that the act of taking him to Troy is for the public good (τὸ εὖ); and ought therefore to admit that it is just. But we may object:—(1) This sense of τὸ εὖ is too obscure. (2) The Chorus may properly remonstrate with Philoctetes on his invectives against Odysseus; but they could scarcely require him to allow that his treatment had been δίκαιον. (3) The antithesis between the first clause and the second (εἰπόντος δὲ κ.τ.λ.) thus loses its force; for a man who conceded the justice of the act would not revile the agent.—Other versions of the vulgate, and other emendations, will be found in the Appendix.

1141 ε. εἰπόντος δὲ...ὀδύναν. The gen. εἰπόντος depends, like ἀνδρός, on ἐστὶ understood. εἰπόντα would be equally correct, but would be subject to ἐξῶσαι. Cp. 552 προστυχόντι, where similarly the acc. could stand.—ἐξῶσαι, like a sting: cp. Ar. Vespr. 423 κάλειρας τὸ κέντρον εἶπ' αὐτὸν ἴεσο.—γλώσσας ὀδύναν, lit., 'pain arising from (given by) the tongue,' i.e., galling speech: not 'garrulity,' like γλωσσολογία.

1143 κ. κείνος δ'. Odysseus acted by the public command for the public good. He himself has used a similar plea (109).—ἐἰς ἀπὸ πολλῶν ταχθεῖς, appointed the task as one out of many, i.e., as their agent. For the prep., cp. 647 n. Though v. 6 might suggest ὑπὸ, change is needless.—ἐφημοσύνη = ἐφετμή, ἐντολή: a Homeric and Pindaric word.—τῶνδ' is a clearly true correction of the ms. τοῦδ'. Blaydes, reading τᾶνδ' ἐφημοσύνην, joins it with ταχθεῖς ('intrusted with this commission').—ἐς φίλους, 'towards' his friends,—in their interest. ἐς has been suspected (see cr. n.); but ἐς φίλους is better than τοῖς φίλοις here, where two aspects of the same act are contrasted. Cp. Ai. 679 δ τ' ἐχθρὸς ἡμῖν ἐς τοσόνδ' ἐχθαρέτος | ὥς καὶ φίλῃσιν αἰδῖς· ἐς τε τὸν φίλον | τοσαύθ' ὑπουργεῖν ὠφελεῖν βουλῆσμαι κ.τ.λ.

1146 χαροπῶν. The rt χαρ (χαῖρω, χαρά, χάρις) is akin to the Sanskrit ghar (har), 'glow,' 'shine' (Curt. Etym. § 185). χαροπός, 'bright-eyed,' was used esp. to denote the fierce light in the eyes of wild animals: Od. 11. 611 χαροποί τε λέοντες. So in Ar. Pax 1065, where χαροποῖσι πιθήκοις alludes to the Spartans, the adj. implies 'truculent.' In men, according to Arist. Physiogn. 3, the χαροπὸν ὄμμα is characteristic of the ἀνδρείος, and also of the εὐφυής. Though not descriptive of colour, χαροπός is sometimes associated, or even identified, with γλαυκός (Theocr. 20. 25 ὄμματά μοι γλαυκὰς χαροπώτερα πολλὸν Ἀθάνας): cp. Tac. Germ. 4 truces et caerulei oculi.

1148 οὐρεσιβώτας, acc. plur., 'finding food on the hills': cp. 937, 955: Il. 12. 299 λέων ὄρεσιτροφος: Hes. Scut. 407 αἰγὸς ὄρεσσινόμου: and so ὄρειλεχτής, ὄρεινόμος, ὄρεσκόφος, οὐρεσίφοιτος, etc. If we took the adj. as nom. sing., with χῶρος, it would mean, 'affording pasture on the hills': as Ai. 614 φρενὸς οἰοβώτας, 'feeding lonely thoughts.' But the first view seems to agree better with usage; and in such a compound the ending -βώτης could represent either βόσκων or βοσκόμενος.

1149 ε. *μηκέτ' ἀπ' αὐλίων φυγᾶ | *πηδᾶτ'. The mss. give φυγᾶ μ' οὐκέτ' ἀπ' αὐλίων | πελάτ', of which the only tenable rendering is Hermann's:—'No more, in your flight, will ye drain me after you from my cave.' On this we remark:—(1) The use of πελάτ', though possible, is strange. When πελάζειν is trans., the place to which the object is brought is almost always expressed, either by a dat., or by a prep. and case; or, if not expressed, it is at least clearly implied; as in Il. 21. 92 οὐ γὰρ ὅτω | σὰς χεῖρας φεύξεσθαι, ἐπεὶ γ' ἐπέλασσε γε δαίμων: where the context implies ἐμοὶ far more clearly than φυγᾶ here implies ὑμῖν αὐτοῖς. Comparing Il. 5. 766 ἦ ἐ μάλιστ' εἰώθε κακῆς ὁδύνησι πελάζειν, and Pind. O. 1. 77 ἐμὲ...κράτει...πέλασον, we might surmise that, to a Greek ear, φυγᾶ μ' οὐκέτ' ἀπ' αὐλίων | πελάτ' would rather suggest this sense, 'Ye will no longer force me to flight from my cave.' (2) But, apart from the use of πελάτ', there is a further difficulty. Verse 1149 should correspond with v. 1126, τὰν ἐμὰν μελέων τροφάν. These are glyconic verses. An iambus, φυγᾶ, could not begin such a verse, unless its first syll. served merely as anacrusis. If we transpose φυγᾶ but keep μ' οὐκέτ', then we have another impossibility, viz. a sentence beginning

PH. Ah, my winged prey, and ye tribes of bright-eyed ^{2nd anti-}beasts that this place holds in its upland pastures, start no more ^{strophe.} in flight from your lairs; for I bear not in my hands those shafts which were my strength of old,—ah, wretched that I now am! Nay, roam at large,—the place hath now no more terrors for you,—no more! Now is the moment

see comment. and Appendix. 1151 πρόσθεν γ: πρόσθε L.—ἀλκῶν] As the corresponding word in the strophe is φίλων (1128), Herm. gave τὰν πρόσθεν γ' ἀλκῶν βελέων. He also conj. ἀκμῶν. 1153 π. ἀλλ' ἀνέβην ὅδε χώρος ἐρύκεται | οὐκέτι φοβητὸς ὑμῶν | ἐρπετε Mss. Instead of ἀνέβην, L has ἀναιδην, but with ε written with με. Other versions of the vulgate which have been proposed are examined in the Appendix.

Auratus and Canter saw that μ' οὐκέτι' is corrupted from μηκέτι'. Auratus, keeping πελάτ', understood (like Wunder), 'No longer approach, in order to fly from my cave,'—an impossible sense for the dat. φονῆ: though πελάτ' as imperat. might be defended by the verse of an unknown poet in Plut. Mor. 457 D βαῖνε λάξ ἐπὶ τραχέλου, βαῖνε καὶ πέλα χθονί. Canter read ἐλάτ', 'no longer rush.' For this imperat. (from ἐλάω) cp. Eur. H. F. 819 (ἐλα), and Eur. fr. 779 ἐλα δὲ μήτε κ.τ.λ. But I feel certain that the true reading is πηδάτ', which I proposed in the Journ. of Philology vol. II. p. 80 (1869). ΠΕΔΑΤ' (as it would have been written by Sophocles) would most easily become ΠΕΑΑΤ'. The change of πηδάτ' into πελάτ' would have facilitated that of μηκέτι' into μ' οὐκέτι', since πελάτ' would naturally be taken as fut. indic. of πελάζω, not as imperat. of πελάω.

The metre would be restored by reading μη φυγαῖς ἔρ' ἀπ' αὐλίων. But a simpler remedy is to place φυγῆ last, instead of first, in the v. . It is not essential to the correspondence of glyconic verses in strophe and antistrophe that the dactyl should occur in the same place: thus v. 1124 πόντου θωδὸς ἐφήμενος answers to 1147, ἔσθῃ θηρῶν οὐς δδ' ἔχει.—See Appendix.

1153 π. ἀλλ' ἀνέβην κ.τ.λ. The reading of the Mss. here (see cr. n.) presents two great difficulties. (1) ἀνέβην yields no possible sense when joined with ἐρύκεται. That adv. (from ἀνίημι, 'to let go') means, 'without restraint,' 'with free course' (immissis habentis), as in Aesch. Suppl. 15 φεύγειν ἀνέβην διὰ κύμ' ὄλιον. (2) ἐρύκεται, as the whole usage of the verb shows, must mean either 'is detained,' or else, 'is warded off.' Hence the following versions of the

MS. text are impossible:—(a) 'this place is remissly guarded'; (b) 'this place is held by you in freedom' (schol. ἐρύκεται κατέχεται). Seyffert understands, 'this place detains you with it in freedom': but, even if we could make the verb midd., ἀνέβην could not represent ἀνετοῖς or ἀνεμένους.

In the Journ. Phil. II. p. 80 (1869) I proposed the emendation which I believe to be true. ἐρύκεται ought to be ἄρ' οὐκέτι. The error would have been an easy one if the apostrophe after ἄρ' had been lost, since χώρος has no verb. That the initial α of ἄρ' would have been no obstacle, may be seen from the converse case in O. C. 550, where the Mss. give ἀπεστάλη, corrupted from ἐφ' ἀστάλη. Many other false readings have arisen from two words being made into one (or vice versa), often with a further corruption of the letters; as O. C. 775 τσαυτή for τίς αὐτή: id. 1482 συντύχοιμι for σοῦ τύχοιμι. The parenthesis, ὁ δὲ χώρος ἄρ' οὐκέτι | φοβητὸς, οὐκέθ' ὑμῶν, is naturally placed, because the emphatic word of the whole sentence is ἀνέβην, and the parenthesis justifies it: 'Without restraint—and there is nothing here now, it seems, to restrain you—go on your way.' ἄρα expresses his new and bitter sense of helplessness. With regard to the repeated οὐκέτι, it should be noted that such pathetic iteration is peculiarly frequent in this κομῶς: see 1095 σὺ τοι, σὺ τοι: 1102 ὦ τλάμων, τλάμων ἄρ' ἐγώ: 1128 ὦ τόξον φίλον, ὦ φίλων κ.τ.λ.: 1165 ἀλλὰ γινώθ', εὐ γινώθ': 1186 δαίμων, δαίμων: 1197 οὐδέποτ', οὐδέποτ'.

The simple transposition, φοβητὸς, οὐκέθ' (for the MS. οὐκέτι φοβητὸς), is the best mode of restoring the metre (= 1131 ἔχεις τὸν Ἡράκλειον). Cp. 156 where μη προσπεσῶν με λάθῃ has become in the Mss. μη με λάθῃ προσπεσῶν (n.).—See Appendix.

νῦν ἐστὶν εὐχασθαι καλόν.—ἀντίφονον, taking blood for blood: El. 248 ἀντίφονους δίκας.—πρὸς χάριν, 'at your pleasure': see Ant. 30 n.—αἰόλας, discoloured, spotted, by the disease. When this word refers to light or colour, the primary notion of rapid movement is usu. present,—i.e., the sense is 'glancing,' 'gleaming' (as in the Homeric σάκος αἰόλον, Il. 7. 222, with Leaf's n.), or 'sheeny' (δρόκων, Tr. 11). But it could also mean 'variegated' simply, as in Callim. Dian. 91 (of a speckled hound).—Some take it here as 'quivering' (cp. Il. 22. 509 αἰόλαι εὐλαί).

1160 ἐν αὔραις τρέφεται=ἐξ ἀνέμων τρέφεται (schol.). With τρέφεται, the prep. ἐν usu. denotes the surroundings of the τρέφῃ, as Plat. Theaet. p. 175 D ἐν ἐλευθερίᾳ... τετραμμένον: but it can also denote, as here, the aliment; id. Tim. p. 81 C τετραμμένης... ἐν γάλακτι.

1161 f. μηκέτι: the generic μή (being one who commands not...), cp. 170 μή του κηδομένου.—μηδενὸς (πάντων) ὅσα: the relative clause here takes the place of a partitive gen.: cp. Xen. Cyr. 8. 1. 20 ἦν τις ἀπῇ οἷς παρῆναι καθήκη. Cp.

957 n.—πέμπει here=ἀναπέμπει, like ἴησι for προῖησι etc.—βιόδωρος: cp. 391.

1163 f. εἴ τι σέβει ξένον, if thou hast any regard for a friendly stranger, εὐνοίᾳ πάσῃ πελάταν, who draws near to thee with all good will, πέλασσον (intrans.), draw near to him:—i.e., meet his advances half way, instead of repelling him. Philoctetes is at the mouth of his cave, as if about to enter it (952): the Chorus now advance a little towards him, as they make this earnest appeal. The position of πέλασσον, between ξένον and εὖ. π. πελάταν, is warrantable, since the latter words suggest a reason for the prayer, πέλασσον. Bolder collocations of words occur elsewhere in Soph.: e.g. O. C. 1427 τίς δὲ τολμήσει κλύων | τὰ τοῦδ' ἐπεσθαι τάνδρος; cp. O. T. 1251. The word πελάταν gives a certain tone of deference, since πελάτης was familiar in Attic as 'dependent' (Plat. Euthyphr. p. 4 C).—Other versions are:—(1) εἴ τι σέβει, ξένον πέλασσον, 'if anything is sacred to thee, approach the stranger': (2) εἴ τι σέβει ξένον, πέλασσον... πελάταν, 'approach him who approaches thee.' But πελάζειν (intrans.) could not take an acc. of the person approached: see Appendix on to take blood for blood,—to glut yourselves at will on my discoloured flesh! Soon shall I pass out of life; for whence shall I find the means to live? Who can feed thus on the winds, when he no longer commands aught that life-giving earth supplies?

CH. For the love of the gods, if thou hast any regard for a friend who draws near to thee in all kindness, approach him! Nay, consider, consider well,—it is in thine own power to escape from this plague. Cruel is it to him on whom it feeds; and time cannot teach patience under the countless woes that dwell with it.

PH. Again, again, thou hast recalled the old pain to my thoughts,—kindest though thou art of all who have visited this shore! Why hast thou afflicted me? What hast thou done unto me!

ἦς | δ' ἔχειν μυρίον ἄχθος δ ξυνοικεῖ L (ῶ ξυνοικεῖ A). From the words of the schol., ἀγνωστος πρὸς τὸ ὀχεῖσθαι, it has been inferred that he read ὀχεῖν. Adopting this, Hartung reads ἀδαεὶς δ' ('it is foolish') | ὀχεῖν μυρίον ἄχθος ῶ ξυνοικεῖς. For ἔχειν Blaydes gives ἄγειν. 1169 ε. L divides thus:—πάλιν...ὑπέμνας...ἐντόπων. For ἀλγῆμ' Cavallin conj. ἀλγος μ'. For τῶν πρὶν ἐντόπων Hense conj. τῶν ξυνεμπόρων. 1172 εἰργασαί] Elmsley conj. εἰργάσω.

1149 ff. (3) εἴ τι σέβει, ξένον πέλασσαν (trans.), bring the stranger near thee (i.e., 'allow him to approach thee').

Arndt conjectures: εἴ τι σέβει ξένον γ' ὀλασσαν,...ἀλλὰ γνῶθ' κ.τ.λ.: 'if thou hast too little respect for a guest-friend, at least (ἀλλὰ) think' of thine own interest. Such a use of ὀλασσαν would be obscure; and the supposed antithesis of ideas seems forced; since, even if he did 'revere the stranger,' that feeling would not be his only motive for leaving Lemnos.

1168 ἐπὶ σοὶ (cp. 1003) is Seyffert's correction of the MS. δοτι σοὶ (or σοί), which could not mean, 'that it is for thee,' i.e., 'in thy power.' The objection to reading δοτι σὸν is that this would mean rather, 'that it is thy part' (or 'duty'): cp. O. C. 721 n.

1167 ε. βόσκειν, i.e., to feed with thine own flesh: cp. 313. For the omission of μέν, cp. Ant. 806, O. C. 1275.—ἀδαεὶς δ' ἔχειν κ.τ.λ., while it cannot be taught to bear the countless woes that attend upon it. ἔχειν here = sustinere, as in O. C. 537 ἔπαθον ἄλαστ' ἔχειν, and Ant. 421. It is needless to read ὀχεῖν.—δ ξυνοικεῖ: cp. O. C. 1237 γῆρας ἀφίλον, ἵνα πρό-

παντα | κακὰ κακῶν ξυνοικεῖ, and ib. 1134. The context here slightly favours δ as against ῶ, though the latter is possible. The only source of obscurity here is that in the first clause (οἰκτρὰ γὰρ βόσκειν) the κῆρ is the disease itself, while in the second (ἀδαεὶς δ') it is identified with the patient. The sense is, 'thy disease is dreadful, and no length of time could inure thee to the countless other ills that accompany it' (hunger, hardship, solitude).

1170 ε. παλαιὸν ἀλγῆμ', the pain which the proposal that he should return to Troy has caused to him from the first moment that he heard of it: see vv. 622, 917, 999.—ὑπέμνας without με: cp. 801.—ἄλωσθε κ.τ.λ.: their words grieve him the more, because they have otherwise shown him so much sympathy (cp. 1121, 1163 f.).—τῶν πρὶν ἐντόπων, those mentioned in 307 ff.: for πρὶν cp. Ant. 100 κάλλιστον... | ...τῶν προτέρων φάος. The adj. here = merely 'present in a place' (at a given moment), as in 211, O. C. 1457: not 'resident,' as in O. C. 841.

1172 ὄλεσας. A return to Troy is more dreadful to him than death (999), and the mere suggestion of it has pierced 1177 ἀπό... λείπετ': cp. 817.—νῦν, 'then,' i.e., 'if ye persist' (as the present tense νοῶ implies). This is better here than νῦν.

1178 φίλα μοι... παρήγγειλας ἐκόντι τε πράσσειν. The τε after ἐκόντι has been suspected (see cr. n.). But analogous instances occur, where conjunctions, which might have been omitted, couple dissimilar clauses: as Plat. Prot. 336 A ἀπεκρίνατο διὰ βραχέων τε καὶ αὐτὰ τὰ ἐρωτώμενα: Thuc. 1. 67 οὐχ ἡσύχαζον ἀνδρῶν τε σφίσιν ἐόντων καὶ ἅμα... δεδιότες. Here, ἐκόντι τε would probably seem all the more natural to a Greek ear, since βουλομένης μοι ἐστί τοῦτο was so familiar an equivalent for προσφιλές μοι ἐστί τοῦτο. Cavallin's ἐκόντα (acc. neut. plur.) τε cannot be justified by O. T. 1229, where κακὰ | ἐκόντα is merely a bold way of saying, κακὰ ἃ ἐκὼν τις ἐποίησε.

1181 ναὸς (partit. gen.) ἱν' ἡμῖν τέτακται, to that part of the ship where (=whither) it has been appointed for us to go. The Chorus are common seamen, who have to take their places on the rowing benches or at other posts. The moment of sailing is now at hand (cp. 1076).

μείνατε—| αἱ αἱ αἱ αἱ | δαίμων δαίμων | ἀπόλλω' ὁ τάλας. 1187 ὁ τάλας] In L ὁ has been made from ὦ. Most of the later MSS. have ὦ: and ὁ (which is in T, V², K) was probably restored by Triclinius. 1188 f. τί σ' made from τίς in L. Blaydes conj. τί μ' ἔτ' ἐν βίῳ | τεύξεις. 1191 f. L divides the vv. after γινώμαι. For ῥέζοντες Vauvilliers and Musgrave conj. ῥέζοντος.—προῦφαινες r: προῦφανεσ L. his titles were ἀλάστωρ (Cramer Anecd. Ox. i. 62), τιμωρός (Clemens Protrept. p. 24) and παλαμναῖος (Arist. De Mundo 7).—ἄλθης=ἀπέλθης: 48 n.

1187 δαίμων: for the nom., cp. Ani. 89i ὦ τύμβος.

1188 f. ὦ ποῦς ποῦς: cp. 786.—τί σε τεύξω;=τί σε ποιήσω, τί σοι χρήσομαι; 'what shall I do with thee,'—how endure the pain,—now that my doom is otherwise so much worse?—μετόπιν, used by Ap. Rh. 4. 1764, occurs nowhere else in class. Greek, but is related to the epic μετόπισθεν (used by Eur. fr. 449) as the Attic κατόπιν to the epic κατόπισθεν.

1190 ἄλθε' ἐπηλυδης: cp. 1222: Eur. Syrph. 388 καλίσσυτος | στείχ': Plat. Legg. 879 D νεήλυδος ἀφικμένον. The adj. here = 'coming back' (answering to ἐπανέρχομαι rather than ἐπέρχομαι): yet αἰδοῖς need not be regarded as redundant (like ἀρίως with νεοσφάγης in Tr. 1130); for they had once before been on the

1191 f. τί ῥέζοντες, to do what, γινώμα δλλοκότῳ τῶν πάρος, with a purpose different from (that of) the former course, ὦν (by attract. for ἄ) προῦφαινες, which thou didst prescribe? He had told them to go away and leave him (ἀπό νῦν με λείπετ' ἤδη, 1177). They ask if they are now to contravene that order, and if so, what they are to do. For the gen. τῶν πάρος after δλλοκότῳ, cp. Xen. M. 4. 4. 25 ἄλλα τῶν δικαίων. The verb προφαίνειν can be used of any utterance (Tr. 324); but, as it is said of oracles (O. T. 790 n.), so it is peculiarly applicable to commands.

The objection to the plausible conjecture ῥέζοντος is not the omission of σοῦ, which is quite possible (cp. 801 n.), but the fact that Greek idiom would require ὡς τί ῥέζοντος. In the very rare instances where this ὡς is omitted, the fut. partic. refers to the subject of the principal verb, as Eur. Hec. 631 ff. θλάν... | ἐτάμεθ', ἄλιον ἐπ' οἶδμα ναυστολήσων (cp. Paley in Journal Phil. vol. VIII. p. 80).

1198 f. οὐδ' εἰ πυρφόρος ἀστεροπητῆς: cp. Il. 1. 580 Ὀλύμπιος ἀστεροπητῆς: O. T. 200 ὦ τῶν πυρφόρων | ἀστραπῶν κράτῃ νέμων. This is a repetition, in stronger words, of οὐδ' ἦν χρῆ με τῶν παθεῖν κακόν (999). To brave the lightnings of Zeus is to face death in its most appalling form: so Ares says that he will avenge his son, εἰ πέρ μοι καὶ μοῖρα Διὸς πληγέντι κεραυνῷ | κείσθαι ὁμοῦ νεκίεσσι (Il. 15. 117). And Dido: Vel pater omnipotens adigat me fulmine ad umbras | ... Ante, Pudor, quam te violo (Aen. 4. 25).—βροντᾶς αὐγαῖς: cp. Aesch. P. V. 1043

εἰσι φλογίζων, lit., 'shall be in the course of consuming,' i.e., in the very act of doing so:—as if he should behold Zeus in heaven, with the thunderbolt already brandished in his uplifted right hand. The peculiar vividness of the phrase depends on the somewhat rare use of the pres. part. with ἐρχομαι—a use quite distinct from that of the fut. part. Thus ἐρχεται κατηγορήσων μου (Plat. Euthyphro 2 c)=simply, 'he is going to accuse me'; but ἐρχομαι ἐπιχειρῶν σοι ἐπιδείξασθαι (Phaedo 100 b)= 'I am proceeding with an attempt to show you': cp. Her. 1. 122 ἦε ταύτην αἰνέων διὰ παντός: Pind. IV. 7. 69 ἐρχομαι...ἐννέπων.

1200 ff. ἔρρέτω Ἴλιον: not a curse on Troy itself, but a way of saying that he cares not how the Trojan war may end.—οἱ θ' ὑπ' ἐκείνῳ: cp. Eur. Hec. 764 τῶν θανόντων...ὑπ' Ἰλῳ.—τόδ' ἐμοῦ ποδὸς ἄρθρον, this limb (cp. ἄρθρα in 1207), my foot: ποδὸς is here a defining genitive, and the phrase is a periphrasis for τὸν ἐμὸν πόδα, with a certain added pathos,—'this poor lame foot.' But in

1208 ἀλλ', appealing (230).—ῥέξατε, extend it to me, concede it: cp. Pind. N. 7. 56 οὐκ ἔχω | εἰπεῖν τίνι τοῦτο Μοῖρα τέλος ἔμπεδον | ὥρεξε: a poet. use, like that of ἐγγυαλίσω. (Distinguish the sense in Il. 12. 328 ἥ εἰ τῷ εὖχος ὀρέζομεν ἥ τις ἡμῶν, 'give glory'.)

1204 ε. ἐρεῖς: for the fut., cp. 441 n.—εἰ ποθεν sc. προπέμψαι ἔχετε, = 'from any quarter.' So in Ai. 886 εἰ ποθι...λεῦσων = λεύσων, εἰ που (λεύσσει). The elliptical use of εἰ τις is frequent (Thuc. 4. 26 ἐσάγειν σιτόν τε...καὶ εἰ τι ἄλλο βρώμα).—γένυν, axe: El. 485 ἀμφάκης γένυν: cp. Ani. 249 n.

προπέμψατε. This use of the verb is somewhat strange at first sight, and has led to conjectures (see cr. n.). But it seems to be justified by the context. The group of fifteen men is standing before him, and he sees that they are not regularly armed; but, as εἰ ποθεν shows, he hopes that some one of their number may have some weapon. προπέμψατε means strictly, 'pass forward,' from hand to hand. Cp. Ar. fr. 427 φέρε καὶ ταχέως κατὰ χειρὸς ὄδῳ, | παράπεμπε τὸ χειρόμακτρον,—'pass' it round.

1206 ὡς τίνα δὴ βέξης...; So O. C. 398 (Ismene having said that Creon will come) OI. ὅπως τί δράσῃ; cp. ib. 1724: El. 390 XP. ὅπως πάθῃς τί χρήμα;—παλάμαν, 'deed of violence'; a sense in which the sing. does not seem to occur elsewhere, though the plur. often = 'violent hands' (Il. 3. 128 ὑπ' Ἀρηος παλαμάτων).

1207 *χρώτ', Hermann's correction of κράτ', seems to me certain. For the interchange of χ and κ, cp. βρύχομαι corrupted from βρύκομαι in 745 (cr. n.). Here the error may have been facilitated by a recollection of 618 κάρα | τέμνειν. The sense is, 'hew all the flesh (from my bones), and sever limb from limb,'—a frenzied exaggeration of his prayer in 748, πάταξον εἰς ἄκρον πόδα, | ἀπάμηνσον ὡς τάχιστα μὴ φείσῃ βίον. Sophocles knew the History of Herodotus (cp. O. C. 337 n.). Is it not possible that the poet's diction here may have been influenced by a reminiscence of the passage describing the ghastly suicide of the insane Cleomenes (6. 75)? Cleomenes, like Philoctetes, 'asked for a sword,'—which the terrified Helot gave him.

If the MS. κρᾶτ' be kept, πάντα must be taken in one of two ways. (1) As acc. masc. with κρᾶτ'. Cp. Ion fr. 61 τὸν αὐτοῦ κρᾶτα: Eur. fr. 243 τὸν σὸν κρᾶτ'. But with Sophocles κρᾶτα is elsewhere neut.: cp. 1001, 1457. (2) As adverbial neut. pl., 'utterly.' In either case the sense is weak. We cannot take πάντα καὶ ἄρθρα as = καὶ πάντα ἄρθρα. (In Aesch. P. V. 51, ἔγνωκα τοῖσδε κούδεν ἀντειπεῖν ἔχω, the comma should stand after τοῖσδε, not after ἔγνωκα.) A transposition is, indeed, possible—κρᾶτα καὶ ἄρθρ' ἀπὸ πάντα. But, even then, there is the difficulty that he cuts off his own head before mangling his limbs. This, surely, is more than the figure of 'prothysteron' will comfortably excuse. Prof. Campbell compares Ai. 238 κεφαλὴν καὶ γλῶσσαν ἄκραν | ριπτεῖ θέρσας: but Ajax is not decapitating himself.

1209 f. φονᾶ: cp. Ant. 117 n.—τί ποτε; the verb understood is ἐστιν, not φονεῖ: cp. Ant. 381 τί ποτ'; 'What means this?'—πατέρα ματεύων, as if φονῶ rather than φονᾶ νόος had preceded: cp. O. T. 159 n.

In vv. 492 ff. he had expressed the fear that his aged father must be dead; and here, in the bitterness of despair—when he feels himself utterly friendless upon earth—he utters a yearning to join Poetas in the world below. At brighter moments, again—when there is a gleam of hope that he may return to Malis—he thinks of his father as still living (665, 1371). And Heracles tells him that Poetas is indeed alive (1430).

1212 οὐ γὰρ ἐν φάει γ' ἔτι. Hermann's deletion of the ἔστ' before ἐν is probable on metrical grounds; and the interpolation might easily have arisen, as he says, from a superscript gloss ἐστί. On the other hand it is simpler and better to understand ἐστί than (as Hermann prefers) ματεύων.

1214 f. πῶς ἂν with optat. in a wish; cp. 531.—ἀθλιός γ' ἀνὴρ. This, the reading of the MSS., is confirmed, as against Dindorf's conjecture (see cr. n.), by a point which seems to have escaped notice. The γε after ἔς marks the causal force of the relat. pron. (as in 663); and this indicates that ἀθλιός means, not merely 'unhappy,' but 'wretchedly foolish' (as in 1218—1221 M. Schmidt rewrites these vv. as follows:—ἐγὼ μὲν ἤδη καὶ πάλα παλίσσυντος | στείλων ἂν ἢ σοι τῆς ἐμῆς νεῶς πέλας, | εἰ μὴ πρὸς ἡμᾶς τὸν τ' Ἀχιλλεύς γόνον | Ὀδυσσεά τε δεῦρ' ἴοντ' ἐλεύσσομεν. For the last two vv. Nauck would substitute εἰ μὴ πρὸς ἡμᾶς δεῦρ' ἴοντ' ἐλεύσσομεν | Ὀδυσσεά τε τὸν τ' Ἀχιλλεύς γόνον. 1218 νεῶς] The 1st hand in L wrote νεῶς: S corrected this to νεῶσ, but without deleting the acute accent. He did not mean νεῶσ.

O. T. 372). The reflective emphasis which γ' adds to ἀθλιος is thus exactly in place,—‘misguided indeed that I was.’ A comma after ἐπισδομεῖ σ' makes this clearer.

1215 π. ἱερῶν λιβάδ', the Spercheius (492), neighbour to the haunts of the Malian nymphs (725). All rivers were ἱεροί, but here the epithet has a special force, which ἐχθροῖς brings out: he had voluntarily withdrawn himself from the realm of friendly deities. Cp. his appeal in 1040 ἄλλ' ὦ πατρώα γῇ θεοί τ' ἐπόψιοι.—ἐτ' οὐδέν εἰμι: for the place of ἐτ', cp. O. T. 24 ἐτ' οὐχ ὅλα τε (n.).

1218—1471 Exodos. Neoptolemus restores the bow, and resolves to keep his word by taking Philoctetes home. Heracles appears, and at his bidding Philoctetes consents to sail, not for Greece, but for Troy.

It is unusual for two actors (neither being a mute person) to enter together,—as Odysseus and Neoptolemus do here (1222),—except in the opening scene. This is the peculiarity to which the scholiast calls attention: ἐντεῦθεν διπλοῦν ἐστί τὸ ἐπεισδιδόν. Of the other six plays, the Trachiniae is the only one in which the Exodos begins with the entrance of more than one person (v. 971: Hyllus, and the πρέσβυς with Heracles). In O. C. 1099 (third ἐπεισδιδόν) Theseus enters with Antigone and Ismene.

1218—1221 Much suspicion has fallen upon these verses. Some critics, indeed, hold that the only resource is to write them anew (see cr. n.). The points to which objection is made are the following.

(1) δμοῦ as a prep. with the gen. (schol., ἐγγύς). The dat. is the usual case (O. T. 1007). There are, however, two other passages in which the gen. is a well-attested reading. (a) Xen. Anab. 4. 6. 24 πρὶν δὲ δμοῦ εἶναι τοὺς πολλοὺς ἀλλήλων: three of the best mss. support the gen., while others give ἀλλήλοισι. (b) Menander fr. incert. 204. The schol. on Ap. Rh. 2. 121 quotes it as δμοῦ δὲ τῷ τίκτειν παρεγένεθ' ἡ κόρη: but the mutilated form of it found in Suidas, Photius and Harpocration has τοῦ τίκτειν δμοῦ. It is noteworthy that the use of δμοῦ in the sense of ἐγγύς (as distinguished from the sense ‘along with’) is said by the schol. on Apollonius to be distinctively Attic. And, when it bore this sense, the analogy of ἐγγύς, πέλας, etc., might easily permit it to be sometimes construed with the gen. See Appendix.

(2) στείλων is suspected by Nauck, who says, ‘one would rather have expected the aorist (ἀπελθών).’ But the pres. partic. is quite right: ‘moving on my way, I should now have been near my ship.’

(3) στείλοντα following στείλων. This is a real blemish, though a small one. But it does not follow that it is corrupt. There are several proofs that Sophocles, writing rather for hearers than for readers, was not always careful to avoid such iteration of commonplace words. The emphasis here falls on the contrasted qualifications (νεῶς δμοῦ, and πέλας), not on the participles themselves. A recurrence which, in print, catches the eye would hardly have offended the ear. (4) πρὸς ἡμᾶς δεῦρ' ἰόντ', repeating the sense of πέλας στείχοντα. The words are certainly unnecessary; but they are nothing worse. For a like redundancy, cp. Lysias or. 16 § 13 τοῖς μὲν ἱππεύουσιν ἀσφάλειαν εἶναι δεῖν νομίζοντας, τοῖς δ' ὀπλιταῖς κίνδυνον ἡγουμένους, where the second participle merely repeats the sense of the first, and might have been omitted. We could, indeed, take ἰόντ' as = ἰόντε (for the elision of the dual, cp. Hes. Op. 199 ἴον προλιπόντ' ἀνθρώπους), placing commas after γόνον and ἰόντ'. Then στείχοντα would refer to both men. 'I see Od. and N. approaching, on their way hither to us.' But this is less natural.

On the whole, I incline to think that these four vv. are sound, though (like vv. 265 ff.) they are somewhat carelessly written.

1219 στείχων ἂν ἦ σοι. The ethic dat. implies, 'thou would'st have seen me

1226 ἦν σοὶ πιθόμενος. This passage (down to 1234) well illustrates the dramatic use of interruption in stichomuthia. The spectators are now to learn that the repentance of Neoptolemus is complete.

1228 ἐλὼν in L seems to have been made by S from ἐλεῖν: the original circumflex (which was, as often, very small) can be traced at the lower end of the acute accent.

Obedying his superiors (1226), he did a base deed (1228); he will restore the bow (1230, 1232); for he has no right to it (1234). Each point is thrown into relief by the excited interpellations of Odysseus. Cp. 210 n.

1227 εἰ οὐ σοι πρόπον=τούτων ἃ οὐ σοι πρόπον ἦν πράζαι. Cp. O. T. 862.

1228 ἐλὼν. The partic. answers the question asked by ποῖον: 'what unbecoming deed didst thou do?' '(I did such a deed) by capturing,' etc. Thus we understand ἐπραξα ἔργον οὐ πρόπον μοι. The verb which N. would naturally have used, if Od. had allowed him to finish his sentence, would have been ἡμαρτον, to which ἦν in 1226 would have been cogn. acc.: but, after the interruption, the verb is best supplied from v. 1227. Thus ἦν remains actually an acc. of respect, '(the sin), by which.' Blaydes suggests εἶλον ἄνδρα καὶ δόλους. It is true that in stichomuthia an interrupted speaker usually ends with a finite verb (as O. T. 560 ἔρρει, O. C. 646 κρατήσω). But in this context ἐλὼν is more forcible than εἶλον, since then it is Od. himself who supplies the description of the deed as οὐ πρόπον.

With regard to Nauck's ὑπῆλυθεν, it may be noted that neither Aesch. nor Soph. admits ἦλυθον in dialogue, though Eur. does so (El. 598).

1235 πότερα δὴ] δὴ is wanting in L, and in some of the later MSS. (as Γ and L²), but A is among those which have it, and it is in the Aldine text. Hermann conject. πότερα σὺ, Seyffert πότερά γε, Blaydes (whom Cavallin follows) πότερα δέ. Nauck adopts the conject. of E. Philipp, πατρώων for πότερα. 1238 ταῦτά] τ' αὐτά L: ταῦτα r (and edd. before Brunck).—ἀναπολεῖν] In L the final ν has been added by S. 1240 εὖ νῦν ἐπίστω πάντ' ἀκηκοὺς λόγον L. Such a point after ἐπίστω may have suggested A's reading, ἀκήκοας. 1242 ἔσται] Herwerden conj. ἐστί.

1235 πότερα δὴ seems clearly right (see cr. n.): the δὴ gives indignant emphasis. δὴ is also possible (cp. 917); but it is weaker, and gives a less good rhythm. For πότερα in a simple question (like Lat. an), cp. O. C. 333.—κερτομῶν, of bitter jest; cp. Ani. 956 n.

1236 εἰ κερτόμησις. The quiet force of the answer would be rather spoiled by adding γ': cp. 105 n.

1238 ἀναπολεῖν, to plough anew; hence, fig., 'to go over the same ground' again. Pind. N. 7. 104 ταῦτά...τρὶς τετρακί τ' ἀμπολεῖν. In this sense Attic prose preferred ἐπαναπολεῖν: Plat. Phileb. 60 A εὖ δ' ἡ παροιμία δοκεῖ ἔχειν, τὸ καὶ δις καὶ τρὶς τὸ γε καλῶς ἔχον ἐπαναπολεῖν λόγῳ δεῖν: Legg. 723 E ἐπαναπολήσωμεν. 1240 ἀκηκοὺς is much better herethan ἀκήκοας. In At. 480 πάντ' ἀκήκοας λόγον is fitting at the end of a speech: cp. above 241 n. But in a brief statement of resolve, such as this, the compact unity given by the participial construction suits the placid firmness of the speaker's tone. Cp. 253, 567.

1241 εἰ τὸ δρᾶν: for the art., cp. 118 n.—τίς ἔσται μ' οὐπικωλύσων τάδε; for this use of the fut. partic. with art., cp. O. T. 297. Dindorf is not quite accurate in saying that, after ἔσται, οὐπικωλύων 'would have sufficed,' and that the poet preferred the fut. partic. only for the sake of correspondence with κωλύσει. The fut. partic. was required by Greek idiom, whether the principal verb was to be past, pres., or future. Cp. Xen. An. 2. 4. 5 ὁ ἡγησόμενος οὐδεὶς ἔσται 'there will be no one to lead us' (Xen. could not have written ὁ ἡγούμενος). For the place of μ' cp. O. T. 139 ἐκέινον ὁ κτανῶν. The compound ἐπικωλύσων comes after the simple κωλύσαι as in O. T. 566f. παρῆσχομεν after ἔσχετε, ib. 575f. ἐκμάνθαν' after μαθεῖν. Cp. above, 249: and for the converse, 911 f. τᾷδε: for the double acc. (a rare constr. with κωλύω), cp. Plat. Lys. p. 207 E ἐμέ γε...καὶ μάλα πολλὰ κωλύουσιν (sc. οἱ γονεῖς).

1247 ἃ γ' ἔλαβες: the γ' with causal force (quae cerperis): cp. 663. For the tribrach, cp. 1232. Odysseus, ignoring the moral question, asserts a right of property in the bow, because his βουλαί (as he euphemistically calls them) have won it.

1248 f. τὴν ἁμαρτίαν. The ἀντιλαβὴ marks a rising tone of excitement (cp. 54 n.). These words sum up N.'s resolve, and his mentor turns from ex-postulations to threats.—ἀναλαβεῖν, 'retrieve.' So Eur. Ion 426 τὰς πρὶν ἀναλαβεῖν ἁμαρτίας. This sense comes through that of 'recovering' (since the ἁμαρτία may be regarded as a loss of character),—not through the notion of 'taking back' a false move (for which the word was ἀνατίθεσθαι). Cp. Her. 5. 121 τοῦτο τὸ τῶμα ἀνέλαβον: ib. 8. 109 ἀναλαμβάνειν τὴν προτέραν κακότητα.

1261 ξὺν τῷ δίκαιῳ, i.e., having it on my side, as an ally: cp. σὺν θεῷ. So Ai. 1125 ξὺν τῷ δίκαιῳ γὰρ μέγ' ἔξεστι φρονεῖν.—τὸν σὸν οὐ ταρβῶ φόβον, I do not fear the terror (=terrible thing) of which thou speakest,—i.e., the wrath of the army. For this objective sense of φόβος, cp. O. C. 1651 ὡς δεινοῦ τιнос | φόβου φανέντος. For τὸν σὸν, El. 1110 οὐκ οἶδα τὴν σὴν κληδόν': fr. 169 οὐκ οἶδα τὴν σὴν πείραν' ἐν δ' ἐπίσταμαι.—I prefer this version to the other which is possible:—'I do not feel the fear which thy words suggest.'

1252—1258 In L these vv. are distributed as follows:—1252 ΟΔ. ἀλλ' οὐδέ τοι... 1253 NE. οὐ τᾶρα Τρωσὶν... 1254 ff. ΟΔ. ἔστω τὸ μέλλον. NE. χεῖρα... ἐπιψάουσας; ΟΔ. ἀλλὰ καμέ τοι... τιμωρήσεται. In the Aldine, as follows:—1252 is given to N. (without indication of a lacuna between 1251 and 1252); 1253 to Od.: 1254 f. (ἔστω... ἐπιψάουσας) to N.: and the rest (ἀλλὰ... τιμωρήσεται) to Odysseus. Turnebus restored the words χεῖρα... ἐπιψάουσας to Od., and the words ἀλλὰ... κοῦ μέλλοντ' ἔτι to N. The loss of a verse, spoken by Od., between 1251 and 1252 was first suggested by Hermann (Ad Vigerum 703, ap. Erfurdt, ed. 1805). See comment. 1252 πείθομαι] πείσομαι Bothe and Blaydes.—τὸ δρᾶν] Wecklein conj. τὸ μὴ οὐ. 1258 οὐ τᾶρα] οὐτ' ἄρα L: οὐτ' ἄρα A. 1254 ἔστω MSS. (except B, ἔσται): ἴτω Wecklein.

1252—1258 Hermann's earlier view (see cr. n.) seems clearly the true one. Verse 1252, ἀλλ' οὐδέ τοι κ.τ.λ., is the reply to a lost verse, in which Odysseus said that he would enforce his will with his own hand. Throughout this passage it is Odysseus who threatens, while Neoptolemus stands on the defensive. To Odysseus must belong οὐ τᾶρα Τρωσὶν ἀλλὰ σοὶ μαχούμεθα, and χεῖρα... ἐπιψάουσας: while ἴτω τὸ μέλλον and ἀλλὰ καμέ... κοῦ μέλλοντ' ἔτι are the answers of Neoptolemus. Hence, if we reject the hypothesis of a lost verse, only three resources remain.

(1) To transpose vv. 1252 and 1253. This was Hermann's later theory. The objection to it is that N. then says, ἀλλ' οὐδέ τοι σῇ χειρὶ πείθομαι τὸ δρᾶν. | ἴτω τὸ μέλλον,—when the last three words lose the force which they now possess as a short and direct reply to a threat. Further, the verbal echoes in this dialogue (τῶν σοφῶν in 1246, δίκαιον in 1247, φόβον in 1251) make it probable that σῇ χειρὶ in 1252 referred to words of Odysseus which either included χεῖρ, or at least foretold his personal interference more explicitly than is done by μαχούμεθα.

(2) To remove v. 1252. Wunder proposes to delete it: Todt, to place it after v. 1290. Neither course is warrantable.

(3) To assume that vv. 1251, 1252 were spoken consecutively by N., and that v. 1252 alludes to a menacing gesture of Odysseus. This is Wecklein's view. But it appears scarcely consonant with the character and practice of Greek Tragedy that words spoken by one person should require the dumb action of another to make them clear.

If, then—as seems hardly doubtful—a verse has dropped out, its loss may have been due to the fact that it began with the same words as one of its next neighbours. In dialogue of this kind, anger is sometimes marked by derisive repetition: cp. O. T. 547 KP. τοῦτ' αὐτὸ νῦν μου πρῶτ' ἀκουσον ὡς ἐρῶ. | OI. τοῦτ' αὐτὸ μὴ μοι φράξ' etc. (with n. there). Odysseus—who asserts a δίκαιον of his own (1247)—may have replied to N.'s words, ξὺν τῷ δικαίῳ τὸν σὸν σὺ παρβὴ φόβον, with some such retort as, ξὺν τῷ δικαίῳ χεῖρ ἐμὴ σ' ἀναγκάσει. Or v. 1252, ἀλλ'

OD. Well, I will take no more heed of thee; but I will go and tell this to all the host, and by them thou shalt be punished.

NE. Thou hast come to thy senses; and if thou art thus prudent henceforth, perchance thou mayest keep clear of trouble.

[Exit ODYSSEUS.]

But thou, O son of Poeas, Philoctetes, come forth, leave the shelter of thy rocky home!

PH. (within). What means this noise of voices once more rising beside my cave?

οὐδέ τοι κ.τ.λ., may have answered such a verse as, ἀλλ' οὐδ' ἄλυστος τῆς ἐμῆς ἔσει χερσός.

The textual history of this passage is parallel with that of O. T. 622—626, where the loss of one verse led to a similar confusion of persons in the MSS.

1252 ἀλλ' οὐδέ τοι: cp. O. C. 47 ἀλλ' οὐδ' ἐμοὶ τοι. οὐδέ refers to σὴ χειρ: as he does not fear the Greek army (1250), so neither does he fear the violence of Odysseus. 'But neither do I obey thy hand (=yield to thy threat of force), τὸ δρᾶν, so as to do (thy bidding).'—For the constr. of πειθομαι with dat. and inf., cp. Plat. Prot. 338 A καὶ πειθεσθῆ μοι βαβδούχων... ἐλέσθαι: for the art. with the inf., 118 n.: Ant. 1105 καρδίας δ' ἐξίσταμαι | τὸ δρᾶν.

1257 ε. καίτοι, 'however.' Odysseus, who is not naturally δύσσοργος (377), has quickly recovered his self-control. He recalls his threat of violence—speaking as if he had not heard N.'s reply. He now leaves the scene—in the hope that his parting threat will suffice—but remains near, to watch unseen. At the crisis he again interposes (1293),—as in v. 974.—ἐλθόν: cp. El. 1033 ἐλθοῦσα μητρὶ ταῦτα πάντ' ἔειπε σῇ.

1259 ε. ἐσωφρόνησας: for the aor., cp. 1099 φρονῆσαι (n.).—κλαυμάτων: cp. Ant. 931 τοῖσιν ἄγουσιν | κλαύμαθ' ὑπάρξει. The familiar use of κλαίων in threats (ib. 754) made it natural to use the subst. as = 'troubles': hence the confusion of metaphor would not be felt. For like phrases with πόδα, see on Ant. 619.

1261 Φιλοκτῆτην λέγω: for this use of λέγω cp. Ant. 32 (n.). Matthiae's ground for proposing to read Φιλοκτῆτης (as nom. for voc., cp. 432) was that the accus. seems awkward when it refers to a person who is accosted: but we may properly compare Ai. 71 ff. οὗτος, σέ... | ... προσμολεῖν καλῶ | Αἰτάντα φωνῶ· στείχε δωμάτων πάρος: for, though the sense of φωνῶ ('I call to') is different from that of λέγω, yet the objection to the accus. would be the same.

the last of p. 93 B. It has been added, not by the scribe himself (as Dindorf reports), but by the diorthotes (S). His minuscule writing is less free and flexible than the scribe's, and can also be distinguished from it by the forms of some letters,—as here by the π of παρ', the first ι of ἴσταται, and the β of βοῆς. The form κέκρημαι (χράσμαι) in classical prose always means either, 'to have used,' or 'to have been used.' In poetry it means also, 'to stand in need of.' The partic. occurs only in poetry, as Od. 1. 13 νόστον κεκρημένον: Eur. Ion 1199 πύματος κεκρημένοι.

1265 ε. ὦμοι· κακὸν τὸ χρήμα. Philoctetes, in the recesses of his cave, did not recognise the voice that called to him, and expected to see only the sailors,—who were still in front of the cave when he entered it (1217), and whom he regards as friends (1171). It is when he comes to the mouth of the cave, and sees Neoptolemus—the stealer of his bow—that he exclaims ὦμοι, κακὸν τὸ χρήμα. (For this use of χρήμα, familiar in Attic, cp. Ar. Vespr. 799 ὅρα τὸ χρήμα: ib. 834 τί ποτε τὸ χρήμ';)

μὼν τί μοι νέα...κακά; Bergk's correction νέα is confirmed by the κακά in the text of L. Probably κακόν was merely a conjecture made to suit μέγα,—a corruption which doubtless arose from the τι ('perchance,' O. T. 969) just before it.—πέμποντες, 'ushering in,' 'heralding': cp. Ant. 1286 ὦ κακάγγελτά μοι | προέμψας δ'αχ, 'O thou herald of evil, bitter tidings.' (The use of προέμψατε in 1205 is different.) His fear is that 1271 ε. τοιοῦτος is explained by πιστός etc.: cp. O. T. 435 ἡμεῖς τοιοῦτ' ἐφύμεν, ὡς μὲν σοὶ δοκεῖ, | μῶροι: O. C. 62 τοιαῦτά σοι ταῦτ' ἐστίν, ὥς ξέν', οὐ λόγοις | τιμῶμεν'.—πιστός, inspiring confidence: cp. 71.

1273 ἀλλ' οὐ τι μὴν: the same formula occurs in El. 817: and μὴν seems here better than the ν. L. μη.

1275 ε. παῖς: cp. O. C. 1751 n.—ἀν εἴπης γε. Dobree (Adv. II. 47) would alter γε to σὺ, comparing Eur. Bacch. 655 (σοφὸς σοφὸς σὺ), where σὺ, lost in the MSS., was restored by Porson from Chr. Patiens 1529. But γε is right. 'All thy words will be in vain (though I cannot resist force, if that be used).' He knows what their λόγοι are worth (cp. 1268 f., 1271).

1278 ε. ἀλλ' ἤθελον μὲν ἀν: cp. 1239: and for ἀλλὰ μὲν, 882 n.—πρὸς καιρόν=καιρῶς (O. T. 325 n.).—πέπαιμαι: for the perf., cp. 76 ὅλῳ. Similarly πεπαύσομαι (Ant. 91 n.).—πάντα γάρ: for this use of γάρ, marking assent, cp. Ant. 639.

 δολοῦμεθα] Corrected from δουλοῦμεθα in L. 1289 ἀγνοῦ—ὕψιστον] Wakefield

1281 κτήσε: cp. 1370: Ai. 1360 κτᾶσθαι φίλους: and for the constr. here, Eur. Or. 267 τὸ θεῖον δυσμενὲς κεκτήμεθα.

1282 εἰ ὅστις γ'. When ὅστις refers, with causal force, to a definite antecedent (O. T. 1184), the addition of γε to it is comparatively rare (in O. C. 810 ὅτω γε is not similar): while δὲ γε is frequent (663).—ἀπεστέρηκας, with acc. of the thing only: 931.

1284 ἐλθὼν implies, 'after robbing me, thou wilt not even leave me in peace.' Cp. Ai. 1276 ἐρρύσατ' ἐλθὼν μούνος.—ἐχθιστος γεγώς, having proved thyself a most hateful son of a noble sire. Achilles was φίλτατος to Ph. (242): the son has become ἐχθιστος by his theft of the bow.

The force of this passage will not be fully appreciated unless we remember that N. is now completely identified, in Ph.'s mind, with the action of Odysseus. Ph. was ready to allow that N.'s better instincts had been warped by evil guidance (971, 1014). But then he hoped that N. would restore the bow. Odysseus prevented this: N. made no direct reply to the last appeal (1066 f.), and carried off his prize.

Pierson's conjecture ἀσχιστος was approved by Porson, and has received weighty support from recent critics. Cp. 906 ἀσχερός φανούμαι. In Eur. Ph. 585 (= 594 Porson) ἀσχιστον is a v. l. for ἐχθιστον: in O. T. 1519 at least one late ms. has ἀσχιστος for ἐχθιστος: and in Ai. 1059 Triclinius gave ἐχθιστω for ἀσχιστω. But, as it seems to me, we should rather lose than gain by forsaking the mss. here.

1288 ἄρα seems the true correction of the ms. οὐκ ἄρα or οὐκ ἄρα. The expected answer to a question asked by ἄρα may be either 'yes' (Ant. 405), or 'no' (Ai. 1304): here it suits the suspense between fear and hope. ἄρ' οὐ is unsuitable; it would mean, 'Is it not clear that I am being deceived again?' When ἄρ' οὐ is used, the answer 'yes' is always inevitable, and the tone of the query is Never canst thou win the amity of my soul, thou who hast taken the stay of my life by fraud, and robbed me of it,—and then hast come here to give me counsel—thou most hateful offspring of a noble sire! Perdition seize you all, the Atreidae first, and next the son of Laertes, and thee! NE. Utter no more curses; but receive these weapons from my hand.

PH. What sayest thou? Am I being tricked a second time?

NE. No, I swear it by the pure majesty of Zeus most high!

PH. O welcome words,—if thy words be true!

NE. The deed shall soon prove the word:—come, stretch forth thy right hand, and be master of thy bow!

[As he hands the bow and arrows to Philoctetes, ODYSSEUS suddenly appears.]

OD. But I forbid it—be the gods my witnesses—in the name of the Atreidae and all the host!

PH. My son, whose voice was that? Did I hear Odysseus?

OD. Be sure of it,—and thou seest him at thy side,— conject. ἀγνόν—ὕψιστον.

1291 παρέσται] πάρεσται Γ, Hartung, Cavallin. Blaydes writes τάχ' ἔσται. 1292 πρότεινε] πρότεινε L (sic). The letters πρόντ have been ascribed to a corrector; but the whole word seems to have been written by the 1st hand. 1293 ὥς] Buttmann conject. ὦν: Reiske, ὦ: Tournier, ὦ: Cavallin, ὡς συλλίστασαν θεοί: O. Hense, ἐγὼ δ' ἀπαυδῶ, θεοὶ δέ μοι ξυλλίστορες.

1294 ὑπέρ τ' ἰ: ὑπέρ L, with most MSS. The restoration of τ' was probably due to Triclinius. 1295 f. L points thus: τέκνον· τίνος φώνημα· μὲν ὀδυσεύς | ἐπησθόμην; Blaydes, thus: τέκνον, τίνος φώνημα, μὲν Ὀδυσσεύς, | ἐπησθόμην; Nauck usually triumphant (see O. T. 540, 823, 828: O. C. 791, 883: Ai. 1034: El. 614). The other conjecture, οὐ γὰρ, is also inappropriate; that would mean, 'what, am I not being deceived again?' (as if a second fraud had been expected. Cp. 246: O. T. 1017: Ai. 1348.) The intrusion of οὐκ before ἀρα in the MSS. here may have been due to the scribe's reminiscence of passages in which the question πῶς εἶπας is followed by οὐ (246, O. T. 1017).

1289 ἀπώμωσ', 'I swear, 'No'' (like ἀπόφημι, 'I say 'No,' O. C. 317): Ar. Eq. 424 τοὺς θεοὺς ἀπώμωσεν. For the aor., cp. 1314: Ai. 536 ἐκήρεσ': ib. 693 ἐφριξ': El. 668 ἐδεξάμην: Eur. Hec. 1276 ἀπέπτωσ'.—ἀγνοῦ: cp. Aesch. Suppl. 652 Ζηνὸς ἱκτορας ἀγνοῦ. The fact that ἀγνόν is oft. an epithet of σέβας (as in O. T. 830) is no adequate reason for writing ἀγνόν...ὕψιστον here.

1291 παρέσται, 'shall be forthcoming' (in fulfilment of thy word,—cp. O. C. 726): φανερόν, 'before thine eyes'; cp. O. C. 910 ἐναργεῖς.

ὑπέρ τ': τε irregularly placed, as in 185: O. C. 33 τῆς ὑπέρ τ' ἐμοῦ | αὐτῆς θ' ὀρώσης.

1300 ᾧ, in reproof, as O. T. 1147 ᾧ, μὴ κόλαζε: Aesch. Ag. 1087 ᾧ, ποῖ ποτ' ἡγάγες με; the doubled ᾧ ᾧ also occurs in trimeters, as Eur. Or. 1598 OP. ἐσται τὰδ. ME. ᾧ ᾧ, μηδαμῶς δράσης τὰδε.

μεθῆς is altered to ἀφῆς by Nauck, who thinks that μέθες in 1301 caused the error. But two points claim notice. (1) μεθῆς, 'permit to escape from thy hand,' 'allow to fly,' is a more forcible word than ἀφῆς ('discharge') when, as here, the archer is at the very point of shooting. Cp. O. T. 784 τῷ μεθέντι τὸν λόγον, 'who had let that taunt escape him' (with n. there). Xen. Cyr. 4. 3 § 9 παλτὰ...οἷς καὶ μεθιέντες καὶ ἔχοντες χερσὶν αὐτῶν ('darts which will serve us, whether our hands release or retain them'). (2) μεθῆς is not suspicious, because μέθες in 1301 has a different application. Cp. n. on 762.

1301 μέθες με...χεῖρα: the second acc. defines the part: cp. Il. 11. 240 τὸν δ' ἄορι πληγῆς ἀνέχενα: Ant. 319 ὁ δρῶν σ' ἀνιᾷ τὰς φρένας.

1302 εἰ. τί μ' ἄνδρα πολέμιον κ.τ.λ. At first sight it might appear simplest to suppose that ἀφείλου governs a double accus., μὴ κτανεῖν being epexegetic ('thou hast robbed me of the man, so that I should not slay him'). But other passages show that there was an idiomatic use of ἀφαιρούμαι with the inf., in which it was nearly equivalent to κωλύω. Pindar I. 1. 60 πάντα δ' ἐξεπείν...ἀφαιρεῖται βραχὺ μέτρον ἔχων | ὕμνος, 'hinders from uttering.' Eur. Andr. 913 κἀκτεῖνας, ἣ τις συμφορὰ σ' ἀφείλετο; (i.e., τὸ κτεῖναι,—'prevented thee'). Eur. Tro. 1145 who will carry thee to the plains of Troy perforce, whether the son of Achilles will or no.

PH. But to thy cost, if this arrow fly straight.

NE. (seizing his arm). Ah, for the gods' love, forbear—launch not thy shaft! [Bends his bow.]

PH. Unhand me, in Heaven's name, dear youth!

NE. I will not. PH. Alas! why hast thou disappointed me of slaying my hated enemy with my bow?

NE. Nay, it suits not with my honour, nor with thine.

[Exit ODYSSEUS.]

PH. Well, thou mayest be sure of one thing,—that the chiefs of the host, the lying heralds of the Greeks, though brave with words, are cowards in fight.

NE. Good; the bow is thine; and thou hast no cause of anger or complaint against me.

PH. I grant it; and thou hast shown the race, my son, field transposed καλόν to the end of the v. Brunck, keeping the MS. order, changed τοῦτ' τοῦτ'. 1308 τοὺς τῶν Ἀχαιῶν] Blaydes writes τοῦ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν.

1308 τὰ μὲν δὴ τόξ' Α, with most of the later MSS., and Ald.: τὰ μὲν τοι τόξ' Harl., V²: τὰ μὲν τόξ' L (and so K). Wecklein conj. τὰ μὲν νυν τόξ': Seyffert, τὰ μὲν γε τόξ': Burges, τὰ μὲν σὰ τόξ'.—δου Turnebus: δπου MSS. 1310 φύσιν δ' δ' is omitted in L, Γ, B, K.

τὸ δεσπύτου τάχος | ἀφείλετ' αὐτὴν παῖδα μὴ δοῦναι τάφῳ, 'her master's haste deprived her of the power to bury her son.' So, here, the true construction seems to be, τί ἀφείλου με μὴ κτανεῖν ἄνδρα πολέμιον, 'why hast thou robbed me of the chance of slaying a foe?' In admitting, but not requiring, μὴ with the inf., this ἀφαιρούμαι is like other verbs of hindering. πολέμιον: for the tribrach in the 5th place, cp. O. T. 719 n. This is the rarest form of it (the last word of the verse being a 'paeon quartus'): cp. 1327: Aesch. Eum. 780 ἐγὼ δ' ἄτιμος ἢ τάλαινα βαρύκοτος.—ἐχθρόν τ': cp. 1323 πολέμιον δυσμενῇ θ'. He has avowed his hostility to the whole Greek army (1200), and can properly call Odysseus πολέμιος,—as Menelaus gives that name to Ajax (Ai. 1132).

1305 π. ἀλλ' οὖν...γε: cp. Ant. 84 n.—τοὺς πρ. στρατοῦ: for the omission of τοῦ, cp. Ant. 10 n.—ψευδοκήρυκας, lying heralds. The word alludes more particularly (as is indicated by ἐν δὲ τοῖς λόγοις θρασείας) to the protest which Odysseus has just made 'in the name of the whole army' (1293 f.), and to his threat at vv. 1257 f.:—it is not merely an equivalent for 'false envoy' (because he had executed his mandate by fraud). In Attic Tragedy the κῆρυξ was especially associated with unsuccessful bluster. Examples are afforded by the herald of Aegyptus (Aesch. Suppl. 836 ff.), the herald of Creon (Eur. Suppl. 399 ff.), and the herald of Eurystheus (id. Herac. 55 ff.). Menelaus plays a similar part when he forbids the burial of Ajax (Ai. 1047), and he is then attended by a κῆρυξ (id. 1115 πρὸς ταῦτα πλείους δούρο κήρυκας λαβὼν κ.τ.λ.). With ψευδοκῆρυξ cp. ψευδόμαντις (O. C. 1097): for the allusive plur., O. T. 366 n.—πρὸς αἰχμῇ: cp. Tr. 266 πρὸς τόξου κρίσιν.

ἐξ ἧς, since the φύσις, or inherited strain of the γένος, can stand in poetry for the γένος itself.—ἔβλαστες: for the ε before βλ, cp. El. 440 πασὼν ἔβλαστε, fr. 119 ἐπεὶ δὲ βλάσται, O. T. 717 παιδὸς δὲ βλάστας: also O. C. 972, Eur. fr. 432, fr. adesp. 376. So Eur. fr. 698 πτώχ' ἀμφίβλητα σώματος. On the other hand, the ι of περιβλέπω is regularly long (O. C. 996 n.).—οὐχὶ Σισύφου πατρός, explaining what precedes: ('thou hast shown, I say, that thou dost not spring from) Sisyphus.' It is simpler to supply βλαστῶν (from ἔβλαστες) than φύσιν. The gen. is influenced by the prep. before ἧς: for πατρός, cp. 3.—μετὰ ζώντων θ'. The θ', though wanting in L, seems genuine. For τε...δέ (instead of τε...τε), cp. Ant. 1096 n.—τεθνηκότων might be governed by μετά, but really depends rather on the unexpressed ἄριστα ἀκούει. The poet may have been thinking of Od. 11. 482 ff., σείο δ', Ἀχιλλεῦ, | οὔτις ἀνὴρ προπάραιθε μακάργατος οὐτ' ἄρ' ὀπίσσω | πρὶν μὲν γὰρ σε ζῶν ἐτίμεν ἴσα θεοῖσιν | Ἀργεῖοι, νῦν δ' αὐτε μέγα κρατέεις νεκρούσιν.

σὲ μὲν εὐ πράσσοντ' ἐπιχαίρω: Eur. Hipp. 1339 τοὺς γὰρ εὐσεβεῖς θεοὶ | θνητοκοντας οὐ χαίρουσι.—ἀμὸν for ἐμὸν is the best correction. The phrase πατέρα τὸν ἀμὸν occurs in El. 279, 588, 1496, and in the first two of those passages ἀμὸν in L has been made from ἐμὸν. Cp. 1118 above (ἀμᾶς for ἐμᾶς).—With ἦσθην πατέρα τε τὸν ἐμὸν, or ἦσθην γε πατέρα τὸν ἐμὸν, the rhythm is enfeebled by two consecutive tribrachs,—without the justification given in 1029 by the pause after ἄγετε. And γε would be somewhat weak.

1315 ἀν...σου τυχεῖν: for the double gen., cp. Xen. An. 5. 7. 33 οὐ δὲ δὴ πάντων οἰόμεθα τεύεσθαι ἐπαίνου ('in a case where we expect to win praise from all men'): and O. C. 1170 n.—ἐφίεμαι, 'desire,' with inf., as Thuc. 6. 6 ἐφίεμενοι...τῆς πάσης ἀρεῖν.

1316 ζ. τὰς μὲν ἐκ θεῶν τύχας δοθείσας: for this order (instead of δοθείσας τύχας), cp. Thuc. 7. 23 αἱ πρὸ τοῦ στόματος ἦναι ναυμαχοῦσαι: O. T. 1245 (n.): for ἐκ, O. T. 590 n.

1318 ἐκουσίοισιν, since, though Ph. could not have avoided the woes of the past ten years, their prolongation is now from which thou springest,—no child, thou, of Sisyphus, but of Achilles, whose fame was fairest when he was with the living, as it is now among the dead.

NE. Sweet to me is thy praise of my sire, and of myself; but hear the boon that I am fain to win from thee. Men must needs bear the fortunes given by the gods; but when they cling to self-inflicted miseries, as thou dost, no one can justly excuse or pity them. Thou hast become intractable; thou canst tolerate no counsellor; and if one advise thee, speaking with good will, thou hatest him, deeming him a foe who wishes thee ill. Yet I will speak, calling Zeus to witness, who hears men's oaths; and do thou mark these words, and write them in thy heart.

his own choice. Cp. El. 215 οἰκέλας εἰς ἅπας | ἐμπίπτεις. ἐκούσιος is in Attic either of two or of three terminations: cp. Tr. 727 ἐξ ἐκούσας, ib. 1123 ἐκούσια: Thuc. 8. 27 καθ' ἐκούσιαν (yet id. 7. 57 ἐκούσιος...στρατεία): Plat. Rep. 603 C βιαιούς ἢ ἐκούσας πράξεις. But of ἀκούσιος the fem. in -ια, -ιαί seems not to occur: cp. Plat. Legg. 861 E βλάβαι...ἀκούσῃα.—ἐγκαινται, 'are intent upon,' meaning here, 'persist in enduring,' though a release is offered to them. Cp. Eur. Andr. 91 ὁσπερ ἐγκείμεσθ' αἰεὶ | θρήνοι καὶ γόοι καὶ δακρύμασι, | πρὸς αἰθέρ' ἐκτενοῦμεν ἐμπέφυκε γὰρ | γυναῖξί τέρψις τῶν παρεστώτων κακῶν: where the sense is, 'to which I give my days.' So id. I. T. 144 Ἰδεθ' ὡς θρήνοις ἐγκειμαι: Ion 182 οἷς δ' ἐγκειμαι μόχθοις. But sometimes Eur. uses this verb as simply = κείμαι ἐν: Helena. 269 πολλαῖς συμφοραῖς ἐγκείμεθα ('are plunged in'): and so ib. 924.

1321 ε. ἡγρίωσαι expresses the temper which fiercely rejects friendly remonstrance (whereas in 226 ἀπηγγιωμένον referred to aspect): cp. Od. 8. 575 ἡμὲν ὅσοι χαλεποὶ τε καὶ ἄγριοι οὐδὲ δίκαιοι, | ἧε φιλόδενοι. So in Plat. Rep. 410 D ἀγρότης is associated with σκληρότης.—For οὐτε...τε, cp. 1363: O. C. 1397 n. Here, as often, the clause with τε expresses the contrary of that with οὐτε ('so far from accepting advice, you resent it'):

Her. 1. 63 ὅκως μήτε ἀλισθεῖεν ἐτι οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι, διεσκεδασμένοι τε εἴεν: cp. id. 1. 119 quoted above on v. 950.

1324 Ζῆνα ..ὄρκιον, Zeus, the guardian of oaths,—who punishes men who break them. In the βουλευτήριον at Olympia there was a statue of Ζεὺς Ὀρκίος, with a thunderbolt in each hand (Paus. 5. 24. 9). Cp. O. C. 1767 χῶ πάντ' ἄτων Διὸς Ὀρκος (n.). Eur. Hipp. 1025 νῦν δ' ὄρκιον σοι Ζῆνα καὶ πέδον χθονὸς | ὁμνυμι: id. Med. 208 τὰν Ζηνὸς ὄρκιον Θέμιν.

1325 γράφου φρενῶν ἔσω: so Aesch. Cho. 450 τοιαῦτ' ἀκούων ἐν φρεσὶν γράφου. More often this metaphor is developed by the word δέλτος (Aesch. P. V. 789, Soph. Tr. 683, fr. 537), or a derivative of it (Aesch. Suppl. 179 δελτοῦμένας, Eum. 275 δελτογράφω...φρενί).

γράφου. The midd. γράφομαι is used in prose also (apart from its legal sense, 'to indict') of writing down something for one's own use: cp. Her. 2. 82, 8. 135 (συγγραφάμενον), Plat. Theaet. 142 D. So ἀπογράφομαι, of taking an inventory (Lys. or. 12, § 8).

1327 ἔ. τὸν ἀκαλυφῇ σηκὸν = τὸ ὑπαίθριον τέμενος, the sacred precinct, open to the sky. This form ἀκαλυφῆς is similarly used by Arist. De Anim. 2. 9 (Berl. ed. 422 a 1), τὸ δσφραντικὸν αἰσθητήριον ἀκάλυφες (better ἀκαλυφές) εἶναι,—opp. to ἔχειν ἐπικάλυμμα). Here it is opposed to ὑπόστεγος or στεγανός. The word σηκός, in ref. to sacred places, properly means, as here, an enclosure without any roofed building (cp. Her. 4. 62), though poets sometimes use it as a general term for 'shrine': Eur. Ion 300 σηκοῦς... Τροφωνίου (his cave): [Eur.] Rhes. 501 εἰς Ἀθῆνας σηκόν. For ἀκαλυφῇ at the end of the v., cp. 1302 n.

κρύφιος οἰκουρῶν ὄφει. The epic version speaks merely of an ὀλοόφρων ὄδρος (Il. 2. 723). But the Attic poet feels that the mysterious significance of the event is enhanced, if the serpent which inflicted the bite is conceived as the φύλαξ of the shrine. Clearly Sophocles does not identify Chryse with any form of Athena; Chryse is, for him, a lesser deity: yet the associations of the Erechtheum have suggested the word οἰκουρῶν.

The sacred serpent in that temple,—representative of Erichthonius, and guardian of Athena Polias,—was regularly called οἰκουρὸς ὄφει. Hesych. οἰκουρὸν ὄφειν· τὸν τῆς Πολιάδος φύλακα δράκοντα. Ar. Lys. 758 ἀλλ' οὐ δύναμαι ἄνωγ' οὐδέ κοιμᾶσθ' ἐν πόλει (in the acropolis), | ἐξ οὗ τὸν ὄφειν εἶδον τὸν οἰκουρὸν ποτε. Her. 8. 41 λέγουσι Ἀθηναῖοι ὄφειν μέγαν φύλακα τῆς ἀκροπόλεως ἐνδαιτᾶσθαι ἐν τῷ ἱρῷ.—For the verb οἰκουρεῖν, cp. O. C. 343.

The sacred precinct of Chryse, with the serpent, is depicted on a στάμνος (wine-jar) of about 400 B.C., now in the Campana collection at the Louvre. The image of Chryse stands in the open air on a low pedestal; just in front of it is a low and rude altar, with fire burning on it; close to this is the serpent, at which Agamemnon is striking with his sceptre, while the wounded Philoctetes lies on the ground, with Achilles and others around him. See Introd. § 21.

1329 παῦλαν, subject to τυχεῖν: cp. 275 οἱ αὐτοῖς τύχοι. This is better than to make παῦλαν the object of τυχεῖν as = 'obtain': since the acc. after τυγχάνω is elsewhere a neut. pron. or adj., or art. with inf. (Ant. 778 n.). The correction of the ms. ἐντυχεῖν to ἂν τυχεῖν seems certain. In Aesch. P. V. 667 καὶ μὴ θέλοι, πυρῶπὸν ἐκ Διὸς μολεῖν | κεραυνόν, ὃς πᾶν ἐξαιστώσῃ γένος, the future sense of the simple aor. inf. is sufficiently marked by the context.—μήποτ'. The use of μή here is due rather to the notion of

Thou sufferest this sore plague by a heaven-sent doom, because thou didst draw near to Chryse's watcher, the serpent, secret warder of her home, that guards her roofless sanctuary. And know that relief from this grievous sickness can never be thy portion, so long as the sun still rises in the east and sets in the west, until thou come, of thine own free will, to the plains of Troy, where thou shalt meet with the sons of Asclepius, our

'feeling confident' than to the imperat.: cp. O. T. 1455 τοσοῦτόν γ' οἶδα, μήτε μ' ἀν νόσον | μήτ' ἄλλο πέρσαι μηδέν.

1330 f. ἔως ἂν is a certain emendation of ὥς ἂν, which would mean 'in whatever way,' 'however' (Al. 1369). But, 'however the sun may rise,' etc., could not stand for, 'so long as the sun continues to rise.' ὥς ἂν never means, or could mean, 'while.' For ἔως scanned as one syllable (by synizesis), cp. Il. 17. 727, Od. 2. 148. Cp. O. C. 1361 ἔωσπερ (ὥσπερ MSS.) ἂν ζῶ: Al. 1117 ἔως (ὥς MSS.) ἂν ἧς οἶός περ εἴ. —αὐτός ἥλιος. Cp. Her. 8. 143 νῦν τε ἀπάγγελλε Μαρδονίῳ ὥς Ἀθηναῖοι λέγουσι, ἔστ' ἂν ἥλιος τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδὸν εἴ τῇ περ καὶ νῦν ἔρχεται, μήποτε ὁμολογήσειν ἡμέας Ξέρξῃ. 'While the same sun rises,' etc., = 'while the sun rises as he now does.' It is possible that αὐτός may be a reminiscence of τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδὸν in Her.; at any rate it is decidedly more forcible here than Brunck's οὗτος, which he illustrates from Plut. Arist. 10, τὸν ἥλιον δείξας: ἀχρις ἂν οὗτος ταύτην πορεύηται τὴν πορείαν, Ἀθηναῖοι πολεμήσουσι Πέρσαι. The gesture implied by οὗτος would be superfluous here, since in saying ταύτη, τῇδε, he points to the east and to the west. (For the combination of these pronouns, cp. 841 n.) —αἶρη: there seems to be no other classical instance of this intrans. use; but cp. ἀνίσχω, ἀνέχω (of sunrise).

1332 ἐκὼν αὐτός, a pleonasm (used also by Eur. Ph. 476), like, 'of thine own free will.' The oracle had made the consent of Ph. a condition (612): the use of fraud was an unauthorised device of Odysseus (103).

1333 ἐντυχῶν with gen., instead of the usual dat., as in Her. 4. 140, quoted on v. 320, where see n. The gen. here (like that with συντυχῶν there) has a special warrant, since the idea is that of 'obtaining their aid.'

τῶν παρ' ἡμῖν...Ἀσκληπιδῶν: cp. Il. 2. 731 (referring to the warriors from Tricca, Ithomē and Oechalia in Thessaly), τῶν δ' αὖθ' ἡγεσθην Ἀσκληπιόο δύο παῖδε, | ἱητῆρ' ἀγαθῷ, Ποδολεῖριος ἡδὲ Μαχάων.—The form Ἀσκληπιδῆς, for Ἀσκληπιδῆος, occurs nowhere else, and is wrongly formed from Ἀσκληπιός. The rule for masc. patronymics is as follows:—(1) Stems in ā and -io- take the suffix -dā-, when ā becomes ā, and -io- becomes -ia-: as Ἀργεῖδ-δης from Ἀργεῖ-ās, Μενoitιάδ-δης from Μενoitio-s. (2) All other stems take -idā-, as Τανταλ-ιδῆς from Τανταλο-s. But the first formation is sometimes used by poets instead of the second, for metre's sake: e.g. Χαλκωδοντιάδης (Il. 2. 541) for Χαλκωδοντιδῆς, Τελαμωνιάδης (ib. 9. 623) for Τελαμωνιδῆς. And the converse licence is attested by Etym. Magn. p. 210. 11 (quoted by Herm.): οἱ δὲ ποιεῖται πολλάκις ἀποβάλλουσι τὸ α, οἶον, Ἐριχθονιάδης (from Ἐριχθόνιο-s), Ἐριχθονιδῆς. [The writer wrongly adds Τελαμωνιάδης, Τελαμωνιδῆς, as if the latter were the irregular form.] Ἐριχθονιδῆς occurs in C. I. 1. 411. The form Ἀσκληπιδῆς, then, though incorrect, may well be genuine.

This verse implies that both the sons of Asclepius were to have a part in the cure; and so in 1378 f. the plural is used. But, in the prevailing form of the legend, Machaon alone was the healer; probably because, in post-Homeric poetry, Machaon was the representative of surgery, as his brother was of medicine (cp. Preller, i. p. 409). So Lesches in the Little Iliad, acc.

to Proclus, p. 481 ed. Gaisford: the Orphic Λιθικά, 342 ff., where Machaon uses a powder made from a stone called ὀφιῆτις: Tzetzes, Posthom. 580 ff., where the stone is ἐχίητις: Propertius 2. 1. 59. An epic poet, Dionysius, represented Apollo as putting Ph. to sleep, when Machaon amputated the diseased part (Tzetzes on Lycophron 911: schol. Pind. P. 1. 109). Quintus Smyrnaeus is singular in making the healer Podaleirius (9. 463).

The scene of the cure occurs on a fragment of a bronze mirror (found in south Etruria, and ascribed to the 5th or 4th cent. B.C.), now in the archaeological Museum of the University of Bologna. It bears an Etruscan legend, Pheltute (Philoctetes), Machan (Machaon). The healer is in the act of bandaging the hero's foot; a sponge and a box of ointment rest on a sort of camp-stool (δῖφος ὀκλαδίας) between them. (Milani, Mito di F., pl. 111. 49; pp. 104 ff.)

This verse has been thought inconsistent with 1437: but see n. there.

43 σῶμα κουφισθῇ νόσου: so λωφᾶν, etc.—ξὺν τοῖσδε τόξοις, with its aid: cp. Xen. An. 3. 2. 8 σὺν τοῖς ὅπλοις...δίκην ἐπιθεῖναι αὐτοῖς. But σὺν with dat., in ref. to arms, is oft. no more than ἔχων with acc.; e.g. Il. 11. 251 στῇ δ' εὐράξ σὺν δουρὶ.—πέρσας φανῆς: the phrase suggests the glory of the exploit; cp. 1064: Thuc. 2. 11 κάλλιστον...πολλοὺς θῆτας ἐνὶ κόσμῳ χρωμένους φαίνεσθαι.

The language here is not strictly logical. It implies that, before the παῦλα can come, he must not only have been relieved (μαλαχθῆς), but also have taken Troy. The explanation seems to be simply that the writer was thinking of the victory as an event which was to follow closely on the cure. So, having used μαλαχθῆς, he subjoined καὶ...πέρσας φανῆς, instead of making the second statement independent of πρὶν ἂν (e.g., καὶ ἔπειτα πέρσας φανεῖ). It is much as if one said, 'You will never be cured until you find health and glory at Troy,'—instead of, 'find health at Troy,—where you will also find glory.' Schneidewin and others compare Ai. 106—110: θανεῖν γὰρ αὐτὸν ὅ τι πω θέλω...πρὶν ἂν...νῶτα φοινηχθεὶς θάνῃ.

comrades, and shalt be eased of this malady; and, with this bow's aid and mine, shalt achieve the capture of the Ilian towers.

I will tell thee how I know that these things are so ordained. We have a Trojan prisoner, Helenus, foremost among seers; who saith plainly that all this must come to pass; and further, that this present summer must see the utter overthrow of Troy: or else he is willing that his life be forfeit, if this his word prove false.

Now, therefore, that thou knowest this, yield with a good grace; 'tis a glorious heightening of thy gain, to be singled out as bravest of the Greeks,—first, to come into healing hands,—then to take the Troy of many tears, and so to win a matchless renown.

PH. O hateful life, why, why dost thou keep me in the light of day, instead of suffering me to seek the world of the dead?

writes χρη (which Blaydes cites from K). 1342 ψευσθῇ λέγων] ψευδῇ λέγῃ (γρ. λέγων) Γ. 1344 ἡ πίκτησις] Blaydes conj. ἡπικλησις (as= 'reputation'). 1345 κριθέντ' ἀριστον] Nauck conj. κληθέντ' ἀριστέων. 1347 κλέος from κλέουσ L. 1348 τί με, τί] Toup conj. τί μ' ἔτι: and so Nauck, Wecklein. 1349 ἀφήκας] ἀφήμ κας (sic) L. Herwerden conj. ἐφήκας.

The parallel would be closer if, there, we had φουνιχθῇ καὶ θάνῃ,—meaning φουνιχθῇ καὶ ἔπειτα θανεῖται.

We cannot remove the difficulty by supposing that μαλαχθῆς denotes merely alleviation, not cure; for the poet clearly thinks of the cure as preceding the victory (919 f.: 1345 ff.: 1424 ff.).

1336 ὡς δ' οἶδα ταῦτα κ.τ.λ. The report of the prophecy given by the pretended ἔμπορος in 603—613 was true as far as it went, but designedly incomplete. Neoptolemus, we must suppose, derived his knowledge from the Atreidae or Odysseus (cp. 114 ὡς ἐφάσκει): who, however, had omitted to tell him that the aid of the bow was indispensable to his own success (112 ff.).

1337 εἰ γὰρ as in 1326.—ἡμῶν ἔστιν ('we have a man,' etc.), rather than ἡμῶν ἔστιν (when the verb would be merely auxiliary to ἀλούς).—ἔλενος: see on 604 ff.: ἀριστόμαντις = ἀριστος μάντις, like ἀληθόμαντις (Aesch. Ag. 1241), ὀρθόμαντις (Pind. N. i. 92), etc.

1339 ὡς δὲ γενέσθαι ταῦτα: i.e., if Ph. consents to come (1332): if he does not, then Troy cannot be taken (611). The change of δεῖ to χρη is unnecessary, since δεῖ can equally well denote what is ordained by fate: cp. 998: 1397: O. T. 825.

1340 εἰ θέρως: so Verg. Aen. 3. 8 vix prima inceperat aestas. The general tradition was that Troy fell about the end of May (late in the Attic month Thargelion): cp. Plut. Camill. 19.—πᾶσαν, adverbial: cp. 386.—δίδωσ'... ἐαυτόν, offers himself, κτείναν, (for us) to slay: cp. 618: Ar. Nub. 440 τοῦτ' ὅ γ' ἐμὸν σῶμ' αὐτοῖσιν | παρέχω τύπτειν.

1348 εἰ στυγνὸς αἰὼν: for the nom., cp. 1186, 1213. αἰὼν is here tinged with the notion of 'fortune,' cp. 179.—ἄνω: cp. Ant. 1068 τῶν ἄνω (the living): El. 1167 ἡνικ' ἦσθ' ἄνω.—ἀφήκας...μολεῖν: for the inf. (which was unnecessary) cp. Her. 1. 194 τὸ πλοῖον... ἀπιεῖσι κατὰ τὸν ποταμὸν φέρεσθαι.

The one feeling which now makes Ph. waver is reluctance to repel the kindly entreaties of Neoptolemus. His hatred of the Greek chiefs is undiminished by the knowledge that they were unconscious instruments of destiny. Nor is he moved by the assurance of health and fame.

1352 εἰκάθω: cp. O. T. 651 n.—εἰς φῶς...εἴμι, into the public gaze: cp. 581: Xen. 1354 εἰ τὰ πάντ' ἰδόντες...κύκλοι. Although τὰ πάντα ἀμφ' ἐμοὶ could stand for τὰ ἀμφ' ἐμοὶ πάντα (cp. Ant. 659 n.), the interposed ἰδόντες here requires that ἀμφ' ἐμοὶ should be taken with it: literally, 'ye that, in my case, have seen all,'—i.e., 'ye that have seen all the wrong done to me' (τὰ περὶ ἐμὲ πάθῃ, schol.). Of the two readings, ἀμφ' ἐμοὶ (L) and ἀμφ' ἐμοῦ (A), the first has the better MS. authority; and though the second is more euphonic, that fact does not warrant a prefer-

κύκλοι has been explained as 'years' (schol.), 'the orbs of heaven' (Brunck, Buttmann). Camerarius saw the true meaning. Cp. O. C. 704 ὁ γὰρ αἰὲν ὁρῶν κύκλος ('eye') | λεύσσει νιν Μορίου Διός. O. T. 1270 ff.: ἔπαισεν ἄρθρα τῶν αὐτοῦ κύκλων, | αὐδῶν τοιαῦθ', ὁδοῦναι οὐκ ὀφείντο νιν | οὐδ' οἳ ἔπασχεν οὐθ' ὅποι' ἔδρα κακά.

Instead of saying, ποίοις δυμασι βλέπων (O. T. 1371 n.) ξενέσσομαι τοῖς Ἀτρέως παισίν, he asks how his own eyes could endure to see it. These are the words of one who has brooded for years on every aspect of his own wrongs,—wrestling with misery in solitude. His own faculties are his comrades. Compare 1004 ὦ χεῖρες: Tr. 1090 (Heracles in his agony), ὦ νῶτα καὶ στέρῃ, ὦ φίλοι βραχίονες, | ὑμεῖς ἐκείνοι δὲ καθέστατ', κ.τ.λ.

1358 οὐ γὰρ με τᾶλγος κ.τ.λ. 'How can I return to the Atreidae? For it is not merely a question of forgetting the past; I dread the future.' He does not mean that he has ceased to resent the former wrongs, but only that his present resolve is influenced less by resentment than by fear.

Ah me, what shall I do? How can I be deaf to this man's words, who hath counselled me with kindly purpose? But shall I yield, then? How, after doing that, shall I come into men's sight, wretched that I am? Who will speak to me? Ye eyes that have beheld all my wrongs, how could ye endure to see me consorting with the sons of Atreus, who wrought my ruin, or with the accursed son of Laertes?

It is not the resentment for the past that stings me,—I seem to foresee what I am doomed to suffer from these men in the future; for, when the mind hath once become a parent of evil, it teaches men to be evil thenceforth. And in thee, too, this conduct moves my wonder.

from κακόν: hence Seyffert reads κακού. 1361 τάλλα MSS. (except Harl., which has καὶ τάλλα).—κακούς Dobree and Doederlein: κακά MSS. See comment. 1362 καὶ σοῦ δ' MSS. (except B, which has καὶ σοῦ γ'). Porson (on Eur. Or. 614 = 622 Dind.) conj. καὶ, σοῦ δ': Nauck, σέθεν δ'.—τόδε] τάδε Triclinius.

a man's mind has (once) become a mother of evil deeds, it trains him to be evil in everything else,—i.e., in all subsequent deeds. For κακούς as proleptic predicate, cp. Ant. 475 n.; Eur. Med. 296 παῖδας περισσῶς ἐκδιδάσκεσθαι σοφούς.

A decision between the conj. κακούς and the MS. κακά demands care. I prefer κακούς, for these reasons. (1) κακά, if retained, would naturally suggest this sense:—'When a man's mind has once given birth to evil (counsels), it trains the rest also (i.e., his actions) to be evil.' But the antithesis here is between the earlier and the later bad deeds; not between bad counsels and bad deeds. (2) The effect of κακούς is to indicate that τάλλα stands in antithesis, not with κακῶν only, but with the whole preceding clause, and thus to suggest its true sense, viz., 'in all that follows.' (3) It is true that the image, μήτηρ γέννεται, is then no longer consistently maintained; but this very failure to persevere with a metaphor is Sophoclean (cp. n. on O. T. 866). μήτηρ γέννεται is a poetical equivalent for, 'make a beginning of.' Hence the poet felt that he did not require ἅπαξ, though we should naturally add 'once.' The same delicate economy may be observed in Ant. 584 οἷς γὰρ ἂν σεισθῇ θεόθεν δόμος, ἅτας | οὐδὲν ἐλλείπει: 'For when a house hath (once) been shaken from heaven, there the curse fails nevermore.' The change of κακούς into κακά might easily have been caused by τάλλα.—See Appendix.

J. S. IV.

1362 καὶ σοῦ δ'. The formula καὶ... δέ means 'and...also,' with an emphasis on the intervening word. This is the only instance in Soph.: it occurs, however, in Aesch. P. V. 973 (καὶ σέ δ' ἐν τούτοις λέγω), Eum. 65; Eur. El. 1117 (καὶ σὺ δ' αὐθάδης ἐφύς): Ar. Pax 250: and oft. in Attic prose. The usual account of it is that the καὶ = 'also,' while δέ = 'and.' This suits those instances in which, as here, καὶ...δέ is preceded by a full stop, or by a pause; but it is less natural where καὶ...δέ links a new clause to a preceding one in the same sentence; as in Thuc. 4. 24 καὶ μάλιστα ἐνήγον (τοὺς Συρακοσίους) οἱ Λοκροὶ τῶν Ῥηγίωνων κατὰ ἐχθραν, καὶ αὐτοὶ δὲ ἐσεβεβλήθησαν κ.τ.λ.: id. 6. 71 ὅπως μὴ παντάπασιν ἱπποκρατῶνται, καὶ χρήματα δὲ ἅμα αὐτόθεν τε συλλέγωνται καὶ παρ' Ἀθηναίων ἐλθῇ, κ.τ.λ. Examples of the latter class clearly suggest that, in the combination καὶ...δέ, καὶ was the conjunction, while δέ, 'on the other hand,' added the force of 'also.' Cp. the well-known use of δέ with the pron. after a voc: Ἀντιγόνη, σὺ δ' ἐνθάδε | φύλασσε, O. C. 507 n.

θαυμάσας ἔχω = τεθαύμακα (emphatic): cp. Plat. Phaedr. 257 C τὸν λόγον δὲ σου πάλαι θαυμάσας ἔχω, and ib. 258 B τεθαυμάκωτες. This constr. of θαυμάζω with gen. of pers. and acc. of thing is common (Plat. Phaedo 89 A, etc.): the gen. is properly possessive ('I wonder at this in you'). We find also the gen. with a dependent clause in place of the acc. (Xen. H. 2. 3. 53 ὅμων...θαυμάζω εἰ μή 1365 Z. [οἱ τὸν ἄθλιον...ἐκριναν·] Brunck was the first to reject these words as interpolated. 1366 καμ' Brunck: καὶ μ' MSS.—ἀναγκάζεις] Cavallin reads ἀναγκάσεις.—τόδε] In L there is an erasure after the ο: it may have been ω. Of the later MSS. some have τόδε, others (as A) τάδε. 1367 ἀλλ' ἃ μοι ξυνώμοσας MSS. Blaydes, on his own conject., reads ἀλλά μ', δ ξυνήρεσας (this verb was proposed βοηθήσετε); and the gen. alone (Lys. or. 7 § 23 καὶ τούτου μὲν οὐ θαυμάζω).—τόδε: this advice of thine that I should go to Troy.

1368 Z. For μήτε...τε cp. 1321 n.—οἱ γε=ἐπεὶ ἐκέينو: cp. O. C. 263 (n. on οἴτινες): the plur. is implied in Τροίαν: cp. ib. 941.—καθύβρισαν with gen., as O. C. 960.

1365 πατρός γέρας, the arms, wrought by Hephaestus, which were a gift of honour to Achilles (cp. n. on σέβας ὑπέρτατον in 402). It would strain the words to render them, 'a gift of honour (bequeathed to thee) from thy sire.'

1366 ἀναγκάζεις with double acc.:

cp. O. T. 280. The pres. tense, expressing endeavour, is quite compatible with εἰ ('dost thou intend to go...', and art thou trying to force...?').—τόδε (L) = τὸ λέγει ξυμμαχήσοντα. The occurrence of the same form in 1362 is no argument for τόδε: cp. 88 n.

1367 ξυνώμοσας has been needlessly changed to ξυνήρεσας, a weaker word. The sense here is, 'thou didst make a compact with me, confirmed by thine oath' (813, 941). This is but a slight deflection,—surely permissible for poetry,—from the ordinary sense, 'to take an oath along with another person.'

1368 πέμψον without με: cp. 801 n.

1369 ἔα κακῶς κ.τ.λ. The absence of caesura has the effect of allowing the words to fall from the speaker's lips with

It behoved thee never to revisit Troy thyself, and to hinder me from going thither; seeing that those men have done thee outrage, by wresting from thee the honours of thy sire; [they, who in their award of thy father's arms, adjudged the hapless Ajax inferior to Odysseus:]—after that, wilt thou go to fight at their side,—and wouldest thou constrain me to do likewise?

Nay, do not so, my son; but rather, as thou hast sworn to me, convey me home; and, abiding in Scyros thyself, leave those evil men to their evil doom. So shalt thou win double thanks from me, as from my sire, and shalt not seem, through helping bad men, to be like them in thy nature.

NE. There is reason in what thou sayest; nevertheless, I would have thee put thy trust in the gods and in my words, and sail forth from this land with me, thy friend.

PH. What! to the plains of Troy, and to the abhorred son of Atreus,—with this wretched foot?

NE. Nay, but to those who will free thee and thine ulcered limb from pain, and will heal thy sickness.

PH. Thou giver of dire counsel, what canst thou mean?

a certain deliberate emphasis: cp. 101 n. By ἀπόλλυσθαι he means the failure and ruin at Troy with which the gods will visit the Greeks: cp. 1035 ff. For κακῶς...κακούς cp. 166 n.

1370 ε διπλὴν μὲν...διπλὴν δέ: epanaphora (cp. Ant. 200 n.). The χάρις will be διπλῇ because he will have rescued Philoctetes, and also forsaken the Atreidae. Here he thinks of his father as still living: cp. n. on 1209 f.

1374 πιστεύσαντα, 'in reliance' upon the divine oracle, and upon the report of it given by N. (1336—1343). Though πιστεύω sometimes = 'obey' (Tr. 1228), it is unnecessary to suppose that sense here.

1377 The words τῷδε δυστήνῃ ποδί (dat. of circumstance) have a compressed dramatic force. 'What,—go to Agamemnon,—when I hear about with me this plague which caused him to cast me forth?'

1373 ε. μὲν οὖν: O. T. 705 n.—σε τήνδε τ' ἔμπυον βάσιν: the phrase recalls those in which Ph. himself had spoken of the ulcered limb as if it had a being distinct from his own (786, 1188, 1202). Cp. O. C. 750 αἰεὶ σε κηδεύουσα καὶ τὸ σὸν κάρα.—ν was short in πύον and ἔμπυος (as in Lat. pulcr), though long in πύθω (as in pulcr, pulidus): Empedocles 336 πύον ἐπλετο λευκόν: Andromachus (flor. circ. 50 A.D.) ap. Galen p. 876 καὶ μογερῶν στέρνων ἀπολύεται ἔμπυον ἰλύν.—κάποσώσοντας is a necessary correction here (cp. cr. n.).

1380 αἶνον αἰνέσας. Though one sense of αἶνος was a story with a moral (Hes. Op. 200), it could hardly have been used as it is here, in the sense of 'advice,' unless the meaning had been helped out by the cognate verb. Cp. Aesch. Ch. 555 αἰνῶ δὲ κρύπτειν τάδε συνθήκας ἐμάς ('I recommend').

part.), 'what I see is in the way of being accomplished with the best results' for us: i.e., what promises such results, if it be done. The pres. part., implying that the action is already in train, suits the speaker's hopeful tone. I should not, then, take τελούμενα as fut. part. with pass. sense; esp. as there is no clear example in Attic of τελούμαι as fut. pass., while τελούμενος as pres. part. pass. is frequent (e.g. O. T. 797, El. 1344).

1382 ζ. καὶ ταῦτα λέξας κ.τ.λ. The question of Ph. is, 'Art thou not ashamed before heaven of pretending that a return to Troy is for my good?' (For καταισχύνει with acc., cp. O. T. 1424.) Now, if we retain in 1383 the MS. ὠφελούμενος, Neoptolemus replies,—'Why should one be ashamed, when he is receiving a benefit?' This would be a sentiment like that of Odysseus in 111, ὅταν τίς δρᾷς εἰς κέρδος, οὐκ ὀκνεῖν πρέπει. But the rejoinder of Ph. shows that N. cannot have so spoken; for Ph. asks,—'Dost thou mean a benefit to the Atreidae, or to me?' N.'s words, then, must have been to this effect,—'Why should one be ashamed, when he is conferring a benefit?' If, therefore, ὠφελούμενος is to be kept, it must be midd., not pass., 'benefiting.'

There are some instances of rare midd. forms in Soph. (as ποθομένα...φρενί=ποθοῦση in Tr. 103): but they usually occur in contexts which exclude the pass. sense. Here, a midd. ὠφελούμενος would be too ambiguous. The pass. sense of that form was familiar, whereas the midd. sense is unexampled.

Of emendations, Heath's ὠφελουμένους is the most attractive at first sight. But, if θεοῖς be left in 1382, then ὠφελουμένους could refer to nothing else: and such phrases as τῷ...δαίμονι...σύμμαχος πέλω (O. T. 244), or τῷ θεῷ βοηθῶν (Plat. Apol. 23 B), certainly do not warrant a description of the gods as 'benefited' when they are obeyed. ὠφελουμένων (gen. absol.), 'when people are being benefited,' would be too vague.

I am persuaded, then, that the fault in ὠφελούμενος is not confined to the termination. Buttman's conjecture, ὠφελων φίλους, gives precisely what is required; since φίλους, in N.'s mouth, might well suggest Ph.'s reply in 1384, λέγεις δ' Ἀτρείδαις κ.τ.λ. The origin of the corruption may have been the resemblance of the syllables φΕΑ and φΙΑ, leading a careless scribe to erase the second of them.

PH. Hast thou no shame that the gods should hear those words?

NE. Why should a man be ashamed of benefiting his friends?

PH. Is this benefit to the Atreidae, or for me?

NE. For thee, I ween: I am thy friend, and speak in friendship.

PH. How so, when thou would'st give me up to my foes?

NE. Prithee, learn to be less defiant in misfortune.

PH. Thou wilt ruin me, I know thou wilt, with these words.

NE. I will not; but I say that thou dost not understand.

PH. Do I not know that the Atreidae cast me out?

NE. They cast thee out, but look if they will not restore thee to welfare.

and the statement has been repeated by other editors. But the τάδε in L is clear, and there has been no erasure (see Autotype Facsimile, p. 95 A, l. 12 from bottom). L's reading, τάδε, is possibly right (cp. O. C. 883 ἄρ οὐχ ὕβρις τᾷδ'); but I prefer τόδε in this direct reference to the last speaker's phrase (ὠφελῶν).

1385 σοί που. The particle conveys the assurance with a shade of friendly irony ('thy good, I should rather think')—which marks surprise at Ph.'s question. Seyffert overlooks this when he objects to που here as having 'dissimulationis aliquid.'

expansion of the st. ἑτα, like μεγιστᾶν from μέγιστος, is the most probable one.' (In earlier editions he had inclined to the theory that τᾶν is an old form of τύ, τύνη.) Others favour the view that τᾶν comes from τάλαν.

θρασύνεσθαι κακοῖς, to become too bold, to show contumacy, amid troubles. The dat. is not causal, but rather a dat. of circumstance, expressing the idea, 'in time of misfortune.' Cp. the use of the dat. with regard to festivals (Ar. Av. 1519 Θεσμοφορίοις νηστεύομεν: Ant. 691 n.).

1388 ὀλεῖς με, wilt work my ruin by these persuasions,—i.e., if thou prevail on me to go to Troy. The addition of σε to γινώσκω has been suggested by the common idiom, γινώσκω σε διτι ὀλεῖς: the sense is not, 'I now see through thee'; and the dat. τοῖσδε τοῖς λ. should therefore be taken with ὀλεῖς, not with γινώσκω.

Cp. 1332.—ἰδεῖν is right: the variant ἑλεῖν arose from the likeness of Δ to Λ, helped, perhaps, by a reminiscence of vv. 347, 998, 1347. μολεῖν would be feeblor. It is made easier by the fact that δύναμαι is used in the fut. tense; not because the fut. indic. can be regarded as attracting the inf. into the same tense; but because, 'we shall not be able to persuade,' implies, 'we cannot hope to persuade.' Cp. Thuc. 3. 28 γνόντες δὲ οἱ ἐν τοῖς πράγμασιν οὐτ' ἀποκωλύσειν δυνατοὶ ὄντες, εἴ τ' ἀπομωθήσονται τῆς ξυμβάσεως, κινδυνεύοντες κ.τ.λ. (where the MSS. agree in ἀποκωλύσειν, and ἀποκωλύειν is merely a conjecture). If πέσειν were to be altered, πείσαι would be more probable than πείθειν. See Appendix.

1398 εἰ ἦνεσας=ἐξηνέσας (cp. 122), ὠμολόγησας.—θιγῶν: cp. 813.—πέμπειν. Here the inf. merely defines the action to which the pron. & refers: the fut. inf. was therefore unnecessary: and the pres. inf. has been used, rather than the aor., because 'sending' is thought of as a process, not as a momentary act. Similarly the pres. (or aor.) inf. is sometimes used, rather than the fut., when the notion of fut. time is sufficiently expressed by the principal verb: cp. Thuc. 3. 13 ὥστε οὐκ εἰκὸς αὐτοὺς περιουσίαν νεῶν ἔχειν, ἦν

PH. Never,—if I must first consent to visit Troy.

NE. What am I to do, then, if my pleading cannot win thee to aught that I urge? The easiest course for me is that I should cease from speech, and that thou shouldest live, even as now, without deliverance.

PH. Let me bear the sufferings that are my portion; but the promise which thou madest to me, with hand laid in mine,—to bring me home,—that promise do thou fulfil, my son; and tarry not, nor speak any more of Troy; for the measure of my lamentation is full.

NE. If thou wilt, let us be going. PH. O generous word!

1401 τεθρήνηται L, with most MSS.: τεθρήληται K (marg.): τεθρύλληται Harl.: τεθρύλληται Herm., whom Seyffert and Hartung follow.—λόγους L, but with marginal note by S, γρ. γόους· πολλά διὰ Τροίαν πέπονθα φησίν. I also has λόγους, γρ. γόους: A and B, λόγους: most of the later MSS., γόους. 1402 εἰ δοκεῖ...ἔπος. Porson (Praef. ad Hec. p. xlv) first pointed out the metrical fault, and in Miscell Crit. p. 197 proposed to omit εἰ δοκεῖ, so as to make an iambic trimeter. Keeping the trochaic tetrameter, Erfurdt would change ὦ γενναῖον to ὦ μέγ' ἀγανόν: Wecklein, to ὦδε. ΦΙ. κενόν: B. Todt, to ἦδη. ΦΙ. κλεινόν: Nauck, to ΦΙ. ἰσθι κενόν: Blaydes (after a writer in Class. Journ. v. 39), to ΦΙ. εὐ γ', ὦ φίλτατ'...ἔπη.

ὕμεις...ἔπεσβάλλετε: and id. 1. 81 οὕτως εἰκὸς Ἀθηναίους...μήτε...δουλεῦσαι κ.τ.λ.

1400 ε βράδυνε, here intrans., as in Aesch. Suppl. 730 εἰ βραδύνοιμεν βοῆ, Plat. Rep. 528 D σπεύδων...μᾶλλον βραδύνω, etc. Others take it transitively ('delay us,' or 'delay the matter'). So ταχύνω also is either trans. or intrans.—τεθρήνηται, impersonal.—γόους is better than λόγους, which may have arisen through the scribe's eye wandering to v. 1393. The very name of Troy renews the memory of his sorrows; and lamentation has been his portion too long. He would fain turn to thoughts of home. Some supply Τροία as subject to τεθρήνηται: this seems less fitting here. If τεθρύλληται were read, then, indeed, Τροία would be the subject; 'its name has been heard often enough in my laments' (satis decantata est...). But this v. l. seems to have arisen merely from the corruption τεθρήληται.

1402 εἰ δοκεῖ, στείνωμεν. In a trochaic tetrameter the end of the fourth foot regularly coincides with the end of a word. This verse breaks the rule. The only other exception is Aesch. Pers. 165, ταῦτά μοι διπλῇ μέρμυ' ἀφραστός ἐστιν ἐν φρεσίν, where Porson wished to place διπλῇ after φρεσίν, and Hermann, to read μέρμυα φραστός. Hermann holds that the breach of rule here is excused by the pause after στείνωμεν. This I believe to be the true explanation. As στείνωμεν is the signal that the prayer of Ph. has at last been granted, it demands emphasis. The unusual rhythm—which would be too harsh in a continuous verse—here serves to accentuate the joyful surprise of Philoctetes.

A reference to the critical note will show how unsatisfactory have been the attempts to alter the words, ὦ γενναῖον εἰρηκῶς ἔπος. Porson's fine instinct refrained from any such attempt; he felt that, if the verse was to be amended, only one remedy was tolerable,—viz., to strike out εἰ δοκεῖ, and leave an iambic trimeter. In favour of this view, it might be said that a scribe, or an actor, who wished to make v. 1402 into a tetrameter, might have been led to εἰ δοκεῖ by a reminiscence of 526 and 645: though we cannot concede to Burges that the spuriousness of εἰ δοκεῖ is bewrayed by the lack of the usual ἀλλά before it. The absence of ἀλλά merely renders εἰ δοκεῖ a little more abrupt.

But the real difficulty in Porson's view arises from a consideration of the whole context. The transition from iambic to trochaic metre marks, as usual, a stirring moment,—here, the moment of setting out for the ship. It seems clear, then, that the words which first announce the departure should open the trochaics, rather than close the iambs. So in Eur. Phoen. 588, after the iambic dialogue between Iocasta and Eteocles, the first trochaic verse spoken by the latter is the sign that his fatal resolve is taken,— μῆτερ, οὐ λόγων ἔθ' ἀγών κ.τ.λ. Cp. also O. T. 1515 ff.

1408 ἀντέρειδε, plant firmly (on the ground). Lucian (perhaps with a reminiscence of this v.) uses the word of one who refuses to move,—τῷ πόδε ἀντερείδων πρὸς τοῦδαφος (Κατάπλους § 4). Cp. Anthol. 12. 84 ἐπὶ γαῖαν, ... ἔχνος ἐρείδμενος. This is better than to render, 'lean thy steps on mine.'

1407 After πελάζειν the MSS. have σῆς πάτρας. NE. ἀλλ' εἰ δρᾶς ταυθ', ὥσπερ αὐδαῖς. This is probably an interpolation, which may have arisen in the first instance from σῆς πάτρας, a gloss explanatory of πελάζειν, the rest being then added, to supply a supposed defect of metre. Some of the attempts which have been made to expand the words, ἀλλ' εἰ δρᾶς ταυθ', ὥσπερ αὐδαῖς, will be found in the Appendix. Seyffert's is the best,—ἀλλ' εἰ σὺ δὴ | ταῦτα δράσεις, ὥσπερ αὐδαῖς: but no one of them is very probable. To the objection that, without these words, στείχε becomes too abrupt, we may perhaps reply that the decision of Neoptolemus has really been taken; these last misgivings which flit across his mind are not causes of serious hesitation. Thus the simple στεῖχε—implying his inward contentment with the answer, εἰρξω πελάξειν—is in truer harmony with the context than a form of words which would suggest that his consent depended, even now, on an explicit assurance.

1409 μήπω γε κ.τ.λ. This is one of the instances in which the appearance of the 'deus ex machina' is not preceded by any notice in the text. Similar cases are those of Athena in Eur. I. T. 1435 and Suppl. 1183, and the Dioscuri in Helen. 1642. It may be inferred that in these instances the apparition was a sudden one,—effected, perhaps, by the actor coming out upon a high platform (θεολογαίον) at the back of the scene. When, on the other hand, the approach of the deity is described in the text (e.g. Eur. Androm. 1227 ff.), he was probably lowered, or raised, by machinery. (Cp. A. Müller, Griech. Bühnenalterthüm., pp. 131 ff.) The nine anapaests here are spoken as Heracles moves forward.—

1411 f. φάσκειν δ': inf. as imperat.: cp. 57. For this use of φάσκειν, as = 'deem,' cp. O. T. 462 n.—ἀκοή τε κλύειν. If we had simply, αὐδὴν τε κλύειν, λεύσσειν τ' ὅσιν, the misplacing of the first τε would be of a common kind (cp. O. T. 258 n.): the further peculiarity here is that ἀκοή τε κλύειν suggests ὀφθαλμοῖς τε λεύσσειν, as if the object of both verbs were the person.

1418 καὶ πρῶτα μὲν would properly have been answered in 1421 by ἔπειτα δὲ (καὶ σοὶ τοῦτο ἐπαγγέλλομαι): but meanwhile the thought of sequence in the topics yields to that of parallelism between the two cases; and so in 1421 we have simply καὶ σοί, κ.τ.λ.—The phrase τὰς ἐμὰς λέξω τύχας might naturally seem the prelude to a fuller recital: but the meaning is simply this;—‘I have to tell thee that, after many sufferings, I have been received among the gods; and for thee, too, suffering is to end in glory.’

1420 ἀθάνατον ἀρετὴν, ‘deathless glory.’ The difficulties felt regarding ἀρετὴν have arisen from the words ὥς πάρεσθ' ὀράν, which imply some visible sign, and thus suggest that ἀθάνατος ἀρετὴ means something more than undying fame of prowess. But no emendation is probable (see cr. n.). And the soundness of the text will appear from two considerations.

(1) The use of ἀρετὴ as ‘reputation won by merit’ was familiar: e.g., Lycurgus In Leocr. § 49 (quoted by Cavallin) τὰ γὰρ ἄλλα τοῦ πολέμου τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς ἀνδράσιν ἐστὶν ἐλευθερία καὶ ἀρετή. By an easy transition, this idea of fame won by deeds passed into that of ‘distinction’: cp. Theog. 29 μὴδ' αἰσχροῖσιν ἐπ' ἐργασμι μὴδ' ἀδίκουσιν | τιμὰς μὴδ' ἀρετὰς ἔλκεο μὴδ' ἄφενος: ‘and do not, by shameful deeds or unjust, grasp at honours, or distinctions, or wealth’: where the τιμαὶ refer to office or rank, and the ἀρεταί, as the context shows, also denote pre-eminence recognised in some external form.

(2) The force of the epithet should be observed. When Plato says, ὑπὲρ ἀρετῆς ἀθανάτου...πάντες πάντα ποιοῦσιν (Symp. 208 D), the ἀθάνατος ἀρετῇ is the reputation which survives on earth. But here ἀθάνατος ἀρετῇ is ‘the distinction of one who has been made immortal’: i.e., ‘deathless glory’ here means ‘glorious immortality.’ Thus the peculiar sense of ἀρετὴν is helped by that sense which the context gives to ἀθάνατος.

1421 ε. τοῦτ' is explained by the next v.; cp. τοῦτο in 1440.—ἐκ, not merely ‘after’ (720), but ‘as a result of,’ ‘through.’—εὐκλεᾶ θέσθαι, make it

First I would tell thee of mine own fortunes,—how, after enduring many labours to the end, I have won deathless glory, as thou beholdest. And for thee, be sure, the destiny is ordained that through these thy sufferings thou shouldest glorify thy life.

Thou shalt go with yon man to the Trojan city, where, first, thou shalt be healed of thy sore malady; then, chosen out as foremost in prowess of the host, with my bow shalt thou slay Paris, the author of these ills; thou shalt sack Troy; the prize of valour shall be given to thee by our warriors; and thou shalt carry the spoils to thy home, for the joy of Poëas thy sire, even to thine own Oetaean heights. And whatsoever spoils thou receivest from that host, 1424 ε. πρώτων μὲν...ἀρετῇ τε. The μὲν here is not correlative to αἱ δ' in 1431: it is followed by τε: cp. 1058 n. So in 1426 ff., Πάριν μὲν...πέρσεις τε. Possibly τε ought to be δέ in one of the two places, or in both: but, in each case, the τε may be a trace of the somewhat careless writing which appears in this speech.—ἐκκρίθεις, as Menelaus was for the μονομαχία with Paris (Il. 3), and Ajax for that with Hector (Il. 7).

1426 Πάριν: the slaying of Paris by Ph. was told by Lesches in the Little Iliad, and must have come into the Φιλοκτήτης ἐν Τροίᾳ of Sophocles.—αἰτίος κακῶν: cp. Alcman fr. 31 Δύσπαρις αἰνός-παρις, κακὸν Ἑλλάδι βωτιανείρη. Attius Philocteta fr. 18 Pari dyspari, si impar esses tibi, ego nunc non essem miser.

1428 ε. σκύλα γ: κ.τ.λ. These spoils constitute the ἀριστεία. For the custom of hanging up such σκύλα in temples or houses, cp. Aesch. Ag. 577: Theb. 278: Eur. I. 7. 74: Verg. Aen. 1. 247 ff., 3. 286 ff., etc.

ἐκλαβὼν is a more probable correction than ἐκλαχὼν of the MS. ἐκβαλὼν. The force of the compound is, 'having received from the hands of the army,'—as a reward due to him. So ἐκλαμβάνειν is said of receiving what is surrendered under a treaty (Isocr. or. 5 § 100 τὴν Ἀσίαν... παρὰ τῶν Ἑλλήνων ἐν ταῖς συνθήκαις ἐξέλαβεν): or of receiving 'in full' (Plat. Legg. 958 D δίκας...ἐκλαβόντι). Cp. Her. 8. 123 where, after Salamis, the στρατηγοὶ meet at the Isthmus, ἀριστεία δώσοντες τῷ ἀξιώσῳ, and vote by laying ψῆφοι on Poseidon's altar.

πέμψας seems here to mean 'convey' (implying triumphal pomp): though elsewhere this use seems restricted to the escorting of persons (1368, 1399). It may, however, mean merely 'send' in advance (as in the Trach. Heracles sends his captives before him with the κήρυξ).—Πόλαντι: Ph. thus learns that his father is indeed alive.

1431 αἱ δ' ἂν λάβης κ.τ.λ.: 'and whatsoever spoils thou receivest from that army (the Greek στρατεύματος of 1429), (from those spoils) take memorials of my bow (i.e., a thank-offering for its work) to my pyre.' A portion of the σκύλα is to be dedicated to Heracles on Mount Oeta; where in historical times such relics were doubtless shown at the so-called Pyra (Liv. 36. 30: Introd. § 1).

After the relative clause, αἱ δ' ἂν...λάβης, we understand, not ταῦτα (in apposition with μνημεῖα), but a partitive gen., τούτων. This construction is a simple and natural one. For the partitive gen. thus understood, cp. n. on 1161 f., and Xen. Cyr. 8. 1. 20 quoted there. The 1437—1440 ἐγὼ δ'...ἀλῶναι. Jacob (Quaest. Sophocl., 1822) suspected that these words were spurious; this is also the view of Leutsch (Philol. xi. 777). Schenkel (Zeitschr. f. die Oesterr. Gymn., 1870, p. 699) would recast the whole passage from sentence could have no ambiguity for a Greek audience, familiar with the custom that, after a victory, a part of the spoil (usually a δεκάτη) should be dedicated to the gods. Cp. Her. 8. 121 (after the battle of Salamis) διεδόσαντο τὴν λήην καὶ τὰ ἀκροθνία ἀπέπεψαν ἐς Δελφούς. Xen. Αναβ. 5. 3. 4 τὴν δεκάτην ἣν τῷ Ἀπόλλωνι ἐξείλον καὶ τῇ Ἐφεσίᾳ Ἀρτέμιδι διέλαβον οἱ στρατηγοί, τὸ μέρος ἑκαστος, φυλάττειν τοῖς θεοῖς. As Cavallin remarks, the passage was rightly understood by the schol. on 1432, ἐκ τῶν ἀριστέων καμὲ τίμησον. For the simple gen., τοῦδε τοῦ στρατοῦ, after ἀλβης, cp. O. T. 580 ἐμοῦ κομίζεται, ib. 1022 δῶρόν ποτ', ισθι, τῶν ἐμῶν χειρῶν λαβών: ib. 1163 ἐδεξάμην δέ του.—For other views, see Appendix.

1438 ε. καὶ σοὶ ταῦτ' κ.τ.λ. Heracles now addresses Neoptolemus in a parenthesis which extends down to 1437: then, at the words ἐγὼ δ', he again turns to Philoctetes. Two views of these words are possible. I prefer the first.

(1) ταῦτ' refers to the general tenor of the preceding verses, from 1423 onwards, —viz., that Ph. is to go to Troy with N., and there triumph. 'And to thee (as well as to Ph.) I give these counsels': i.e., it concerns thee, too, to note that he must accompany thee to Troy. In καὶ σοὶ the καὶ = 'and': but the emphasis which falls on σοὶ makes it equivalent to 'thee also.' If καὶ meant 'also,' the asyndeton would be too harsh. The change of ταῦτ' to ταῦτ' seems needless. A modified form of this view refers ταῦτ' only to v. 1431, as if Heracles meant that Neoptolemus also must bring spoils to the pyre: but this seems less fitting.

(2) ταῦτ' refers to what follows: the aor. παρήνεο is then like ἀπώμοσα in 1289 (n.): and the γὰρ after οὔτε merely introduces the statement (1049). I do not share Buttmann's feeling that καὶ σοὶ ought then to be σοὶ δέ: but the whole context appears to render the first view more natural.

Heracles confirms what Odysseus had said (115). In glorifying Philoctetes, it was necessary to respect the legend which ascribed the capture of Troy to Neoptolemus (who was the hero of the Ἰλίου πέρσις, by Arcifnus).

For τὸ Τρ. πεδίον, cp. 69 n.

1436 συννόμῳ, 'having the same pasture'—here, 'seeking their prey on the same ground.' Cp. Arist. Hist. An. 6. 18 οἱ ταῦροι...ὄντες σύννομοι. This primary sense of the adj. is here blended with the derived sense, 'partners.' The image is Homeric: cp. Il. 10. 297 βῶν δ' ἔμμεν ὥς τε λέοντες δύο διὰ νύκτα μέλαιναν (Odysseus and Diomedes): cp. Il. 5. 548. So Aesch. Cho. 938 διπλοὺς λέων (Orestes and Pylades): imitated by Eur. Or. 1401 λέοντες Ἕλληνες δύο διδύμῳ.—φυλάσσετον. Since neither can prevail without the other, each has the other's welfare in his keeping. We can perceive that the poet's mind glances thence take a thank-offering for my bow unto my pyre.

(And these my counsels are for thee also, son of Achilles; for thou canst not subdue the Trojan realm without his help, nor he without thine: ye are as lions twain that roam together; each of you guards the other's life.)

For the healing of thy sickness, I will send Asclepius to Troy; since it is doomed to fall a second time before mine arrows. But of this be mindful, when ye lay waste the land,—that ye show reverence towards the gods. All things else are of less account in the sight of our father from the metaphor to the thought of a δίκαιος καγαθὸς παραστάτης (Ant. 671 n.).

1437 Ἀσκληπιόν. In the Iliad Asclepius is a mortal, an ἀμύμων ἰητήρ living in western Thessaly, whose two sons, the physicians Podaleirius and Machaon, go thence to Troy. But Sophocles here thinks of Asclepius as a god, whom Heracles is to send from heaven. Prosaic objections have been made to this passage, on the ground that in 1333 it was said that Ph. was to be healed by the Asclepiadae. But it might be replied that those were merely the words of Neoptolemus, who was giving his own interpretation to a vague prediction of Helenus that Ph. would be healed. Even, however, if the oracle itself spoke of the Asclepiadae, there is no poetical unfitness in this further promise—that the healing god himself should visit Troy, to direct and inspire their skill.

Tradition placed Sophocles in a near relation to the cult of Asclepius. The poet is said to have been invested with the 'priesthood' (ἱερωσύνη, Vit. Soph. § 6) of the hero Alcon, a healing-god akin to Asclepius; indeed, the name Ἀλκων is cognate, if Ἀσκληπιός be Ἀλεξ-ήπιος, by metathesis of σκ=ξ: cp. Preller i. 423 n. 2. A paean to Asclepius by Sophocles was extant in antiquity (Lucian Enc. Dem. 27 etc.), and legend declared that the god had visited the poet's hearth (Plut. Num. 4 § 6).

1439 τὸ δεύτερον. The first occasion was when Heracles himself made war on Laomedon, and, after taking Troy, gave the king's daughter, Hesione, to Telamon (Ai. 1302: Il. 5. 638 ff.). Cp.

Pind. I. 5. 36 (the Aeacidae) δις πόλιν Τρώων πρᾶτον, ἐσπόμενοι | Ἡρακλῆι πρότερον, | καὶ σὺν Ἀτρεΐδαϊς. Propert. 3. 1. 32 Troia bis Oetaei numine capta dei.—αὐτήν=τὴν πόλιν, or Τροίαν, implied in Ἰλιον, which is regularly neuter (454) in post-homeric poetry. The exception in Eur. Andr. 103 occurs in a quasi-epic hexameter: conversely, Ἰλιον αἰνὸν in Il. 15. 71 occurs in a suspected passage.

1440 ε. ἐννοεῖθ', as a correction of the MS. ἐννοεῖσθ', is commended by the fact that, out of five other places where Soph. uses this compound, there are two (O. T. 559, Ant. 61) in which the act. form is proved by metre; while in a third, Tr. 578, ἐννοήσας is not likely to have come from ἐννοηθεῖς. On the other hand, the midd. was not less Attic than the act.; and, if ἐννοεῖσθ' here were not followed by an aspirate, it would have been rash to alter it.

εὐσεβεῖν. As the schol. observes, this warning derives force from the tradition that, after the fall of Troy, Neoptolemus 'slew Priam, when he had taken refuge at the altar of Ζεὺς ἐρκείος.' Neoptolemus himself was afterwards assassinated at Delphi: whence the proverb Νεοπτολέμειος τίσις (Paus. 4. 17. 4), meaning, τὸ παθεῖν ὁποῖόν τις καὶ ἔδρασε. The outrage of Ajax Oileus on Cassandra, in the temple of Athena at Troy (Eur. Tro. 70), was another instance of δυσσέβεια.

1442 ε. ὡς τάλλα πάντα κ.τ.λ. The ground for the precept (εὐσεβεῖν) is given by ὡς,—viz., that Zeus deems 'all other things,'—such as conquest, or glory—of secondary moment (δεύτερ' ἡγεῖται: cp. O. C. 351). Then the sentence introduced by γὰρ explains why Zeus so deems; viz., because the effect of εὐσέβεια does not cease with man's life on earth, but is imperishable. That is, it brings happiness to the εὐσεβῆς in the life beyond the grave; and it is also of good example to the men who come after. Heracles can fitly say this; he is himself enjoying the reward of εὐσέβεια, and he comes from the presence of Zeus.

1448 ε ἡ γὰρ εὐσέβεια MSS. The conjecture οὐ γὰρ εὐσέβεια was first made by Thomas Gataker (op. 1654), Adv. Misc. Post. XII. 513. R. Dawes (Misc. Crit. 241) proposed οὐ γὰρ ἡύσέβεια. Brunck, the first editor of Soph. who adopted the correction, gives it in this form, ascribing it to Dawes.—συνθνήσκει] Wakefield conj. συντρέχει: Cavallin, συμφέρεαι βροτοῖς | καὶ ζῶσι καὶ θανούσιν.—Hermann held that the choice lay between two remedies:—(1) To read οὐ γὰρ ἡύσέβεια, and delete v. 1444. (2) To supply some words after 1443, c.g.: ἡ γὰρ εὐσέβεια συνθνήσκει βροτοῖς | <οὐδ' ἦν θάνη τις· εὐμένεια δ' ἐκ θεῶν, > | κἂν ζῶσι κἂν θάνωσιν, οὐκ ἀπόλλυται.

In v. 1443 the old emendation οὐ, for ἡ, seems an almost certain one: but the case in favour of it has not yet, perhaps, been adequately stated. It is not merely, or even chiefly, a verbal question; we must consider the whole passage. If we retain the MS. reading, ἡ γὰρ εὐσέβεια συνθνήσκει βροτοῖς, 'piety dies with mortals,' the meaning is, 'piety passes with men into the other life,' there to find a reward. (Cp. Rev. xiv. 13, τὰ γὰρ ἔργα αὐτῶν ἀκολουθεῖ μετ' αὐτῶν.) Now, this narrows the scope of the thought in an arbitrary way; for then εὐσέβεια is regarded only in its influence on the happiness of the departed. If, however, we read οὐ γὰρ ἡύσέβεια συνθνήσκει βροτοῖς, this allows us to think also of the abiding influence upon human conduct; and the more comprehensive view is certainly the more fitting one in an exposition of the reason why Zeus attributes a paramount importance to εὐσέβεια.

A further objection to the MS. reading

arises from the sense given to συνθνήσκει, which, though intelligible (in the light of v. 1444), would be forced. The regular meaning of θνήσκω and its compounds, when used figuratively, is 'to become inoperative' or 'extinct,' in contrast with ζῆν: c.g., O. C. 611 θνήσκει δὲ πῖστις. Aesch. Cho. 846 (λόγοι)...θνήσκοντες μάτην. Eur. fr. 734 ἀρετὴ δέ, κἂν θάνη τις, οὐκ ἀπόλλυται, | ζῆ δ' οὐκέτ' ὄντος σώματος· κακοῖσι δέ | ἀπαντα φροῦδα συνθανόνθ' ὑπὸ χθονός: where it is immaterial that the reference is to fame living or perishing on earth: the point is that συνθανόνθ' is opposed to ζῆ. In Ar. Ran. 868, τοῦ—δτι ἡ ποίησις οὐχὶ συντέθνηκε μοι, | κείνῳ δὲ συντέθνηκεν—the jest turns on the fact that the verb would naturally mean, 'has perished' with the author.

Two objections have been made to the emendation οὐ for ἡ. (1) The position of οὐ. But οὐ is rightly so placed, because, as τὰλλα πάντα indicates, there is an implied contrast between εὐσέβεια and other things which do perish with men. Cp. Soph. fr. incert. 842 οὐ τοῖς ἀθύμοις ἡ τύχη ξυλλαμβάνει (though it does aid the brave). (2) The thought, οὐ...συνθνήσκει, is repeated by οὐκ ἀπόλλυται. But v. 1444 is not a mere repetition; it is a re-statement in more forcible language, and, as such, it is rhetorically appropriate here.

Zeus; for piety dies not with men; in their life and in their death, it is immortal.

PH. Ah, thou whose accents I had yearned to hear, thou whose form is seen after many days, I will not disobey thy words!

1444). But the conclusion, at v. 1441, would then be too abrupt. Schneidewin formerly spared v. 1442, rejecting only the two next vv. He supposed (a) that Ζεύς was a gloss on πατήρ: (b) that some one had written vv. 1443 f. in the margin, the original form of 1443 having been, ἀλλ' ἡ γὰρ εὐσέβεια συγγραῖ (or συνναλεῖ) βροτοῖς: then a scribe evolved our text. This hypothesis is too complex: besides, the speech would not end well with v. 1442. One of Hermann's views (see cr. n.) was that v. 1444 only should be rejected (οὐ being read in 1443): but this, too, would be ineffective.

1445 π. ποθενὸν ἐμοί: for the neglect of the usual caesura after the second foot, cp. 1470: O. C. 1760, 1771.—πέμψας: cp. 846.—χρόνιος here=χρόνῳ, 'after a long time' (as in O. C. 441, n.): but in 1449 χρόνιοι='for long' (πολὸν χρόνον).

1448 γνώμην ταύτῃ τίθεμαι, give my voice in this sense: τίθεμαι as in the phrase τίθεμαι ψῆφον. Cp. Lys. or. 24 § 23 μηδαμῶς, ὡ βουλή, ταύτη θῆσθε τὴν ψῆφον (so Taylor: ταύτη...τῇ ψήφῳ MSS.): Isae. or. 8 § 46 ἡ δίκαιόν ἐστι, ταύτη τὴν ψῆφον τίθεσθε: Her. 1. 120 ταύτη πλείστον γνώμην εἰμί: id. 7. 143 ταύτη Θεμιστοκλέους ἀποφαινομένου (γνώμην).—The reading γνώμην ταύτην is also possible: cp. Plat. Legg. 674A οὐκ ἂν θιθεῖμην ταύτην τὴν ψῆφον: Andoc. or. 3 § 21 τίνα γνώμην ἔθεντο περὶ ὑμῶν...; In Ar. Eccl. 658 the MSS. give καὶ ταύτην γνώμην ἐθέμην: but Toup conjectures ταύτη, which Dindorf adopts.

native readings of the MSS., γνώμην ταύτην and γνώμην ταύτην. So in Ant. 125 f. the true reading ἀντιπάλῳ...δράκοντος generated ἀντιπάλῳ...δράκοντι and ἀντιπάλου...δράκοντος.—Those who read γνώμην ταύτῃ τίθεμαι suppose that ψῆφον is understood with τίθεμαι, the dat. being modal. This is very awkward, and cannot be supported by any sound example.

1449 π. μέλλετε πράσσειν: for the inf., cp. O. C. 1627 τί μέλλομεν | χωρεῖν; —καιρὸς καὶ πλοῦς: 'occasion (the need of the hour) urges you on, and the fair wind yonder (ὅδ') at the ship's stern': i.e., 'it is time for you to sail, and the weather is fair.' Cp. 466 f. (n.) For κατὰ πρύμναν, cp. Thuc. 2. 97 ἦν δὲ κατὰ πρύμναν ἰσθῆται τὸ πνεῦμα: Od. 11. 6 μετόπισθε νεὸς κυανοπρώροιο | ἔκμενον οὖρον ἰει. It is best here to keep the ordinary Attic πρύμναν, which the MSS. give, since metre does not require πρύμνην (cp. 482 n.).

The place of γάρ as sixth word is noteworthy. Soph. does not elsewhere place it later than fourth word (as in v. 1268); and this was the ordinary classical limit. But the examples in Comedy of the 4th cent. B.C. show that the Attic ear tolerated a greater licence. Thus γάρ stands as fifth word in Menander Τροφῶνιος fr. 1. 2 διαφέρει τῷ μαγειρῷ τοῦτο γάρ: as sixth, in Antiphanes Ἀλειουμένη 22 ἐπὶ τὸ τάριχος ἐστὶν ὠρηκυῖα γάρ (where Meineke needlessly writes τάριχος δ' ἐστὶν ὠρηκυῖα ἀφαρ): as seventh, in Athenion Σαμόθρακες 4 τοῦ θηριώδους καὶ παρασπίνδου βίου | ἡμᾶς γάρ ἀπολύσασα etc. (But in Alexis fr. incert. 7. 3 οὐ μήτε πράττεται τέλος | μηδὲν γὰρ ἡμᾶς, the emendation παρ' ἡμᾶς is clearly right.) The unusual position of γὰρ led to a point being placed in L after 58', and has been one cause of doubt as to the construction of the whole passage (see cr. n.).

1452 The preceding anapaests (1445 ff.) indicated that the moment of departure was at hand; and now, as στείχων shows, the movement is beginning.—καλέσω, aor. subj., as usual with φέρε: cp. 300 n. The sense is strictly, 'invoke' (cp. 737): the land is addressed as a divine power, to which he makes a prayer (1464).

1453 χαῖρ', ὦ μέλαθρον κ.τ.λ. The eight verses which follow call up a picture of his past life in Lemnos,—the lonely cave,—the plain to the west of it,—the loud sea to the east,—the echoing cliffs to the north. Then, at v. 1461, his thoughts turn to the voyage that lies before him.—ξύμφρουρον, the witness of his weary watching and waiting: the cave is personified, as in 1081 ff. Cp. Aesch. P. V. 142 τῆσδε φάραγγος σκοπέλοις ἐν ἄκροις | φρουρὰν ἄηλον ὀχέσω.

1454 Νύμφαι τ' κ.τ.λ. Next to the μέλαθρον itself, he naturally names the elemental deities of the region from which he obtained water, fuel, and the soothing φύλλον (292 ff., 649). Cp. Il. 20. 8 νυμφῶν, αἱ τ' ἄλσέα καλά νέμονται | καὶ πηγὰς ποταμῶν καὶ πῖσσα ποιήεντα (grassy water-meadows). Ap. Rh. 2. 821 νυμφαὶ εὐλειονόμοι.

1455 ἄρσῃν, of strong, deep sound: cp. Ar. Th. 124 κίθαριν τε ματέρ' ὕμνων. | ἄρσενι βοᾷ δόκιμον. (In Soph. fr. 478 ἄρσενας χοᾶς | Ἀχέροντος is explained by some as 'deep-sounding waves.') Conversely in Od. 6. 122 κουράων...θῆλυς ἀντή. A difference between deeper and shriller tone was expressed by the terms αὐλὸς ἀνδρῆσιος and γυναικῆσιος (Her. 1. 17).

The ms. προβλής (without θ') cannot be defended as an epithet of κτύπος, —'a sound sent forth by the sea' (as Seyffert takes it). We must read either (1) προβολῆς with Hermann, or (2) προβλής θ' with Musgrave and Schaefer. I prefer (1), because θ' is decidedly tame, whether πόντου be taken with προβλής only, or (as seems needful) with κτύπος also. Nor can it be questioned that προβολῆς gives a much finer verse. It is true that we have had προβολῆτες in 936, whereas this sense of προβολή recurs only in later Greek (Quintus Smyrn. 9. 378 ἐπὶ προβολῇσι θαλάσσης). But, if such a use of προβολή was actually a rare one, the presence of πόντου would make it clear.

1456 ε. οὐ seems to denote generally the region in which the cave was situated,—near, or perhaps upon, the πόντου προβολῇ. We can hardly refer it back to the word μέλαθρον.—πολλάκι, an epic and lyric form twice used in lyrics by Aesch. (Theb. 227, Suppl. 131), but not elsewhere by Soph.—ἐνδόμυχον, a poet. word (like ἐνδομάχης); but, in later Greek at least, the verb formed from it seems to have been common: thus the schol. on Ar. Vesp. 970 explains αἰκουρος by ἐνδομύχοντα. The cave was on the east coast (see 1459 n.), but its seaward mouth is imagined as having a s. or s.e. aspect, so that the blasts of the stormy νότος (Ant. 335 n.) could carry rain and spray into the inmost recesses.—πληγαῖσι: cp. Lucr. 5. 955 verbera ventorum.

The only rival claim is that of Mount Skopia, near Cape Murzephlo (the N.W. promontory), which has greatly the advantage of Plaka in height. But two points are in favour of Plaka. (1) It was a fitting place for the beacon; for it is in a direct line between Ida and Athos; it is the nearest point to the Troad; and it runs out far into the sea. (2) The cave of Philoctetes commanded a view of the volcano Mosychlus (v. 800), and his cries were re-echoed from Mount Hermaeum. The two hills were therefore at no very great distance from each other. But there is no reason to suppose that a volcano ever existed near Cape Murzephlo, while there is some ground for thinking that one may have existed on the eastern coast (cp. Appendix on v. 800). See Tozer, Islands of the Aegean, pp. 273 f. (1890).

e. g., in Sardinia (= C. Marargin, on the w. coast), and on the European shore of the Bosphorus (= Rumili Hissar).

The MSS. give the accent Ἑρμαῖον here, but Ἑρμαῖον is right. Adjectives in -αῖος, of more than two syllables, were regularly properispomenon, like Ἀθηναῖος. Neuter substantives in -αῖον were proparoxytone; hence Ἀθήναια, as the name of the festival (sc. ἱερὰ), and ἔρμαιον, a wind-fall.

1461 Λύκιόν τε ποτόν. There can be no doubt that Λύκιον is the true reading: the corruption γλύκιον, facilitated by the use of a small λ as initial, may have been due simply to the fact that the Greeks, like ourselves, spoke of 'fresh' water as 'sweet' (γλυκῶ, as dist. from ἀλμυρόν). The Λύκιον ποτόν must be a spring, or fount, in Lemnos, so called after Apollo Λύκιος. There was a more elaborate legend,—that this god, wishing to alleviate the sufferings of Philoctetes, had caused two fountains to arise in the island,—one of wine, and the other of honey. (Zenobius 4. 99, etc.: cp. Hermann's note here.) We do not know whether this Λύκιον ποτόν had been mentioned by any poet before Sophocles,—by Lesches, for example: but the way in which the name is introduced favours that supposition. Perhaps, indeed, a 'Lycian' fount at Lemnos may have been well known to Athenians in the poet's day.

are not surprising. From early times he had been worshipped under that title, not only in the valley of the Xanthus, but also in the Troad (cp. Il. 4. 101, with Leaf's note). A gloss in Hesychius (s.v. Λυκαῖον) points to a cognate worship of Apollo in the neighbouring islet of Chryse. Λύκιος and Λύκειος may both alike be referred to λυκ, as designating the god of light. In actual Greek usage, while Λύκειος was usually connected with the idea of λυκοκτόνος (O. T. 203 n.), Λύκιος was chiefly associated with Lycia. But, instead of the title Λύκιος being derived thence, it is more likely that the country of the people once called Tremilae took its name from the cult of the Λύκιος. (Cp. Preller, I. 202.)

It has been objected to the mention of κρῆναι that at v. 717 Ph. was described as having only στατὸν ὕδωρ: but that was merely the conjecture of the Chorus. Cp. 21 ποτὸν κρηναῖον.

1462 L λείπομεν ὑμᾶς, λείπομεν ἤδη. Hermann's motive for converting v. 1463 into a paroemiac (see cr. n.) is that the emphasis seems to require such a pause. It would certainly be admissible; but it does not appear necessary. If v. 1463 remains an ordinary dimeter, then the final paroemiac (1468) is all the more effective. And the change is open to one decided objection. If ἤδη is altered to οὐ δὴ, the second λείπομεν becomes weak. As to the sequence of dactyls in 1463, cp. Eur. Hipp. 1361 πρόσφορά μ' αἰρετε, σύντονα δ' ἔλκετε.—ἐπιβάντες, 'entered on' that hope,—as upon ground which it was lawful to tread: cp. n. on O. C. 189 εὐσεβίας ἐπιβαίνοντες.

But just as Orestes prays Argos and her gods to welcome him (El. 67), so Ph. here prays Lemnos to speed her parting guest. Cp. 986.

1466 π. ἐνθ' = ἐκείσε ἐνθα (O. T. 796).—Μοῖρα: some write μοῖρα, as in 331; but the epithet ἡ μεγάλη seems here to imply definite personification.—Φάων: Heracles and Neoptolemus.—The πανδαμάτωρ δαίμων is clearly Zeus, whose ordinances Heracles came to announce (1415). The epithet is fitting; for the stubborn purpose of Ph. has been overruled; and Troy is soon to fall. Cp. Ant. 605 ff.

1470 Νύμφαις ἀλλαισιν ἐπευξάμενοι. Ritter, who rejects vv. 1469—1471, argues that the nymphs had no power over the sea; that belonged to Poseidon and other gods. But this was not the old Greek conception. The sea-nymphs, properly so called, were the Nereids (for the Ὠκεανίδαι were rather the nymphs of rivers and fountains). The list of the Nereids given by Hesiod (Th. 250 ff.) shows that they were imagined, not merely as representing, but as influencing, the various moods of the sea. Thus he says of the Nereid Κυματολόγη that, with her sister Κυματολήγη, 'she quickly calms waves on the gloomy deep, and the blasts of fierce winds.' The good offices of the Nereids to mariners are expressed by such names as Φέρουσα, Ποντοπύρεια, and Εὐλιμένη. A voyager, then, might well pay his vows to them.

1471 νόστου, said by the Chorus of sailors who had come from Troy, means 'return,' rather than merely 'journey' (as in 43).

APPENDIX.

2 ἄστιπτος. The forms ἄστειπτος and στειπτός are recommended by the general rule that, when the vowel of a verbal stem becomes a diphthong in the present stem, the diphthong is retained in the verbal adjectives (λείπω, ἀδιάλειπτος: ἀλείφω, ἀλειπτός: φείδομαι, φειστέον, etc.). Yet πείθω, while it gives πειστέον, also furnishes πιστός: and ἄπιστος is sometimes found corrupted to ἄπειστος. On the whole, then, I follow L, the oldest and best ms., in reading ἄστιπτος, though the point is one which can hardly be decided without epigraphic evidence.—The forms ἀστιβής, ἀστίβητος are irrelevant, as coming from στιβέω. Nor can στιπιός and ἄστιπτος be safely referred to the very doubtful form στιβω which Kühner recognises in Xen. An. 1. 9 § 13 (στιβομένας οδούς: rather read στειβομένας).

22 f. ἄ μοι προσελθὼν σίγα σήμαιν' εἴτ' ἔχει
 χάρον *τὸν αὐτὸν τόνδ' <εἴτ'>, εἴτ' ἄλλη κυρεῖ.

(1) As has been stated in the commentary, I believe the words σήμαιν' εἴτ' ἔχει to be sound, although they violate the metrical rule, according to which the syllable preceding εἴτ' ought to be short. The rule is that, if there is a caesura in the fifth foot, that foot must be an iambus; unless the second syllable of the fifth foot is either (a) an enclitic, like τοι, or (b) a word which cannot stand first in a sentence, like γάρ. The reason of the exception is that, in such cases, the ear hardly perceives a caesura: e.g., τιμᾶς μὲν λόγῳ, at the end of an iambic trimeter, would be right, because τιμᾶς μὲν has nearly the same rhythmical effect as a trisyllable like τιμᾶται. But τιμᾶς τῷ λόγῳ would be wrong, because τῷ belongs to λόγῳ, and the rhythmical effect is like that of one word, such as συλλόγῳ. Now, εἴτε is one of those words which must be considered as belonging to what follows it: and the rhythmical effect of εἴτ' ἔχει here is therefore like that of one word, such as ἄσμενος. The elision of the final ε in σήμαιν' makes no difference. Nor can the slight pause which might follow σήμαιν' be pleaded in excuse. On the contrary, the effect of such a pause would be rather to mark the length of the syllable -αιν', and so to render the peculiarity more striking. This may be illustrated from the Homeric hexameter, where a pause in the sense sometimes causes the lengthening of a short syllable when ictus alone could hardly have warranted it: e.g., Od. 10. 269 φεύγωμ' ἐτι γάρ κεν κ.τ.λ.

The first question is,—Can σήμαιν' εἴτ' ἔχει be amended with any probability? Porson, according to Dobree (on Ar. Plut. 598), proposed to read σημαίνειν, with an imperative sense. The objection to this is that the omission of the first εἴτε would then be extremely harsh. In such examples as λόγοισιν εἴτ' ἔργοισιν (O. T. 517), πατρώας εἴτε βαρβάρου (Tr. 236), etc., the second εἴτε follows so quickly that no awkwardness is felt. If σημαίνειν were adopted, it would be not only desirable, but (I think) indispensable, to make the farther change of ἔχει into ἐκεῖ (proposed by the London editor of 1722): but even then, the sentence would be clumsy. (As to σημανεῖς, which Nauck suggests, it is open to the further objection that a future tense could not possibly stand here for an imperative.) If, however, σημαίνειν is not to be accepted, only one possibility remains,—viz., that σήμαιν' is a gloss, which has displaced some other word of similar sense. The only such word that occurs to me is νεύσον. But obviously σήμαιν' is the natural word: and there is no ground, beyond the metrical difficulty itself, for supposing it to be a gloss.

'and deck me with garlands, and begin the sacrifice, if ye will.' Macaria is declaring her readiness to die, and is urging the Chorus to immolate her. Paley observes that καὶ κατάρχεσθαι δοκεῖ is the only remedy for the metrical fault; but then the sense would be, 'deck me with garlands, even if it is your will to begin the sacrifice.' This would be intolerable. Nor can we read κατάρχετ'. In a different context κατάρχετε could certainly mean, 'make a beginning' (Plat. Sympr. 177 Ε ἀλλὰ τύχη ἀγαθὴ καταρχέτω Φαῖδρος καὶ ἐγκωμιαζέτω τὸν Ἑρωτα). But here, in reference to a sacrifice, and in close connection with στεμματοῦτε, the sacrificial word κατάρχεσθε is beyond all suspicion.

Thus in Eur. Herac. 529 we have a strict parallel to σήμαιν' εἴτ' ἔχει. And it is at least a noteworthy coincidence that in each case the verb is in the second pers., sing. or plur., of the imperative mood. It is possible that, when the accented syllable of the second pers. imperative was also the syllable which received the rhythmical ictus—as it is in σήμαιν' εἴτ' ἔχει and κατάρχεσθ', εἰ δοκεῖ—then the effect was to render that syllable peculiarly impressive to the ear, and so to diminish, relatively, the apparent length of the next syllable. Thus in σήμαιν' εἴτ' ἔχει and κατάρχεσθ' εἰ δοκεῖ the syllables -αῖν and -εσθ' would be relatively shortened, so that the rhythmical effect would be almost the same as if the fifth foot were an iambus.

(2) εἴτ' ἔχει | χωρον τὸν αὐτὸν κ.τ.λ.—The traditional reading, χωρον πρὸς αὐτὸν, does not admit of any interpretation which can be reconciled with classical Greek usage. If the cave and spring are made the subjects to ἔχει and κυρεῖ, then the sense must be, 'Signify where they are situated (ἔχει) towards (πρὸς, i.e. looking towards) this spot.' Cp. Od. 9. 25 (Ithaca) εἰν ἀλλὶ κέῖται | πρὸς ζόφον, αἱ δέ τ' ἀνευθε πρὸς ἧώ τ' ἡέλιόν τε

(‘towards the west’...‘towards the east’). With the acc., πρός could not mean simply ‘near’: that sense would require the dat. But, if the question refers to the cave and the spring, its purport must be simply to ask whether they exist in that neighbourhood—not whether they look towards this or that quarter. Further, the intrans. ἔχει could not be thus used, like κεῖται, with reference to the situation of a place. The real meaning of such a phrase as τὸ ἄντρον ἔχει πρὸς τοῦτον τὸν χώρον would be, ‘the cave extends towards this spot.’ Cp. Her. 2. 17 ἢ μὲν πρὸς ἡὼ τράπεται, ... ἢ δὲ ἐτέρῃ τῶν ὁδῶν πρὸς ἐσπέρην ἔχει (‘extends westward’): id. 1. 180 (ὁδοὺς) τὰς ἐς τὸν ποταμὸν ἐχούσας (‘leading to the river’),—where the same idea is expressed just afterwards by φέρουσαι.

Again, if Philoctetes be made the subject to the verbs, ἔχει | χώρον πρὸς αὐτὸν τόνδε can mean only, ‘abides looking towards this very spot,’ i.e., in a dwelling which looks towards it. So far as ἔχει is concerned, this use might be defended by Her. 6. 39 εἶχε κατ’ οἴκους (‘he kept in the house’), Ar. Ran. 793 ἔξιν κατὰ χώραν (‘to stay where he is’). But such a combination of ἔχει with πρός and acc. would be very strange and harsh. (It is different when such a verb as ναίω is used, Od. 13. 240 ὅσοι ναίουσι πρὸς ἡὼ τ’ ἡέλιόν τε.) Further, the question is simply whether Philoctetes dwells there: the aspect of his dwelling is irrelevant.

Bergk has proposed to alter πρὸς αὐτὸν into πάραυλον (‘neighbouring’); Wecklein, into πετραῖον. I feel no doubt that the true emendation is that of Blaydes, τὸν αὐτόν. The corruption of τὸν into πρὸς arose through a scribe’s eye wandering to προσελθὼν, which stands just over πρὸς αὐτὸν in the line above. Thus in Anf. 831 L has τάκει (instead of τέγγει), generated by τακομέναν a little before; and ib. 606 παντογήρως is probably an error for πάντ’ ἀγρεύων, due to ἀγήρως in the line below it. The phrase ἔχειν χώρον (etc.), ‘to be in a place,’ is frequent in Sophocles: cp. below, 154: O. C. 37, 297, 1707, 1763; fr. 588.

(3) In v. 23 τόνδ’ <ἐτ’>, εἴτ’, Elmsley’s correction of L’s τόνδ’ ἦτ’, is decidedly better than τόνδε γ’ εἴτ’, the reading of some of the later mss. The letters ἐτ’ might easily have dropped out; see, e.g., O. C. 893, where, instead of τὰ ποῖα ταῦτα, the first hand in L wrote τὰ ποῖα αὐτα,—an exactly parallel case, since the letters ατ were lost, not before ατ, but before αυτ, as here ἐτ’ before εἴτ’. Further, in τόνδε γ’, the γε would be weak. Nauck prefers to conjecture τοῦτον, εἴτ’. But, if τοῦτον had been the original word, such a corruption as τόνδ’ ἦτ’ or τόνδ’ εἴτ’ would have been very improbable.

42 προσβαίη. Blaydes reads ποι βαίη: but the place of the enclitic as first word of the clause gives a very weak effect: while, if we read βαίη ποι, such a transposition lessens the likelihood that προσβαίη arose thence. The same critic suggests προῦκβαίη—a compound which, though it does not actually occur, is quite legitimate (cp. προεξέρχομαι). It seems, however, a little heavy and clumsy. προστέχοι (Herwerden) would serve: but is it likely to have generated προσβαίη? The same objection applies to the obvious καὶ βαίη,—which would otherwise have been probable.—Cavallin, keeping προσβαίη, suggests ποι for πῶς in v. 41: but πῶς seems right. The question, ‘How could he go far?’ is more fitting here than, ‘To what far place could he go?’

τοιαῦτα φωνεῖν μὴδὲ τεχνᾶσθαι κακά.*

Against Erfurdt's emendation, παί, Linwood thus defends the reading of the MSS., ἔξοιδα καί:—‘Εα est particulae vis quam sic fere expresseris; ἔξοιδα καὶ τοῦτο, σὲ κ.τ.λ. I know well enough that, etc.’

Linwood, then, seems to have taken the words as meaning literally, ‘I know (this) also,—viz., that thou art not formed,’ etc.; and he held that ‘(this) also’ could be freely represented in English by ‘well enough.’ But if we said here, ‘I know well enough that thy nature shrinks from this,’ the phrase would have a concessive force; and such a force would be given in Greek, not by καί, but rather by μέν, or (with varying shades of implied meaning) by τοι or οὖν. Moreover, if this concessive force is to be attributed to καί, at any rate it is essential that the ‘this’ which Linwood supplies in his note should be expressed in the Greek. If we had ἔξοιδα καὶ τοῦτο, σε φύσει μὴ πεφυκότα κ.τ.λ., then ‘I know this also’ might be explained as implying, ‘Do not suppose that I have overlooked this fact—thy natural reluctance’ etc. Even with τοῦτο, however, ἔξοιδα καὶ τοῦτο would more naturally imply that some other reason against the deed had just been noticed: whereas, here, the immediately preceding statement is to the effect that the deed is necessary. And that ἔξοιδα καὶ φύσει κ.τ.λ., without τοῦτο, could be explained in Linwood's way, is surely impossible. The sentence would bear one of two meanings, viz.: (1) ‘I know that also’ (or ‘even’) ‘by nature thou art not fitted’ (any more than by training or habit):—καί being taken closely with the word φύσει. (2) Or καί might refer to the whole phrase φύσει σε μὴ πεφυκότα, meaning, ‘I know that indeed’ (or, ‘in fact’) ‘thou art not fitted’—confirming some previous statement to that effect.

Prof. Campbell writes:—

ἔξοιδα καί ‘I am well aware.’ καί, which Linwood rightly defends, has a reassuring emphasis. ‘In urging this on you, I know all the while’.

Thus he represents καί by ‘well,’ or by ‘all the while’ (as Linwood by ‘well enough’). In support of this view, three passages are cited in his note. As I fail to see their cogency, it may be best to quote them, and to show how I take καί in each of them. (1) Thuc. 8. 91 ἦν δέ τι καὶ τοιοῦτον ἀπὸ τῶν τὴν κατηγορίαν ἐχόντων, καὶ οὐ πάντῃ διαβολὴ μόνον τοῦ λόγου. (Theramenes had represented the extreme oligarchs as being ready to receive help from Sparta: this is the historian's comment on that allegation.) ‘And there was something really of that kind (καὶ τοιοῦτον) on the part of the accused persons; it was not wholly a slanderous fiction.’ (2) Thuc. 5. 43 ὃ ἑδόκει μὲν καὶ ἄμεινον εἶναι πρὸς τοὺς Ἀργεῖους μᾶλλον χωρεῖν, οὐ μέντοι ἀλλὰ καὶ φρονήματι φιλονεικῶν ἡγαντιοῦτο: (Alcibiades) thought that it was really better (καὶ ἄμεινον εἶναι) to incline to the Argive alliance, though at the same time personal pique and party-spirit were motives of his opposition.’ (3) Soph. El.

1251 ἔξοιδα καὶ ταῦτ'· ἀλλ' ὅταν παρουσία | φράζῃ, τότ' ἔργων τῶνδε μεμνησθαι χρεών. Orestes is trying to make his sister observe a cautious silence: he has repressed her cries of joy; she has now cried aloud concerning her past sorrows; and so he says, 'I know these things also.'

Thus in all these places the use of καί is quite normal. They do not confirm the abnormal sense which has been proposed for it here. If (as I believe) καί is impossible in this verse, then παί may be considered certain.

87 τούσδε καὶ πρᾶσσειν στυγῶ. Buttmann wished to write τοὺς δέ ('them, too') as being more emphatic, and more poetical. He proposed to apply the same rule wherever in the poetical texts any part of ὅδε refers to a preceding relative. But it is certain that Attic poetry could use ὅδε with retrospective force; thus in O. C. 1006 f., εἴ τις γῆ θεοὺς ἐπίσταται | τιμαῖς σεβίζειν, ἥδε τῷδ' ὑπερφέρει, though ἡ δέ is possible, τῷ δ' is not. Why, then, should poetry be debarred from substituting ὅδε for οὗτος in this particular case,—viz., when it refers to a preceding relative? The drawback to τοὺς δέ here is that it would be too emphatic. We may remark that in good Attic prose the 'δέ of the apodosis' after ὁ or οὗτος is seldom used except to mark some proportion which exists between two things. Hence it most often occurs where a superlative or comparative appears in both clauses: e.g., Thuc. 2. 46 ἄθλα γὰρ οἷς κῆται ἀρετῆς μέγιστα, τοῖς δέ καὶ ἄνδρες ἀριστοὶ πολιτεύουσι: id. 1. 37 ὅσῳ ἀληπτότεροι...τόσῳ δέ (so Classen) φανερωτέραν κ.τ.λ.: Xen. Cyr. 7. 5. 6 ὅσῳ...προσωτέρῳ ἐγίγνοντο, τόσῳ δέ μανότερον μετεβάλλοντο.

100 τί μ' οὖν ἄνωγας κ.τ.λ. The MSS. have τί οὖν μ' ἄνωγας. Attic Comedy certainly allowed hiatus after τί. Thus we find (1) τί ἔστιν; Ar. Nub. 82, 825: Ran. 653, 657, 1220. (2) τί οὐ, Av. 149 [where, however, τί δ' οὐ is read by schol. Ach. 724, Paus. 5. 5. 3, and Suid. s. v. ἀγορανομίας]. (3) τί οὖν, Nub. 791. (4) τί, ὦ: Nub. 80. In some of these passages, δ' might be inserted, but in others it would evidently weaken the vivacity of the question.

As to Tragedy, the τί οὖν in Aesch. Theb. 704 (quoted in my note) certainly looks like a genuine example. On the other hand, the insertion of δ' between τί and οὖν would be an easy remedy in Theb. 208, Pers. 787, and Suppl. 306 [where L has τί οὖν ἔτευξε δ', and most edd. read τί οὖν ἔτευξεν]. In Eur. Phoen. 878, reading τί δρῶν οὐ, Dindorf says, 'in recentioribus nonnullis τί οὐ δρῶν.'

If we suppose that this licence, well recognised in Comedy, was exceptional, though not forbidden, in Tragedy, then each apparent example of it which Tragedy presents must be judged by the context, and by the poet's manner. In Ai. 873, where τί οὖν δῆ—the eager question of the Semichorus—occurs extra metrum, it is clearly sound: the insertion of δ' would be inappropriate. On the other hand, we might accept τί οὖν in the dialogue of Aeschylus, and yet hesitate to believe that Sophocles would have admitted it without special cause. It seems improbable that he did so here, or in vv. 733, 753, and 917.

120 The spelling of the verb ποίεω in the Laurentian ms. of Sophocles.

(1) As a general rule, L gives πο, not ποι, before ε or η, when the first syllable of the verb is made short.

Thus ποεῖς Ph. 752, El. 624: ποεῖ Ph. 926, El. 319: ποεῖν Ph. 1010, O. T. 537, O. C. 1018, 1037, 1517, Tr. 385, 390, 598, 743, El. 337, 385: ποιήσω Ph. 120: πόησον O. T. 543: ποιῆσαι O. C. 1033: ποιεῖσθαι Ph. 552, O. C. 1144.

In El. 623, where L now has ποεῖ, the first hand had written ποιεῖ, and the ι was erased by the corrector. In El. 385 (ποιεῖν) it is possible, but not certain, that the first hand had written ποιεῖν. In Ai. 1155, εἰ γὰρ ποιήσεις, an erasure of the first ι has been attempted.

(2) Again, there are some instances in which L retains the ι before ε or η, although the first syllable is short.

Thus ποιήσω El. 1045, 1276: ποιήσεις O. C. 652, Ai. 1356, El. 1044: ποιήσης Ai. 1369: ποιεῖν O. C. 1018: ποιῆσαι O. C. 1033: ποιεῖ O. C. 584: ποιεῖσθε O. C. 278: ποιεῖσθαι O. C. 459, 1144.

Where the ι before ε or η might be either long or short, it is retained in L.

The Attic inscriptions quoted by Meisterhans (p. 27, n. 230) range in date from about 450 to about 300 B.C., and furnish these forms:—ποεῖν, ποεῖ, ποιεῖσθαι, ποιήσουσι, ποιήσας, ποιήσει(=η), ποιήσωσιν, ἐποίησεν, ποιήσασθαι, ποιηθῆ, πεποίηκεν, ποιηθέν[τ]α, ποιητέ(=η). On the other hand, Attic inscriptions of the same period give ἱεροποιοί (but ἱεροποεῖν), ποιῶσι (in company with ποεῖ), ποιῶν (in company with ποιήσας), ποιούσι, ποιούντων, ποιούσας, ποιούμενος, ἐποίουν, ἐποιοῦντο.

It cannot be supposed, then, that the omission of the ι before ε and η was an error, or a caprice, peculiar to stone-cutters; for it would be strange if they had so repeatedly omitted it before those letters, while always preserving it, even in the same inscription, before ο, οι, ου, or ω.

The natural inference would be rather that, in the ordinary Attic usage of those days, the ι of ποίεω was omitted, for reasons of euphony, before ε and η, though retained before the ο-sounds. If, however, ποεῖ and ποιῆσαι were the commoner Attic forms, it would by no means follow that ποιεῖ and ποιῆσαι were not also in Attic use. It might seem natural that an Attic poet should use ποιεῖ, etc., when the first syllable was long or common, while he used ποεῖ when it was short.

It is noteworthy that in O. T. 918 L has ποῶ: and the same form occurs in Ai. 1395, where, however, an ι may have been erased. This is a false spelling, due probably to the assumption that the ι should be dropped in any form of ποίεω when the first syllable is short. The value of L's testimony, as confirming the inscriptions, is rather increased by the occurrence of such an error; since it tends to show that such forms as ποεῖ, ποιῆσαι were derived by L from an old tradition of which the original scope was no longer accurately remembered. A similar inference might be drawn from the fluctuations in L's practice. A rule of late origin, if accepted at all, would have been followed with greater consistency.

168 ἐπινωμῶν.—Lobeck (Ajax, 3rd ed., p. 243,) quotes an epigram by Archias of Mitylene, ἐν ποτε παμφαίνοντι μελάμπτερος αἰθέρι νωμῶν (said of a crow), and adds:—‘Erfurdtius ad Trach. 710 μέλαν πτερόν corrigi, sed refellitur Sophoclis exemplo Fragm. Inc. xxiii. 675 [= Soph. fr. 856. 11 Nauck] νωμῶ δ' ἐν οἰωνοῖσι τοῦκείνης πτερόν.’ Now, in this latter verse νωμῶ means, not ‘is plied,’ but, ‘is the guiding power’: it is the trans. νωμάω with object understood. With regard to the verse of Archias, μελάμπτερος would seem to be merely a conjecture adopted by Grotius in his text of Stobaeus (p. 59),—perhaps from Scaliger, as Jacobs thought (Anthol. 9. 339): who quotes from MSS. only μελάντερον, μελάντερος, and μελαίντερος, and justly adopts μέλαν πτερόν,—the conject. of Brunck, not of Erfurdt, though approved by the latter on Phil. (not Trach.) 710. Neither of these passages, then, can be cited as illustrating the intransitive use of ἐπινωμῶν here. If we read αὐτῷ (with L), instead of αὐτῶ, it would be possible to render, ‘he cannot draw to his side any healer for his woes’; but this would be forced. Similarly, in v. 717, τὸ ὕδωρ might be understood as object with προσενώμα,—‘he used to carry the water to his lips’; but this, again, would be a strained explanation. It seems far more probable that the poet has used both these compounds of νωμῶν intransitively,—a use which may have been rare, or even without example, but which he may have felt to be warranted by analogy. Cp., e.g., the epic use of ἐπιστρωφᾶν in the sense of ἐπιστρωφᾶσθαι, ‘to visit’ (with acc. of place, Od. 17. 486): so Apoll. Rhod. 3. 892 οὔτ' ἐπὶ γαίαν | ἡμετέρεην στρωφῶσι.

ἐν τ' ὀδύναις ὁμοῦ
 λιμῷ τ' οἰκτρός, ἀνήκεστα μεριμνήματ' ἔχων· βαρεῖ |
 α δ' ἀθυρόστομος
 Ἄχ' ὡς τηλεφανῆς πικρᾶς οἰμωγᾶς ὑπόκειται.

I. With the exception of ὀρεῖα, no satisfactory correction of βαρεῖα has been suggested. (1) Boeckh (De metris Pindari, p. 323) would give βαρεῖ· | α δ',—a reading found in one late ms. (Vat. b). But this epithet for λιμῷ comes with an awkward and feeble effect at the end of the long clause which separates it from the substantive. (2) Doederlein also proposed βαρεῖ· | α δ', but intended βαρεῖ as a verb,—gravatur, ‘he is oppressed’. Such an intrans. use of the verb cannot, however, be inferred from the similar use of the epic pf. partic., βεβαρηώς. βαρέω was otherwise a late form for βαρύνω, and, where it occurs, is trans. (3) Blaydes suggests βαρεῖαις, to go with οἰμωγαῖς. The drawback to this is that it would enfeeble the second epithet, πικραῖς. (4) Schneidewin read βαρεῖα· | α δ'. This acc. neut. pl. is then a second epithet of μεριμνήματ': and -εῖα is one long syllable, by synizesis, as in the epic Ἀλέξανδρον θεοειδέα (Il. 3. 27). Such a synizesis may have been admissible in tragic lyrics (though Eur. I. A. 205, quoted by Cavallin, does not prove it, since the synizesis in Νιρέα there is of ἔα, not ἔᾱ): but it would have an awkward effect here, where a pause follows; and the epithet, coming after ἀνήκεστα, would be decidedly tame. (5) Another conjecture of Boeckh's was βάρε, to go with ἀνήκεστα: 'desperate, crushing, by their weight.' (6) Hermann gave βάρη, construing thus:—μεριμνήματ' ἔχων (= μεριμνῶν) ἀνήκεστα βάρη, 'distressed by incurable afflictions,' immedicabile curans malum.—These conjectures seem to exhaust the possibilities so far as βαρύς and cognate words are concerned.

(7) Blaydes reads βοῆ, a conjecture which had occurred to Linwood also. But, being so common a word, it was not likely to be corrupted into βαρεῖ: and, after κείται in 183, we should not expect another verb here. (8) Seyffert reads βορᾶς. (Nauck, adopting this, ascribes it to C. Schiller, Andocid. p. 108.) Then μεριμνήματ' ἔχων βορᾶς means, 'harassed by cares for food,'—a very weak development, surely, of what has just been expressed by ἐν τ' ὀδύναις ὁμοῦ | λιμῶ τ' οἰκτρός.

II. The second question in this passage concerns the words which the MSS. give as πικραῖς | οἰμωγαῖς ὑπόκειται. (1) Seyffert reads πικραῖς | οἰμωγαῖς ὑπόκειται, 'clamoribus eius subiecta, quibus quasi succinit': i.e., 'the echo forms an undertone to his mournful cries.' But how could ὑπόκειται mean this? (2) ὑπακούει, the best emendation of ὑπόκειται, was first made by Auratus; then by Brunck, who printed it with the gen. πικρᾶς οἰμωγᾶς. Musgrave, leaving ὑπόκειται in his text, suggests ὑπακούει—evidently by an independent conjecture—in his note, and illustrates its use as = 'to answer.' Blaydes rightly combines ὑπακούει with the dat., πικραῖς...οἰμωγαῖς. In doing so, he might have pointed out the difference between the senses of ὑπακούειν with gen. and dat. respectively. With gen., it means, 'listen to': cp. Ar. Nub. 263 τῆς εὐχῆς ὑπακοῦειν (and that was the sense intended by Brunck,—'Echo sola tristes eiulatus audit'): with the dat., 'answers.' The latter sense is the fitting one here. (3) Pflugk, πικρᾶς | οἰμωγᾶς ὑποκλαίει, maestos gemitus succinit. This was approved by Schneidewin. (4) Emperius: πικραῖς | οἰμωγαῖς ὑπαχέ. Cp. Plat. Phaedr. 230 C θερινόν τε καὶ λεγυρόν ὑπηχέ τῷ τῶν τεττίγων χορῷ: where, however, it refers to the place which resounds,—as it does also in Hes. Th. 835 and Eur. Suppl. 710. (5) Hartung and Purgold: πικραῖς | οἰμωγαῖς ὑποκρούει, lit., 'beats time to'; hence, 'accompanies.' Suidas: ὑποκρούειν· ἀντιφθέγγεσθαι, ἀντιλέγειν ἀπλῶς καὶ ὡς ἔτυχε. (6) Rauchenstein, πικραῖς | οἰμωγαῖς ὑπαίβει: cp. Ar. Ran. 366 κυκλίωσι χοροῖσιν ὑπάδων. (7) Hermann, πικρᾶς | οἰμωγᾶς ὕπ' ὀχέται, taking τηλεφανῆς in a proleptic sense with the verb: 'the sound is carried by his bitter cry to a distance' (whence it is reverberated). (8) Campbell suggests πικρᾶς | οἰμωγᾶς ἐποχέται. (9) Musgrave, besides ὑπακούει, proposed πικρᾶς | οἰμωγᾶς ὑποχέται, as midd., subvehit: Echo carries his cries along. (10) Blaydes, too, has an alternative conjecture, πικρᾶς | οἰμωγᾶς ὑπο χέται. (11) Wecklein, Ars Soph. em., p. 50, suggests πικρᾶς | οἰμωγᾶς ὑποφῆται as = ὑποκρίνεται, i.e., '(is) the answerer.'

χρόνον μ' ἐπέσχον μὴ με ναυστολεῖν ταχῶς.

Brunck, Musgrave and others strangely took ἐπέσχον as 1st pers. sing., and ἐννέποντες as a nomin. absol.; 'when they spoke thus, I did not refrain,' etc. As Buttmann observed, the second με would then be intolerable; and he might have added that the first με would also be incorrect: in this sense we should require ἐπέσχον simply, not ἐπέσχον με. Hartung, re-writing the verses thus, ταῦτ', ὦ ξέν', ἐνέποντες οὐ πολὺν χρόνον | ἐπέσχομεν μὴ κείσε ναυστολεῖν ταχύ, also meant ἐνέποντες to be a nomin. absol.,—ἐπέσχομεν referring to Neoptolemus only. Cavallin, keeping the ms. text, rightly takes ἐπέσχον as 3rd plur., but supposes that it refers to the friends of Neoptolemus at Scyros, who sought to detain him; thus he, too, regards ἐνέποντες—which refers to Phoenix and Odysseus—as an irregular substitute for a gen. absol., ἐννεπόντων.

351 οὐ γὰρ εἶδόμην. Seyffert gives οὐδ' ἄρ' εἶδόμην. 'but, in the event, I did not see him' (before burial). In Journ. Phil. II. 70 (1869) I proposed εἰ γὰρ εἶδόμην. 'would that I had seen him!' (before burial); and the same conjecture was made by Blaydes in his ed. (1870). For the reasons given in my note, I am now satisfied that the ms. reading, οὐ γὰρ εἶδόμην, is sound.

I still hold, however, that in 359 ἔκειν' means merely 'lay low in death,' and is not an equivalent for προέκειτο, 'lay on the bier.' It might be added to my note on 359 that in Od. 24. 64 f. the mourning for Achilles is said to have lasted seventeen days,—the funeral taking place on the eighteenth day. Sophocles doubtless thought of Neoptolemus as reaching Troy in time for the obsequies, though there is no direct reference to them. Cavallin, indeed, finds such an allusion in the words which describe Neoptolemus as received by the assembled host (356 f.); this is ingenious, but seems a little fanciful.

425 ὅς παρὴν γόνος. παρὴν was first conjectured by Musgrave, who, noting the schol.'s mention of μόνος as a v. l. for γόνος, proposed to read ὅς παρὴνμόνος, instead of the ms. ὅσπερ ἦνμόνος. Hermann formerly read ὅς παρὴν, γόνος (a punctuation which Dindorf adopts), taking the sense to be, 'he has lost his son Antilochus,—who was with him at the time,'—and supposing the point of ὅς παρὴν to be that a son's death is still more bitter to a father when he sees it than when it is reported to him from a distance. He quotes Quint. Smyrn. 2. 261 (referring to the death of Antilochus) μάλιστα δὲ πατρὶ περὶ φρένας ἤλυθε πένθος | Νέστορι, παιδὸς ἐοῖο παρ' ὀφθαλμοῖσι δαμέντος. | οὐ γὰρ δὴ μερόπεισι κακώτερον ἄλγος ἔπεισιν, | ἢ ὅτε παῖδες ὀλυνταὶ ἐοῦ πατρὸς εἰσορόωντος. But, apposite as this passage is to Hermann's explanation of ὅς παρὴν, that explanation itself seems far-fetched.—The conjectures of Seyffert and Cavallin have been noticed in the commentary. Some others may be mentioned. Hermann (having become dissatisfied with ὅς παρὴν, γόνος) read ὅσπερ ἦν μένος. Schneidewin conj. ὅς παρὴν γονεῖ. Arndt, ὅς παρὴν πόνοις. Unger, ὅσπερ ἦν γάνος. J. Oberdick, ὥσπερ ἦν λόγος. Sintenis, ὁ σπαρεῖς γόνος. F. W. Schmidt, φροῦδός ἐστ' ἄρδην γόνος. Pflugk, ὅς προῦστη γένους. Blaydes, ὄνπερ ἡγάπα. Heimsoeth, ἡδιστος γόνος. Nauck, who now inclines to this last, formerly proposed ἐπεὶ γόνος | Ἀντίλοχος αὐτῷ φροῦδος οἴχεται θανών.

491 The emendations of the MS. Τραχινίαν τε δειράδα καὶ τὸν εὐροον may be classified as follows. (1) Simple transposition. Heath proposed Τραχινίαν δειράδα τε καὶ τὸν εὐροον. This is approved by Ellendt (s. v. τε), and placed in the text by Cavallin. It is, however, impossible, because, when a dactyl holds the third place in an iambic trimeter, the first syllable of the dactyl must be either (a) the last of a word, as in v. 879 σύ μ' αὐτὸς ἄρον, σύ με κατὰστησον, τέκνον, or (b) a monosyllable, as in v. 1013 ἀλλ' ἡ κακὴ σὴ διὰ μυχῶν βλέπουσ' αἶε.

(2) Conjectures which change δειράδα only.—(i) Wunder, Τραχινιών τε πρῶνα. (ii) Wecklein, Τραχινίαν τε σπιλάδα, or Τραχίνιον λέπας τε. (iii) Meineke, Τραχινίαν τε λιβάδα or λιχάδα. (iv) Toup, δειράδα (see commentary).

(3) Conjectures which change καὶ only.—(i) Pierson, δειράδ', ἡ τὸν εὐροον, approved by Porson, Adv. p. 200. But Trachis and the Spercheus belong to one and the same region; the river could not be mentioned as an alternative destination. (ii) Hermann (Retract. p. 8) δειράδ' ἐπὶ τὸν εὐροον. (iii) Seyffert, δειράδ' ἀνὰ τὸν εὐροον (i.e., 'passing up' the river).

Critics who wish to read εἰς οἶκον, and to connect those words with ἴωμεν, have proposed various alterations of προσκύσαντε τὴν ἔσω. (i) Schneidewin, προσκύσαντε Γῆν, ἔσω. He was more inclined, however, to think that a verse had dropped out after Γῆν,—the sense having been, 'Let us leave Lemnos, when we have saluted mother Earth,—[but first come with me] into the cave.' He also suggests that the schol. may have read, προσκύσαντε τὴν στέγην.

(ii) Bergk, προσκύσαντες Ἑστίαν (formerly,—'minus recte,' as he says,—προσκύσοντες).

(iv) Wille (De locis nonnullis Sophoclis, Berl. 1866, quoted by Cavallin), προσκύσαι στέγην ἔσω.

(v) Seyffert reads προσκύσοντ' ἐμὴν ἔσω: 'neque enim quid ἡ ἔσω οἶκον vellet apparet, quae potius ἡ ἄνω dicenda erat.' But they are now at the entrance to the cave, not below it: see n. on 814.

678 f. κατὰ δρομὸδ' ἄμπυκα κ.τ.λ. Among the proposed readings of this passage, three chief classes may be distinguished:—I. those which retain both Ἰξίονα and δέσμιον: II. those which eject Ἰξίονα: III. those which eject δέσμιον.

I. 1. Hermann's earlier view was that the MS. text was sound in the strophe, but defective in the antistrophe. (I give the words of the antistrophe in smaller type under those of the strophe.)

κατ' ἄμπυκα δὴ δρομάδ' Ἰξ-[παρ' ᾧ στόνον ἀντίτυπον]
 ίονα δέσμιον ὡς ἔβαλεν [- ~ - βαρυβρῶτ' ἀποκλαύσ-] παγκρατῆς Κρόνου παῖς.
 [εἰεν αἱματήρ', οὐδ']

Thus in the antistrophe he assumed a lacuna between ἀντίτυπον and βαρυβρῶτ'. The lost words may have been, he suggested, κέντρ' ὀδύνας: and he altered the ms. αἱματηρόν into αἱματήρ', in order that it might go with κέντρα,—of which βαρυβρῶτα also was, he thought, the epithet. One of his grounds for this theory was a difficulty which he felt in joining βαρυβρῶτα and αἱματηρόν with στόνον.

2. Hermann afterwards proposed to read thus (Retract. p. 9):—

Ἰξίονα καὶ δρομάδ' ἄμπυκα δέσμιον ὡς ἔβαλεν etc., when in the antistrophe we should have a lacuna equivalent to ~ ~ - after ἀντίτυπον, which might be filled by such a word as σφάκελον or κάματος. Then it would be necessary to retain αἱματηρόν, and, after it, to omit either οὐδ' or τάν.

3. A somewhat similar view is one which has been communicated to me by Prof. E. L. Lushington; who, however, would expand the antistrophic verse, not by inserting anything after ἀντίτυπον, but by adding ἄταν after αἱματηρόν:—

Ἰξίονα καὶ δρομάδ' ἄμπυκα δέσμιον ὡς [παρ' ᾧ στόνον ἀντίτυπον βαρυβρῶτ' ἀποκλαύσ-] ἔβαλε [or ἔβαλ' ὁ] παγκρατῆς Κρόνου παῖς.
 [εἰεν αἱματηρόν < ἄταν > .]

II. Readings which eject Ἰξίονα.

1. Erfurdt and Schneidewin: κατὰ δρομάδ' ἄμπυκα δέσμιον ὡς ἔβαλεν. (So Cavallin, but with ἔβαλ' ὁ: and Nauck, but with ἄντυγα.) No enlargement of the antistrophe is then required.

2. Bergk: κατ' ἄμπυκα δὴ δρομάδα | δέσμιον ὡς ἔβαλεν | ὁ παγκρατῆς Κρόνου παῖς.

In the antistrophe he reads, παρ' ᾧ στόνον ἀντίτυπον | < τὸν > βαρυβρῶτα < πόδα > | κλαύσειεν αἱματηρόν.

3. Blaydes: ἀνὰ (so Dind.) δρομάδ' ἄντυγα δέσμιον ὡς ἔβαλ' ὁ παγκρατῆς Κρόνου παῖς. No change in the antistrophe.

4. Hartung re-writes, rather than amends, the text; omitting δρομάδα in the strophe, and substituting κάματος for στόνον ἀντίτυπον in the antistrophe:—

κατ' ἄμπυκα δέσμιον ὡς ἔβαλεν | παγκρατῆς Κρόνου παῖς = παρ' ᾧ κάματος βαρυβρῶτ' ἀποκλαύσ-|εἰεν αἱματηρόν, οὐδ'.

5. Burges: κατ' ἄμπυκα | τὴν δρομάδ' ὡς δέσμιον | < νιν > λάβ' ὁ παγκρατῆς Κρόνου παῖς = παρ' ᾧ στόνον | ἀντίτυπον κηροβρωτ-|ὸς κατακλαύσει' αἱματηρόν.

III. Readings which eject δέσμιον.

1. Dindorf: 'Ιξίον' ἀν' ἄμπυκα δὴ δρομάδ' ὡς ἔβαλ' ὁ | παγκρατῆς Κρόνου παῖς. No change in the antistrophe.

2. Wecklein: 'Ιξίον' ἀν' ἄμπυκας ὡς ἔβαλεν δρομάδας | ὁ παγκρατῆς Κρόνου παῖς = παρ' ᾧ στόνον ἀντίτυπον βαρυβρώτα <πόδα> | κλαύσειεν αἵματηρόν. (Cp. II. 2.) For the plur. ἄμπυκας he refers to Hesych., ἄμπυκες· τροχοί· οὕτω Σοφοκλῆς ἐν Φιλοκτήτῃ.

Seyffert stands alone in ejecting both 'Ιξίονα and δέσμιον: he reads, κατ' ἄμπυκα δὴ δρομάδ' αἵσιμον ὡς ἔβαλ' ὁ κ.τ.λ. By αἵσιμον he means, 'well-deserved.'

686 f. According to Hermann's earlier view, the τόδε before θαῦμα was spurious: he changed it into καὶ. Then the two verses in the strophe, ὦλλυθ' ὦδ' ἀναξίως | καὶ θαῦμά μ' ἔχει πῶς, corresponded with vv. 701 f. of the antistrophe, as amended by him,—εἶρπε δ' ἄλλοτ' ἄλλον ἀν | εἰλνόμενος, παῖς. This ἄλλον was to agree with πόρον in 704. Afterwards, however, he preferred to omit the καὶ before θαῦμα (without replacing τόδε), and to delete ἀν in the antistrophe.

Wecklein, in his Ars Soph. em. p. 56, proposes to read ὦλλυθ' ὦδ' ἀναξίως | τὸ δ' αὖ θαῦμά μ' ἔχει = εἶρπε δ' ἄλλοτ' ἄλλον <ὦδ> | ἀν εἰλνόμενος. In his ed. of the play he gives, ὦλλυθ' ὦδ' αἰκίως. | τόδε δ' αὖ θαῦμά μ' ἔχει = εἶρπε δ' ἄλλοτ' ἄλλα | τότε ἀν εἰλνόμενος. (τόδε δ' αὖ was read by Wunder.)

Seyffert gives ὦλλυθ' ὦδ' ἀνάξια. τόδε τοι θαῦμά μ' ἔχει (as one v.) = εἶρπε δ' ἄλλοτ' ἄλλα πῶδ' ἀν εἰλνόμενος. The final ια of ἀνάξια is to be one syllable, by synizesis. πῶδ' is his own conjecture, for τότε.

Blaydes reads ὦλλυτ' ἀνάξι' οὕτως. τόδε δὴ θαῦμά μ' ἔχει = εἶρπε δ' ἄν ἄλλοτ' ἄλλαν ὁδὸν εἰλνόμενος. The words ἄλλαν ὁδὸν are due to his own conjecture: ἀνάξι' οὕτως, to that of Burges.

758 f. ἦκει γὰρ αὕτη διὰ χρόνου, πλάνοις ἴσως
ὡς ἐξεπλήσθη.

The following conjectures may be noticed. (1) Bothe, ἴσοις for ἴσως: i. e., 'When the disease has once been sated, it returns only after a long interval, (and then,) πλάνοις ἴσοις,—with an access of the same duration as before,'—so that relief may be expected within a certain time. Hence πλάνοις has to denote the 'wanderings' of the disease through the patient's body,—the periodical attack. The antithesis between ἦκει and πλάνοις is thus destroyed. Nor can this use of πλάνοις be justified. It is not adequately supported by διέρχεται in v. 743, nor again, by Plat. Tim. 88 εὖ ὅταν τις...σείων τά τε περὶ τὸ σῶμα πλανώμενα παθήματα καὶ μέρη κατὰ ξυγγενείας εἰς τάξιν κατακοσμή πρὸς ἄλληλα,—where 'the affections that are roaming about the body' do not mean sudden attacks of disease, and where, moreover, πλανώμενα is interpreted by the context.

(2) Heimsoeth, εἵκει for ἡκει. 'The disease abates after a (short) time.' The first objection to this ingenious conjecture is that the phrase διὰ χρόνου would not, by itself, suggest a short interval (cp. 285 n.). Then πλάνοις κ.τ.λ. would mean, 'when sated with its attack,'—a sense which πλάνοις, as we have seen, will not bear. Heimsoeth suggests, indeed, that πλάνοις ἴσως should be altered into παλίσσυτος (as = 'rushing away,' O. T. 193).

(3) F. W. Schmidt, λήγει γὰρ αὐτὴ διὰ χρόνου πλάνοις νόσος | ὡς ἐξεπλήσθη. This, too, is ingenious, and is recommended by the appropriateness of αὐτὴ ('of its own accord'): but the twofold corruption which it supposes (ἡκει for λήγει and ἴσως for νόσος) is very improbable.

(4) Arndt, ἡκει γὰρ αὐτὴ διὰ χρόνου πλάνοις ἴσως, | ὡς ἐξεπλήσθη φλέψ. NE. ἰὼ δύστηνε σύ.

'This disease returns but now and then, in periodical attacks (πλάνοις ἴσως), when the vein has become distended.' Arndt's first aim here was to remove the hiatus, ἐξεπλήσθη. ἰὼ ἰὼ. Seeking for a monosyllable to replace the first ἰὼ, he was struck by a statement of Hippocrates (De Morb. 4. 140), τὰ ἔλκεα... φλεγμαίνει μάλιστα ἐν ταύτησι τῇσι ἡμέρησι· ἔρχεται γὰρ τὸ ὑγρὸν εἰς ἀπάσας τὰς φλέβας: 'ulcers become most inflamed on these (alternate) days; for the moisture passes into all the veins.' So Arndt took the sense to be that the ulcer in the foot of Philoctetes became inflamed when, from time to time, the veins near it were distended by morbid humours.

782 Dindorf's is the most despairing view of the corrupt words, ἀλλὰ δέδοικ', ὦ παῖ, μὴ μ' ἀτελὴς εὐχὴ. He supposes that an iambic trimeter has been lost here, and that these words are entirely spurious, —having been inserted by an interpolator merely to represent the general sense, as he guessed it from the context. But, in that case, it is strange that the interpolator, having a free hand, did not contrive to be more grammatical and intelligible.

Most of the attempts at emendation have set out from the idea that δέδοικα should be retained,—as being indispensable to the sense,—and that either ἀλλὰ or ὦ παῖ should be altered. Thus Brunck wrote, as Toup had suggested, ἀλλ' οὖν δέδοικα μὴ ἀτελὴς εὐχὴ, τέκνον: Wunder, the same, with τύχη instead of τέκνον. Schneidewin conjectured, ὦ παῖ, δέδοικα μὴ ἀτελὴς ὁ πλοῦς τύχη, or the same, with εὐχὴ instead of ὁ πλοῦς. But it is manifest that no one of these was at all likely to be corrupted into ἀλλὰ δέδοικ', ὦ παῖ, μὴ μ' ἀτελὴς εὐχὴ. When the probabilities of manuscript tradition are weighed, both ἀλλὰ and ὦ παῖ (or at least παῖ) have a good claim to be thought genuine.

Hermann's conjecture, ἀλλ' οὐ τί σοι, παῖ, μὴ ἀτελὴς εὐχὴ πέλῃ, was suggested by the variant ἀλλ' οὐ in B: but the sense is the opposite of that required by the context. He also proposed ἀλλὰ δέος, ὦ παῖ, μὴ ἀτελὴς εὐχὴ πέλῃ, and ἀλλ' ἦδε γ', ὦ παῖ, μὴ ἀτελὴς εὐχὴ δέος. Seyffert gives ἀλλ' οὖν δέδοικ', ὦ παῖ, με μὴ ἀτελὴ λέγῃς (where 'say of me' seems intended to mean, 'forebode' or 'pray for me'). Mekler, ἀλλ' ἴσθ', ὀκνῶ, παῖ, μὴ ἀτελὴς εὐχὴ τύχη. These emendations all proceed on what seems to me the right principle,—that of retaining both ἀλλὰ and ὦ παῖ (or παῖ).

With regard to my own conjecture, ἀλλ' ὄκνος, ὦ παῖ, μὴ ἀτέλειτ' εὐχῇ μ' ἔχει, one thing should be added here. I find that Musgrave, who read ἀλλ' οὖν δέδοικα μὴ μ' ἀτελὲς εὐχῇ, τέκνον (with Triclinius), suggested in his note μὴ 'τέλειτ' εὐχῇ, or μὴ 'τέλειτ' εὐχῇ (sc. ἦ).

THE LEMNIAN VOLCANO.

800 The references in ancient literature to the burning mountain of Lemnos have an interest which, in one respect, is perhaps unique; they afford an exception to the rule that such notices can be verified by modern observation.

Antimachus, the epic poet (circa 410 B.C.), indicates that, in the fifth century B.C., the activity of the volcano either continued, or at least was attested by a familiar tradition. His words are (fr. 6),— δαίμων ἀκροτάταις ὄρεος κορυφῇσι Μοσύχλου.

Aeschylus, in his Prometheus Unbound, represented Lemnos as the place from which his hero had stolen the fire for mortals. (Cic. Tusc. 2. 10. 23 Quomodo fert apud eum Prometheus dolorem, quem excipit ob furtum Lemnium?) And in his Philocteta, Attius (c. 140 B.C.) described the volcano as clothed with woods, out of which its vapours ascend:—

Unde igni' cluet mortalibu' clam Divisus: eum dictu' Prometheus
Clepsisse dolo, poenasque Iovi
Fato expendisse supremo.

It is worthy of remark that nemus is a touch for which Attius may have been indebted to a contemporary Greek poet, the physician Nicander, who in his Theriaca (v. 472) speaks of shepherds as repairing with their flocks to the cool shade afforded by the 'lofty firs of Mosychlus':—

Μοσύχλου δ' ἄμφ' ἐλάτῃσι μακεδναῖς ἄγραυλοι ψύχῳσι.

As Nicander was a native of Colophon, and spent part of his life at Pergamum, he may be supposed to have seen Lemnos. He makes no reference to the volcanic character of the mountain. But the legendary renown of its fires has another witness in Valerius Flaccus (Argonautica 2. 332 f.), who imagines Jason as awe-struck by the aspect of its steep, blackened cliffs, and its smoke-breathing summit:—

Ventum erat ad rupem, cuius pendentia nigris

No crater is now discoverable in Lemnos, and it has not been shown that there are any traces of volcanic agency. At one spot, indeed, such traces have been conjectured. Lemnos was celebrated in antiquity, and down to very recent times, for producing a kind of earth which was believed to have a medicinal value in various maladies, and more especially to be an antidote for poison; Philoctetes himself was said to have been healed by it (Philostr. Heroica 5. 2). It was known as Λημνία γῆ, μίλτος ('red earth'), or σφραγίς (because sold in stamped tablets): Lemnīa rubrica, terra sigillata. The Greeks now call it ἅγιον χῶμα. It was, and is, dug from a hill near Kotchino, a hamlet in the innermost recesses of the bay of Purnia, the northern inlet,—not far from the site of Hephaestia. Galen, in the latter half of the second century A.D., went to Lemnos for the purpose of inquiring about this earth. He describes the hill from which the earth is taken as 'looking exactly as if it had been burned,—both in colour, and by the absence of all vegetation' (ὁμοιότατος κεκαυμένῳ, κατὰ γε τὴν χροάν καὶ διὰ τὸ μηδὲν ἐν αὐτῷ φύεσθαι: De simpl. medic. 9 § 2: vol. XII. p. 173 ed. Kühn). This, he adds, must have been the reason why Homer made Hephaestus fall on Lemnos;—a remark which shows that Galen knew nothing of a Lemnian volcano. The French traveller and scholar, Choiseul-Gouffier, describes the same hill in similar terms:—'La colline... offre bien tous les caractères d'un sol consumé par un feu souterrain.' On the other hand, he notices the absence in Lemnos of a crater, of lava, and of marks indicating vitrification: some pieces of pumice have indeed been found, but these may have been washed up by the sea. (Voyage Pittoresque de la Grèce, vol. II., pp. 130 ff.: Paris, 1809.)

Dr Hunt,—who contributed a short account of Lemnos to Walpole's Travels in Various Countries in the East (London, 1820),—stands alone when he reports as follows:—'The whole island bears the strongest marks of the effects of volcanic fire: the rocks, in many parts, are like the burnt and vitrified scoria of furnaces' (p. 59). No reference to such appearances is made by Dr A. Conze, whose visit to Lemnos, in 1858, is fully recorded in his Reise auf den Inseln des Thrakischen Meeres

(1860). Mr Tozer, a traveller whose accuracy of observation is unsurpassed, visited Lemnos in 1889; and in his Islands of the Aegean (Oxford, 1890) he has the following comment on Dr Hunt's report:—'I myself saw nothing that could justify such a description.' A hot spring exists, indeed, in one place: but this 'hardly deserves to be adduced as evidence, for similar phenomena are found in other islands, which have never been supposed to be volcanic. Even earthquakes, as I was assured by the inhabitants, have now become extremely rare.' In a note he adds:—'The specimens which I brought away are pronounced by a competent authority to be granite and quartzite, which are not volcanic rocks; fragments of the latter of these are widely spread over the face of the ground in various parts of the island.' (p. 271.)

Are we to infer, then, that this Lemnian volcano was an invention of the poets? Such a fiction might, no doubt, have been suggested by the legend associating Lemnos with Hephaestus, even though the legend itself had sprung merely from the ancient repute of the inhabitants as workers in iron. But then it should be remembered that in the fifth century B.C. Lemnos was thoroughly familiar ground to thousands of those for whom the poets wrote; with Athens, especially, it was in constant intercourse. When Sophocles alludes to its fiery mountain as celebrated,—when the Ionian Antimachus describes the flames bursting forth from the heights of Mosychlus,—one can hardly suppose that nothing of the sort had ever existed there. In most—perhaps all—other cases where the ancient poets allude to volcanic energy as conspicuous in certain places, we know that the allusion was founded on fact.

On the east coast of Lemnos, a little to the south of the N.E. cape, an extensive shoal, now called Mythonaes, runs out into the sea. This shoal has the form of a great submarine promontory, broadly based on the coast, and tapering eastward to a point. A little to the east of that point,—parted from it by a narrow channel,—there is a second and smaller shoal,—a submarine island, as it were, lying off the promontory. Now Pausanias records a tradition that Chrysè—the islet close to Lemnos—was swallowed up by the sea: 8. 33. 4: ταύτην κατέλαβεν ὁ κλύδων πᾶσαν, καὶ κατέδυ τε ἡ Χρύση καὶ ἡφάνισται κατὰ τοῦ βυθοῦ. A new islet, he adds, emerged, which was called Ἱερά,—a name often given in similar cases. Choiseul-Gouffier supposes that the disappearance of the islet Chrysè was caused by a volcanic convulsion which also submerged the volcanic mountain Mosychlus, and that the Mythonaes shoal preserves the outlines of both beneath the waves. This theory, published in 1809, attracted early notice; Conze (Reise, p. 119) refers to a discussion of it in 1812; but it still awaits the verdict of scientific geology.

With regard to Chrysè, the tradition noticed by Pausanias is curiously illustrated by Herodotus. Onomacritus was expelled from Athens by Hipparchus for interpolating into the oracles of Musaeus a prediction that 'the islands off the coast of Lemnos were to be submerged by the sea' (Her. 7. 6, ὡς αἱ ἐπὶ Λήμνῳ ἐπικείμεναι νῆσοι ἀφανιζοίατο κατὰ τῆς θαλάσσης). The expulsion of Onomacritus must have occurred between 527 and 514 B.C. At that period, then, volcanic disturbances on the coast of Lemnos either were occurring, or were distinctly remembered. The name Νέαι, given to some islets on the E. coast, marked their origin. Stein aptly compares the oracle in Plut. Mor. 399 D concerning the volcanic island Hiera which emerged near Thera in 197 B.C.

Appian, writing in the first half of the second century—less, probably, than fifty years before Pausanias—speaks of ‘a desert island near Lemnos,’ where memorials of Philoctetes were still shown: Bell. Mithrid. c. 77 περὶ Λήμνον ἐν ἐρήμῃ νήσῳ, ἐνθα δέικνυνται βωμὸς Φιλοκτῆτου, καὶ χαλκεὸς ὄφης καὶ τόξα, καὶ θώραξ ταινίαις περιδεδυτός, μνημὴ τῆς ἐκείνου πάθης. It may be inferred from Pausanias (8. 33. 4) that Chrysè had disappeared long before his time. A new islet, then—perhaps the Ἰερά which he mentions—had succeeded to its mythical renown.

852 ff. οἶσθα γὰρ ὦν (so MSS., or ὄν) αὐδῶμαι, εἰ ταύταν τούτῳ γνώμαν ἴσχεις, μᾶλα τοι ἄπορα πυκνοῖς ἐνιδεῖν πάθῃ.

I. (1) In the first two of these verses Dindorf reads :—

οἶσθα γὰρ ὦν αὐδῶμαι,
εἰ ταύταν τούτων γνώμαν ἴσχεις.

With Linwood, he understands :—‘If you hold this view of these things (you know what things I mean)...’ etc. Thus ὦν stands, by attraction to τούτων, for the acc. neut. ᾶ. ‘This view’ means the purpose of Neoptolemus to wait until Philoctetes awakes,—instead of departing at once.

Wecklein reads and construes in the same way, but takes ‘these things’ to mean τὰ τόξα.

Seyffert also makes ὦν neuter, but places a comma after οἶσθα γάρ, and reads (with Wunder) εἰ ταυτὸν τούτῳ γνώμαν ἴσχεις: ‘you know, if you take the same view as this man (Philoctetes) about the things of which I speak.’ Thus ταυτὸν is governed by γνώμαν ἴσχεις as = γινώσκεις, and ὦν = περὶ τούτων ᾶ.

(2) Whitelaw, reading ὦν and ταύταν τούτων, takes the genitives as masculine: ‘But—you know whom I mean—if as by them advised you counsel thus.’ The plural then alludes to Philoctetes.

(3) Nauck takes ὦν as masc., but makes αὐδῶμαι passive, and reads ταύταν τούτῳ. He understands οἶσθα γὰρ ὦν αὐδῶμαι as = ‘you know whose I am called,’—i.e., ‘you know that I am your loyal follower,’—as if the Chorus deprecated their master’s displeasure at their opposition. (By ταύταν...γνώμαν he understands the youth’s purpose of remaining with Ph.; but does not explain how he takes τούτῳ.)

(4) Wunder reads,

εἰ ταυτὸν τούτῳ γνώμαν ἴσχεις :

‘if you take the same view as this man,—you know whom I mean’ (i.e., Philoctetes). The substitution of ὄν for ὦν makes it necessary to substitute μένομεν for μενούμεν in v. 836.

Campbell, too, reads ὄν, but ταύταν τούτω: 'If this be your mind towards him you wot of,' i.e., 'If you allow yourself to relent towards him.'

II. Verse 854, μάλα τοι ἄπορα πυκινῶς ἐνιδεῖν πάθη, forms a dochmiac dimeter, and seems to be sound. If it is so, v. 838 πολὺν παρὰ πόδα κράτος ἄρνυνται, is defective (see cr. n. there). Without abridging v. 854, Seyffert reads πυκινῶς ἂν ἰδεῖν, making this depend on οἶσθα γάρ ('you know that you are likely often to see troubles'). Blaydes alters πυκινῶς to πυκίν' ἔστ'.

Those who think that there is no defect in v. 838 seek to curtail v. 854. Wunder deletes ἐνιδεῖν (and so Wecklein). Gleditsch changes ἐνιδεῖν to ἐνι, and deletes πάθη.

τλήναι σ' ἐλεινῶς κ.τ.λ.*

There are three classes of passages in which ἂν is joined to the impf. or aor. indic. of verbs denoting expectation.

(1) Where there is no inf.: El. 1281 ἐκλυον ἂν ἐγὼ | οὐδ' ἂν ἥλπισ' αὐδάν. Eur. Helen. 656 τίς ἂν τάδ' ἥλπισεν βροτῶν ποτέ;

(2) Where the fut. inf. is added: Ant. 390 σχολῇ ποθ' ἤξειν δεῦρ' ἂν ἐξηύχουν ἐγώ. Al. 430 τίς ἂν ποτ' ῥέθ' ὦδ' ἐπώνυμον | τοῦμὸν ξυνοίσειν ὄνομα...

(3) Where, as here, the aor. inf. is added, so that the constr. of ἂν becomes ambiguous. With regard to examples of this class it may be noted (a) that the position of ἂν in the sentence is usually such as to suggest that it belongs to the finite verb; and (b) that this view is strongly confirmed by the examples of the two former classes. Eur. Helen. 1619 οὐκ ἂν ποτ' ἤνχουν οὔτε σ' οὐθ' ἡμᾶς λαθεῖν | Μενέλαον. Ar. Lys. 259 ἐπεὶ τίς ἂν ποτ' ἥλπισ', ὦ Στρυμόδωρ, ἀκοῦσαι;

In such instances the construction of ἂν with the aor. inf. is always possible, but it is never necessary. The aor. inf., without ἂν, can refer to the future, if the notion of futurity is implied with sufficient clearness in the principal verb. See, e.g., Dem. or. 4 § 2 εἰ πανθ' ἂ προσῆκε πρᾶτοντων οὕτως εἶχεν, οὐδ' ἂν ἐλπίς ἦν αὐτὰ βελτίω γενέσθαι. Here it is certain that ἂν belongs to ἦν, and also that γενέσθαι refers to the future. Lycurg. In Leocr. § 60 ἔτι δὲ ἐκ μὲν τοῦ κακῶς πράττειν τὰς πόλεις μεταβολῆς τυχεῖν ἐπὶ τὸ βέλτιον εἰκός ἐστιν, ἐκ δὲ τοῦ παντάπασιν γενέσθαι ἀνάστατον καὶ τῶν κοινῶν ἐλπίδων στέρηθῆναι. ὥσπερ γὰρ ἀνθρώπων ζῶντι μὲν ἐλπίς ἐκ τοῦ κακῶς πράξαι μεταπεσεῖν κ.τ.λ.

961 ὅλοιο—μήπω, πρὶν μάθοιμ' εἰ καὶ πάλιν.—Porson's words in his note on Eur. Phoen. 1464 are:—'Præterea nullus apud tragicos senarius reperitur, qui ita spondeum in quinto loco dividat, ut καὶ pars sit secunda, præter Æsch. Suppl. 274 χρανθεῖς' ἀνῆκε γαῖα μήνη καὶ δάκη, quem corruptum esse nemo non videt.' To make this statement verbally exact, the following addition is required after the word secunda:—'nisi prior pars vox monosyllaba sit eiusmodi quae ad sequentia potius quam praecedentia pertineat.' But it is not probable that Porson had overlooked this verse; and it is certain that he would not have thought it corrupt. He was the first who had pointed out how the rules of the iambic trimeter are affected by the distinction between the two classes of monosyllables (Praefat. pp. xxxi ff.). In this statement concerning καί, he was doubtless assuming the exception which that distinction involved.

εἴθ' αἰθέρος ἄνω
πτωκάδες ὀξύτόνου διὰ πνεύματος θωσὶ μ' οὐ γὰρ ἔτ' ἰσχύω.

(For ἔλωσί μ', B has ἐλώσί μ'). Since εἴθ'...ἔλωσι is an impossible solecism, εἴθ' can be retained only by reading μ' ἔλοιεν. Philoctetes will then say: 'Oh that (some creatures from above) would take me.' This has been explained in two ways. (i) With the traditional reading, πτωκάδες, taken as a subst.:—'I wish that from the skies aloft the cowering creatures there may cleave the shrilling winds to conquer me' (Prof. Campbell's version). That is, he wishes that the birds would come and kill him: cp. 1155. (ii) With some substitute for πτωκάδες, to denote storm-winds:—'Would that the storm-winds would snatch me up.' This view was suggested by Od. 1. 241 (νῦν δέ μιν ἀκλειῶς ἄρπυιαι ἀνθρεΐψαντο), and by the fact that like utterances of despair occur elsewhere, as in Tr. 953 εἴθ' ἀνεμόεσσά τις | γένοιτ' ἔπουρος ἐστῶτις αὔρα, | ἥ τις μ' ἀποκίσειεν ἐκ τόπων κ.τ.λ. But what, then, is to replace πτωκάδες? Brunck reads πλωάδες, 'the sailing, or floating, ones,'—an epithet given by Apollonius Rhodius to the Stympthalian birds (2. 1054),—and understands it of the Ἄρπυιαι. Gedike proposed πλωτάδες, in the same sense,—since the Harpies dwelt in the islands called Πλωταί (Ap. Rhod. 2. 297). The scholiast notices a variant, δρομάδες ('the careering ones'), which he explains by αἱ καταγίδες (storm-winds): this would have to follow ὀξύτόνου. And some, he says, read πτωχάδες, 'the needy ones,'—meaning the Harpies, because they are always hungry! (διὰ τὸ ἀεὶ πεινῆν.) Nay, some of the scholiasts did not shrink from the conclusion that πτωκάδες itself meant the Harpies,—either διὰ τὸ ἐπεμπίπτειν (!), or διὰ τὴν φωνήν (i.e., because they scream like 'timid creatures,'—birds). Obviously the Harpy theory was merely a forlorn attempt to explain εἴθ'...ἔλωσι. If he is to be snatched up, who should snatch him up but the Ἄρπυιαι?

Since, then, we get no tolerable sense even with the change of ἔλωσι μ' into μ' ἔλοιεν, it becomes certain that εἴθ' is corrupt, and that θωσὶν is a true correction of ἔλωσί μ'. The general sense clearly is, 'The timid birds will now career (ἐλώσιν) unmolested over my head.' For ἰσχύω, Heath restored ἰσχω: 'I check them no longer (by my arrows).'

It must further be noted that the word πτωκάδες, 'cowering,' 'timid,' is exactly appropriate here as an epithet of the birds. But it could not be used, without the art., as a subst., 'the timid ones,' i.e., the birds.

Thus everything points to the conclusion that αἰθέρος is corrupt,— having ousted some subst. which agreed with πτωκάδες. And we have already seen that εἶθ' is spurious. Further, the words which answer to εἶθ' αἰθέρος ἄνω in the antistrophe (1113) are ἰδοίμαν δέ νιν.

Hence a critic who seeks to amend the words εἶθ' αἰθέρος is justified in believing that the corruption is a deep one,—brought about by a very unskilful attempt to repair some loss. An emendation, in order to be allowed as probable, cannot here be required to account for all the letters of the words εἶθ' αἰθέρος. It will do as much as can reasonably be expected if it throws light on the point from which that corruption began, while at the same time it satisfies the sense and the metre. Those who appreciate this first condition of the problem will be disposed, I hope, to consider the emendation which I have suggested, πέλειαι δ' ἄνω.

The following conjectures may be noticed.

(1) Hermann, in his ed. of 1827: τθ', αἰθέρος ἄνω... ἐλῶσί μ': 'Come, let the birds (πτωκάδες)...seize me.' [Similarly Prof. Campbell suggests α' (εἶα) for εἶθ'.]

(2) In later editions Hermann read στ' αἰθέρος... ἐλῶσ'; He then supposed that ἐλπίδες was to be supplied (from ἐλπιδος in 1091) with πτωκάδες:—'(What hope of food can I find), when (those hopes) will wing their timid flight...?' etc. By these 'hopes' he meant the birds.

Seyffert accepted this view, but with α' γ' instead of στ'.

(3) Finally Hermann preferred to read θθ' αὐταὶ γ' ἄνω... ἐλῶσ', in order that the form of the dochmiac might be the normal one which occurs in the antistrophe, v. 1113, ἰδοίμαν δέ νιν.

This was a return—so far as metre was concerned—to an earlier view; for, according to Erfurdt in his ed. of 1805, Hermann had once proposed, θτ' αἱ πρόσθ' ἄνω | πτωκάδες... ἐλῶσί μ' ('when those who once fled from me...will vex me').

(4) Nauck: γοναὶ δ' αἰθέρος | ... | ἐλῶσιν· οὐ γὰρ ἴσχω. The 'children of the air' are the birds. He compares Eur. El. 897 οἰωνοῖσιν αἰθέρος τέκνοις: and Colluthus [an epic poet who lived early in the 6th cent. A.D., and wrote the Ἀρπαγὴ Ἑλένης, of which 392 vv. are extant] v. 383 ἡερίης ὄρνιθες εὐπτερα τέκνα γενέθλης.

(5) Heimsoeth, στ' ὄρνεις ἄνω | ... | ἐλῶσ'.

(6) Wecklein, εἰ θῆρες πλάνοι | ... | ἐλῶσ'. This is very ingenious: but the application of the word θῆρες to birds seems unexampled; for in Ar. Av. 1064 θηρῶν are not the birds, but the creatures which they destroy. In Soph. fr. 850, 10 f. οἰωνοί are distinguished from θῆρες. And such a use of θῆρες is the more strange here, since the χαροπῶν ἐθνη θηρῶν figure in a later passage (1146 ff.). The epithet πλάνοι, immediately followed by πτωκάδες, is also somewhat weak.

(7) Bergk, αἰθναὶ (rather αἰθνιαὶ) δ' ἄνω | ... | γελῶσί μ'. Cp. Erigr. Hom. 8. 2 πτωκάσιν αἰθνίησι. Od. 5. 352 ἐς πόντον ἐδύετο κυμαίνοντα | αἰθνίη εἰκνία. Arist. Hist. An. 1. 1 (Berl. ed. p. 487 a 25) ἡ δ' αἰθνια καὶ οἱ λάροι τίκτουσι μὲν ἐν ταῖς περὶ θάλατταν πέτραις. Thus the αἰθνια is a diving sea-bird, of the gull kind. If we received this conjecture, it

1095 ff. σύ τοι σύ τοι κατηξίωσας. Gleditsch deletes the second σύ τοι, so that v. 1095 may agree with the MS. text in the antistrophe, v. 1116 πότμος σε δαιμόνων τάδ'. Erfurdt, on the other hand, keeps the double σύ τοι, and adds a second πότμος in v. 1116. Most editors follow this course.

Seyffert, with Seidler, constitutes the text as follows. (I give the words of the antistrophe in smaller type.)

 πότμος πότμος σε δαιμόνων τάδ' ὦ βαρύποτμ', οὐκ ἄλλοθεν οὐδὲ σέ γε δόλος ἔσχ' ὑπὸ ἔχει τύχα χερὸς ἐμᾶς. στυγε-τᾶδ' ἀπὸ μείζονος.
 ρὰν ἔχε δύσποτον
 εὐτέ γε παρὸν φρονήσαι
 ἀρὰν ἀρὰν ἐπ' ἄλλοις.

Bergk, keeping the double σύ τοι in 1095, prefers in 1116 to mark a lacuna (equal to —) after δαιμόνων τάδ', instead of doubling πότμος.

Prof. Campbell conjectures τύχαις instead of τύχα τᾶδ' in 1097, and reads ἔσχεν ὑπὸ χερὸς instead of ἔσχ' ὑπὸ χειρὸς in 1118.

1100 αἰνεῖν, Hermann's correction of the MS. ἔλειν, seems the best: though Arnold's ἀντλεῖν is ingenious. Dindorf, reading ἀντί, supports the rare anastrophe by Γανυμήδεος ἀντί (quoted from the Ἰλιάς μικρά by schol. Eur. Tro. 821), and by Anthol. 7. 715 λυγρῶν δ' ἀντί μελιχρὸν ἔχω.

1140 Besides Hermann's, the following versions of the MS. reading, ἀνδρός τοι τὸ μὲν εὖ δίκαιον εἰπεῖν, have been given. (1) Musgrave: 'It is fair to acknowledge what is good in a man (ἀνδρός τὸ εὖ): and, if any one does not so acknowledge it (εἰπόντος δὲ μὴ), to refute (ἐξῶσαι) the envious utterance.' (2) Buttman: 'It is the part of a man to utter justly (δίκαιον, adverb) what is right (τὸ εὖ)'—but, when he has done so, not to add reproaches. (3) Prof. Campbell: 'Truly it is a man's part needfully (εὖ) to assert what is right.' But, for this sense, we should surely require τὸ δίκαιον. The absence of the art. cannot be defended by the phrase of different meaning in Thuc. 5. 18, δικάϊω χρησθῶν καὶ ὄρκους: on which see above, v. 83, n.

The following emendations may be mentioned. (1) Dindorf: ἀνδρός τοι τὸ μὲν ἐν δίκαιον εἰπεῖν, which he renders, 'virum decet, unum quid iustum dicere': 'to say one just thing,'—i. e., to maintain the principle of justice which he has once asserted. This ἐν δίκαιον is opposed to πολλὰ δίκαια,—the shifting pleas of tricky men. (2) Axt and Madvig: ἀνδρός τοι τὸ μὲν οἱ δίκαιον εἰπεῖν: 'to say what is just in his own eyes.' Cp. Eur. Elec. 924 παρ' οἱ = 'in his own house.' Sophocles uses the enclitic οἱ (O. C. 1630 etc.), but affords no example of οἱ as = ἐαυτῷ. (3) Wecklein, in his edition, reads, ἀνδρός τοι τὰ μὲν ἐκδικ' αἰὲν εἰπεῖν, 'to denounce injustice.' In his Ars Soph. em. p. 49 he proposed ἀνδρός τὸ μὲν οὐ δίκαιον εἰπεῖν. (4) Blaydes reads: ἀνδρός τοι τὸ μὲν ἔνδικον καταπεῖν, 'to declare what is just.'

Wunder understands: 'Ye will no longer approach me from your caves, only to fly again.' The dat. φυγᾶ could not mean this: nor could πελάτε take an acc. of the person approached, though Eur. Andr. 1167 has (ἄναξ) δῶμα πελάζει.

Bernhardy rendered, 'Non amplius fugientes ab antro ad me acceditis': i.e., he, too, took με with πελάτε, but connected φυγᾶ with ἀπ' αὐλίων. Prof. Campbell shares this view: 'No longer flying me from my cell, ye shall approach me there.' (He supposes, however, that με is due to a confusion between οὐκέτι με φεύξεσθε and πελάτέ μοι.) Now, if the meaning is that the beasts approach the cave of Ph., and then fly,—or that, after flying, they once more approach,—in either case this way of saying it would be most obscure. On Bernhardy's view of the construction, it would be better to suppose that αὐλίων means the beasts' lairs, and that they 'approach' Ph. at the moment when they start thence.

Canter's conjecture, ἀάτ' (as pres. imperat., = 'rush'), has been noticed in the commentary. Erfurdt and Heimsoeth have also advocated ἀάτ', but as fut., with transitive sense: 'No longer, by your flight, will ye cause me to leave my cave.' Seyffert reads φυγεῖν μ' οὐκέτ' ἀπ' αὐλίων | πελάτ': 'ye will no longer draw near from your caves, in order to fly from me' (φυγεῖν με). But no Greek writer could say, πελάζει φυγεῖν, 'he approaches, (only) to fly.'

1153 ff. Porson saw that ἀνέδην must go with ἔρπετε, and also that ἐρύκεται had no possible sense here if χώρος were its subject. He therefore proposed to read:—

ἀλλ' ἀνέδην (ὅδε χῶλός ἐρύκεται οὐκέτι φοβητὸς ὑμῖν)
ἔρπετε.

The objection is the sense which the context imposes on the parenthesis. Philoctetes had long been lame. The new fact which he bewails is that he is unarmed. Thus ὅδε χῶλός ἐρύκεται must mean, 'this lame man is restrained (by the loss of his bow)': whereas the words would naturally mean that the lameness was the cause of the detention.

Linwood reads ἀλλ' ἀνέδην (ὁ δὲ χώρος ἐρύκεται | οὐκέτι φοβητὸς ὑμῖν) | ἔρπετε. Wecklein (Ars Soph. em. p. 54) proposed the same, but with ὅτε in place of ὁ δὲ. The necessity of joining ἀνέδην with ἔρπετε would probably have been more generally recognised by scholars, had they not been cumbered with the corrupt word ἐρύκεται, which seemed to require an adverb of negative sense. So ἀνέδην was taken with ἐρύκεται, and an utterly impossible meaning was attached to each.

1218 νεὼς ὁμοῦ. On Apoll. Rhod. 2. 121 (ὁμοῦ δέ οἱ ἐσσεύοντο) the schol. has:—τὸ ὁμοῦ καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ ἀθροίσματος τιθέασι (i.e., as = ‘along with’), καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ ἐγγύς, ὡς Ἀθηναῖοι εἰώθασι χρῆσθαι. He then illustrates this ‘Attic’ use by the verse of Menander (fr. incert. 204), ὁμοῦ δὲ τῷ τίκτειν παρεγένεθ’ ἡ κόρη· adding, ἀντὶ τοῦ ἐγγύς. Suidas, s. v. ὁμοῦ, quotes the same fragment in a mutilated form, as ἤδη γὰρ τοῦ τίκτειν ὁμοῦ: where Bernhardt observes that the reading τοῦ is supported by four mss. of Suidas (including the best), and by the Milan ed.; as well as by Photius, and by Harpocration. It seems not improbable, then, that the schol. on Apoll. Rhod. wrote τῷ (instead of τοῦ) τίκτειν by a mere slip,—thinking of the ὁμοῦ δέ οἱ on which he was commenting. It is true that the dat. is read in Dionys. Hal. Ant. Rom. 1. 78, where he adapts the phrase, καὶ γὰρ ὁμοῦ τι τῷ τίκτειν τὴν κόρην εἶναι: but this is not of much independent value as evidence for the text of Menander.

1360 f. The ms. text, οἷς γὰρ ἡ γνώμη κακῶν | μήτηρ γένηται, τᾶλλα παιδεύει κακά, has been variously understood. (1) Brunck and Buttmann: ‘When a man’s mind has once produced evil counsels, it teaches (him) all other (possible) evil things,’—i.e., it goes on as it has begun. (2) Musgrave: ‘When a man’s mind has once conceived evil designs, it teaches him the rest of evil,’—i.e., evil deeds. (3) Schneidewin: ‘When a man’s mind has once brought forth evil deeds, it teaches his other deeds to be evil.’ (4) Hermann: ‘When a man’s mind has brought forth evil, it teaches all other men to be evil,’ τᾶλλα = τοὺς ἄλλους, ‘quicquid aliorum hominum circa se habeant.’ This last is clearly wrong.

Αἴανθ’ ὄπλων σοῦ πατρὸς ὕστερον δίκη
Ὀδυσσέως ἔκριναν.]

These words are open to three objections.

(1) At v. 410 Ph. supposes that, when N. claimed the arms of Achilles, Ajax was still alive, and might have interposed in his favour. N. then simply tells Ph. that Ajax was already dead; he says nothing of a contest for the arms between Ajax and Odysseus. Two answers to this difficulty have been attempted.

(a) Erfurdt argues that the impugned words do not necessarily imply knowledge of such a contest. They merely mean that, if the arms were not to be given to Neoptolemus, they should at least have gone to Ajax rather than to Odysseus. But the epithet ἄθλιον obviously alludes to the tragic fate of Ajax,—his frenzy, and his suicide: it cannot refer simply to the fact that he is dead.

(b) Others admit that the poet has made an oversight, but urge that it is excusable. He writes as if N. had told Ph. about the contest.—But the inconsistency is not of the kind which can be excused as concerning matters ἔξω τῆς τραγωδίας. It is a striking discrepancy between two passages of the play itself; and it is one that could scarcely fail to jar upon the audience, since the earlier passage, in which N. tells Ph. the news from Troy, is so peculiarly impressive.

(2) The second objection is, if possible, stronger still. A comparison between the merits of Ajax and Odysseus is wholly out of place here. Neoptolemus is being reminded of the wrong done to himself. It is nothing to him if the arms which, by right, were his alone (370) might have been less unjustly given to Ajax.

(3) The composition of the sentence is bad. ὅπλων σοῦ πατρός δίκη are to be joined:—‘in the contest about thy father’s arms.’ The place of ὑστερον between ὅπλων and δίκη might be defended by examples like 598 f. (where see n.): but the awkwardness is greatly aggravated by the fact that ὑστερον, which goes with Ὀδυσσεώς, immediately follows σοῦ πατρός.

The motive of the interpolation may have been a feeling that some allusion to the ὅπλων κρίσις was demanded in a play which mentioned the death of Ajax and represented Odysseus as possessing the arms. The word δίκη might suggest that the interpolator was thinking of Ai. 449, οὐκ ἂν ποτε | δίκην κατ’ ἄλλου φωτὸς ᾧδ’ ἐψήφισαν.

1394 πέσειν δυνησόμεθα. The fut. inf. is certainly sometimes used, instead of the pres. or aor. inf., when the principal verb is such as to imply that the agent’s thoughts are turned towards the future. The following examples occur in Thucydides. (1) With διανοοῦμαι. 4. 115 πῦρ ἐνήσειν διανοοῦντο. Also 4. 121: 7. 56: 8. 55 and 74. (2) With βούλομαι. 6. 57 ἐβούλοντο... προτιμωρήσεσθαι. Most of the mss., including the best, have the fut. inf.: but the aor. inf. is a v. l. (3) With ἐφίεμαι. 6. 6 ἐφίεμενοι... ἄρξαι. Here the mss. agree in the fut. inf., according to Stahl; who, however, reads ἄρξαι. (4) With δέομαι. 1. 27 ἐδεήθησαν... νανσί σφᾶς ξυμπροπέμψαι. The fut. inf. has strong ms. support: but the aor. inf. is a v. l. (5) With πιέθω. 2. 29 πέσειν γὰρ Σιτάλκην πέμψαι στρατιάν. Here Stahl reads πέμπειν with the Laur. ms. (one of the best) and another: the remaining mss. have πέμψαι, which Classen retains.

All these verbs express the notion of desiring or praying. With them, the use of the fut. inf. appears more natural than with a verb meaning simply to be able. But the passage in Thuc. 3. 28 furnishes a strong argument in favour of πέσειν here:—γρόντες δὲ οἱ ἐν τοῖς πράγμασιν οὐτ’ ἀποκωλύσειν δυνατοὶ ὄντες, εἰ τ’ ἀπομονωθήσονται τῆς ξυμβάσεως, κινδυνεύσοντες. Here all the mss. (according to Stahl) have ἀποκωλύσειν, though he reads ἀποκωλύειν. And the fut. inf. has precisely the same justification as here; i.e., the sense is, ‘they perceived that they could not hope to prevent it.’

In Thuc. 7. 11, οὐδὲ γὰρ ξυμπάσῃ τῇ στρατιᾷ δυναίμεθ' ἂν χρήσεσθαι, the fut. inf. has the support of numerous mss., including some of the best (see Stahl);—and there, too, the sense—‘we could not hope to use’—seems to recommend it. Most edd., however, now give χρήσασθαι.

1407 εἶρω πελάζειν κ.τ.λ. Various attempts have been made to preserve the words which stand in the mss. between πελάζειν and σταχεῖ,—viz., σῆς πάτρας, ἀλλ' εἰ δρᾶς ταῦθ' ὥσπερ αὐδᾶς.

(1) Triclinius: εἶρω πελάζειν <τουτουσι τῆς> σῆς πάτρας. | ἀλλ' εἰ δρᾶς ταῦθ', etc.

(2) Turnebus: εἶρω πελάζειν σῆς <γε τούτους τῆς> πάτρας. | εἰ γε [instead of ἀλλ' εἰ] δρᾶς ταῦθ', etc.

(3) Brunck: εἶρω πελάζειν σῆς πάτρας.—ἀλλ' <ὦ φίλε> | εἰ γε δρᾶς ταῦθ', etc.

(4) Porson: εἶρω πελάζειν σῆς πάτρας.—ἀλλ' εἰ <δοκεῖ> | ταῦτα δρᾶν, ὅπωςπερ αὐδᾶς, κ.τ.λ.

(5) A writer in Class. Journ. v. 39: εἶρω πελάζειν σῆς πάτρας.—ἀλλ' εἰ γε δρᾶς | ταῦτ' <ἀληθῶς>, ὥσπερ αὐδᾶς, etc.

(6) Burges followed Porson, but, instead of ταῦτα δρᾶν ὅπωςπερ αὐδᾶς, wrote δρᾶν ἀληθῶς, ὥσπερ αὐδᾶς.

(7) Hermann: εἶρω πελάζειν σῆς πάτρας. ἀλλ' <εἶα δὴ> | εἰ σὺ δρᾶς τὰδ' etc. He subsequently changed the words after πάτρας to αἰνῶ τὰδ', ὡς, | εἰ γε δρᾶς, etc.

1431 ff. ἃ δ' ἂν λάβῃς σὺ σκῦλα τοῦδε τοῦ στρατοῦ, τόξων ἐμῶν μνημεῖα πρὸς πυρὰν ἐμὴν κόμιζε.

The difficulties which have been raised here have been due to the assumption that all the σκῦλα mentioned in 1431 were to be dedicated to Heracles. This made it necessary to suppose that the σκῦλα of 1428—destined for the house of Poeas—are distinct from the σκῦλα of 1431. Thus:—

(1) Hermann: The σκῦλα of 1428 are spoils given by the army to Ph. from the common booty, as ἀριστεῖα: while the σκῦλα of 1431 are those spoils which Ph. himself strips from foes slain by his bow.

(2) Wunder: The σκῦλα of 1428 are spoils which the Greeks give Ph. in reward of his personal valour: the σκῦλα of 1431 are those which they give him in honour of his bow.

(3) H. Weber (Philol. xi. 457 ff.): The σκῦλα of 1428 are a special prize of valour for Ph.: those of 1431 represent the ordinary share which each warrior would receive from the common booty.

Seeing how unsatisfactory these attempted distinctions are, it is not surprising that a desire should have been felt to alter the words τοῦδε τοῦ στρατοῦ so that they might refer to the Trojan army (see cr. n.): but, even if this could be done, the discrimination between the two kinds of σκῦλα would still be forced and obscure.

SOPHOCLES. PART I. OEDIPUS TYRANNUS.

Second Edition. Demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

Notices of the Press.

'The appearance of the first volume of a complete edition of Sophocles, by Professor Jebb, is an event of interest, not only to classical students, but to all who care for literature. No living English scholar unites in himself so many of the qualities which, for our generation, form the ideal of classical scholarship. He has the passion for beauty, the feeling for style and literary expression, the artistic enthusiasm of the Italian Renaissance....Professor Jebb is gifted with a sympathetic insight into Greek idiom and the latent capacities of the language. He has a remarkable and, so far as I know, a unique, faculty of infusing poetry into grammar, of leading his readers, through particles, moods, and tenses, vividly to realise the dramatic situation and enter into the feelings of the speaker. Under his guidance we seem not so much to be engaged in a work of logical analysis or of skillful dissection as to be following a vital process of growth and of construction.'—Professor S. H. BUTCHER, in the Fortnightly Review.

'Of his explanatory and critical notes we can only speak with admiration. Thorough scholarship combines with taste, erudition, and boundless industry to make this first volume a pattern of editing.'—The Times.

'We get in one compact volume such a cyclopædia of instruction, such a variety of helps to the full comprehension of the poet, as not so many years ago would have needed a small library, and all this instruction and assistance given, not in a dull and pedantic way, but in a style of singular clearness and vivacity.'—The Athenæum.

'An edition which marks a definite advance, which is whole in itself, and brings a mass of solid and well-wrought material such as future constructors will desire to adapt, is definitive in the only applicable sense of the term, and such is the edition of Professor Jebb. No man is better fitted to express in relation to Sophocles the mind of the present generation.'—The Saturday Review.

'We have no hesitation in saying that for any scholar, and indeed, for many who cannot claim to be scholars, but still "have a little Greek," to read their Sophocles again with Professor Jebb's help at hand, so unfailing, so admirable as it is, will be a treat of the very highest kind. It is very seldom that a scholar and critic of the largest attainments has also great literary ability. This rarest of combinations is found in Professor Jebb, and the result is eminently satisfactory.'—The Spectator.

'Some fourteen or fifteen years ago, a series of classical editions for the use of schools appeared under the title of Catena Classicorum. The series was very well received, and many of the editions fulfilled the promise with which it started. Unquestionably the best books of the series were Mr Jebb's Ajax and Electra of Sophocles, which really made an epoch in school editions...In our opinion, Professor Jebb's Oedipus Tyrannus deserves to be, in the same way, a model for the higher classical editions....The faculty for criticism in most cases coexists with the faculty for interpretation; for the two depend on the same qualities—namely, accurate grammatical knowledge, and keen insight into the mind of antiquity. Professor Jebb is well known to possess both these qualities in an eminent degree.'—Journal of Education.

'At last we come to the commentary: and here we must repeat that Professor Jebb's power of delicately disentangling and firmly grasping the fine shades of use and meaning of the Greek words strikes us as most masterly. We may not always agree: but he never flinches or shirks a difficulty: he notices a hundred things which are usually passed over: and his range of illustration is surprising, both from its width and its aptness. In short his method is consummate: if we differ, it is Professor Jebb, we find, who has sometimes supplied the materials and evidence. And above all, in threading the mazes of this most intricate of authors he never blurs a point: he is always most admirably clear.'—The Oxford Magazine.

SOPHOCLES. PART II. OEDIPUS COLONEUS.

'Der zweite Band dieser willkommenen Sophoklesausgabe verfolgt dasselbe Ziel wie der erste, eine gründliche, sachgemässe Interpretation der Dichterworte. Ich brauche des Herausg. Gelehrsamkeit und guten Geschmack, sein feines grammatisches Verständniss, seine liebevolle, von allem Conventionalismus befreite Hingabe an das Individuum des Dichters, an seine Art zu denken und zu reden, nicht von neuem zu rühmen; das beste Zeugniss für den Commentar, der noch zu Ausführlichkeit gegenüber dem ersten Bande gewonnen hat, scheint mir der Umstand zu sein, dass durch ihn die Echtheit der überlieferten Schreibung an vielen Stellen festgestellt wird: gar manche Conjectur, so hoffe ich, wird für immer aus den Sophoklesausgaben verschwinden.'—G. KAIBEL in the Deutsche Literaturzeitung, Nr. 21 (May 22, 1886).

'Dem ersten Teile der neuen Sophokles-Ausgabe...schliesst sich der vorliegende zweite Band würdig und mehr als würdig an. Alle Fragen, welche die Kritik, Erklärung und ästhetische Auffassung des Ödipus auf Kolonos berühren, sind mit Einsicht und Geschmack und nicht ohne Anregung neuer Gesichtspunkte behandelt, und das Lob, welches man dem ersten Teile spenden konnte, gebührt dem zweiten um so mehr, als die Verwertung der anderweitigen Litteratur eine ausgedehntere ist.'—

N. WECKLEIN in the Neue Philologische Rundschau, No. 25 (Dec. 11, 1885).

'Das Buch enthält eine sehr gründliche Arbeit eines gelehrten Philologen. Sein Studium ist allen zu empfehlen, welche sich einmal gründlich philologisch mit Sophokles beschäftigen wollen.'—C. SCHMELZER in the Berliner Philologische Wochenschrift, No. 46 (Nov. 13, 1886).

Jahresbericht, vol. 46 (1887).

'Ich hoffe in meinen späteren Werken beweisen zu können, mit welcher freudigen Begeisterung ich ein Werk studirt habe, das so viele neue Gesichtspunkte eröffnet, und durch Anschaulichkeit wie Schärfe seiner Erläuterungen ausgezeichnet ist.'—J. H. HEINRICH SCHMIDT, in the Preface to vol. IV. of his Synonymik der Griechischen Sprache (1886).

'It remains only to say that all who are interested in classical scholarship and literature will look forward with impatience to the completion of this incomparable edition.'—Athenaeum, May 22, 1886.

'Upon the appearance of the Oedipus Tyrannus we spoke of this edition as definitive in the only applicable sense, as marking a distinct advance and bringing materials which all future editors would be careful to adopt. After reading the Oedipus Coloneus we are inclined to say that this praise was put too low. A classic like Sophocles will be read by each generation from their own point of view and illustrated by their own lights; but, though there cannot be a final interpretation of such work, there can be, for a particular language, a permanent basis of interpretation; and such, we think, Professor Jebb will be found to have furnished to the English students and interpreters of Sophocles.'—Saturday Review, Aug. 14, 1886.

'We have not space enough to point out in detail the numberless felicities of explanation and illustration to be found in these notes; but any one who glances through a few pages for himself will allow that no English commentary on Sophocles, or on any other Greek author, can compare with this in all-round merit.'—Cambridge Review, May 2, 1886.

'High as was the level of interpretation attained in the Commentary on the Oedipus Tyrannus, in this edition it is higher still. It is not easy to say whether Professor Jebb is better in explanation or in illustration. In their combination, at any rate, he is so successful that we rarely differ from him without an inward acknowledgment—the highest compliment that we can pay an editor—that he may be right... We have referred incidentally to the Introduction. It is not less satisfactory than the rest of the work. It shows the same learning, at once wide and minute, the same power of combination and presentation, the same literary tact and skill... Professor Jebb's acquaintance with the literature of his subject is exhaustive, and his appreciation of the labours of his predecessors is at once just and generous... In the interests of Sophoclean studies and English scholarship alike, we wish the work, of which this is an instalment, a swift and successful completion. It is one of which Professor Jebb's countrymen may well be proud.'—Journal of Education, Sept. 1, 1886.

'Such work as this is worth waiting for, so well considered, so complete, we are almost disposed to say, so final is it. Its merits are due to a happy combination of fine literary taste and a thorough mastery of Greek scholarship. An editor so equipped renders to students a service that can hardly be estimated; there are many to whom this volume will, as did its predecessor, the edition of the Oedipus Tyrannus, give a quite new insight into the genius of Sophocles, as also into the greatness of the Greek drama.'—Spectator, April 17, 1886.

SOPHOCLES. PART III. THE ANTIGONE.

'Der dritte stattliche Band der Sophoklesausgabe von dem tüchtigen Hellenisten Jebb, der jüngst bei Gelegenheit des Universitätsjubiläums von Bologna in einer herrlichen Pindarischen Ode einen glänzenden Beweis seiner Beherrschung der griechischen Sprache gegeben hat, zeichnet sich durch die gleichen Vorzüge aus wie die beiden ersten Bände und bietet eine Zusammenfassung alles dessen, was für die Kritik und Erklärung der Antigone wichtig ist, woraus der Verf. sich mit Geschmack und sicherem Urtheil seinen Text und seine Auffassung der einzelnen Stellen zu gestalten weisz. Am meisten gefällt die Unbefangenheit, mit welcher der Verf. die Überlieferung und die verschiedenen Ansichten der Gelehrten behandelt. Er verteidigt die handschriftlichen Lesarten niemals mit Scheingründen; er ist andererseits einem leichtfertigen Verlassen der Überlieferung abhold, und zwar nicht bloss in Bezug auf andere, sondern auch auf sich, indem er mit eigenen Konjekturen sehr sparsam und vorsichtig ist: er prüft alles, was andere vorgebracht haben, und behält das Beste.'—Dr WECKLEIN in the Berliner Philologische Wochenschrift, 12 Jan., 1889.

'Seitdem die hellenische Gesellschaft zu London 1885 das Facsimile des La veröffentlicht hat, kann jeder paläographisch geschulte Philolog die Lesarten der

Handschrift selbst kontrollieren, Abweichungen früherer Kollationen lösen und verbreitete Irrtümer berichtigen. So hat nun Professor Jebb in seinen schon früher erschienenen Ausgaben des Oedipus Coloneus und Oedipus Tyrannos (2. Aufl.) und in dieser Antigoneausgabe die Lesarten des La so vollständig und genau wie möglich angegeben und schafft dadurch eine Sophoklesausgabe, so wichtig für die Kritik, wie es seiner Zeit die dritte Auflage der Oxforder Sophoklesausgabe Dindorfs war.'—H. MÜLLER in Neue Philologische Rundschau, July 7, 1888.

'Professor Jebb's edition of Sophocles is already so fully established, and has received such appreciation in these columns and elsewhere, that we have judged this third volume when we have said that it is of a piece with the others. The whole edition so far exhibits perhaps the most complete and elaborate editorial work which has ever appeared.'—Saturday Review, April 7, 1888.

'This edition marks the highest level yet attained by Sophoclean criticism, whether regarded on the side of literary workmanship or of exact scholarship, and when completed will be a monument of the best classical learning of this generation.'—Scotsman.

'In an edition so distinguished by accurate perception and fine analysis, it is almost superfluous to say that the critical part of the work has been excellently done, for in reality interpretation and criticism when carried to the highest point meet and coalesce. The more thorough the interpretation, the less need will there be for conjectures, which often—even the most attractive—have their origin in a lack of insight into the meaning of the text, or an impatience of the attention requisite to grasp it. The text before us is certainly the best text of the Antigone yet given to the world. Yet it might on the whole be called conservative. We may safely say that never is a reading of the MSS. condemned unheard. No conjecture, however specious, finds its way into the text until the editor has satisfied himself that the MS. tradition is certainly erroneous.'—Prof. TYRRELL in Classical Review, Vol. II. p. 138 (May, 1888).

'Professor Jebb's keen and profound sympathy, not only with Sophocles and all the best of ancient Hellenic life and thought, but also with modern European culture, constitutes him an ideal interpreter between the ancient writer and the modern reader. His Introduction, which deals with the plot, motive, and psychology of the play, is in itself a singularly pleasing composition.'—Athenaeum, May 5, 1888.

'It would be difficult to praise this third instalment of Professor Jebb's unequalled edition of Sophocles too warmly, and it is almost a work of supererogation to praise it at all. It is equal, at least, and perhaps superior in merit to either of his previous instalments; and when this is said, all is said. Yet we cannot refrain from formally recognising once more the consummate Greek scholarship of the editor, and from once more doing grateful homage to his masterly tact and literary skill and to his unwearied and marvellous industry.'—Spectator, June 2, 1888.

'We have unquestionably, in this edition of Sophocles, so far as it has proceeded, a splendid example of the work which can be done by the English school of classics at its best; and we have no doubt that the rest of the edition will confirm the judgment which must be pronounced by all competent critics on the treatment of the three great Theban dramas.'—Quarterly Review.
